PREPARE FOR ENTERTAINMENT OF CONVENTION

Federation Delegates to Be Warmly Welcomed.

TENTATIVE PLANS ARE ANNOUNCED

Theater Party, Sightseeing Trip, Smoker and Banquet to Feature.

Central Body delegates Monday night decided on the Read House for convention headquarters when the state body meets in Chattanooga Monday week. All sessions of the federation will probably be held at that hostelry. It had formerly been announced that the Patten would be headquarters, and Secretary Birthright has mailed a supplemental notice to all affiliates in the state.

Tentative plans for the entertainment of delegates and visitors to the thirty-fourth annual convention of the Tennessee Federation of Labor, which meets in Chattanooga Monday, May 12, were announced Friday morning by George Forbes, chairman, who stated, however, that a formal meeting of the committee named Monday night by President Ortwein has not yet been held, but the announcement is based on suggestions made by the various members which will, Mr. Forbes believes, be approved by the whole committee in formal session. Other members are Dave Sivley, Machinists; W. W. Kirkpatrick, Carmen; W. D. Canada, Painters, and Matt Gerlach, Cigarmakers.

First meeting of the committee is called for next Tuesday night, May 6, at Central Labor hall, 7:30 o'clock.

Upon their arrival in the city and registration at the headquarters hotel, Mr. Forbes said, the tentative plan is to present each delegate and visitor with tickets to the American theater, where the program of vaudeville and talking pictures may be enjoyed at the convenience of the individual.

On Monday afternoon the invitable sightseeing trip is carded, the route to be selected by the committee at its meeting next Tuesday night. A smoker is planned for Monday night, with possibly some vaudeville stunts, short talks and a general social get-together.

The big event of the entertainment program, according to the present plans, will be staged on Tuesday night, when a banquet will be given the delegates and visitors, probably at the Read House. A program of stunts will also be worked out for this occasion, said Mr. Forbes, and the workers' guests will be well entertained.

Local Unions Naming Delegates.

List of delegates named by local unions is being constantly added to, and several are yet to be heard from. The list so far reported to the Labor World is as follows:

Chattanooga Trades and Labor Council—George Forbes, Matt Gerlach, Paul J. Aymon.

Soft Drink Workers—Roy Lee.

Carpenters—S. P. Rose.

Painters and Paperhangers—W. Canada.

Electrical Workers—W. M. Williams.

Local 62, Sheet Metal Workers—Alvin J. Pfitzer.

Lodge 1450, Machinists—Count Arlisle.

Lodge 56, Machinists—Dave Wiley.

Lodge 211, Brotherhood of Railway Carmen—W. W. Kirkpatrick.

Glass Bottle Blowers—Lester Green.

Local 53, Iron Moulders—Joe Burgess.

Local 415, Barbers—George W. Terry.

Signwriters—M. H. Ortwein.

Plumbers and Steamfitters—H. Brown.

Typographical—R. M. Cooke.

Extra! Look What Brush Smith Did!

Preliminary report of the census operators for Graysville, Tenn., one of our own Brush Smith, indicates what public spirit and civic pride may do for a community.

Brush Smith has been a citizen of the Graysville community for 10, these many years, and his activities from 1920 to 1930 are believed to be largely responsible for the population growth shown by the federal enumerators.

The figures for 1920 showed the population of Brush's city to be 786, while a preliminary report sent The Chattanooga World Friday morning gives the official count as of April 1, 1930, 1,036.

There's nothing like being a booster.

LIEB HONORED BY BUILDERS

Named to Represent Council as Business Agent at Last Regular Session.

After having been appointed temporarily to succeed E. E. McDaniels as business representative of the Chattanooga Building Trades Council when Mr. McDaniel resigned to enter business for himself recently, T. G. Lieb, of Local 62, Sheet Metal Workers, was formally elected by the council at its regular weekly meeting Wednesday night to continue in that position.

Since taking up the duties following the resignation of Mr. McDaniels, Mr. Lieb has evinced an earnest desire to render service to the cause, and his permanent selection is an indication that the building trades representatives were pleased with his efforts.

Mr. Lieb has been a member of Local 62 for many years, and has rendered good service to his local. He was a charter member of the Building Trades Council.

TIMMONS HAS BOOST FOR BUSH

News Scribe Offers Interesting "Dope" on Composing Room Force.

A well-earned and much-deserved promotion has been given to Jack Bush, a former, or shall I say still a member, of No. 89. Jack still has his card, but is inactive.

Mr. Bush left the composing room floor about six years ago, and started in as an ad solicitor. Jack is loaded with the old hustle and he got results. It is said that he got more advertising for this sheet than any other solicitor on the staff.

Upon the departure of Tom Gilmore, advertising manager, for New York last Saturday, Mr. W. C. Johnson cast his eagle eye over his staff of home-town talent. Only a brief survey was necessary, however, for Jack stood out head and shoulders above the rest. And Jack, deserving boy that he is, got the job. That's the old push, Jack!

The News Maniacs won one recently, with the help of somebody and a few errors. The score was 4 to 3 and their opponents were the big dial and plug men of the Bell Telephone company. Manager Klever Klyde (Buttermilk Rawmeat) Davis took himself out of the game at the crucial point, whenever that was, and the Maniacs then managed to scrape out a win.

Hooks Underwood got fat on baseball last week. That boy accumuated so much overtime on the Junior League edition that he owed nearly a week's overtime. And there's no more rabid baseball fan in town than Archie. Don't miss any of 'em.

Management is buying new equipment galore. New press, engraving department, make-up tables and lights, type cases and what have you. Everything but some new machines, which are more badly needed than anything else. For instance, on a recent day the gang came in and started to go to work at 7:30, and I'll bet there wasn't 200 lines set on all these antiquated wrecks the first hour, what with cold metal, broken parts and general cussedness that kept one and then another yelling for Klever Klyde. If I was running this paper I'd—oh well, I ain't running it.

EMPLOYMENT DROPS

Washington.—The widely-heralded prosperity that would appear at the opening of spring has not appeared, according to the United States bureau of labor statistics.

Reports from manufacturing and seven other major industrial groups showed a decrease in employment of one per cent in March, as compared with February, and a decrease in pay roll totals of one and one-half per cent.

March is supposed to usher in spring prosperity.

SENATE DEBATE ON PARKER CASE STIRS NATION

Leaders Frantically Hunt for Way Out.

HUMAN RIGHTS AT STAKE IN BATTLE

"Yellow Dog" in Limelight as Hoover Appointee Is Flayed by Progressives.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Washington, May 1.—With the Hoover administration bringing every possible ounce of pressure to bear in the senate, debate on the question of ratifying the nomination of Judge Parker for the supreme bench opened on Monday to continue until a vote could be taken. It was expected the vote would come by Friday.

Not in any contest in this senate has there been such maneuvering, such pressure and counter-pressure, such a frantic hunt for a way out.

Senator Overman, fellow North Carolinian, opened the debate, speaking his word for Parker. It was obviously a matter of duty, not of conviction, involving the issues in the case. Overman kept away from the issues and talked about what a nice man Judge Parker is and how he has the confidence of his fellow North Carolinians.

Senator Borah then opened the real battle, digging into the yellow dog contract issue. The administration has trained its heavy guns on the labor forces with statement after statement to the effect that Parker followed the United States supreme court in his famous Red Jacket decision. It has been made to appear that Parker, like a good and faithful legalist, followed the decisions of the supreme court so that, on appeal, his Red Jacket decision would be sustained and not tossed aside as bad work.

President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, was the first to puncture that argument. President Green showed that Parker had not followed, but had gone high, wide and handsome in clearing the barriers to get ahead of the supreme court in destroying human rights.

Borah called the yellow dog contract "reprehensible," and declared Parker had gone further than any other judge in supporting it.

Senator Carter Glass threw a hot one at his fellow senators when Borah referred to the Hitchman case and answered Glass, saying the decision was rendered in 1917.

"Then we have sat here since 1917 and permitted that to remain law," observed Glass with stinging sarcasm.

Borah pointed to the Tri-City case, in which the supreme court declared unions are necessary for the protection of workers and that they had a right to increase their membership by any lawful means. He pointed out that the Red Jacket decision enjoined even the use of peaceful and lawful persuasion.

"It is the only case on record," he said, "where defendants were enjoined against peaceful persuasion."

The might of labor's nation-wide protest was admitted by Senator Overman when he said: "I have been simply overwhelmed with letters and telegrams from the American Federation of Labor in every state in the Union."

OIL CHIEF URGES FIVE-DAY WEEK

(By International Labor News Service.)

Cleveland, Ohio, April 30.—Efficiency is responsible for the business depression and a five-day week is the remedy, E. B. Resser, president of the American Petroleum Institute, told a meeting of the National Petroleum Association here.

"Is it possible for our industrial activities to become too efficient?" Mr. Reeser asked. "I would like to suggest in passing that in my opinion the depression existing today in many industries is due to efficiency. Machinery and a high degree of intellectual application make it possible to produce normal requirements in fewer days than are now considered a proper working schedule. I trust I may be pardoned for suggesting that five days a week is all that any man should be permitted to perform.

"Such a policy of a five-day week would enable all the unemployed to be put to work and become useful citizens. It is a reasonable and sensible way of breaking up the bread line."

FOOD COSTS DROP

Washington.—A decrease in retail food prices of slightly less than 2 per cent between March 2 and February 15 is reported by the United States bureau of labor statistics.

HILL STORES ON HUNT FOR TALENT

Rumor Says Strikebreakers Not So Plentiful—Forbes Comments on Hold-Up.

According to rumors going the rounds this week, the Nashville-owned Hill chain stores, who locked out their local Meatcutters as a sort of Christmas present to them and employed strikebreakers gathered from various sources, continue to have their troubles with the imported products.

Although it is declared at least three of the meat markets formerly maintained by the local chain have been permanently closed since the lockout, it seems that securing alleged craftsmen to operate the non-union markets is not such an easy job. It was said that the city is being combed for meatcutters willing to step in and take a job under such conditions as are imposed by the labor-hating Nashville boss of the chain concern, but with little or no success, despite glowing promises of how the "great" Hill concern would befriend the proposed victim.

FORBES COMMENTS ON HILL HOLD-UP.

George Forbes, of the Postal Clerks, called The Labor World Friday morning to suggest the possibility that the robbery of a Hill employe Thursday night was an "inside job," his contention being that an outsider would have no way of knowing that monthly receipts were to be collected from the various stores on that day. The robbers are said to have secured $2,500, and George believes that under present conditions that sum might represent a month's business for quite a number of the local stores of the Nashville concern.

Reaction of the Nashville banks to the loss of the local receipts has not been published, but it is thought that no great flurry will result from their failure to receive the usual amount from the Chattanooga Hill stores.

New Anti-Injunction Bill Would Outlaw "Yellow Dog" Pacts

Senate Committee Proposal Would Restore American Rights to Victims of Judicial Tyranny—Provides Jury Trial for Criminal Contempt Cases.

Washington, April 30.—With the Parker case at the peak of its intensity, a senate judiciary subcommittee threw a new bomb into the senatorial arena in the form of a report to the full committee containing a draft of an anti-injunction bill.

Senators Norris and Blane reported the measure which, at this writing, has not been made public. It is understood to follow closely the American Federation of Labor draft, with the inclusion of a provision safeguarding newspapers.

Senator Norris said the bill sought to set up a public policy, guaranteed the rights of organization against court attack, outlaws the yellow dog contract which Judge Parker's decision sustained and rigidly restricts the power of courts to issue injunctions.

The bill is understood to absolutely forbid issuance of injunctions to prevent peaceable assemblage, to organize, to publish the facts of a strike, to promote the success of a strike. The bill, Senator Norris asserts, forbids courts to issue injunctions against those acts which are in themselves lawful.

The bill furthermore provides for trial by jury in indirect criminal contempt cases growing out of alleged violation of court orders.

The bill is called the Shipstead bill, but it is not the original measure bearing that name. It is a re-draft and is believed to be in large part the work of the committee named by the American Federation of Labor to perfect the injunction measure.

"This bill, as it will be reported, will prevent any more yellow dog injunctions," Norris said. "The bill is designed to prevent federal judges in labor disputes from issuing injunctions, as they have in the past, enjoining merchants from selling food, coal dealers from furnishing fuel and permitting eviction of laborers from their homes."

MINERS WILL CONFER

Hazelton, Pa.—The three anthracite districts of the United Mine Works held their tri-district convention in this city on April 30. Plans were laid for the negotiation of a new contract. The present agreement expires August 30. It has been in effect since February, 1926, following a six-months' strike.

GADSDEN WAKES TO FALLACY OF THE 'OPEN SHOP'

Business Men Tire of Low-Wage Policy.

SOUTHERN DRIVE GIVEN IMPETUS

Organizing Fever Approved by Merchants Bunked by Labor Haters.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Birmingham, Ala., April 30.—Sixty hours for a maximum wage of $12, is too much work and too small wage for the employes of the Gadsden, Ala., knitting mills, so they have joined a trade union. One of the first results of this action was the discharge of some twenty-eight women workers of the mill. It was only through strong counsel that a general strike was averted. The women workers who lost their jobs composed the nucleus of the local union organized a few days ago. It is understood that representation will be made to the mill management insisting that the discharged workers be reinstated.

This incident is merely one of the straws showing which way the trade union wind is blowing in the southern organization campaign. The situation at Gadsden and Anniston, Ala., is typical of the situation over the south in respect to organization work, Paul J. Smith, southern organization chairman, said.

Nine years ago the Chamber of Commerce of Gadsden circulated a declaration of principles pledging the city as an open shop town, operating under the so-called "American Plan." The declaration was signed by virtually all the merchants and business men of the city. From that time until a few weeks ago, Gadsden operated under a do-as-you-please principle. Wages were cut and slashed; hours of labor increased—but somehow old prosperity kept showing up, Smith said.

Now, it seems, the "end of the limit" has been reached. The so-called low-wage prosperity failed to materialize. Workers fortunate enough to have a job have been receiving pittance wages, with an average of about 20 cents an hour. Business slumped; merchants with goods to sell watched the cobwebs collect and debts pile up. The workers had no money to buy anything save the barest necessities of life. They finally awoke to the fact that they were getting no place fast.

A few weeks ago organizers for the American Federation of Labor were called in. Mass meetings were held and the workers sought alleviation of their wrongs. Since that time the pace has been fast. Not a week goes by but what a new trade union local is organized. Merchants and business men frankly told the labor leaders they had tried the open shop with disastrous results. They wanted relief as well as the workers. They pledged themselves to go along with trade unionism, and while they are not shouting the tidings from the housetops they are "going along." One merchant said: "We are sick of the whole business; the open shop plan has been disastrous; the workers have no money to spend therefore our goods lie on the shelves and bankruptcy stares us in the face. No man with a family can maintain it on $12 to $14 a week. Better wages is the answer if we are to have prosperity." And that is the keynote of the whole southern campaign.

In Anniston, which has identically the same situation, whose workers are employed in the same crafts, a similar awakening has come. Workers in both cities—which incidentally are the fourth and fifth largest cities in Alabama—are clamoring for organization. Local unions of garment workers, hosiery workers, braiders, wood workers, painters, molders, machinists, textile workers, barbers and other crafts have been instituted in both cities. The workers have quit pussyfooting and have laid their cards on the table for all to see. They want trade unionism, no matter what the employers say or do. The discharge of the twenty-nine women in Gadsden didn't mean a thing to them. They have found they have all to gain and nothing to lose by organizing, and that they mean to do, come what may. Wages of 20 cents an hour will not keep a family even in the subsistence stage, let alone to a decent American standard, Smith pointed out.

The workers of the two cities are planning a huge mass meeting, jointly, within the next few weeks. Perhaps a parade will be a feature, and it will be an impressive demonstration, held at one of the two places. Employers will see the fact emphasized that workers can not exist on $12 a week for sixty hours work.

There are approximately 18,000 workers of all classes in the cities of Gadsden, Anniston, Alabama City and Talladega, all within close proximity of one another. It is expected that representation from these cities will be heavy.

Employers have been invited to attend the mass meetings of the workers both at Gadsden and Anniston.

H. H. Emmons, representing the southern organization headquarters, announced that the American Federation of Labor had nothing concealed up its sleeve; that it was not a ripsnorting bolshevik outfit bent on destruction, but that it came into the south not only to help the workers but the employers as well, therefore they were invited to the mass meetings with the hope that they would co-operate in upbuilding southern industry and business in general.

At a meeting of colored workers in Gadsden on the 28th there were about 450 present. A federal union of 180 members was organized at the meeting.

DEPLORE DEATH OF E. W. POLLARD

Central Body Delegates Express Grief at Loss of Loyal and Valuable Worker.

Resolutions on the death of E. W. Pollard, Sheet Metal Worker, who passed away recently, were prepared by a committee named by President Ortwein Monday night, expressing the esteem in which the deceased brother was held, and the grief of his fellow-workers at his demise.

The resolutions follow:

"Whereas, on Friday, April 18, the Angel of Death entered our ranks and removed therefrom Brother E. W. Pollard; and,

"Whereas, Brother Pollard was for many years an active and earnest member of this body, rendering valuable service in many ways, and was esteemed by all with whom he came into contact; therefore, be it

"Resolved, that we deplore the passing of this good brother, and that we extend to his surviving relatives our heartfelt sympathy in their loss; be it further

"Resolved, that copies of this resolution be spread upon our minutes, sent the bereaved relatives of Brother Pollard and The Labor World for publication."

MAIL CARRIERS IN BAD SMASH-UP

Lane Reports Injuries to Oehlson and Brooks Families Last Sunday.

(By R. B. Lane)

Frank Brooks came to work at the postoffice Monday looking like he had been run through a sausage grinder. When asked about it he told of his and Henry Oehlsen's families going up towards Athens Sunday. A maniac (he must have been) ran into them and turned their car over a couple of times, injuring all of them more or less. Mrs. Oehlsen was the most seriously injured. Henry came to work Monday, but it knocked him out and he had to remain at home after that. Mrs. Brooks was badly hurt also, but their two children escaped with minor scratches. Brooks says he never did see the car. Says the first he knew they were climbing through the roof of the car, which was a complete wreck, and Henry had just bought it. We hope the injured will recover rapidly.

ROUTINE WORK FEATURES MEET CENTRAL BODY

Recorder's Minutes Show Interesting Items.

RHODES DECORATING CO. ON "UNFAIR LIST"

Renew Agitation for Elevator Inspector—Hill Store Attitude Again Noted.

Routine business, some of considerable importance and some not, occupied the attention of delegates to Central Body at last Monday night's regular meeting, and an unusually lengthy session was featured by much "oratory" before the various delegates became of one mind on the business at hand.

Although much of the deliberations which permit of publication at this time were routine, however, a reference to the recorder's records indicates an interesting budget of work was transacted.

Dr Chaney Speaks On "Milk for Health."

Dr. W. H. Chaney, who delivered an interesting health talk to Circle Club last week in connection with the "milk-for-health" campaign, was a guest of the body, and was given closest attention as he explained the value of proper dieting, with particular reference to the benefits of pure milk. Dr. Chaney drew a new and interesting comparison in congratulating the local unionists on the progress they have made. He declared that the human body is a machine, and when one part is allowed to disintegrate the whole becomes sick, with eventual dissolution. So, he said, with the workers' organizations. Each unit should be kept in finest condition, in order that the whole might thrive and prosper.

Rhodes Decorating Co. On "Unfair List."

Reports of the executive committee on a complaint brought by the Painters against the Rhodes Decorating company resulted in that concern being formally declared "unfair to organized labor," the local unionists being upheld in their application for such action. The committee declared the Rhodes company had refused to enter into an agreement with the Painters, and after several years of friendly relations had refused point-blank to change its determination to run non-union.

Will Renew Efforts For Elevator Inspector.

Delegates from the Elevator Constructors submitted a resolution which in effect renews the campaign begun several months ago to have an official elevator inspector named by the city government. The frequency of elevator accidents was pointed out, some of which have resulted fatally, and it was contended that with proper inspection many of these might have been avoided. Rapid growth of the city was urged as emphasizing the need of proper supervision of the installation and operation of the many elevators in various uses in Chattanooga.

The delegates unanimously agreed that the agitation for such an appointment should be renewed at once, and a committee to work in conjunction with the Elevator Constructors was named by President Ortwein, as follows: Matt Gerlach, T. G. Lieb and J. G. Schrock.

American Federationist Seeks Information.

Letter from the American Federationist stated an article is being prepared for publication calling attention to cases in the south where workers have been discharged for union affiliations. Secretary Gerlach was instructed to submit such data, with particular notation of the discharge of Meatcutters by the Nashville-owned Hill chain stores.

Many other matters of somewhat lesser importance are contained in the recorder's minutes, and indications are that various committees will have their hands full within the next week or so.

IDLE ISSUE SOLVED (?) BY FOE OF UNIONISM

New York.—The Delaware & Hudson railroad has "solved" the unemployment problem, according to President Loree, speaking at the annual convention of the National Metal Trades association.

Mr. Loree explained that when a worker is laid off he is paid $15 a week for six weeks. This $90 is a "dismissal wage."

President Loree assured the convention that talk of inability of men over 40 to secure work is "sob stuff."

The railroad official and Judge Gary of the steel trust smashed President Wilson's industrial conference several years ago. They refused to recognize collective bargaining.

LABOR QUERIES

Q.—Is the American Federation of Labor in favor of the election of all federal judges by the people?

A.—Yes. The A. F. of L. declared for the election of federal judges in 1906 and again in 1923.

Q.—Who said: "On close investigation we find that everything in our civilization, especially our Christian religion, is derived from one or another of the innumerable ancient trade union movements?"

A.—C. Osborn Ward, the noted sociologist, in his book, "The Ancient Lowly."

Q.—How did Samuel Gompers once define "bona fide" labor organizations?

A.—At the 1921 convention of the American Federation, he said: "I do not think there is any doubt as to what is meant by bona fide—absolutely true, faithful, actual, an organization that is not governed by 'bunko profundo.'"

Q.—What was the first instance of the extension of the territorial jurisdiction of a labor organization from one country to another?

A.—The extension of jurisdiction to Canada by the International Molders' Union of North America in 1863.

THE SOUTH MOVES FORWARD.

Every new union member in the south is that much real progress for the south. New members are coming in every day. That is daily progress.

The going is not easy; opposition is plentiful. But that isn't stopping the movement toward organization.

Southern workers are welcoming the opportunity to join the great trade union brotherhood and northern workers are doing their part, meanwhile tightening up their own lines with organization work. The organizing move now on is national, and that is right.

The trade union brings industrial enfranchisement to the worker and enriches his life. Every worker belongs in a union.

CHECK THE MERGER MANIA.

Railroad officials and others interested in the promotion of rail mergers are extremely busy spreading the idea that mergers will not throw railroad workers out of jobs. Railroad workers know better and are prepared with plenty of proof. The merger mania ought to be checked at least until the welfare of those who do the work can secure a rating as a first consideration. Merging for money's sake is poor business for the nation.

BARBERS' LAW VOID

Springfield, Ill.—The state supreme court set aside the Illinois law which prohibits beauty shop operators, who are not licensed barbers, from trimming or cutting hair of patrons.

A FINE CHOICE

Announcement is made of the appointment of Mr. Bryan J. Bush as advertising manager of the Chattanooga News.

Mr. Bush is a product of the composing-room force of the afternoon paper, and, of course, a member of Chattanooga Typographical Union No. 89. His six years of service in the "front office," however, have demonstrated an unusual ability in that branch of the newspaper publishing business, and his rise to the position of advertising manager is a reward for merit, and justly deserved.

As an advertising solicitor he early gained the confidence and esteem of local business men, and his ability and integrity was as quickly sensed by them as by his employers.

Mr. Bush is a native Chattanoogan, and has the Chattanoogan's conception of business ethics and courtesy. The writer happens to be in position to know that in building up his clientele he has used no "hard-boiled, high-pressure" methods to impress his prospects that he is the "big-town berries," and has thus builded upon a solid and lasting foundation.

The Labor World congratulates both Mr. Bush and the News on this fine choice, and predicts for him a long and successful career as manager of this ever-growing department of the afternoon paper.

THE WILY MR. EDGERTON.

John E. Edgerton, president National Association of Manufacturers, knows the value of a confusing term. He is a foe of organized labor, but in this age of combinations and mergers he is too wily to pose as an anti-unionist. He uses the confusing and untruthful "open" shop term to maintain his industrial anarchy. The person who will not—or can not—think thus classes Edgerton as "fair." They accept his pious plea that he does not distinguish between organized and unorganized workers.

Edgerton also opposes the boycott—when used by organized labor. He says it is "un-American" when workers refuse to patronize opponents. But when he favors the boycott he invents a new term to conceal his purpose.

He objects to American business men taking their plants to Europe and rightfully protests against these goods being sold in this country. He advises citizens not to buy these goods, and calls this boycott "patriotic discrimination."

THE SOUTH AWAKES.

Nothing succeeds like success, the old saw has it—and the old saw still has teeth. The southern organizing campaign is succeeding—and that's success. As a matter of fact, the southern organizing campaign probably is succeeding better than most folks thought it would. Surely it is succeeding better than the southern employers thought it would—and better also than a good many northern employes hoped it would.

Northern employers still are moving south in the hope of finding men, women and children who will work for wages lower than those paid in their present location. What a surprise some of them will get!

All this comes under the head of human progress, whether the employers like it or not. And that is good.

Not the least amazing thing about the southern campaign is that it should be waged and made to yield so much of gain in a period of great unemployment. Those who are joining the unions are those who have jobs. They are joining in most cases with the knowledge that they may lose their jobs. Men and women who do that in times of great unemployment have courage, conviction and character. That is unquestionable.

When enough men and women are in trade unions more questions will be decided in the interest of human beings. Those who are joining the unions know that. They have wisdom, as well as the other qualities.

One unique thing is being done in this campaign. A newspaper, printed by International Labor News Service, of which The Labor World is a proud member, is being sent into the southern organizing districts for free distribution each week. This newspaper is called the American Labor Banner. National, international and local unions are paying for this free distribution as a part of the big southern campaign. Live news, editorials and features go into this new paper and help to bind recruits to the unions. Also prospective members get a new slant on the labor movement, a new kind of introduction to it.

Thousands of these papers have been sent into the south, carefully avoiding entry into fields where there are local papers. They are eagerly read and they are carried into the most remote districts by faithful men who are putting a good deal more than just the day's work into the big fight.

One interesting fact comes to light. Certain factories in Pennsylvania, protected by the American tariff, are among those now contemplating a move to what they believe is a low-wage field.

Benefiting by the laws of the land, they would exploit the people of the land. That is one of the types of low and scandalous conduct that makes this organizing campaign so vital a necessity, so promising in its outlook.

Bitter injustice exists, has existed and will exist until wage earners have the united power to bring about amelioration and remedy.

It has been a long time since so many application blanks were used in a like length of time. May the printing presses have to work overtime and "far into the night" to help open the trade union door to exploited and oppressed men and women.

The future will be better because of what is being done today.

STICK TO THE MAIN LINE.

Let's not get side-tracked. Unemployment will not yield to fad cures. Two things are necessary: Drastic, dramatic general increases in wages and progressive increases continuously, with reduced hours of work and progressive reductions continuously. Nothing less.

The Passing Show

Note and Comment on Things Doing in the March of Events

The New York State Federation of Labor has just shown what organized workers can accomplish when they go after progressive legislation. As a result of a vigorous campaign waged by the federation, eight of the major proposals supported by the organization were enacted into law by the 1930 legislature, which recently ended its sessions. The list of labor laws is headed by abolition of ex parte injunctions, so that hereafter no injunction in an industrial dispute can be issued by a New York state court except after notice to both parties and a hearing in court.

In addition to the major legislative proposals, amendments to the workmen's compensation law, the state labor law and other general laws were passed and more than a dozen bills which sought to weaken existing laws were defeated.

No wonder the state federation of labor says that the 1930 session of the New York legislature will "take an honored place in the annals of labor legislation." New York has set a mark to shoot at. Other states, please notice.

The national child labor committee, which has been fighting child labor more than a quarter of a century, asks:

"Do you know—

"1. That more than a million children in the United States under 16 years are gainfully employed, and a third of these are 13 years or under?

"2. That 1,400,700 children between the ages of 7 and 14 are not attending school?

"3. That fifteen states do not require a certificate of physical fitness as a condition for employment?

"4. That over 52,000 children are employed in manufacturing in states which still permit them to work more than forty-eight hours a week?

"5. That twenty-one states permit 14-year-old children to run elevators, and fifteen permit them to oil, wipe and clean machinery in motion?"

These facts are a powerful argument for adoption of the child labor amendment and effectually dispose of the idea that child labor and its evils are largely a thing of the past.

A man was run down and killed by a truck the other day in Rochester, N. Y. When the police record of the truck driver came to light, it revealed some strange things. It showed that in 1922 he was arrested for speeding, and that in 1925 his truck had run down and killed a man. The following year he was arrested and charged with third degree assault, but was released. In 1928 his car struck two women. And now his car has killed another man. During his eight-year reign of terror the man has paid a total of $30 in fines and spent no time in jail.

Strict enforcement of traffic ordinances, says the national safety council, along with drivers' license laws to cull out criminally negligent operators, will reduce motor vehicle fatalities.

The trouble is that lawlessness on the highway is a new crime and the man who kills with an automobile is delt with leniently by all—the public, coroners, district attorneys and juries. "He didn't mean to do it," it is said.

Of course he didn't mean to do it. If he had, it would have been murder, not merely negligent homicide. But a second's negligence while driving a car is frequently as destructive of human life as murderous intent. When the public comes to realize this, the thoughtless, chance-taking driver, no matter how respectable he may otherwise be, will be dealt with as the menace he is and in all probability our automobile death rate will go down.

Far Too Many Aliens Enter U. S. Illegally, Immigration Head Says

(By International Labor News Service.)

Washington, April 30.—Far too large a percentage of the aliens entering this country each year come in illegally, Harry E. Hull, commissioner general of immigration, said recently, in discussing immigration problems. Urging stricter enforcement of the immigration laws and admission only of the higher type of immigrants, who will readily become Americanized, Mr. Hull said:

"Despite precautions taken in attempting to enforce our immigration laws, it would appear that we shall need to take greater care in future years; for it is estimated—probably with some exaggeration—that there are now as many as 3,000,000 aliens in the United States who came here through illegal means.

"Stowaways, deserting seamen, and those aliens who are smuggled in or who manage to creep across our borders uninspected comprise a far too large percentage of the number of aliens entering this country each year.

"Incompetent to become citizens, and a charge upon the country's resources, whether at large or awaiting deportation, these masses of ineligibles are a distinct liability to our finances and our citizenship. They should be reduced to a minimum within the next few years.

"We can ill afford to let these undesired aliens remain. Our future citizenship must be nurtured and preserved.

"This means that to it there must be added only the higher type of foreign newcomers—those whose background is not unlike our own, and who, after they have become permanent and naturalized citizens of the United States, will respect government, uphold the principles of law and order, and contribute in full measure to the productive forces, the wealth, health, and civilization for which the American people have labored so zealously.

"People who are anxious to emigrate to America might well review, before setting forth for this country, some of the essentials which we insist they must possess before we can confer upon them the right to live here. They must understand the significance of the oath of allegiance to their adopted country. They must be loyal to our flag; have an intelligent understanding of public questions, and realize that the right to vote is to be exercised only for patriotic and not for mercenary purposes.

"Americanization, as I conceive it, is a process of assimilation of the immigrant which will mold him into a useful factor in American life. It must culminate in citizenship."

Jewish Order Holds Annual Convention

The fifty-seventh annual convention of district No. 7 of the Independent Order of B'nai B'rith convenes in this city May 4, 5, 6. Annual meeting of the Tennessee Federation of Labor was postponed for one week in order to prevent conflicting with the sessions. This organization is a strictly charitable and educational institution, world-wide in scope, and maintains both Jewish and non-sectarian hospitals, widow and orphan homes and miscellaneous institutions devoted to alleviating those in unfortunate circumstances.

Many prominent public and semi-public officials and laymen will address the convention, which brings delegates to Chattanooga from Arkansas, Texas, Oklahoma, Mississippi, Alabama, Louisiana, western Florida, and Tennessee. It is well to note that all of these men, whose time is valuable in their own private affairs, are assembling here to discuss ways and means to increase the scope of work that is being carried on by the various institutions. The district and local lodge officials serve without pay, the entire proceeds from the dues paid in by all members goes to support the widowed, orphaned and unfortunate. There are 150 members of Chattanooga lodge, among whom are Phil I. Angel, member of Typographical union, and Henry L. Morris, of Pressmen's union.

Cabinet Officers Asked to Consider Barring Soviet Coal

(By International Labor News Service.)

Washington, April 30.—Cabinet officials were asked to collaborate with representatives of the anthracite coal industry to determine the propriety of the exclusion from the United States of Soviet Russian coal under the provisions of the tariff act of 1922 in a recent conference with a delegation from the Anthracite Co-operative association.

Representative William R. Coyle of Pennsylvania announced that the delegation requested Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, Secretary of Commerce Lamont and Secretary of Labor Davis to collaborate on what information they have to determine if such action would comply with the recent decision of the court of customs and patent appeals.

This decision, he said, was directly to the effect that the president has authority to exclude from the United States any commodities produced by indentured or forced labor. The competition of Russian coal is already being felt in the anthracite industry and is becoming more threatening, he declared.

A tentative brief outlining the situation was presented to the cabinet officers in which it was asserted that Russian coal can be shipped from Port Mariupol to Boston, a distance of 7,000 miles, at a rate of $1 per ton less than the railroad rate from Pennsylvania to Boston. The brief was presented by the Anthracite Co-operative association, which is composed of operators, miners and civic leaders, Mr. Coyle said.

LOS ANGELES PAINTERS GO ON FIVE-DAY WEEK MAY 1

(By International Labor News Service.)

Los Angeles, Cal., April 30.—Announcement is made that beginning with May 1 all the painter unions in Los Angeles, and several outside cities, will go on the five-day week basis. The shorter week will apply to Santa Monica, Long Beach and several other outside points, with negotiations on with employers in Pasadena that look promising. There will be no change in the present wage scale. For some months a campaign has been on here under the direction of Gus Uhl, representing the Brotherhood, and backed by District Council No. 36 and all of the unions in that body, to bring about an understanding with the master painters, material men and others affected. Many conferences have been held, with the result that an understanding has been arrived at.

The painters have been waging an organization campaign, which has brought gratifying results.

Iowa Writ Emphasizes Court Issue

U. S. Judge Permanently Enjoins Against Mention of Yellow Dog Contract; Bans Normal Activities in Blanket Order.

Fort Dodge, Iowa, April 30.—Fresh importance is given the Parker supreme court nomination, in view of Iowa labor, by the issuance here of a permanent injunction by United States District Court Judge George C. Scott in which the judge goes the limit in permanently forbidding normal union activities.

It is felt here that a Parker on the supreme bench would surely uphold such an injunction on appeal, because of its similarity with the writ approved by Parker in the Red Jacket case.

The permanent decree just issued here is against two local unions of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers and any other person who may do the things which the union is forbidden to do.

The United States Gypsum company, apparently also known as the United States Gypsum Plaster company, is complainant. Local unions 141 and 158, composed of gypsum mill workers and gypsum miners, are the directly named defendants.

Forced to Sign "Yellow Dog"

The mill forced employes to sign a yellow dog contract and because of this and other complaints a strike was called in 1921, but all persons are permanently enjoined against saying that there was or is a yellow dog contract or that the strike of 1921 remains effective.

The injunction says:

"Now therefore, you and each of you are permanently enjoined from directly or indirectly, by yourselves or your agents, servants, attorneys, confederats, and all persons acting in aid of, or in conjunction with you, or any of you, or under your authority, suggestion or direction, combining and conspiring together to injure complainant's interstate business, trade and good will; and or to restrain, deter and destroy the interstate commerce of complainant in selling and delivering its products; and or compel complainant to operate its Fort Dodge plant on a closed shop basis; and from doing any and all acts whatsoever in furtherance thereof to accomplish any of the aforesaid purposes, and in particular from doing any of the following acts in furtherance thereof:

"From printing, publishing, issuing, circulating and distributing, or otherwise communicating directly or indirectly, in writing or verbally to any person, association of persons, or corporation, any statement or notice of any kind or character whatsoever, stating or representing:

"1—That there is a strike at the mill or plant of complainant at Fort Dodge, Iowa; or that the strike of 1921 is still in existence; or that there is a controversy over wages or conditions of employment between complainant and its employes; or any false statement with reference to conditions of employment at complainant's plant."

Two Other Prohibitions

This is followed by two additional numbered prohibitions, including prohibition to publish that "complainant forces or requires its employes to sign or subscribe to the so-called yellow dog contract," and concludes with a paragraph forbidding "any and all ways" of doing any of the forbidden acts.

The yellow dog contract is a unique instrument. It binds the employe not "to participate in any strike" or "unite with employes in any concerted action to change hours, wages or working conditions" and contains the stipulation that "I am not a member of the I. W. W. or any other communistic or like organization, nor will I join such while in the company's employ."

BOMBING PLANE NEEDS NO GUIDE

San Francisco, Cal.—The army air corps demonstrated that war can be waged from the air without human pilots.

Tests with a big army bomber reveal the possibility of sending these planes on cross-country trips, piloted only by machinery.

In a test with a nine-ton plane from Sacramento to this city the machine did all the navigating, keeping the plane on an even keel through rough air and maintaining the course with mechanical precision. The invention weighs less than fifty pounds and is installed in the forward cockpit.

FEDERAL JOB SERVICE HEAD SEES FINDING OF WORK FOR IDLE AS GOVERNMENT'T DUTY

(By International Labor News Service.)

Washington, April 30.—Relief of unemployment is an essential public function, Francis I. Jones, director general of the federal employment service declared in a recent interview.

"If it is the duty of organized government to provide schools in which to educate its future citizens, is it not reasonable to suppose that the same governmental organization should supply the machinery whereby its citizens may find suitable work?" Mr. Jones asked. He went on to say:

"A public employment service is second in importance only to the public school system in the happy, successful life of a nation. Just as the school is a community center for the preservation and extension of knowledge, so a well organized and conducted public employment service is an educational center or clearing house for employment and for accurate information concerning employment in the state and in the nation.

Jobless Man Helpless

"A man without a job is as helpless as a child without an education. Public sentiment is united in the belief that a child should be given that which he can not obtain for himself.

"Sentiment is now crystalizing into the belief that the state must also undertake this equally important function of helping a man to obtain suitable employment.

"Nothing on earth is more important to a man than a job, and the public employment service undertakes to find jobs for the jobless. Both industry and society need a public employment service.

"Too little attention has been paid human labor, which plays the most important part for industry in producing the finished product. There is no question but that the collection of materials and products is a proper function of corporations and private enterprises. But the dealing with the human element, the movement of labor, and the protection of its rights, should not be left to profit-earning organizations or to fee-charging private employment agencies.

"There are many reliable private employment agencies which give a service equivalent to the fee charged, and in the better class of these agencies there is no intention to misrepresent the nature of the employment service advertised. I have no quarrel with such agencies for they supply a service which is necessary and which the public employment service in its present scope can not cover.

"But the poor, unskilled, and semi-skilled workman who is unable to pay a fee should not have to pay a fee for employment. For him there should be service and information without charge.

"The public employment service should function so well that there can be no opening or opportunity for the human leeches and untrustworthy agencies which prey upon the poor unemployed. Under an intelligent and active public employment system there is no need for private employment agencies which cater only to unskilled and semi-skilled, and to skilled mechanics."

Senate Passes Bills Designed To Relieve Jobless

Two of Three Measures Proposed by Senator Wagner Favoraply Received—Third Is Made Matter of Unfinished Business.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Washington, April 30.—Two of the trio of Senator Robert F. Wagner's bills to relieve and forestall unemployment have passed the senate without a record vote and the third has been made unfinished business, to come up after the Parker nomination is out of the way.

The two bills passed are S. 3059 and S. 3061. The first provides for regulated construction work to be planned in advance, financed in advance and undertaken when unemployment threatens. The second provides for monthly reports on unemployment. The remaining bill, yet to be taken up, provides for a national employment system. The National Association of Manufacturers has announced opposition to this bill. Senator Wagner declared the proposed employment system would replace the present one which does not function and which makes optimistic reports for which there is no warrant.

The bill for regulated construction provides for establishment of a federal employment stabilization board composed of the secretaries of treasury, commerce, agriculture and labor and one of the duties of this board is to keep the president advised as to trends of employment.

This board shall submit estimates on work that can be undertaken in advance of threatened depressions and provides that work planned in advance shall be done at such periods as to prevent unemployment. It specifies federal highways, river and harbor projects, flood control and public buildings.

Both bills now go to the house.

Senators Are Told How Miners Exist

Indianapolis, Ind.—Conditions under which miners work and live was pictured by John L. Lewis, president United Mine Workers, in a letter to senators protesting the appointment of Judge Parker.

"Judge Parker denied workers the right to act collectively to redress these conditions," said Mr. Lewis. "Then why, from all the long list of eminent legal minds, was it necessary for the president to appoint, and why is it necessary for the senate to confirm, the elevation to the supreme court of Parker, the judge who, in the Red Jacket injunction suit, delivered 50,000 Americans into indentured servitude?

"Admittedly, the mine worker is unfortunately placed in the domestic economy of the nation; intermittently employed in an overdeveloped and intensely competitive industry, his annual earnings are meager and his bodily wants are unsatisfied; constantly beset by the horror of underground work, his numbers are daily decimated by falling earth, breaking equipment, rush of water, noxious and explosive gases, occupational diseases and economic neglect; living most often in isolated camps, devoid of modern sanitary and living conveniences, and lacking social, educational and spiritual advantages, his children are denied the inspirational outlook upon life which is given the sons and daughters of other men; recognizing the value of mutual association with his fellow mine workers and having the desire of a normal man to improve his lot, he is yet prevented by judicial decree, in large areas, from collectively bargaining for his labor and denied the right as an employe to join the trade union of his choice."

Child labor, the shame of society, can not be used on union-made goods.

Report on Fair Wage Bill Calls On U. S. to Lead

Says Government Can Depress or Raise Standards and Should Guard Standards — Special Rule for Measure Sought.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Washington, April 30.—Copies of the report of the house labor committee's report on the Sproul standard wage bill became available to the public this week, coincident with the declaration that a special rule would be sought in the house to bring the bill to a vote. The Sproul bill, H. R. 9232, is supported by the Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers' International union and has for its purpose establishment of machinery to establish fair or standard wage standards on government contracts. Congressman Koff, of Iowa, is chairman of the committee.

The report declares that fair contractors likewise favor the bill and that, in view of the government's building program, it is a matter of unusual importance.

"The purpose of this bill is to require contractors and subcontractors in constructing, altering and repairing public works of the United States in any city or town in any state of the United States, and contractors and subcontractors in constructing, altering and repairing public works of the United States or of the District of Columbia in the District of Columbia, to pay the union wage rate where such wage rate has been established in private industry," says the report.

"The national government has entered upon a large and expensive building program which will continue for a period of eight or ten years. The policy that the government pursues in connection with said building program will have a far-reaching effect. The government is in a strong position and it can use its strength to depress the price of labor or it can aid in maintaining existing wage rates.

"When the president met the leaders of private industry some months ago they assured him that they would not reduce wages. This attitude on their part met with universal commendation. This committee believes that the government should not be less considerate of labor than private employers.

"Labor is in favor of the proposed law, but is by no means alone in its support. The fair contractors of the country who believe in fair wages and in decent standards of living also support it. They heartily indorse and approve it, for it will place all contractors on the same fair basis.

"The proposed law will also be beneficial to the communities in which public works are to be constructed, altered or repaired. It will give the local contractors and local labor a chance. It will prevent the construction of public works from breaking down and destroying the local wage scale and the local standards of living.

"The proposed law does not require the government to establish a new and higher wage rate in any community. It simply requires the government to recognize wage rates established by employers and employes.

"It has been repeatedly said that the government should set a good example as an employer. It is equally true that the government should set a good example as a builder."

Union Pacific Policy Opposed by Unionists

Omaha, Neb.—The cheap wage, anti-union policy of the Union Pacific Railroad is being given nation-wide publicity by the local Central Labor Union.

The railroad is erecting a $4,000,000 terminal in this city under the poorest conditions that can be enforced. Subcontractors must agree to employ non-union supervisors, to operate on the nine and ten-hour basis and have one-half of their employes non-union.

Shop employes of this railroad are not permitted to organize, but must join a company "union."

Trade unionists and sympathizers are asked to recall these facts when Union Pacific agents request their patronage for excursions, conventions or shipment of freight.

Middle Life Suffering

"TEN years ago, I was in bad health," says Mrs. J. B. Bean, of Kirbyville, Texas. "I was going through a critical time, and I suffered a lot.

"My back hurt almost all the time, and my legs and ankles ached. My head hurt me until sometimes I would be almost past going.

"As I had used Cardui before, and knew how much I had improved after taking it, I got a bottle and started taking it. I continued to use it for several months. After awhile I regained my health, and I feel that I could never have gotten through that awful time without Cardui."

FEELING PUBLIC RESENTMENT, BIG MAIL ORDER FIRMS PLAN MERGER

Opposition to Non-Union Policies of Sears, Roebuck & Co. and Montgomery Ward & Co. Result in Move for Consolidation of Two Concerns.

By JOSEPH A. WISE

Chicago, April 30.—Nation-wide resentment toward Sears, Roebuck & Co. and Montgomery Ward & Co., because of the non-union policy of the two big mail-order firms and their exploitation of prison-made products largely accounts for the acknowledged contemplated merger of the two corporations.

Rumors of a consolidation or a dissolution of Montgomery Ward & Co. have been in circulation since the first of the year. These rumors were heatedly denied by President Everett and Silas H. Strawn, chairman of the board of that company. Now comes public acknowledgment by Lessing Rosenwald, vice-president of Sears, Roebuck & Co., that the merger is probable.

Both of these companies have received much unfavorable attention throughout the country because they placed their huge printing contracts with the notoriously unfair R. R. Donnelley & Sons Company, and further because both mail order houses were discovered as patrons of prison-made goods.

Montgomery Ward & Co. was forced to quit selling prison-made brooms and Sears, Roebuck & Co. was compelled to cancel a contract for prison-made overalls. Just what the latter firm has done in reference to a contract for Tennessee prison-made stoves is not definitely known.

Once Pursued Fair Policy

For years these two gigantic mail order houses pursued a fairly decent labor policy. They thrived and became great and piled up millions in profits. The policy was reversed and Montgomery Ward & Co. is apparently to be gobbled up by its more powerful competitor.

The very magnitude of Sears, Roebuck & Co. is its greatest weakness. Spraddled out all over the country, with 315 branch retail stores located in practically all of the important industrial centers, it cannot help but feel the displeasure of the fair-minded and decent citizens of those communities.

General Robert E. Wood, president of Sears, Roebuck & Co., told me several months ago that the amount of money his firm might lose as a result of its non-union policy did not worry him a bit. What concerned him was that the firm should be charged with pounding down wages and lowering the American standard of living. That was unfair, he held.

For years Sears, Roebuck & Co. printed its catalogues and a huge quantity of other publicity matter in its own plant under union conditions. Every year from 700 to 800 union men and women found employment doing that work from March to July and from October to January, with a reduced force employed during the other months.

Experienced Men Idle

Today, with a very serious unemployment situation in Chicago, the old, experienced and faithful union employes of the one-time printing department of Sears, Roebuck & Co. are walking the streets vainly seeking work, while the cheap, unskilled and semi-skilled employes of R. R. Donnelley & Sons Company, gathered up from the back alleys and the slums and taught to execute some one simple operation without a chance to become thoroughly competent workmen, are making a vain attempt to turn out a good imitation of the former excellent product of some of the finest catalogue printers in the world. Low wages and long hours have been substituted for fair wages and short hours; cringing servility and fear for upstanding and fearless American manhood.

President W. W. De Wolf and the other officers of Chicago Typographical Union No. 16 are considering the advisability of recommending that the union put on an assessment to create an out-of-work relief fund. It is not anticipated that Julius Rosenwald, chief owner and boss of Sears, Roebuck & Co., will contribute to the fund. Neither is any help expected from Silas H. Strawn, capitalist, former president of the American Bar Association and boss of Montgomery Ward & Co.

Plant Made Armed Citadel

R. R. Donnellev & Sons Company has created a special department in its plant for the Sears, Roebuck & Co. work. That department is a virtual prison, under guard of private detectives day and night. A restaurant and beds have been installed in the plant.

Just why Donnelley, nationally notorious as a building trades strikebreaker, should deem it necessary to turn his printing plant into an armed citadel is not understood. The printing trades believe in and use publicity rather than force. They long ago learned that the power of public opinion is the thing that brings results.

EASTON LABOR TO FIGHT HOSTILE OFFICE HOLDERS

(By International Labor News Service.)

Nazareth, Pa., April 30.—The newly organized Easton Central Labor Union has publicly pledged itself to retire to private life all local officials who have been parties in the vicious campaign of repression which has been applied against the Nazareth hosiery strikers. The strikers themselves are going into politics and as a result a adopted by the local "peace" officers.

Borough officers were astounded at the presentation of a petition, signed by 250 of the most prominent taxpayers and property holders, demanding that the county detectives, who had refused to permit picketing, be removed from the borough. A committee of sixty citizens, unconnected with the strike, presented the petition, hiring their own attorney for this task.

Four cases, involving almost forty persons, against Nazareth strikers for alleged "riot and unlawful assemblage" were nolle prossed by District Attorney Mauch on the opening of the spring term of court here. "Disorderly conduct" cases against thirty strikers, for picketing, were postponed until June.

Previous cases had resulted in acquittal in every instance, but with the costs assessed against the defendants. The nation-wide publicity received on this peculiar brand of justice is said to have had some effect on the district attorney and led to his decision to go slow in the remaining cases.

Utilities and Public Works Building Gain

Contracts Awarded in First Quarter Set Record for Last Five Years, Secretary of Commerce Lamont Reports.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Washington, April 30.—Secretary of Commerce Lamont has announced that contracts for public works and public utilities construction in the first three months of 1930 broke all records for the same period in the previous five years.

With this increase went a decrease in building intended for educational, social and recreational purposes, and in residential, commercial and industrial purposes.

Secretary Lamont reported that religious and memorial buildings, involving some public construction, while more than 45 per cent above last year's figures were below similar periods for the four preceding years.

Analysis of the figures covering the various types of construction and the public works and utilities developments shows 1930 increases over last year ranging from 33 per cent to 249 per cent in nine of thirteen subdivisions, Secretary Lamont stated. Railroad construction showed an advance of 128 per cent, it was pointed out.

According to reports received by the bureau of labor statistics, department of labor, from 292 cities having a population of 25,000 or more, there was an increase of 50.6 per cent in the estimated expenditures for all building operations for which permits were issued in March compared with permits issued during February.

Compilation of Facts On Idleness Speeded

Special Unit Created in Department of Commerce to Make Known Unemployment Figures as Soon as Possible.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Washington, April 30.—Compilation of census unemployment figures and their publication will be speeded up, Secretary of Commerce Lamont has just announced. Secretary Lamont said that a special unit to expedite the work with a view to making known preliminary figures within a few months is being established in the department of commerce.

Lamont explained that the figures will be segregated from the detailed schedules in order to procure the "fundamental data" as rapidly as possible.

"There are ten or twelve different classes of unemployment listed by the census takers and to edit the schedules of 120,000,000 people accurately and carefully will take considerable time," he said.

"After we get these fundamental figures it is our purpose to take two additional sampling censuses to observe the trend of unemployment." This can be accomplished, Lamont said, by comparing the figures in any one of the 601 districts with the data obtained in the present census. In this way, he said, an average for the country can be computed and will provide "accurate figures for the first time on unemployment."

Idleness in Europe Severe Last Winter

Washington.—The world-wide industrial depression is reflected by reports of general unemployment in Europe during the past winter.

"Germany was particularly hard hit," says the Monthly Bulletin, issued by the United States bureau of labor statistics. "Although the situation in Great Britain is still acute, the number of unemployed appeared to be practically stationary at the end of 1929. The Baltic countries suffered from seasonal unemployment, as they are primarily agricultural countries. Unemployment in Italy appears on the increase.

"In Czechoslovakia and Switzerland unemployment has been much less in late years than has been the case in other European countries. There were comparatively few out of work in Belgium and France and the latter country has even been importing workers."

Chattanooga Trades and Labor ncil will meet in regular ses- Monday night, beginning mptly at 7 o'clock. Any and urgent business matters will disposed of as quickly as pos- e, in order to adjourn for the oker which the entertainment mittee has provided for the eration delegates and visitors. he meeting will be held in the e hall, as will the smoker to ow.

The stage is set for the thirty- rth annual convention of the nessee Federation of Labor, when President M. H. Ort- n, of Chattanooga Trades and or council, drops the gavel in ballroom of the Read House day morning at 10 o'clock, it expected that an unusually e attendance of delegates all sections of the state will present and accounted for."

For some time it was felt that industrial depression which extended so many months and been accompanied by serious mployment, would cut the ber of accredited representa- s in the annual meeting, but retary Birthright reports from Nashville office that interest he southern organizing cam- n just now getting under and the political situation in tate, has been such as to in- e a much larger crowd than ual.

e United Garment Workers' of Nashville will send eight ors besides an accredited dele- and a member of this local also chosen from the central of that city, making ten in rom this one union.

e four principal cities—Mem- Nashville, Jackson and ville—are expected to send than their usual quota, scattering locals will also presented.

Smith, chairman of outhern organizing commit- Miss Matilda Lindsey, direc- f the women's division of the ern campaign, and Miss e Leonard, director of the ern Summer School for en Workers in Industry. port of David Hanly, legislative chairman of the federation, will constitute one of the features of the gathering, and the presence, as special guests of the federation, of the legislative representatives of each of the four rail brotherhoods will add zest to the discussions and deliberations in connection with this report.

The political situation in the state will doubtless be thoroughly gone into, and a policy will be suggested to the nonpartisan political committee for its consideration and recommendations to the workers.

President Aymon's report, along with that of Secretary Birthright, will show the progress of the state body during the past year, and preliminary "tips" indicate that despite the unemployment situation major gains have been made in membership and consequent influence. Policies respecting many problems arising since the last convention will be outlined, and consideration of the judgment shown by the last session in respect to others will also be an important feature of the gathering.

The local entertainment committee, consisting of George Forbes, Matt Gerlach, Dave Sivley, W. D. Canada and W. W. Kirkpatrick, has prepared a program for the "playtime" of the delegates which, as indicated at the head of this article, will take up just about all the available time of the delegates.

On their arrival in the city, beginning Sunday afternoon, the delegates and visitors will be met at the stations and escorted to the headquarters hotel, the Read House, where the registration will take place and each one will be presented with a copy of the program, including tickets to the various social functions planned.

A theater party at the American theater, a sightseeing trip, a smoker and a banquet are among the major events carded, and others may be added at the last minute.

FEDERATED SHOPCRAFTS OF SOUTHERN AND ALLIED LINES PLAN SESSIONS IN CHATTANOOGA BEGINNING JUNE 23

Fourteenth Convention Will Bring Large Number of Outstanding Labor Officials to City---Two Hundred Delegates and Visitors From Seven States Expected by Committee on Arrangements.

Chattanooga will be the gathering place, for the week beginning June 23, of a large number of men outstanding in the American labor movement, including Bert M. Jewell, president of the Railway Employes' department of the American Federation of Labor; A. O. Wharton, president of the International Association of Machinists and vice-president of the American Federation of Labor; Martin F. Ryan, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen of America and treasurer of the American Federation of Labor; Roy Horne, general president of the International Association of Blacksmiths; C. J. McGlogan, vice-president of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers; E. H. Wicklein, vice-president of the Sheet Metal Workers' International Union; William Atkinson, president of the Boilermakers' International Union, and others of similar note in the labor world.

The occasion for the visit of these notables is the fourteenth regular convention of the Federated Shopcrafts of the Southern and Allied Lines, which will also bring some 200 delegates from thirteen states covering the entire Southern system. Representatives of the various shopcrafts unions will come from a territory including states from Indiana to Florida.

The convention will be the first held by the organization since January, 1927, when a meeting was held in Chattanooga. Members of the federation executive board were in Chattanooga this week arranging details for the meeting, and it was announced that Hotel Patten has been selected for headquarters. All sessions will be held in the ballroom at that hostelry. Members of the executive board are:

B. B. St. Clair (Machinists), president, Knoxville; W. H. Baldock (Sheet Metal Workers), secretary, Knoxville; W. W. Dyke (Carmen), Knoxville; W. M. Wands (Boilermakers), Spencer, N. C.; Logan Waddle (Electrical Workers), Somerset, Ky.; T. M. Melton (Blacksmiths), Chattanooga.

Local officials of the Federated Shopcrafts are: E. G. Burton, chairman; F. L. Dorsey, secretary, and C. L. Kibble, recorder.

Tentative plans for the convention provide for its opening by President M. H. Ortwein, of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council, who will introduce the mayor for an address of welcome, and also a representative of the central body for a welcoming address on behalf of the local labor movement.

On the opening day separate craft meetings will be held in the morning, while the general sessions will convene shortly after noon.

A local committee on arrangements has been appointed, according to Mr. Melton, and efforts will be made to give the visitors a real Chattanooga reception.

Railway Employes' Department For Six-Hour Day, Five-Day Week

(By International Labor News Service.)

Chicago, May 8.—The Railway Employes' Department of the American Federation of Labor, as represented by 150 delegates from nine affiliated international unions, in convention at Chicago, has gone on record for the six-hour day and five-day week.

This action was taken as a contribution to the partial solution of the unemployment problem.

A change in the preamble to the constitution of the organization embodied the unanimous thought and determination of the convention. It means that the affiliated unions will endeavor to obtain the six-hour day and five-day week when future contracts are negotiated.

The policy of the Chicago daily newspapers in reference to handling the labor news of this great organized labor center is strikingly illustrated in the fact that the four-day convention of the department, attended by delegates and many visitors from all parts of the United States and Canada, was totally ignored. The convention was not news because nobody got arrested.

The presidents of nine international unions, several of them members of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor, were delegates to the convention. Their presence in Chicago and what they did while here was not news because none of them got into jail.

To complete the picture it should be pointed out that at the time the convention was in session at least one of the Chicago daily newspapers was continuing the attempt to prove that there was great danger that Scarface Al Capone would seize control of organized labor in this city. While this was going on Scarface Al and his armed bodyguard, off on a pleasure trip in an airplane, was having a wonderful time playing hide-and-seek with the police of Havana, Miami and New York.

The officers and members of the executive council were all reelected, as follows: President, B. M. Jewell; secretary-treasurer, James B. Burns; executive council, A. O. Wharton, Roy Horn, William Atkinson, J. J. Hynes, H. H. Broach, Martin F. Ryan, T. C. Cashen, John J. McNamara, F. H. Fljozdal.

State Committee To Meet Sunday

Nonpartisan political campaign committee of the Tennesse Federation of Labor and the railroad brotherhoods will meet Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock, at the Read House. According to W. C. Birthright, secretary, the meeting will be an adjourned session from the one held at Nashville last week, when the political situation, with particular reference to state matters, was gone over thoroughly by the members. A program will be proposed to the state federation, said Mr. Birthright, which is expected to prove decidedly interesting. All members of the committee will remain over for the state body's sessions next week.

The state committee is composed of H. V. Reid, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen; W. A. Chrisman, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers; Perry E. Daly, Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen; Paul J. Aymon, David Hanly and W. C. Birthright, Tennessee Federation of Labor.

Circle to Co-Operate With Tax Committee

Circle Club will co-operate with the taxation committee of the Chattanooga Chamber of Commerce, according to action taken at the regular semi-monthly meeting of the club members Monday night. Following discussion of a letter from Sanford Bennett, president of the chamber, asking the co-operation of Circle Club, Secretary Cuthbert was instructed to inform the executive that the club will be glad to comply with the request.

Although no speaker was on the program Monday night, an interesting session was held, and considerable routine business was transacted.

COMPENSATION FOR TEETH

Salt Lake City, Utah.—Disfigurement through loss of one front tooth and the fracture of another is likely in the end to decrease the victim's earning power, says the state supreme court.

"The scheme of compensation is not necessarily limited to cases where there is an immediate impairment of earning ability," said the court, in upholding the state industrial commission's decision that the employe be awarded $16 a week for ten weeks, even though he is not disabled for work.

DEBATE IN SENATE TURNS PITILESS LIGHT OF PUBLICITY ON "YELLOW DOG" CONTRACT

Enslaving Device Covered With Ignominy and Shame.

Dramatic Contest Over Confirmation of Supreme Court Nominee Ends in Great Victory for Justice, Righteousness and Human Rights.

Green's Gratification

Washington, May 8.—After rejection of Judge John J. Parker as a member of the United States supreme court by the United States senate, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, made the following statement:

"The rejection of Judge John J. Parker by the United States senate constitutes a victory for justice, righteousness and human rights. It will hearten and strengthen the minds, purpose and moral fiber of the masses of the people. It will confirm the faith of the plain people in American institutions and the instrumentalities of a free government.

"No one will be disappointed over the outcome except those who believe in 'yellow dog' contracts with the industrial servitude which such contracts impose upon helpless working people, and those numbered among the privileged class who enjoy the protection which indefensible injunctions provide.

"There will be great rejoicing in the homes and in the communities of working people over the defeat of Judge Parker. They will feel that a great moral victory has been won for them and not only for them but for all classes of people who wish to keep inviolate the principles of the constitution of the United States upon which our government is founded and to preserve and protect the liberties of all the people.

"Labor is inexpressibly grateful to those staunch defenders of human rights in the United States senate who voted against the confirmation of Judge Parker. We are grateful for the service they rendered and we appreciate the bulwark of protection which the United States senate affords to the liberties, freedom and rights of the common people."

Washington, May 8.—Rejection by the United States senate on Wednesday of the nomination of John J. Parker to be supreme court justice came as a dramatic climax to one of the bitterest fights in the history of the supreme lawmaking body of the nation.

The battle leaped into the category of senate classics and registered a tremendous moral achievement for labor.

Nothing has ever so completely and so dramatically put the yellow dog contract issue before the country. Nothing has ever so thoroughly exposed the enslaving device that has crept into use in American industry or so covered it with ignominy and shame.

The yellow dog contract has had such a showing up as few industrial evils have ever had and this achievement is due solely to the energetic, effective work of the American Federation of Labor which initiated the protest against the Parker nomination, gave other groups the example and forced the administration into such a position of desperation as it has not occupied since it came into power under sunny skies and promising auspices.

Parker Injunction Assailed.

Aroused by the facts piled up by labor, senators not bound to the administration—and some that were—took up the cudgels and tore the Parker injunction record to shreds.

Except for the fact that he justified in some measure the Hitchman decision, Senator Borah's analysis of the yellow dog contract and of the Parker Red Jacket decision proved a classic. It was an analysis of the issue from the cold-blooded standpoint of law and the constitution. It was a lawyer's argument, showing that regardless of sympathies, regardless of ideals, regardless of anything but the dispassionate word of the law, the yellow dog contract is unconscionable, hostile to sound public policy and not supported by law. It was this contract, in its broadest terms, that Judge Parker supported in his famous Red Jacket decision.

The colorful names of the cases and of the issues heightened the drama of the great debate. The Red Jacket decision—the yellow dog contract—the Tri-City case—human slavery—human rights—and so on.

Parker Defense Weak.

Administration senators did their best, but their best was weak. It was clear that if the administration came through with victory it would do so on sheer weight, not on merit. Fess, of Ohio, sought to defend Parker. Ashurst, of Arizona, marked him out for his prey. Fess dodged and turned, but Ashurst hung on, coolly, calmly cutting away the ground. It was one of the humiliating moments for the administration, showing how completely logic and right were with the foes of Parker. Senator Wagner, of New York, assailed him in one of the keenest speeches heard in months.

Through the fight just made this fact stands out: The Parker issue has divided the United States senate on the yellow dog contract issue, as well as on Parker, and no senator who in this case has taken a stand against the yellow dog contract can again stand up for it.

The anti-injunction bill, to be voted on next week by the full judiciary committee, is certain to have a new standing and a much more friendly reception when it is reported to the senate, because of the facts brought out in the Parker fight.

Great corporations, including some of the most powerful in the United States, must have had an ear to the ground. Federal judges all over the country must have followed the damning accumulation of evidence against the device that seeks to bind employes to forego their right of free associations as citizens.

BARBERS' BOARD MEETS MAY 13-14

The state board of examiners charged with the duty of enforcing the terms of the sanitary act passed by the last session of the legislature with reference to barbers and barber shops, will pay a visit to Chattanooga May 13-14, according to R. L. White, inspector for the Chattanooga district.

The board has held several sessions in this city, and the law, it was said, is being complied with in Chattanooga.

LABOR QUERIES

Q.—How many countries have pension systems for the aged?

A.—According to the United States bureau of labor statistics, systems for the care of the aged through public pensions, or insurance systems (other than retirement systems for public employes) have been established by legislation in 41 countries.

Q.—Is the payment of a "dismissal wage" a practice that is increasing?

A.—The United States bureau of labor statistics says: "Payment of a dismissal wage to workers losing their jobs or positions because of a lack of work, while still extremely limited in application, is a practice which is increasing among employers who recognize the fact that they have a large measure of responsibility when workers are dismissed because of curtailed production, changes in production methods, or other reasons over which the workers themselves have no control."

Q.—Do some unions require that members be citizens?

A.—Yes. The Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers' International Union of America requires that a member must be a citizen or declare his intention to become a citizen of the country in which he works.

What Next!

That it is possible for the human ear, without the aid of the usual mechanical transformer, to "hear" sound transmitted over an electric wire—in other words, for the ear itself to perform the function of a telephone receiver—was demonstrated to the Vienna Medical Society.

Old-Age Pension Plan Must Be Nation-Wide

New York — No nation having adopted an old-age pension plan has discarded it, Harold A. Hatch, a student of the problem of old-age dependency, told delegates to the third annual conference of the National Conference on Old Age Security.

Sociologists, public officials and investigators who were present agreed that the time is ripe for a nation-wide state-supported system of old-age pensions.

Administrators reported that wherever the old-age security system has been tried, in Toronto, California, Wisconsin and Utah, it has been successful in providing for the helpless aged poor. Pensions were declared to be a necessary means of stabilizing society and it was predicted that eventually poor houses would be discarded.

The conference re-elected Bishop Francis J. McConnell of the Methodist-Episcopal diocese, New York, president.

J. T. FENNELL DEAD

HOWDY, FOLKS!

On Monday the Tennessee Federation of Labor will assemble in Chattanooga in the thirty-fourth annual convention, and Chattanooga will be host to the state workers' representatives for three days thereafter.

This will be the first session to be held in Chattanooga for six years, and during the time which has elapsed the federation has grown and flourished even as the bay tree (whatever that is).

Chattanoogans have ever been proud of their part in the work of the state body. Our neighbors have been kind to us, and we have endeavored to reciprocate by giving every ounce of our energy to whatever proposal is advanced for the benefit of the state's toilers. We are glad to have them with us now, and will do all in our power to make their stay among us as pleasant as is possible.

The Tennessee Federation of Labor has the reputation of being one of the livest and best state bodies in the south. It has gained this favorable position through "playing the game squarely"—through bending its energies solely to the benefit of its constituent members. It has been remarkably free from factional disturbances, and has resented and rebuffed any and all efforts to inject partisan politics—or politicians—into any phase of its program. It has elected and kept in office men of unquestioned integrity and trades unionists who are interested only in the good of the whole.

The Tennessee Federation of Labor is clean, virile and upstanding—an organization in which any man or woman might be proud to claim membership.

Brothers and sisters, we're glad you're here, and we anticipate a happy gathering, which may further cement the bond of fellowship and brotherhood which the years have welded so strongly together.

ANOTHER MILESTONE

Another milestone in the onward march of organized labor was passed on Wednesday, when the United States senate, following weeks of acrimonious debate and charges and counter-charges, definitely rejected the nomination of Judge John J. Parker for a member of the United States supreme court.

The senate's action marked a milestone in our progress for the reason that labor first called attention to the danger of placing upon our "court of last resort" a man whose conception of justice is so at variance with our American idea that government is to be used principally for protection of the weak against imposition on the part of the strong; whose utter failure to grasp the human element in court matters was so plainly demonstrated in his upholding an injunction against working men which denied to them the right of free speech, of peaceable assemblage and peaceable persuasion of their fellowmen to join with them in an effort to raise standards of living to a truly American level.

It marked a milestone because labor centered attention of the entire country upon the abominable abuse of the injunction in labor disputes, and drove home to the people the fact that equity judges are empowered virtually to make their own laws, and to punish as criminal contempt whatever such a judge may regard as a violation of his edict, whether it be within or without the law as set down in the statutes.

It marked a milestone because the fight was not made in a selfish spirit, but for the protection of all groups and individuals against a philosophy which would shake the very foundations of our great country, and which belies the proud boast that we are the freest of the earth's peoples.

Judge Parker's defense of the Red Jacket injunction—which to our mind was of itself beneath the dignity required of a supreme court justice—was weak, his plea of precedent being totally submerged by the facts brought out in the two cases. The very vital question of human rights and human relations in industry was the crux of the Red Jacket case, and Judge Parker fell miserably short of the judicial temperament in turning weakly to a defense of "precedent."

From infancy the true American is taught to respect all our courts, and above all the supreme court of our land. Which is a very fine and very necessary thing. But how are we to reconcile our teachings if we are to point out to our children and our children's children men with such ideas occupying the most exalted court position within the gift of our government?

A significant feature of the battle just ended is that, before and after the vote on confirmation was taken, many leading citizens favoring Judge Parker asserted their belief that the so-called yellow dog contract is a menace to our institutions, and based their opinions that he should be confirmed on matters entirely apart from this phase of the situation. This, it appears to us, is good, and indicated an awakening against this un-American and destructive instrumentality used by selfish employers to the detriment of those who toil.

Organized labor and the people have won one of the greatest moral victories in decades, and respect for our courts has received a fine and healthy impetus, even though a so-called liberal be not seated on the supreme bench after all.

AND WE TIED THE CAN!

For years most people didn't get very excited about the yellow dog contract. For years most people didn't realize what it was about or what it meant. For years most people didn't understand the robbery of human rights that was committed every time a man was forced to sign such a contract.

It took a long time to bring out the fact—to most people—that the yellow dog contract is what is known as unconscionable; that it is signed under duress, is not an instrument of mutual benefit, and that it compels men in desperation to sign away their rights.

Now the nation knows all about the yellow dog contract. Some of the states where labor is strongest have state laws making it unlawful, or "against public policy" to force working people to sign such instruments.

In Wisconsin the state supreme court soon is to hear arguments and must decide on the constitutionality of such a state law.

After the Parker case debate in the United States senate never again can a judge pretend he doesn't know that the yellow dog contract robs a wage earner of a lawful right, that it is procured under duress of the most forceful kind, that it is unconscionable, that it does not have to be supported by judges. And never again can a legislator, state or federal, vote with a straight face against a bill to outlaw all yellow dog contracts.

The Parker debate has put the kibosh on the yellow dog. That particular brute of modern industrial life is on his last legs.

And organized labor made the fight that put him there!

The Passing Show

Note and Comment on Things Doing in the March of Events

"Mother" Jones, known wherever men toil, was 100 years old on May 1. Feeble of body but strong of spirit, she received homage from thousands all over the United States. By letter, telegraph and in person they congratulated her on attaining the century mark and paid tribute to her long service to labor and humanity.

"Mother" Jones doubtless made mistakes, but they were mistakes of judgment, not of heart. Her brave soul has always been with the "under dog" and she suffered much in behalf of the poor and oppressed. Now, nearing the end of a long life, she can look back with satisfaction on her fight for labor and rejoice that many of the things she battled for have come to pass. She focused public attention on terrible industrial evils and helped to remedy them.

Always the fighter, "Mother" Jones' life has been an expression of humanity's striving for justice and of the indomitable spirit in man that never knows defeat, even in the face of the heaviest odds.

Almost unbelievable conditions of filth, squalor and poverty have existed for scores of years in the alleys of Washington, D. C. Tourists don't see the alleys, so little is known in the country at large about them.

Col. U. S. Grant III, executive director of the National Capital Park and Planning commission, told the subcommittee on public health of the house district committee recently that there are at least 15,000 living in alley slums in Washington and that it is difficult to estimate the exact number because in some places they are sleeping in two shifts, day and night.

Captain E. M. Chisolm, engineer of the park and planning commission, said that he had been engaged in this sort of work for years in all parts of the country and that with the possible exception of Memphis, the worst alley conditions in the entire country are in Washington.

"Some conditions here are so revolting as to filth. lack of water and sanitation as to be unbelievable," Captain Chisolm said.

Surely conditions such as described by Colonel Grant and Captain Chisolm are an anomaly in the capital city of the nation which boasts it is the richest and most prosperous country on the fact of the globe.

Which has the right-of-way, a cow being driven along the highway or a motor vehicle operator? Wisconsin's new state traffic code, says the National Safety council, settles this point along with many others, on a common sense basis.

The auto driver is presumed to have more sense than the cow, even though some drivers seem intellectually inferior to "bossy." The cow, therefore, is given the right-of-way and the driver must govern himself accordingly.

Wisconsin's new law seems a good tie-up of sound safety legislation with common sense. For instance, one-arm driving is barred on the simple theory that it interferes with safe driving on the part of the operator.

SURVEY PRESAGES SUCCESS FOR SOUTHERN CO-OPERATION; PLAN EDUCATIONAL NEEDS

New York, May 8.—The American Federation of Labor having decided to advocate what is known as the union-management co-operation plan in its southern organizing campaign, progressive steps are being taken toward a practical test of this plan in many industrial establishments in the south.

Within the past week or two the efforts have been directed toward the establishment of an office in some centrally located town or city from which the general efforts can be directed. At the present time it seems certain that Greensboro, N. C., will be that place. The strictly industrial feature of the campaign will be worked out by Geoffrey C. Brown, an engineer of outstanding ability, and the educational features of the work will be in charge of the newly appointed educational director, Paul W. Fuller. A preliminary survey which has just been completed by Mr. Brown in the limited field in which the plan is first to be tried, including North Carolina, South Carolina and Virginia, revealed that out of 150 proprietors and managers who were interviewed, seventy were either willing to try or seriously consider a trial of this plan in their establishments.

Plan Familiar to Railroads.

To social or political economists the fundamentals of this plan are not new, although as the plan is now to be worked out in the southern organizing campaign, it will include some features not attempted before. Not the least of these will be the efforts which union labor will exert through educational endeavors to be of the greatest possible assistance not only to win a better wages scale for the workers, but also to make the proceeds of industrial establishments commensurate with these wages and through the efficiency of the workers. It is not new to men who have been following the trend of economic affairs that within the last few years labor has sought in various ways to share more fully in the problems of industrial welfare. It has expressed this new interest in different ways and under different names. Certainly the New England Labor congress held in Worcester, Mass., in the fall of last year, was headed in that direction. And there have been other conferences in which the key word that appeared repeatedly in the summaries was, "co-operation." And one of the most far-reaching, and seemingly most practical of these forms is this one now to be tried in the south, namely, this one which has come to be known as union-management co-operation. It was originally started on certain of the railroads of this country. It recognizes frankly the constructive function of the trade union and seeks to utilize it for co-operative ends.

Educational Needs Have Appeared.

With the extension of this plan certain definite educational needs have made themselves manifest. The railroads discovered that not the least of the tasks which confronted them was the education of the workers to the significance and meaning of this new plan. And the success of the plan is due not only to the wise leadership under which it prospered, but also in no minor degree to the sound educational work that has been done to transform the workers to useful aids in bringing about the desirable results.

The work begun on the railroads has now been extended to other industries, as it will be in the south, such as textiles, paper, building and printing trades. It will be the task of Mr. Brown to work out the machine requirements and the forms in each industry, and paralleling his work it will be the duty of Mr. Fuller as director of workers' education to educate the workers to the needs and requirements of their new responsibilities.

Preacher Boosts Union Label As Symbol of Justice

Denver, Col., May 8.—Here is what Harry Fox, writing for the Wyoming Labor Journal, thinks of Aaron Allen Heist of the Grace Community church of this city. "If we had more preachers like him," he begins, "there would be less reason to bemoan the lack of workers attending the churches.

"Somewhere in his theological training, Dr. Heist seems to have imbibed the idea, along with many other ministers of various creeds, that working people are some pumpkins and are entitled to a square deal, along with the privilege they now enjoy of furnishing the sinews for productive society.

"Here's a preacher who really believes in the union label as a symbol of justice, urges his congregation to purchase 'union-mined coal' and to stay away from stores that exploit their help or are unfair to working people. He is truly a worthy apostle for the work he is engaged in.

"Ministers in industrial communities who want congregations should take a vacation, visit Denver, get acquainted with Brother Heist, go with him in his various activities, running a labor college, a weekly forum in his church, along with the ordinary churchly activities, and they will cease to wonder why men are strangely attracted to him. There is good salespsychology in this thought—if you want to sell a customer show him something that will appeal to him.

"A grand dame doesn't want overalls nor do drain layers crave dress suits. Workers, by the same token, weary of the meaningless platitudes of the average minister. Their messages lack the vital element of dealing with every-day problems and that is what the world is interested in. Heist can tell the story of Jesus the Carpenter in a way that appeals and reflects in his own life some of the major things that this Carpenter would have stood for if he were here with us.

"If I had the means I would establish a community church in every town where workers lived. I would abolish the narrow boundaries established by creed. There I would invite fearless men or women to fill the pulpit and to serve as leaders of their people, not preachers to them. Such churches, like Grace Community is, would make a better, more verile, better understanding citizenship."

Use Them! Abuse Them!

PUT THEM TO THE TEST OF HARDEST WEAR!

Finck's Red-Bar Overalls will settle the overalls question for you once and for all—if you will take the trouble to make this simple test.

The next time you need overalls, buy two pairs—a pair of Finck's and a pair of any other brand you please. Wear them alternately—and treat 'em rough. Give them the hardest kind of wear that you possibly can.

You'll be surprised to find how many more weeks wear you'll get out of Finck's than out of the other brand. Try and see! Then you'll appreciate why it pays to buy overalls made of close-weave denim with tightly sewed and reinforced at the places where the hardest wear comes.

You can always tell the Finck brand by the red diagonal bar on the pocket. No other overalls have this mark of distinction.

Slight Drop Reported.

...e federation's report shows that ...ployment of organized wage ...rs was only one per cent less in April than in March. In a statement on the situation, as revealed by the report, President William Green said:

"There was a slight decrease in unemployment from March to April, according to reports from trade unions to the American Federation of Labor. Wage earners have been much slower in getting back to work than usual this year. Reports for March showed 21 per cent out of work, while in April only 20 per cent were out. This drop of only one per cent is a very small improvement for April. In 1929, unemployment decreased 2 per cent from March to April, and even in the unemployment crisis of 1928 the improvement from March to April was 2 per cent. At this time last year only 12 per cent of union members were out of work, and even in 1928 only 16 per cent were out."

Pat Connor told me to be sure to publish the fact that at the last checker tournament at the office he held the rest of them in the hollow of his hand. They couldn't stop him, he having won the most games, thirteen. But Roscoe Talley says that there is some question as to Pat being champion, as he played a draw with Cooper Nesbit, who won the former tournament, and so the championship is not decided yet. He thinks Cooper has as much right as Pat to the championship.

Chattanooga unionists, as was chronicled in the Evening Delight Thursday, are more than jubilant over the downfall of Judge Parker's nomination as a supreme court justice. Walter Gardner set forth in a brief but masterly fashion his views on the matter of Judge Parker and the yellow dog.

Some place recently I read an editorial on government by precedence. It was good, and I wish I could repeat it here, but the gist of it was that any man can follow precedent, but it takes a strong man to establish one. Judge Parker had two precedents, each diametrically opposed to the other, to follow in his ruling, according to Senator Borah. He evidently chose the easier path, he thought at the time. But he chose the path that led to disaster and doomed his ambition to reach the highest judicial seat in the land. His defeat adds strength to organized labor's fight for the present. It's a safe bet that no other southern man will be nominated by Mr. Hoover.

Prizefight Note—Traveling Milt, who doesn't travel much nowadays, has signed up with Capt. Cheeves at Fort Oglethorpe for the next card on June 16. Milt and his sparring partner had a one-round session somewhere down on Cherry street the other day. There were more funny things connected with that sparring match than happened in the Sharkey-Scott thing in Miami, chief among them being two of the prettiest shiners ever hung on each side of a man's nose, Milt being the seemingly proud possessor of them.

HOT RETORT HANDED MILL MAN WHO CONFUSES PARKER ISSUE

(By International Labor News Service.)

Washington, May 7.—Rignal W. Baldwin, Marion (N. C.) mill owner, living in Baltimore, will be careful the next time he writes to a United States senator that principle should be ignored in the granting of social justice.

Baldwin pleaded with Senator Borah to support Judge Parker and his "yellow dog" decision. The mill owner indulged in the usual anti-union screed that labor is attempting to intimidate senators.

Mr. Borah replied that people who talk thusly should "devote their rare intellectual attainments to ascertaining just what the question is."

"They might make a great saving of adjectives and epithets," said the Idaho lawmaker.

"You state in your letter: 'Labor has rights and I recognize them. But labor, because of its enormous vote and organization, has thereby no increased rights."

"You have stated the proposition well, and with your statement I thoroughly agree. Labor has no rights because of its votes, great or small, but it has rights, regardless of its votes.

"If some principle of law and social justice were at stake, you would not, I presume, refuse to support them simply because some one might charge you with seeking labor votes—you would not, I presume, abandon a position you thought a just one because you happened to be found in company with labor? It is very easy, when matters are pending here which involve the rights of labor, for people to say that those who support the cause are demagogues and political cowards. If these same people would devote their rare intellectual attainments to ascertaining just what the question is and whether or not it is right, they might make a great saving of adjectives and epithets.

"There is involved in this controversy a so-called contract which, in my judgment, ought to have no place in a free government and can have no place in any defensible system of social justice. It so happens in this instance that labor is interested. But I maintain the public is also interested and the public welfare is also involved."

Radio Racketeers Given Free Hand

Washington.—"The attorney-general should proceed against radio racketeers under the anti-trust laws or the radio trust will develop into another Teapot Dome," said Oswald F. Schuette, executive secretary of the independent radio manufacturers' organization.

The department of justice stated it is "concerned" over the General Electric and Westinghouse companies' plan to control the Radio Corporation of America, but this, according to Mr. Schuette, "covers only a fraction of the operations of this monopoly."

"There has been no publicity of the part played by the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, although this is the largest constituent of the radio trust," said Mr. Schuette.

The telephone company owns no stock in the Radio Corporation, but it exercises a far more important control over the corporation's activities through ownership of patents which it contributed to the illegal patent pool of the radio trust.

"It is this patent pool which constitutes the trust," said Mr. Schuette. "Under the agreement which created this pool, the Radio Corporation of America and the General Electric and Westinghouse companies agreed to protect the wire and wireless telephone monopoly of the Telephone company and the latter agreed to safeguard the manufacturing, broadcasting and wireless telegraph monopolies of the other companies."

DEATH ENTERS UNION HOMES

Takes Toll From Two Families Whose Heads Are Members Local 62.

The Angel of Death entered the homes of two members of Local 62, Sheet Metal Workers, Tuesday of this week, the early morning bringing the tragic death of Harry Paul Hammond, aged 8, who was run down by a truck on the Cherokee boulevard, and in the evening of the same day Mrs. Robert Lanham, who had been ill for several weeks, passed to the great beyond.

The Hammond child was on his way to school and had reached a point just south of the Stringer's ridge tunnel when he was struck by a large truck. He was rushed to a hospital, but passed away a short time later. Little Harry Paul, whose father, J. T. Hammond, is a well-known member and official of Local 62, is survived also by his mother; two sisters, Misses Hazel and Lorain; one brother, J. T., Jr., and his grandfather, A. J. Wilder.

Funeral services were held Thursday afternoon, from the Calvary Baptist church, North Chattanooga, the Rev. W. T. McMahan officiating.

Mrs. Lanham, aged 33, died at the home, 2008 East Thirty-second street. Besides her husband, who is also a well-known member of Local 62, she is survived by one son, Robert, Jr.; her mother, Mrs. Edwards; a sister, Mrs. W. P. Warbrough, and a brother, Robert Edwards. Funeral services for Mrs. Lanham were held Thursday afternoon.

Sympathy of the entire local labor movement will go out to these bereaved brothers, and The Labor World joins in extending to them and their families heartfelt condolences.

MRS. MARGARET WOY GOES TO REWARD

Mrs. Margaret Woy, mother of Paul Woy, of Chattanooga Typographical union, and Miss Rebecca Woy, of Chattanooga Printing Pressmen's and Assistants' Union, passed away at 3 o'clock Monday morning at her home, 539 Barton avenue. Mrs. Woy was 57 years of age. Besides the daughter and son mentioned, she is survived by two other sons, J. W. and C. W., both of this city, and three daughters, Miss Margaret Woy; Mrs. C. L. Bussell, of Frankfort, Ky., and Mrs. R. H. Brown, Jr., of Tyner. Five sisters and ten grandchildren also survive.

Funeral services were held at White Oak M. E. Church, south, Tuesday afternoon, the Revs. F. W. Johnson and E. R. Lewis officiating.

The Labor World joins with hundreds of local friends, particularly in the printing trades, in extending to Brother and Sister Woy and the other bereaved relatives sincere condolences in their loss.

Labor Advocate Boosts Saunders

Clarence Saunders, stormy petrel of the merchandising world, is given a big boost as a friend of organized labor in a recent issue of the Birmingham Labor Advocate, official organ of the trades council of that city. In a lengthy special article in the Birmingham paper, Mr. Saunders is held up as a consistent friend of the workers, and the writer declares that his organization "recognizes admirable characteristics of organized labor" in every city where it operates.

Extracts from the Labor Advocate article follow:

"Clarence Saunders and the far-reaching organization which bears his name has always proved the avowed friend of union labor and all its institutions. The Saunders stores stand for all that is highest and most exacting as to standards of grocery merchandising. Now this organization, famous from coast to coast for these virtues, is naturally able to employ the best service available. So it most certainly follows that it recognizes in organized labor the admirable characteristics which it embodies. The Clarence Saunders corporation, therefore, employs only union men in every branch of its service—union market men, union painters, union carpenters, etc. . . .

"One of the most rigid requirements of the Saunders system is absolute honesty. Mr. Saunders would not tolerate any form of chicanery or trickery, from the highest to the lowest man in his employ. They know this, respect him for it and are anxious at all times to carry out his wishes."

The article declares that Saunders employes receive adequate salaries, work under pleasant conditions, and are genuinely interested in their work.

Machinists' Old Foe Signs Union Pledge

Shreveport, La.—W. K. Henderson, proprietor Henderson Iron Works of this city and long-time foe of organized labor, has signed a union agreement with Vice-President Laudemann, International Association of Machinists, and President Swallow, Louisiana Federation of Labor.

Henderson declares that he is in sympathy with the purposes of organized labor and will recognize the various crafts, and deal with them collectively. He also expressed the hope that his employes join their respective crafts affiliated to A. F. of L.

Henderson has been a hard-hitting opponent against organized labor. During the railroad shopmen's strike he assisted railroads in overhauling their engines. His conversion to trade unionism will have a far-reaching effect throughout the south.

WALKER RESIGNS

Springfield, Ill.—John Walker, for 15 years president of the Illinois Federation of Labor, resigned. He was recently elected secretary-treasurer of an organization in this city that was started by a group of miners that is outside the recognized United Mine Workers of America.

CARPENTERS IN ANNUAL MEET

State Council to Hold Sessions at Central Labor Hall Friday and Saturday.

Annual convention of the Tennessee State Council of Carpenters will meet Friday and Saturday at the Central Labor hall for the eleventh session of that body, and President J. L. Carpenter, of this city, predicts a large attendance of delegates from all sections of the state.

The council was organized in Chattanooga eleven years ago, and Mr. Carpenter has been its chief executive for nine consecutive terms. W. E. Cheek, of Nashville, secretary-treasurer, has held that office for several successive terms, and under the administration of these two gentlemen the council has prospered and has accomplished much for the craft throughout the state.

The southern organization campaign will be one of the chief topics of discussion, President Carpenter told a representative of The Labor World Thursday night. "The southern campaign," he said, "has not been in progress long enough to reach into every locality where our craftsmen might be benefited, but in those places where the work has begun some splendid results have been achieved, and we hope to take some action at this convention which will give impetus to the drive."

Asked about general conditions of the craft in Tennessee, Mr. Carpenter said that while the Carpenters have suffered from unemployment like all other crafts, membership has been maintained to a remarkable degree when everything is considered. It is but natural that progress is slow during dull periods, he said, but very satisfactory gains have been made during the year just past.

L. E. Smith, of Memphis, and W. H. Drummond, of Jackson, executive board members, will attend the Chattanooga sessions. A vacancy on the board, created by the removal of R. V. McLain, Elizabethton, from the state, will be filled at this meeting.

Annual conventions of the state council are held each year just previous to the meetings of the Tennessee Federation of Labor, and many delegates to the Carpenters' body are also representatives to the federation meeting. The Carpenters also name a fraternal delegate to the federation convention.

BURSON LOWRY IS HONORED

Renamed President Local 259 and Selected as Delegate to Los Angeles.

J. Burson Lowry, president of Local 259, Movie Operators, was honored doubly by his fellow trades unionists at the regular monthly session of the organization last Saturday night, being renamed president and also selected as No. 285's representative in the International Alliance at Los Angeles next month.

All the officers elected by the Operators are "old-timers" in the local movement, each name being familiar to readers of The Labor World. They are:

President—J. B. Lowry.
Vice-President—W. C. Belcher.
Financial Secretary—Leo Vick.
Business Agent—A. C. Kamin.
Sergeant-at-Arms—O. B. Ayers.
Recording Secretary and Treasurer—W. R. Hipp.
Delegates to Chattanooga Trades and Labor Council—Felix Hamil, D. E. Harrison, A. C. Kamin.
Delegate to Tennessee Federation of Labor—W. R. Hipp.

The International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes and Moving Picture Machine Operators of the United States and Canada will convene at Los Angeles on June 2, for a session of approximately one week. Delegates will be present, said Mr. Lowry, from every one of the 790 local unions which compose the Alliance.

Delegates from the Seventh district, composed of seven states in this section, will assemble in New Orleans on May 28, and from there will have a private Pullman straight through to the convention city.

Mr. Lowry and H. L. Stebbins, representing Local 140, the Chattanooga Stage Employes' unit of the Alliance, will leave May 27.

Eagles to Favor Hospital Residents

The local lodge of Eagles has decided to depart somewhat from the usual order of things and a committee has arranged to entertain the residents at the William L. Bork Memorial hospital on Mothers' day.

According to W. R. Hipp, secretary of the local chapter, Mothers' day was first suggested by Frank E. Herring, editor of the Eagles' Magazine, who is the only civilian to be presented with a medal by the Gold Star Mothers. Mr. Hipp said the old ladies at the county institution will be treated to a big chicken dinner and musical program, beginning at 1 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

PLANT LESS TOBACCO GROWERS ARE WARNED

Washington.—Will the government ever call on bankers to aid it in urging labor to produce less, that a surplus of commodities is not created?

The department of agriculture acted along these lines in an effort to limit tobacco output. Growers intend to plant a "dangerously high" amount and representatives of the department, it is stated, have been sent to Kentucky and Tennessee to get in touch with the state extension services and bankers' associations to explain to the planters their precarious situation.

Miss Brown, of radio fame, ren- wo numbers, and Miss Mattie od closed the evening's enter- ent with the "official song" Tennessee Federation of La- ildarity," accompanied by the singing the chorus.

g those who made short were Gen. Peabody Howard, tended fraternal greetings e American Legion; Col. Ben Commissioner H. D. Huf- faker, Sheriff Taylor, Francis Gorman, vice-president of the United Textile Workers of America; Paul J. Smith, chairman of the southern organizing committee of the A. F. of L.; Miss Matilda Lindsay, director of women's work in the campaign; Miss Louise Leonard, director of the Southern Summer School for Women Workers in Industry; H. V. Reid, chairman of the nonpartisan political committee of the Tennessee Federation of Labor and the Railroad Brotherhoods; T. J. Smith, former president of the federation; Hays Clark, W. French Grubb, D. M. Coleman, George W. Chamlee, Jr., J. L. Levine, Mayor James A. Trent, of Knoxville; Senator Albert E. Hill, W. C. Birthright and Paul J. Aymon.

A feature of the convention was the presence of ten young lady visitors from the O'Bryan Bros. company, at Nashville. These young ladies, sent by Local 133, United Garment Workers, of Nashville, spent the entire time the convention was in session boostin- the product of the O'Bryan factory, Duckhead overalls and work pants. Literature and advertising matter of various kinds was distributed, and a member of the delegation made an appeal on the floor of the convention for support of their company's products. The O'Bryan company employs under normal conditions 700 or 800 members of the Tennessee Federation of Labor at good wages and with ideal working conditions. It is the only union overall factory in Tennessee.

The convention was adjourned sine die in the main auditorium of the Memorial, following a fifteen-minute concert by McConnell Irwin, city organist, and the delegates and visitors returned to their homes loud in their praises of Chattanooga, and with a conviction, according to general expressions, that the thirty-fourth annual convention of the Tennessee Federation of Labor was one of the most constructive gatherings of the state body in many years.

PAUL J. AYMON AGAIN CHOSEN

State Federation Approves Activities of Chattanoogan for Past Year.

Local Soft Drink Workers' union was doubly honored by the thirty-fourth annual convention of the Tennessee Federation of Labor, when two of its members were selected as executive officers of the federation for the coming year at the annual election held at the close of the sessions Wednesday at the Memorial auditorium.

Paul J. Aymon, who has served with credit as head of the state workers' organization, was unanimously renamed to that post. Mr. Aymon, during his incumbency, has placed the same degree of loyalty and sincerity in his work that has marked his long and able service to the workers in his home city. His love for the cause, which has for decades been demonstrated to his associates in Chattanooga, was early sensed by representatives of the state workers, and that the entire movement of Tennessee appreciates his efforts is shown by this, his third successive time to be honored by labor in its annual convention.

Roy Lee, member of the same local union, was chosen as the executive board member for the Chattanooga district. Mr. Lee has himself a long and honorable record in the local movement.

W. C. Birthright, secretary-treasurer, was also re-elected without opposition. Mr. Birthright's record as a trade union official is nationally known, and that it has been approved is evidenced by the fact that he has not only been named a vice-president of his own international union, but was chosen by President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, as a member of a committee of three to direct the southern organizing campaign.

Another member of the new executive committee is Thomas Jefferson Smith, veteran organizer for the United Mine Workers and former president of the federation. Mr. Smith will represent the United Mine Workers on the board. W. E. Cheek, former head of the Nashville central body and long-time member of the Carpenters' union in the capital city, will represent his home district on the committee. A. R. McGoldrick, Memphis; E. M. Glover, Johnson City; S. C. Godfrey, Knoxville, and A. L. Wilson, Jackson, complete the list.

The newly-elected officers were installed in the main auditorium of the Memorial, at the conclusion of the organ concert by City Organist McConnell Irwin, Wednesday noon.

Jackson was selected as the next convention city, and the thirty-fifth annual gathering will convene in the West Tennessee metropolis on the first Monday in May, 1931.

DIXIE DRIVE GIVEN IMPETUS BY CONVENTION

Resolutions Support Activities in South.

PARENT BODIES ARE CALLED ON TO ASSIST

Local Unions Urged to Affiliate and Present United Front in Fight.

Wholehearted support of the southern organizing campaign of the American Federation of Labor was reflected in the deliberations of the convention this week, and in two resolutions touching upon this matter, which were adopted by unanimous vote of the delegates.

With the added impetus given by the presence of all three members of President Green's committee, each of whom discussed the progress of and prospects for the campaign, the movement had a major part in the many important matters considered.

International unions were called upon in one of the companion declarations to insist that their various local unions affiliate with city central bodies and state federations in the south, in order that a united front might be presented for the struggle. This resolution, which provided that copies be sent to all internationals interested, was as follows:

Whereas, the campaign of the A. F. of L. to organize the southern workers is now on; and,

Whereas, the success of this campaign depends on the cooperation of the members of the various local unions and city central bodies; and,

Whereas, in some cities we find that many local unions are not affiliated with their respective central bodies and the state body, and are not giving the proper support to the campaign; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the thirty-fourth annual convention of the State Federation of Labor of Tennessee call upon all national and international unions to request and insist that their local unions do affiliate with the city central body and state body and give their very hearty co-operation in this campaign; and, be it further

Resolved, That this convention request that each city central body instruct their organization committee to make every effort possible to carry out the program of the southern campaign committee; and, be it further

Resolved, That copies of this

CONVICT GOODS AGAIN TO FORE

Federation to Seek Legislation Barring Prison-Made Products From State.

Enactment of a law to provide for state use of convict-made products features the legislative program of the Tennessee Federation of Labor as adopted by the convention Wednesday. In his annual report to the delegates, Chairman David Hanly, of the legislative committee, calls attention to the fact that the Cooper-Hawes law will become effective in 1934. This law divests convict-made goods of their interstate character, and provides that when such goods are shipped into a state they shall become subject to any laws of such state. It is urged, therefore, that the Tennessee laws be made to provide that no convict-made goods be shipped into this state to be sold in open market, or sold to, or exchanged with, a state institution. The law recently enacted in New York is pointed to as an example of such legislation needed here.

Chairman Hanly's report declares:

"The Cooper-Hawes bill becomes effective in 1934. This law divests convict-made goods of their interstate character. It does not prohibit the shipment of convict-made goods from the state in which they are manufactured, but when they come to rest in the state to which they are shipped, they shall become subject to the laws of that state. In order to protect Tennessee labor and manufacturers from prison-made products manufactured in other states, a law should be enacted similar to the law recently enacted in New York, which provides:

"Sale of convict-made goods manufactured or mined in other states: No goods, wares or merchandise manufactured or mined by convicts or prisoners of other states, except convicts or prisoners on parole or probation, shall be shipped into this state to be sold on the open market, or sold to, or exchanged with, an institution of this state or with any of its political subdivisions."

"When the Cooper-Hawes law becomes effective it will put an end to the contract system in the penal institutions in the various states. In order to employ the prisoners and not keep them in idleness, the state's use system is indorsed by the A. F. of L. as the best method. It is therefore recommended that a law providing for the state's use system be enacted by the legislature of Tennessee."

SOUTHERN WORKERS FIGHT "YELLOW DOG"

Atlanta, Ga.—The Georgia Federation of Labor is outlining a vigorous campaign against the "yellow dog." The federation increased its per capita tax, one-half of which will be used for the southern organizing campaign.

FATHER TIME FAILS TO SOOTHE WORKERS' HURTS

Bitterness Against Horton Regime Still Manifest.

CONDEMNATION IS UNANIMOUS

Report of Nonpartisan Committee Adopted With Loud Chorus of "Ayes."

That the passing of time has not served to lessen the bitterness of organized labor's resentment to the official acts of his excellency, Gov. Henry H. Horton, was amply demonstrated in the convention of the federation this week, when opinions of delegates, expressed on the floor, in committees, in hotel lobbies and on the streets, compared with such expressions made in the heat of the Elizabethton strike last spring, roundly denounced the state executive for his misuse of state troops, which worked to the interest of the German owners of the rayon mills in the East Tennessee city, while thousands of native Tennesseans were on strike in protest against a Prussian system which had been established in the mills.

Newspaper reports that the Memphis delegation was working in the interest of Horton were resented by the Bluff City delegates themselves, who explained they were merely desirous of mature consideration respecting the proper opponent for his excellency in the coming elections.

Unanimous adoption, with a rousing chorus of "aves," of the report of the nonpartisan political committee of the federation and the rail brotherhoods indicated the temper of the delegates.

The report speaks of the "lack of ability" of the state executive, and declares that a group of politicians, leaders of the democratic and republican parties, are in complete control of the affairs of state, and are "using this control to promote their collective and individual interests at the expense of the taxpayers of the state. . . . This committee believes that with a man like Gov. Horton filling the place of governor the interests of not only members of organized labor but of the whole people of the state are placed in jeopardy."

With reference to the campaign for United States senator, the committee acceded to the opinion of officials of the A. F. of L., and recomended that Cordell Hull be supported by organized labor and its friends.

With reference to the coming races for congress, railroad and public utilities commission, and for governor, the report recommended that the committee meet at a later date to further consider such nominations as have been and may be made.

The full report follows:

United States Senator.

"Cordell Hull is now and has been for many years a member of congress, representing the Fourth congressional district of this state. He was a candidate for the Democratic nomination for president of the United States at the Houston convention of that party in 1928. He has also served as chairman of the Democratic national committee.

Mr. Hull's record, based on his votes on labor legislation, has the endorsement of the legislative representatives of the A. F. of L. and the national legislative representatives of the transporation brotherhoods. On this record the national legislative representatives have endorsed him for election as United States senator from Tennessee. Mr. Hull is the only candidate for senator in the Democratic primary that has a record friendly to labor.

"It is therefore recommended that organized labor and their friends vote and work for the nomination of Hon. Cordell Hull for United States senator in the Democratic primary to be held on August 7, 1930.

Governor.

"Organized labor of this state opposed Governor Horton's candidacy for the Democratic nomination for governor in the primary of that party in 1928 and supported Hon. Hill McAllister. Events that have since transpired show that organized labor was justified in that position.

"In 1928 there were two strikes of the rayon workers in the plants of the Bemberg and Glanzstoff corporation in Elizabethton. On each occasion Governor Horton sent the state militia to that place in violation of the constitution of Tennessee. The soldiers were ordered out by the governor and on arrival at Elizabethton were sworn in as state police. For the illegal use of the equipment of the national guard by these so-called state police to coerce the striking workers at Eliza-

JOHN O'CONNOR 'STRUTS STUFF'

Pleads for Action Against Power Trust — Norris Resolution Approved.

In what many of the delegates believed to be one of the most effective addresses at the state convention this week, John T. O'Connor, of Knoxville, former president of the federation, discussed the question of waterpower, and declared this to be the most momentous problem facing the nation today. Mr. O'Connor declared the power interests, with their unlimited funds, were extending their influence into legislative bodies, civic organizations, schools and even the churches, to prevent proper disposition of natural power sites, because, he said, if these projects are developed by and in the interest of the people, who own them, it will show just how much cheaper electric power can be furnished than the privately-owned distribution is now costing the consumer.

He paid a remarkable tribute to Senator George Norris of Nebraska, declaring that statesman is an old man, almost ready to relinquish a valiant and sometimes discouraging fight in the interest of the nation's people. Mr. O'Connor pleaded for support for the Norris resolution, now in a house committee, and urged the convention to take some kind of action with respect to this matter before adjournment.

That the appeal of this veteran and beloved former executive of the state body did not go unheeded was seen in a resolution presented to the convention and unanimously adopted on Wednesdav.

The resolution, which follows, indorses the Norris proposal, and calls upon the congress and senate to support it:

Whereas, the resolution now pending before congress of the United States known as the Norris resolution for the operation of Muscle Shoals and the construction of the Cove Creek dam, located near Cove Creek, Tenn.; and,

Whereas, This great project when completed will be a great boon to the farmers and to a great extent help to obliviate the flood menace of the Mississippi valley, which has been so destructive with the loss of lives and homes, and to the fertility of this virgin valley of this our beloved southland; therefore, be it

Resolved, That this the thirty-fourth session of the Tennessee Federation of Labor, held in Chattanooga, Tenn., favor the resolution as offered by Senator Norris and passed by the United States senate and request that the house of representatives of the United States adopt the bill as passed by the United States senate and that this body wire the senators and congressmen to support this resolution.

STATE LABOR TAKES RAP AT HILL CONCERN

Labor-Hating Policy of Chain Stores Condemned.

LOCAL LOCKOUT TO GET MORE PUBLICITY

Tennessee Body Will Notify Workers in All Cities Where Stores Operate.

ANOTHER CHATTANOOGA HILL STORE CLOSES

Still another local store of the H. G. Hill chain was closed this week, according to reports from St. Elmo, a branch store on Forty-ninth street having been "consolidated" with another somewhere else.

The now-vacant store is the only Chattanooga branch of the Nashville concern to go out of business this week, so far as could be learned.

It is not believed that any considerable number of St. Elmo citizens will be inconvenienced, however, by this latest "consolidation," as many of the good folks in that part of the city had already learned that there are many market places there whose proprietors believe in fair dealing with the workers who help make their business a success.

Contempt of the H. G. Hill chain grocery store concern for organized labor was roundly denounced by delegates to the Tennessee Federation of Labor this week, and a resolution adopted by unanimous vote condemns the labor-hating policy of the Nashville management of the chain stores.

Attention is called to the autocratic and cold-blooded attitude of the Hill concern in locking out their Chattanooga meatcutters, and the action of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council in declaring the corporation "unfair to organized labor" is approved.

Under the terms of the resolution the labor press of the state is requested to give conspicuous publicity to the action taken, and the secretary of the federation is instructed to notify central bodies in cities where the Hill chain operates, "both in Tennessee and elsewhere."

The resolution follows:

Whereas, the H. G. Hill chain grocery corporation, with headquarters at Nashville, has in various ways indicated its contempt for organized labor, and on or about January 1 autocratically locked-out its meatcutters in the Chattanooga stores; and

Whereas, this chain grocery concern has become wealthy upon profits in large part created by working people; therefore be it

Resolved, that the Tennessee Federation of Labor, in annual session assembled, approve the action of the Chattanooga labor movement in declaring this chain concern "unfair to organized labor," and that the labor press of the state be requested to publish this resolution conspicuously, with appropriate comment if desired; be it further

Resolved, that the secretary of this organization be, and hereby is, instructed to communicate this action to each central body in cities where the H. G. Hill company operates, both in Tennessee and elsewhere.

OTHER RESOLUTIONS COVER WIDE RANGE.

Among other resolutions adopted by the delegates were the following:

Expressing sympathy for Mayor E. D. Bass and Judge Nathan Bachman, who are confined to Erlanger hospital as a result of an elevator accident several weeks ago.

Calling upon the incoming general assembly to investigate the penal institutions of the state and remedy conditions existing "so that there will not be a repetition of the catastrophe that occurred at Columbus."

Indorsing the Kendall bill for a 44-hour week for postal employes and asking senators and congressmen from Tennessee to support this proposed legislation.

Favoring the introduction of the five-day week in industry.

Pledging support to the United Mine Workers of America in the fight of that organization against the establishment of a dual union.

Indorsing a pending bill increasing the annuities of retired postal employes, and urging Tennessee representatives and senators to support same.

GEORGE FORBES SUBMITS ANNUAL REPORT ON TENNESSEE FEDERATION COVENTION

(Following is the annual report of George Forbes, chairman of the entertainment committee, on the convention as he saw it. The Labor World here and now disclaims all responsibility for injured feelings—if any—caused by the alleged humor of the graypated employe of our Uncle Sam. The only reason the editor did not consign it to the wastebasket, where such junk usually goes in this office, is that George is chairman of the board of directors of this publication, and the editor's job—oh, well, you understand, folks. "We" have a wife and seventeen small children to support.—Ed.)

The convention was impressed with the remarks of Paul Smith, chairman of the southern organizing campaign, in which he intimated that the labor movement in Tennessee is in such good shape that he had kept almost the entire executive committee of the Tennessee Federation of Labor busy in our sister states during the time the campaign has been in progress. He sure paid his respects to Paul Aymon and "Bill" Birthright.

Roy Lee, of the brewery workers, was elected vice-president from the Chattanooga district without opposition. I think he did his electioneering in Frank Smith's pool room, as he and his campaign manager were seen in there several times together.

Matt Gerlach, while voting in the race for vice-president from the Memphis district, remarked, "I believe that Delegate Hoover would make a better vice-president than Delegate McGoldrick, but I haint never voted for Hoover yet, and I ain't a-goin to now."

Mayor Trent, of Knoxville, was a guest at the banquet and in his speech made some references to the size of his little village up the river and compared it to Chattanooga. "Handsome Hal" Brown, of grand opera fame, rose to remark, "We have 13-inch guns mounted on Cameron hill now to prevent Knoxville from trying to extend their city limits to the Georgia line."

When the Nashville delegation (including the lady garment workers) visited the smoker Monday night they "cramped the style" of some of the speakers, including the chairman. However, their moral influence was highly appreciated by some of us more gentlemanly delegates.

The short and ugly word, with a prefix or two, was used by Jake Cohen, of Memphis, when referring to the statement in the daily papers wherein he was accused of supporting Hank Horton. Brush Smith got a good "hand" when he remarked that the first "H" in Horton's name stood for "Harnessed."

Senator Albert Hill, of Nashville, in talking to Mayor Bass and Judge Bachman at Erlanger hospital, remarked that the elevator accident that confined them to their beds, almost ruined the convention, as one of them was expected to make the welcome address and the other serve as toastmaster at the banquet. In a way he was right, for while 'Gene Bryan, mayor pro tem, and "the youngest member of the city commission," made a good welcoming address, Bob Cooke was rotten as toastmaster. He even had the temerity to make insinuating and insulting remarks about the chairman of the entertainment committee.

"Finnev" Carter's address at the smoker was, by far, the best address heard at the convention. He brought the audience to their feet several times—I think they were fixing to go home.

Brother Lange, who drove the car in which "Brush" Smith was riding on the sight-seeing trip, kept insisting that "Brush" ride in the back seat. When asked, why, he replied, "I'm afraid those whiskers will become tangled in the fan belt and cause me to run off the mountain road. I think Chief Factory Inspector Mike Nicholson should make him wear a safety device on them when riding in an automobile."

W. W. Kirkpatrick, who substituted for Rev. Paul Buchanon on the opening program, requested to be relieved of the responsibility at the banquet as he was afraid he'd lose his upper plate and could not eat any fried chicken.

W. W. Williams, the delegate from the electricians, and W. R. Hipp, the movie operator, had quite an argument as they came into the auditorium just as Mr. Erwin, the city organist, was completing his program on the pipe organ. They both wanted to put the next nickel into the piano. Now, I wonder where they got that idea?

The entertainment committee wishes to thank all the local people who so kindly furnished cars for the sight-seeing trip and assisted in so many other ways to make the convention a success—all except the toastmaster.

LABOR QUERIES

Q.—On what railroad has an agreement to relieve irregular employment been adopted?

A.—On the Baltimore & Ohio. The management and the shop craft unions have made an agreement which provides that the shop employes shall work a reduced number of hours weekly in lieu of a reduction in the force. The number of furloughed men will be regulated so that they will get at least three days' work a week.

Q.—Who said: "Labor stands ready to give to industry and to society the benefit of its organized strength and service?"

A.—President William Green of the American Federation of Labor.

Q.—What unions are affiliated with the railway employes' department, American Federation of Labor?

A.—Machinists, Blacksmiths, Boilermakers, Sheet Metal Workers, Electrical Workers, Railway Carmen, Switchmen, Firemen and Oilers and Maintenance of Way employes.

Q.—When and where was "Mother" Jones born?

A.—May 1, 1830, in Cork, Ireland.

Nation's Industries Not Owned by Public

New York.—The illusion of popular control of industry through widely diversified stock ownership has been jolted by the fight over the merger of the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company with the Bethlehem Steel Corporation.

This fight was between two gigantic forces led by Cyrus B. Eaton, who opposed the merger, and J. C. Campbell, chairman of the Youngstown board, who favored it.

"Wall street laughs at the fiction created by a certain class of economists that the common people control industry," says Lemuel F. Parton, in a copyright article to a newspaper syndicate.

"The iron hand still reposes in the velvet glove," writes Mr. Parton. "The populace may mill around a lot and think it is doing some heavy participating, but the final issue, now as in the past, is a showdown among a handful of big-caliber financiers.

"A new era of democratic control in finance was heralded several years ago by Prof. Thomas Nixon Carver of Harvard University in his book, 'The Present Economic Revolution in the United States.' While the magnificoes of mass production and mass financing hailed Prof. Carver as the John the Baptist of a new economic era, his findings regarding the extent of the spread of security holdings have since been sharply challenged.

"Under the momentum of unflagging prosperity and a bull market there was plausibility in the general thesis of widening popular control, but the let-down has served to again turn the spotlight on personalities, individual powers and compulsions, rather than on statistics and theories."

"Breakers" Angry When Wages Are Cut

Pittsburgh. — Strikebreakers employed by the Yellow Cab Company are angry at the company's lack of appreciation.

The strikebreakers were paid $8 a day and 40 per cent of meter receipts when service started last month. The strikebreakers were joyful over their gold mine, but they were ignorant of the part all traitors play. They believed the management's assurance of peace and harmony.

Wages have since been cut to $5 a day and now the strikebreakers are mad clear through. The employers call the extra pay "a bonus." They understand the function of strikebreakers, if this gentry does not.

ABOUT CHILDREN

With something more than 3,000,000 unemployed it is interesting to observe the declaration that where the family income is $2,500 it costs about $7,238 to rear a child to the age of 18 years. This cost was set forth by the White House conference on child health and the figures were obtained from Metropolitan Life Insurance company charts.

It is the clear inference that no less than $7,500 ought to be expended to bring up a child in decency and with fair educational opportunities.

Every child ought to have that chance. But will the White House conference on child health tell the country how a child is to get even that moderately fair chance when the family income never goes over $1,000 a year—and many do not—or where there is unemployment and no cash income at all?

Will the White House conference on child health tell the country what chance there is for the child who has to go into a textile mill to work at the age of 10 or 12, or even 14?

THE CHERRY TREE

Where with our Little Hatchet we tell the truth about many things, sometimes profoundly, sometimes flippantly, sometimes recklessly.

Ruth Hanna McCormick, with a barrel at her disposal, spent a quarter of a million dollars to win the republican senatorial nomination in Illinois. Her rival, Senator Deneen, spent about $24,000.

It is impossible to avoid wondering who would have gotten the nomination if Senator Deneen had spent the quarter of a million and Mrs. McCormick had spent the $24,000.

It is impossible to avoid wondering just how badly the voters would have wanted Mrs. McCormick if she had spent less money for the purpose of inducing them to want her, for, of course, that was her purpose in spending that enormous sum, which, it is worth remembering, is more than her salary for the full term will be if she is elected.

"All persons domiciled in Canada shall, in the absence of reasonable grounds to the contrary, be regularly engaged in some useful occupation, on pain of fine or imprisonment."

So the government of the Dominion decreed in war time. If the Canadian (or United States) government enforced such a law today, it would provide a great deal of employment building jails.

When a government is organizing national energy to speed up mass slaughter, it is vastly concerned lest the country lose any possible service through the idleness of any able-bodied citizens. But it is little concerned about the great economic loss due to unemployment when the hardest problem most people have to face is that of obtaining the wherewithal to live.

If something of authority the state is impelled to exercise in time of national peril, could be utilized to assure employment, rather than to insure unemployment, the revival of the wartime law against idleness would be hailed with satisfaction by many people who are now involuntary slackers.

When the American Society of Newspaper Editors gets around to it there will be some interesting things uncovered regarding the libel laws of a number of states. Just at present that organization is devoting some time and money to the fight against the Minnesota "gag" law.

This is the statute that empowers any judge in Minnesota to enjoin, without trial or hearing, any journal which in his opinion publishes malicious, scandalous or defamatory articles. The state courts have upheld its validity and in 1927 a Minneapolis weekly was suspended under its authority.

At a meeting of the American Newspaper association in New York, Colonel McCormick, reporting for the committee, found that the "gag" law establishes courts of equity as censors and licensers of the press, allows grafting politicians to remain in office by preventing exposure of their wrongdoings and generally violates that freedom of the press guaranteed by the constitution of the United States.

A supreme court ruling on the law is now being sought to forestall the spread of the principle involved into other states; for if one state can enact and sustain any such law, any other state legislature can enact and the judges of any other state can enforce a similar law.

At no time in history has there been greater need of a free press and a right to expose and hold public officials to the honest administration of office. The Minnesota "gag" law and many of the so-called libel laws are fashioned by the hand of corruption and the voice of every self-respecting newspaper in the country should be uplifted in defiant protest.

SEES EXCESSIVE PAY TO OCEAN MAIL SHIPS

Washington.—The postoffice department is "arbitrarily and unnecessarily" increasing payments on mail contracts to ships engaged in the coastwise trade, according to Congressman La Guardia.

The mail subsidy is intended for American ships in the foreign trade, said Mr. La Guardia. No foreign vessel is allowed in the American coastwise trade, and because they have no competition they should not be granted mail subsidies.

Millions upon millions of dollars are expended in these subsidies, which are charged to operating costs of the department and naturally result in a deficit that is given wide publicity when postal workers ask for improved work conditions.

U. S. SHIP YARD SOLD

Philadelphia.—The government sold its famous Hog Island shipyard of war-time days to this city for $3,000,000. This is $50,000,000 less than it cost.

The property will be used for a marine, air and rail terminal.

BASEBALL AND TENNIS COURTS UNACCEPTABLE SUBSTITUTES FOR LIVING WAGE IN SOUTH—SMITH

(By International Labor News Service.)

Birmingham, Ala., May 15.—"Cheap labor" in the south, as a bar to industrial progress in southern states, which Everett P. Partridge, associate editor of the Journal of the American Chemical Society, declared "will be fatal" if maintained, will be squarely presented to employers in industry in the southland, Paul J. Smith, chairman of the southern organization campaign of the American Federation of Labor, said in commenting on the Partridge statement.

Smith agreed with the statement by Partridge that if the cheap labor dogma is maintained by employers it will permit of the same cycle of labor conflicts in the south that has occured in the north, and the old battles will have to be fought all over again.

Smith, however, took sharp issue with the statement by Partridge that "possibly the best means of counteracting radical labor agitation lies not in riot guns but in attractive sanitary industrial villages, supplied with baseball diamonds and tennis courts and company operated stores."

"Baseball and tennis courts and all the fine paternalistic schemes and welfare work will not take the place of decent, living wages," Smith said. "Give the worker a living wage, wherein he can maintain his self-respect and the American standard of living and the employers will not have to bother about the baseball diamonds and tennis courts. The workers will provide their own if they want them. All the workers want and demand are decent working conditions and a living wage. They can find their own amusements. A shorter work-day, American living conditions and a good wage solves the problem. A man with wages too small to provide for his family and educate his children is not interested in baseball diamonds or tennis courts. You can't eat or wear them."

"Mr. Partridge is quoted as saying that labor in the south should be placed on a higher plane of living," Chairman Smith said. "I agree with him fully. That is the big reason the American Federation of Labor is in the south. We wish to do that very thing. We have come here on invitation of the southern workers to help them. We realize that we must also help the employers of labor if the workers are to be benefited, and we are anxious to be of assistance. The American Federation of Labor is a constructive organization, and has come to the south with a constructive program. We have made considerable headway in our organization, but the employers, many of them at least, are unfavorable to us, though why I don't know.

"Some of the cotton industry executives have adopted our views in respect to the textile mills working women and children at night. Eben E. Whitman, vice-president of the William Whitman company of New York, told the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers that the employment of women and girls at night in the mills of the south is 'solely and directly the cause of the downfall of this great essential industry, involving the welfare of hundreds of thousands of Americans.'

"Whitman declared there is no place in American industry for such practices, a statement made by President William Green months ago in discussing the same subject. We seem to agree on the subject, and it is up to the employers to discontinue night work for women and children. Whitman pointed out it would be fatal for one mill alone, or the mills of any one section, to discontinue the practice unless all did, so the mills will keep on with the night work for women and children until abolished by law or through a collective agreement with organized labor."

Chairman Smith declared that the American Federation of Labor and its affiliated bodies stood squarely on the principles of collective bargaining; that many of the ills of industry in the south could be cured if the workers were permitted to deal collectively with the mill management. He said the southern organization campaign had been of tremendous benefit to all labor in pointing out and emphasizing the economic wrongs that are permitted to flourish in the south's industry, thus engendering a competitive situation that has all but ruined the textile industry, among others.

State Federations of Labor in the various southern states which have conventions scheduled this summer will pay much attention to the wage situation in the south, Mr. Smith said. The "cheap labor" situation referred to will do more harm to southern business than almost any other economic factor if it is not changed, he concluded.

FEDERAL AGENCIES DIFFER IN REPORTS ON INDUSTRIAL EMPLOYMENT DURING MARCH

(By International Labor News Service.)

Washington, May 7.—Government agencies differ on their reports of unemployment in March. The bureau of labor statistics, department of labor, reports a slight decrease in employment in manufacturing industries during the month, while the employment service, also of the department of labor, declared "operations were increased somewhat in several of the major industries and additional workers were engaged, with all signs pointing to further improvement in the next 30 days."

The decrease in employment reported by the bureau of labor statistics was 0.6 per cent. Coupled with this decrease went an increase of 0.1 in pay roll totals.

In addition to the survey of employment in manufacturing industries the bureau of labor statistics makes monthly surveys of employment in seven other major industrial groups. Employment increases in these groups in March, 1930, as compared with February, were: Quarrying, 4 per cent; hotels, less than one-tenth of 1 per cent, and canning, 8.8 per cent. Employment decreases in March were: Anthracite mining, 22.7 per cent; bituminous coal mining, 3.7 per cent; metalliferous mining, 1.5 per cent; public utilities, 0.1 per cent; wholesale trade, 0.8 per cent, and retail trade, 0.5 per cent.

Combined Figures Show Drop.

The combined figures of manufacturing and the other seven major industrial groups show a decrease in employment of 1.0 per cent in March as compared with February, and a decrease in pay-roll totals of 1.2 per cent.

No comparison of these per cents of change in March, 1930, for the eight industrial groups combined, can be made with March, 1929, as adequate data over the 12-month period are not available in all groups.

Discussing the general industrial outlook, the Employment Service, through Francis I. Jones, director general, said:

"The iron and steel industry has not reached normal operations and unemployment continued among these workers. However, new orders toward the latter part of the month indicated that activity in this industry would probably increase in the next few weeks.

"Curtailed schedules continued in the boot and shoe industry, particularly in the New England states, where a large number of workers were employed on a part-time basis, with quite a number idle.

Cotton Mill Situation Bad.

"The cotton-textile industry remained unchanged, with a large volume of textile mill laborers working part-time and many unemployed. The situation was somewhat reversed in the silk industry, as quite a number of these mills engaged additional help and several reported overtime operations.

"All outdoor activity increased in volume, particularly toward the latter part of the month, and a large number of men who had been idle for the past few months were absorbed. Favorable weather permitted work to be started on the 1930 road construction programs in many states, and this work will materially increase in the next thirty days.

Building Programs Start.

"Work has been started on the tremendous building programs that have been authorized in practically every city, county and state, and, while a large number of building trades men were unemployed at the close of March, a material reduction in this number should occur by the end of April."

NEGRO WORKERS UNITE

Gadsden, Ala.—Two hundred negro workers have received an A. F. of L. federal charter. A similar local of women is being formed.

Workers in this city and in Anniston and Alabama City plan a huge mass meeting to put these cities on the organized labor map.

REDUCE HOURS, MAINTAIN WAGES, MILL HEAD TELLS COTTON MANUFACTURERS

President of Kendell Company Outlines Program for Lifting Textile Industry Out of Long-Hour, Low-Pay Class—Says Trade Can Be Saved by Co-Operation.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Boston, May 15.—The textile industry has been tried in the court of public opinion and found guilty of habitual disobedience of the laws of economics, Henry P. Kendell, president of the Kendell company, with mills in the north and south, told the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers here.

The same indictment that organized labor has made against the textile industry was made by Mr. Kendall, who advocated much of labor's program for the cure of the evils of the industry. He urged reduction in hours without loss of wages, research and advertising to lift the cotton industry from its present depression.

Kendell outlined ten fundamentals which he said the manufacturers might well consider as ten commandments for the cotton industry. First, he said, manufacturers must seek the basic causes of the industry's troubles and problems and second, these must be faced and straight thinking done to solve them.

Pay Must Be Maintained.

Third and fourth commandments, Kendell said, were:

"Thou shalt lift the industry out of the long-hour, low-wage class, for by so doing the gap between production and demand will be narrowed and the move will be in harmony with the trend of social betterment.

"Thou shalt maintain earnings of employes, for the law of industrial prosperity is the maintenance of purchasing power."

Other commandments urged by Kendell included emphasis on good management above all else, competition in creativeness, not on price alone, teamwork and co-operation and the spending of money to promote active good will in the mind of the public.

Can Solve Own Problems.

In further explaining his views, Kendell said:

"The American textile industry is in a position where it can correct its own conditions. Our small percentage of export means that we can if we will balance more nearly our supply with demand. We cannot bring about the balance as long as some mills run 130 hours a week; as long as some mills take advantage of the temporary curtailments practiced by their competitors; as long as the condition of sectional differences in hours of work is unrestrained.

"We must narrow the gap between production and demand. A recent report issued by the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers is an amazing corroboration of the urgent need of, not temporary curtailment, but permanent reduction.

Co-operation or Coercion.

"The industry has adopted a proposal to reduce day running to 55 hours a week and night running to 50 for it has been said that the only way we can get anywhere is by gradual process. Will the plan be carried through? It all depends upon the capacity of our industry to co-operate, and upon willingness to do it as well as talk about it. If it is impossible for the industry to reach solutions of its problems by voluntary co-operation, then we must get ready for coercive measures from the outside."

Barbers' Law Upheld By State High Court

Raleigh, N. C.—The North Carolina barbers' act, providing for the registration of barbers and the regulation and inspection of barber shops, has been upheld by the state supreme court.

The enactment of the statute, the court declared, is a valid exercise of the police power, and is not discriminatory because applicable only in cities having a population of 2,000 or more.

The court pointed to numerous decisions by the United States supreme court and other courts which held that such classification is not unreasonable when the statute applies equally to all persons in the same class, and that "ordinarily the legislature is the sole judge of the classification."

In reply to the claim that the law creates special privileges by giving licenses to barbers, the court said this is an exercise of the state's police power "for the protection of the public against incompetents and impostors, and is in no sense the creation of a monopoly or special privilege. The door stands open to all who possess the requisite age and good character and can pass the examination which is exacted to all applicants alike."

LOW WAGES IN SOUTH

Tupelo, Miss.—Cotton mills here pay an average wage of $12.50 per week. Firemen are paid $15 and mechanics 40 cents an hour.

Workers are "checked off" 50 cents a month for doctor fees, 60 cents for group insurance, 25 cents for a club house and an additional amount for house rent.

The mill management opposes organized labor because welfare work "takes the place" of the union.

STRIKE FOR FIVE-DAY WEEK

Dayton, Ohio.—Organized plumbers suspended work to enforce the five-day week.

Typo Union Cancels $45,000 Strike Loan

Albany, N. Y.—At the eightieth anniversary dinner of Albany Typographical Union here, President Leon H. Rouse of New York Typographical Union No. 6 announced the cancellation of a $45,000 loan made by No. 6 to the Albany union during the printers' strike in Albany a year ago last winter.

The note for the amount was turned over by Rouse to Frank P. Cox, president of the Albany Typographical Union, and it was destroyed. "Big Six" came to the help of Albany printers soon after their strike began. The strike lasted for fourteen weeks.

Speakers at the anniversary dinner included John M. O'Honlon, secretary-treasurer of the New York State Federation of Labor; William A. Weinlein, president of the Empire State Typographical conference, and Samuel O'Brien, of Typographical Union No. 6.

MILL OFFICIALS ARRESTED ON CHARGES OF PERJURY IN NAZARETH YELLOW DOG FIGHT

(By International Labor News Service.)

Nazareth, Pa., May 15.—Challenging the oft repeated habits of employers of making fanciful affidavits upon which to support a prayer for an injunction the Nazareth strikers have had Calvin Hartzell, president of the Nazareth borough council and general foreman of the Kraemer Hosiery company, arrested for purjury, and A. G. Schmidt, president of the company, arrested for subornation of perjury. Alderman E. D. Waeg, of Bethlehem, issued the warrant upon the formal demand of Louis F. Budenz, special representative of the American Federation of Full Fashioned Hosiery Workers.

The alleged perjury and subornation of purjury were committed in the affidavits on which the Stewart injunction was granted. This injunction prohibits public discussion of the "yellow dog" contract.

On the witness stand in the injunction case, Hartzell admitted that the allegations made against Budenz were false, and then went on to testify that he had been persuaded to make the affidavit by President Schmidt, his employer. The allegations in the Hartzell affidavit charged the calling of epithets at the Kraemer workers, the holding of meetings at the mill gates and the use of threats which had caused workers to quit the company's employ. It was these and other similar alleged acts which Hartzell admitted had simply never taken place.

"We have in the Nazareth case an example of how far the injunction process has gone toward being a mere automatic instrument in the hands of anti-union employers," James E. Kelly, secretary of the state federation of labor, declared, in commenting on the arrests. "This injunction not only goes farther than any other, in forbidding all public discussion, but it was granted in the face of the fact that one of the affiants admitted that his affidavit was false, point by point. In granting the injunction, the court condoned perjury admitted from the witness stand in its presence."

The injunction was recently made perpetual by the court of common pleas at Easton, sitting en banc, and is being appealed to the state supreme court.

After Hartzell had made his damaging admissions, neither A. G. Schmidt nor his brother, Victor, who had also made a similar affidavit to that of Hartzell, took the witness stand, although they had originally planned to do so.

BRANDEIS OPPOSED BY MEN WHO BACKED JUDGE PARKER

Washington, May 15.—Defenders of Judge Parker, as a supreme court appointee, shrieked that opposition to him was an attack on the judiciary, but these groups stopped at nothing in 1916 to defeat President Wilson's appointment of Louis D. Brandeis to the supreme court. Behind this opposition, the records show, was the appointee's views on social questions.

In the Parker fight, opponents refused to indulge in personalities. In the fight against Judge Brandeis, as Senator Norris pointed out, "a search was made of Mr. Brandeis' life."

"I was rather amazed," said Senator Norris, "when I discovered that I am the only member of this body on the republican side now in the senate who voted for the confirmation of Judge Brandeis. I remember very well that contest. I remember that it was carried on much longer than this contest has been carried on, and it was not conducted on the high plane on which we have carried on the present discussion.

"The real substance to the opposition to Judge Brandeis' confirmation was so well summed up by a report submitted by a member of the judiciary committee (Mr. Walsh of Montana) that I want to quote from it. In the course of that report, Mr. Walsh said:

"'The real crime of which this man is guilty is that he has exposed the iniquities of men in high places in our financial system. He has not stood in awe of the majesty of wealth. He has been an iconoclast. He has written about and expressed views on "social justice," to which vague term are referred movements and measures to obtain greater security, greater comfort and better health for industrial workers.'"

Senator Norris quoted a list of prominent citizens, led by former President Taft and former Secretary of State Elihu Root, who opposed Judge Brandeis. Men engaged in various kinds of industries, said Senator Norris, also opposed the nomination "and they summed up their opposition with the reasons that I have read you."

"Time has passed, Mr. President, and now every liberty-loving man, woman and child prays nightly to God to spare the lives of Justices Brandeis and Holmes, members of our supreme court, famous for their dissenting opinions, famous because they are carrying out the ideas which were so well expressed in the quotation from the report of the senator from Montana."

"Y" Favors Unions; Labor Reief Urged

Detroit, Mich.—The Young Women's Christian Association's biennial convention reaffirmed the right of workers to organize and favored legislation to protect women and children in industry. The redemption of the textile industry was urged.

The resolutions were unanimously approved by more than 3,000 delegates.

Ida Loving of Danville, Va., was the first speaker on the resolutions. She was employed in the Dan River cotton mills and was discharged when she joined in the revolt against the company's "union."

Alice Hodgson, a member of the United Textile Workers from New Bedford, told the convention that "human beings can not have souls while working in the modern textile mill unless protected by a strong union."

Helen Strickland, who has investigated mill conditions the past year, said there is a growing determination of southern textile workers to organize.

"There is a new attitude growing up toward the industrial problem," said Miss Strickland. "Leadership by the Y. W. C. A. in this movement will have a profound effect in encouraging legislation to protect women and children. Christian bodies must put Christian ideals into practice or else they should cease talking of religion as an ethical force."

Back Quit Hurting

"I was in a very weak condition from a serious sickness," writes Mrs. I. Leonard, 571 Joseph St., New Orleans, La. "I was so weak, I wanted to sleep all the time. I did not have strength to do anything. My back ached nearly all the time. I was just in misery.

"My mother told me I must arouse myself from the sleepiness, and take something to help get my strength back. She had taken Cardui and had been helped, so I decided to take Cardui, too. After my first bottle, I could see that it was helping me. I took four bottles at this time. My strength came back and I gained weight. Pretty soon, I was my old self again.

"My back quit hurting, and I haven't had any more trouble since I took Cardui."

resolution be sent to the various international unions interested in this question.

The second resolution bearing upon the campaign notes the shortage of organizers and field workers for the drive, and the international unions are called upon to place organizers in the south under direction of the southern committee.

In order that this resolution may be made more effective, each delegate to the convention was urged to take the matter up with his local union upon his return home, and have these locals also appeal to their respective internationals to support the campaign by furnishing a sufficient number of organizers. It follows:

Whereas, the southern organization campaign of the A. F. of L. is being carried on at the present time; and,

Whereas, due to the lack of a sufficient number of organizers the campaign is not as successful as it could be; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the thirty-fourth annual convention of the Tennessee Federation of Labor call upon all the international and national unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor to give this campaign the proper co-operation by placing organizers in the south to be under the instructions of the southern A. F. of L. campaign committee; and be it further

Resolved, That this convention urge upon its delegates on their return to his local union and urge that their local unions write or wire their respective international or national unions to give this assistance to the southern campaign.

GOV. HORTON

bethton he was rebuked by the secretary of war.

"The convention of the Tennessee Federation of Labor held at Knoxville and Elizabethton on May 13, 14, and 15, 1929, was called upon by President Green of the A. F. of L. to "give all assistance possible to our heroic, fighting fellow workers at Elizabethton in their struggle for the enjoyment of the better life, for the right to organize and for the exercise of all the rights guaranteed American citizens. Make your collective voice heard in no uncertain terms. Let Governor Horton understand in no uncertain way how the workers of Tennessee feel over his action in sending troops to Elizabethton."

"Whereas, owing to the lack of ability of the man who is now serving as governor of Tennessee to administer the duties of his office, the partisan group of politicians composed of certain leaders of a faction of the Democratic party, and certain leaders of the republican party, are in complete control of the governmental affairs of the state and are using this control to promote their collective and individual interests at the expense of the taxpayers of Tennessee; and,

"Whereas, further due to this unfitness of Governor Horton to perform the duties of the office of governor, he was easily persuaded to and did, at the request of certain individuals at Elizabethton, Tenn., illegally make use of the state militia and the arms and equipment of the United States government in an effort to repress, subdue and intimidate native Tennesseans, a large majority of whom were mountain women and girls of Carter county, who had been employed by a foreign-owned corporation, but were on strike in an effort to remedy conditions which had become unbearable; and,

"Whereas, This committee believes that with a man like Governor Horton filling the office of governor that the interests of not only members of organized labor but of the whole people of the state are placed in jeopardy; therefore be it

"Resolved, by the members of this committee, That we reiterate our condemnation of the official acts of Governor Horton and that this committee meet again at an early date to make endorsements for candidates in the coming gubernatorial, congressional and railroad and public utilities primaries."

The report is signed by H. V. Reid, chairman Brotherhood Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen legislative board; W. A. Chrisman, chairman Brotherhood Locomotive Engineers legislative board; Perry E. Daly, chairman Brotherhood Railroad Trainmen legislative board; Paul J. Aymon, president Tennessee Federation of Labor; David Hanly, chairman legislative committee, Tennessee Federation of Labor; W. C. Birthright, secretary Tennessee Federation of Labor.

Carpenters Indorse The Five-Day Week

Tennessee State Council of Carpenters, meeting in Chattanooga last Friday and Saturday, indorsed the five-day week for members of that craft, and urged its affiliated members to use every effort to the end that the shorter work-week be established.

Vance Stamps, of Knoxville, was named president to succeed J. L. Carpenter, of Chattanooga, who had served as head of the organization for a number of years. Tom Rose, of Chattanooga, was elected vice-president and member of the executive board, and W. E. Cheek, of Nashville, was re-elected secretary-treasurer. L. E. Smith, Memphis; D. W. Allison, Jackson, and G. S. Cary, of Morristown, are other members of the executive board.

Students organized the Harvard Square Deal association and will receive contributions and run a benefit dance to raise funds.

Barbers Form New State Body

George W. Perry, president of Local 415, Journeymen Barbers, was named head of a new state organization of his craft formed in Chattanooga Wednesday at the conclusion of the sessions of the Tennessee Federation of Labor.

The new state body was officially named the Journeymen Barbers' Association of Tennessee. Delegates to the federation convention formed the nucleus for the organization, which will act as a legislative committee for the union in Tennessee, it was said.

A. C. Clapp, of Knoxville, was elected secretary.

The association will meet each year at the time and place of the federation convention, and at such other times as it may be found necessary to call the members together, Mr. Perry said.

Legion Minstrels Event of Next Week

The American Legion Minstrels of 1930, which is being sponsored by Davis King Summers and James Craig Lodor posts of the American Legion, will be presented at the Memorial auditorium on Monday and Tuesday nights, May 19 and 20. Many of Chattanooga's favorite entertainers are participating. Among them are Bob Borin, Stewart Roberts, Bill Borin, "Skillet" Cooke and thirty others. The ministrel is in three parts; a prologue, minstrel first part and a tableau of the world war in nine scenes. The tableau is a burlesque and is said to be the funniest attempt to present the war ever seen. Tickets are now selling at the auditorium box office, and a capacity house on both nights is anticipated. The minstrel is being directed by Phil I. Angel, of Chattanooga Typographical union.

Mr. Emory Objects To Injunction Bill

New York.—James A Emery, counsel for the anti-union National Association of Manufacturers, objects to the injunction bill favored by a subcommittee of the senate judiciary committee.

Mr. Emery is somewhat tardy with his expected opposition, but his pronouncement is finally made public, as is usual whenever labor urges remedial legislation.

Mr. Emery, in this instance, maintains his high batting average as a "fernister." In awesome tones he declares that the substitute for the Shipstead injunction bill is "arbitrary," "discriminating" and conflicts with constitutional policy.

As an added reason why the bill should be opposed by every law-and-order citizen, saith Mr. Emery, the "yellow dog" would be outlawed. He favors such contract "irrespective of whether there is mutuality and adequate consideration."

The objector recites the usual claim of injunction advocates that equity judges enforce law.

AILY PAPER WOULD KICK OUT 'AGITATORS'

nions Disturb "Docile Workers" at Huntsville.

HEAP-LABOR BOSS HELD AS SAVIOR

mployes "Happy, Content-d and Efficient" on Wage of Less Than 20 Cents Per Hour!

(Special Correspondence)

Birmingham, Ala., May 22.—In n eight-column flash headline a Huntsville (Ala.) newspaper has nnounced that "labor agitators" n that city are to be "kicked out f town," because of organization ork now going on in that city here workers are paid pauper ages and are compelled to work ng hours and often under in-anitary conditions. The article enouncing the efforts of the orkers to organize says the best friend the laboring man an is the individual or concern aking it possible for him to ave a meal ticket." In other ords, the worker who gets a eal or two a day ought to be atisfied and not kick, com-ented Paul J. Smith, chairman the southern organization mpaign.

Huntsville has a number of en-rprises, mostly cotton mills, here labor is paid $8 to $12 a ek. One worker who had been ree years with a cotton mill ow $15.85 for two weeks' work gularly. He had a meal ticket t no meal. A man with a fam-of five dependents has a royal e supporting them on $12 a ek. Labor in Huntsville is de-ribed editorially by the Hunts-le Times as being "happy, con-ted and efficient" on a wage less than 20 cents an hour av-ge. For this reason hundreds workers of Huntsville have ged the American Federation Labor organizers to "come and lp" them. Already startling ogress has been made in or-nization and the work will be ntinued with vigor, Chairman ith said. "The more money e workers make the more busi-s for the merchants and busi-ss men," Mr. Smith said in dis-ssing the Huntsville program. lost of the business men favor or's program because they see ir own economic salvation in if for no other reason."

s showing the anxiety of la-in Alabama toward organiza-n several hundred workers m Anniston and Gadsden and rby towns gathered at a half-y point in a park between the cities and stood in the rain hear the message of labor ivered by Chairman Paul J. ith, H. H. Emmons, of the t and Shoe Workers' union, Paul Aymon, president of Tennessee Federation of La-, and others. "It takes more n ordinary interest to bring men and women to hear a ssage from labor on a day like Sunday," Chairman Smith d. "Workers in Alabama are er to be organized and they going to be. Southern head-rters office is besieged with uests for organizers, and that ows the earnestness of the kers of this state in the mat-of trade unionism."

STATE CONVENTIONS ELP ORGANIZING DRIVE

mingham, Ala., May 22.—Recent conventions of the American ation of Labor in southern states an organization campaign has active since the first of the have added new impetus to or-ation activities. Tennessee, for ple, adopted a strong resolution on national and international to send organizers into the in-al sections of the south to aid ing over the trade union idea. concentrated effort among the of Tennessee to extend trade m will be made. While con-ble work has been done among workers and some other crafts tain parts of the state, a state-effort has not been made. Paul non, president of the Tennessee tion, said organization activity shortly be started. A series of meetings of workers will be held preliminary to the organization ign.

work in Alabama, Georgia, and South Carolina has been on in full force and consider-rogress has been registered. A of the number of local unions, bodies and individual mem-rganized in the seven southern since the campaign opened is made under the director, Paul th, chairman of the organiza-mmittee, at the Birmingham arters. This survey will dis-close a satisfying enrollment, Chairman Smith said.

In Huntsville, where a newspaper in a front page article warned "labor agitators" that they would be "run out of town" if they continued their organizing efforts, four crafts have been organized and instituted, including the textile workers with some 400 members; barbers, painters and carpenters, all of whom have added to the membership rolls. There are some 8,000 textile workers in the Huntsville district and most of these workers are anxious to belong to the union. J. L. Hurst is conducting the organization campaign in Huntsville.

"The Huntsville newspapers may call the workers of that city a 'happy and contented family,'" Mr. Hurst said, "but those who are trying to support a family on $8 a week are far from being happy or contented either."

Organization work in all the southern industrial states is now going on and thousands of workers are being added to the trade union movement daily, reports to the Birmingham headquarters show.

Labor Chautauqua Is Planned in Danville

National Trade Union Officials and Others on Program; State Convention Backs Textile Workers of Virginia.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Danville, Va., May 22.—Local 1685, United Textile Workers of America, will open a week's labor chautauqua starting Monday, June 2, at the Danville fair grounds.

Paul W. Fuller, educational director of the American Federation of Labor, is arranging for this event, which is creating great interest in the ranks of labor and with the public in general.

The program calls for entertainment, and social features, by local talent, with a series of addresses by prominent labor leaders of the country.

The committee has invited officials of the American Federation of Labor, the United Textile Workers of America, members of the clergy and others interested in the workers' cause.

This venture is one of the most pretentious educational ventures ever attempted in the south. Workers from Greensboro, Louisville, Spray, Draper, Durham and other centers will take part.

The Danville union is making splendid progress. A delegation of ten members attended the Virginia State Federation of Labor convention this week at Petersburg, Va., and that organization voted to give the textile workers of Danville full support in their struggle for union rights. It is understood that officials of the federation will make an effort to bring about a settlement of the grievances, including discrimination against union members, and in the event of failure will stand behind the workers in whatever action is necessary to secure justice.

Vice-President Gorman, U. T. W., attended a meeting of the local executive board in Danville upon his return from Columbus, Ga. He also attended the convention of the Tennessee Federation of Labor at Chattanooga and the Virginia federation at Petersburg. Vice-President Gorman reported that the textile workers are organizing in all parts of the south. Miss Matilda Lindsay also attended the convention and outlined the work of the women in this campaign.

Senate Votes Curb On Mexican Migrants

Number Allowed to Enter Cut From 58,000 to 1,900 by Terms of Harris Measure.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Washington, May 22.—By 51 to 16 the senate has adopted the Harris bill to restrict immigration from Mexico, rejecting proposals to apply the limitation to all American nations.

Under the terms of the bill about 1,900 Mexicans will be permitted to enter the United States, instead of 58,000, the approximate number now entering per year.

Senator Harris, Georgia, himself sought to apply the restriction to other countries, as did Hayden of Arizona and Borah of Idaho.

These and other senators held that there should be no discrimination, for or against any American nation.

Wage Women Suffer By Backward Ideas

Washington. — Wage-working women are victims of ancient ideas, declared Miss Mary Anderson, director United States women's bureau.

"If progress in ideas could be made to keep pace with our material progress," said Miss Anderson, "much of the injustice and discrimination against women workers would disappear as by magic."

The bureau chief pointed out that invention has revolutionized women's work and that the gradual transformation of women's unpaid services into paid employment has developed many social and economic problems.

"With the resultant new scale of living costs, many men become unable under existing wage standards to meet the family needs," said Miss Anderson.

PARKER DEFEAT MARKED FIRST STEP IN CAMPAIGN AGAINST YELLOW DOG; AMERICAN LABOR STILL FACES ISSUE

Unforgettable Pronouncements of Dozen Men Who Bore Brunt of Senate Battle Fires Spirit of Workers to Carry On Until Un-American, Slave-Making Device Is Outlawed in This Land of Freedom.

Parker is out! The Parker case, as such, is off the boards, its fleeting drama finished, the curtain rung down on the case and on Parker.

But the issue remains.

The issue will remain until it is settled right. Such issues are like that—they stay with us until we get them settled with justice. Then they cease to be issues.

The yellow dog contract was the issue and it is the issue.

Only one state in the whole nation—Wisconsin—has a law that does not throw the protection of the courts around the yellow dog contract. And the Wisconsin supreme court must shortly decide whether the law in that state is to stand as constitutional.

Every forward looking citizen must hope it will stand. Sad to say, death took a forward looking member of that high court but a few days ago. But hope persists.

What is the Wisconsin law? It is a law which declares that the yellow dog contract is against public policy and is not enforceable at law. It simply has no standing in court. That is the only kind of law—so good authorities say—that can ever be effective against the yellow dog contract. If the Wisconsin supreme court kills that law in the Badger state the condition will be decidedly unfavorable. Other states will not be stopped, but they will be discouraged.

But, regardless of all that, the fight must go on.

Labor in every state and in the nation as a whole must fight on for the kind of law that Wisconsin put on its statute books.

The tide of public condemnation of this medieval measure of human bondage was never so high—the time was never so propitious for effective attack, leading on to victory. Not since the seamen's act became law has labor had a chance to write so dramatic a chapter in legislation.

Consider now one point to remember. United States Attorney-General Mitchell, who has charge of all the prosecuting machinery of the federal government, put himself on record as flatly in favor of the Parker position.

What a spectacle!

Writing of Parker, Mitchell said he had examined all of Parker's decisions and he found them all good. He praised the whole Parker record. He put the United States department of justice back of the yellow dog contract! That was an amazing thing to do.

Mitchell was appointed by the president to feed the starving Belgians and the starving Russians. He fed them bread and the wage earners of the United States, in this case, got the stone!

Remember that position taken by Mitchell. It is a powerful reason for pushing the fight for complete and immediate victory over the yellow dog contract.

Mitchell cannot protect any contract unless that contract has a standing in court.

It is worth remembering—worth telling state legislators—that not one United States senator, in all the heat of defense of Parker, defended the yellow dog contract. Senators backed Parker for various reasons, but not even the most hard boiled and reactionary went as far as Mitchell went. Not one of them defended the infamous yellow dog contract.

And as for the opponents of Parker and Parkerism, not often has oratory risen to the heights of libertarian fervor reached by the dozen men who bore the brunt of the battle for freedom. Unforgettable pronouncements were made in that debate. Freedom lives! Freedom has all of the vigor, the appeal, the warmth, the hold on the hearts of men—all that it ever had, all of the grip that brought it to mankind back in the dim past as man's greatest love, next to life itself; at times surpassing by far the love of life.

The time has come for the yellow dog idea to perish from the earth.

HOMEWARD BOUND!

Judge Parker paid Washington a fleeting visit after the senate voted rejection of his nomination to the supreme court. Battaglia, The Labor World's staff artist, pictured the event, not forgetting the yellow dog, Nemesis.

Third Unemployment Relief Bill Passed

Last of Senator Wagner's Measures, Providing for National Employment System, Is Approved by Senate.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Washington, May 22. — Senator Wagner's bill to establish a national employment system and provide federal aid in setting up employment agencies in co-operation with the states, has been passed by the senate by a vote of 34 to 27. The bill was the last of three introduced by Senator Wagner to deal with unemployment. The others were approved several days ago.

The principal opposition was voiced by Senator Bingham, of Connecticut, who had read into the record a statement from James A. Emery, general counsel of the National Manufacturers' association, long the foe of organized labor.

Senator Wagner's other bills provide for monthly publication by the bureau of labor statistics of up-to-date unemployment statistics, and long-range planning of future public works, involving expenditures up to $150,000,000, which may be undertaken in slack industrial periods.

The objection of Senator Bingham was two-fold, based primarily upon the assertion that the federal government is relieving the states of their natural duties and also on the charge that the bill may turn out to be a form of coercion for the twenty-six states which do not operate public employment services.

Senator Wagner replied by asserting that without this measure his other two bills would fail of their purpose. The federal aid for states systems, he added, is not compulsory, being available for such as wish to co-operate, but not obligatory upon any state.

FILIPINO RESTRICTION DISCUSSED AT HEARING

Washington.—The Pacific Steamship Owners' Association oppose any check on Filipino immigration, as proposed in the Shortridge bill.

J. H. MacLafferty, speaking for the vessel owners, said passage of the bill "would have an undesirable result on economic conditions in trans-Pacific shipping." The bill was also opposed by Hawaiian sugar planters. W. C. Hushing, A. F. of L. legislative representative, said the bill will reduce competition which American workers are forced to face.

TYPOS ADOPT 5-DAY WEEK TO AID JOBLESS

By International Labor News Service.

Chicago, Ill., May 22.—Typographical union No. 16, with 6,000 members, one of the largest unions in the city, has voted a voluntary five-day week in order to provide jobs for unemployed members, it is announced.

At present, according to Acting President Charles A. Krause, the men work a five and one-half day week and every two weeks will take a day off, thereby giving employment to unemployed members. The move affects all the Chicago newspaper plants.

Hoover Urged to Probe Cuban Dictatorship

Arthur Garfield Hays Writes Letter for Radical Group Dealing With Condition Exposed Three Years Ago.

(By International Labor News Service.)

New York City, May 22.—Striking at the Machado dictatorship, whose cruelties were exposed in the spring of 1927 by the editor of International Labor News Service and which have been continuously assailed ever since that date by International Labor News Service, the international committee for political prisoners has written a letter of protest to President Hoover through Lawyer Arthur Garfield Hays. This committee is interlocking with the Civil Liberties union.

The Hays group of radicals has belatedly filed its protest in Washington and has cabled a protest to Dictator Machado at Havana. President Hoover is asked to order an inquiry into the Cuban situation.

A summation of the Cuban situation was presented a year ago by the Foreign Policy association.

The most recent authoritative statement of the case was written by William English Walling, who visited Cuba in February of this year and who wrote his findings for International Labor News Service and later for Current History magazine. Mr. Walling found no change in the dictatorial condition exposed in 1917, though he did find a more cohesive opposition in process of development.

Unions Ask Money To Fight Injunction

Pennsylvania Federation of Labor Points Out Vital Importance of Nazareth Case, in Appeal for Defense Fund.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Nazareth, Pa., May 22.—A legal defense fund is being organized by the Pennsylvania State Federation of Labor to help the striking hosiery workers of the Kraemer hosiery mill, this city, to fight the drastic injunction issued to the Kraemer mill against the American Federation of Full Fashioned Hosiery Workers and to defend the right of peaceful picketing.

An appeal for contributions has been sent to every trade union in the state by James E. Kelley, secretary of the federation. The strikers, through the American Federation of Full Fashioned Hosiery Workers, are appealing to the Pennsylvania supreme court from the injunction.

The injunction prohibits all union activity and restrains officers and members of the union from giving publicity to the yellow dog contracts involved in the five-months' strike.

"The case is one which should be carried through the highest court," Kelley declared, "as it raises fundamental points of law of vital importance to the workers and citizens of the entire state. The verbatim proceedings of the injunction hearing show no violence, intimidation nor conniving of any kind nor any attempt to beat the yellow dog contract except by rousing public opinion against its use. It is just this very thing that the injunction would prevent—the appeal to public opinion.

"In addition to the injunction case, the hosiery workers are fighting a series of other cases rising out of the fight for the right to picket. In this juncture, the state federation of labor has agreed to assist the hosiery workers. We are issuing an appeal for financial assistance to fight the Nazareth injunction because of its state-wide significance. The funds will be expended under the supervision of the state federation."

Sheriff Oscar Adkins Of Marion Runs Again

Official Under Whose Regime Six Were Killed and 26 Wounded Is Backed by Mill Owners.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Marion, N. C., May 22.—Sheriff Oscar F. Adkins, whose mistakes blazoned the headlines of all southern papers for weeks, last October, when six strikers were killed and twenty-six wounded at the Marion Manufacturing company, has again announced himself as candidate for re-election. His candidacy is being backed by the Clinchfield and Marion mill managements. Having announced last November that he would never run for sheriff again, the action of Adkins in permitting himself to be entered in the democratic primaries shows the obvious value that his gunmanship has been to the mill owners in Marion.

A bitter fight is being staged against Adkins by two other candidates, one of whom is a shoemaker and a friend of the Marion strikers. Several farmers, one minister, and industrial workers will take the stump in opposition to Adkins, whose bloody administration will go down in history as one of the most horrible examples of mill baron brutality and legal stupidity in north or south.

Nevada Court Ruling Opposed by Unionists

Carson City, Nev.—Organized labor in this state opposes a decision by Judge G. A. Ballard, of the Ormsby county district court, which denies the right of injured workmen to appeal to the courts from decisions of the state industrial commission. Attorneys for the Nevada Federation of Labor filed an appeal with the state supreme court.

The attorneys declare that if the Ballard decision were allowed to stand it would place supreme judicial power in the hands of politically-controlled state commissions.

The decision was made in two cases where injured workmen filed suit against the state industrial commission seeking to have adjusted the compensation allowed them by the commission under the state law. The plaintiffs claimed they had not been allowed the compensation to which they were entitled under the Nevada industrial insurance act.

PRES. GREEN HOPES FOR EARLY PASSAGE

Energy and Determination Put Into Parker Fight Shifts to New Battle-ground.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Washington, May 22.—Taking full advantage of the tide of opinion registered in rejection of the John J. Parker nomination, the American Federation of Labor this week moved its full force to the support of the Shipstead anti-injunction bill as changed by the senate judiciary committee.

The bill, President Green told International Labor News Service, is expected to pass the senate at this session.

The anti-injunction bill as it stands, has the unqualified backing of the A. F. of L., President Green said, and will put out of business the yellow dog contract, along with the labor injunction.

"We are backing the bill," said President Green. "The present status of the measure is that it is before the full judiciary committee, favorably passed on by a subcommittee. It may be reported out by the full committee any day and we hope for early passage."

The bill, in its present form, is largely the contribution of the A. F. of L. special injunction committee, composed of President Green, Matthew Woll, John P. Frey and Victor A. Olander, though there are considerable portions that are the contributions of Senator Norris and Blane, subcommittee members who devoted weeks to its preparation.

Great care has gone into preparation of the present bill, which is in reality a substitute for the original Shipstead bill, that having been a one-paragraph measure which was shelved after the first hearings were held. The present measure has been in preparation for several months.

It is understood that all of the energy and determination that went into the victorious fight against Parker will be put back of the anti-injunction bill and the federation looks forward confident of victory.

LOUISIANA MANUFACTURERS TO FIGHT LABOR LEGISLATION

(By International Labor News Service.)

New Orleans, May 22—The Louisiana Manufacturers' association will be on the job to oppose labor legislative measures at the session of the state legislature, according to a circular issued and circulated over the state.

At a meeting of the legislative committee of the association in New Orleans the committee "went on record as being opposed to any change in this act," reference being to the workmen's compensation law. In this connection the circular adds, "Your files no doubt will reveal the great amount of work which this organization did during the 1928 session to prevent amendments to this law."

The committee voted "that no action should be taken at this time" on the children's aid or mother's pension measure being sponsored by the American Legion. "To carry this bill into effect," the circular reads, "$100,000 will be needed. This means that industry will have to bear some of this burden." The association also decided to oppose any state income tax bills or any amendment to the license tax act.

America Only Nation Courts Can Upset Law

Washington.—"There is no important government in Europe, or for that matter in the world, where the judicial branch exercises the right to declare unconstitutional acts of the national legislature," said Senator McKellar in a radio address.

"In England, theoretically, the king has the power of veto, but it has not been exercised for two centuries," said Mr. McKellar. "The courts of England exercise no right of revision or nullification over the acts of parliament.

"There is only one instance in which it was done and in that case the chief justice was hanged and his associates driven from the country.

"I do not mention this interesting circumstance as an indication that I would favor such treatment of our courts in the United States, but merely as emphasizing the singular and almost unprecedented power over acts of legislation exercised by the courts of the United States."

LABOR QUERIES

Q.—What is meant by "labor turnover?"

A.—This term is applied to the number of workers employed during a stated period in order to maintain a force of a given number. For example, if for a year it is necessary to hire 2,000 workers to keep a regular force of 1,000, the turnover is 100 per cent for that period.

Q.—When was the first eight-hour strike in the United States?

A.—In April and May, 1886, there was a strike of workers in New England and New York for the eight-hour day, believed to have been the first of its kind in this country. It was not successful. The first great eight-hour strike on a national scale was in 1886, when 200,000 workers were out.

Q.—What is a "saving wage?"

A.—Secretary of Labor Davis, who first made the term popular, distinguished a "saving wage" from a living wage by defining it as a wage which assures the worker a margin over and above the amount required for him and his family's subsistence in health and reasonable comfort.

A NEW INJUNCTION FIGHT

On the heels of a tremendous victory, labor's fight against the yellow dog contract and the labor injunction continues, hinging around a proposition as big and almost as dramatic as the Parker case.

The new center of struggle is the anti-injunction bill, which, as reported elsewhere in The Labor World, may emerge from the senate judiciary committee at any time, with a favorable report.

If this bill can be made into law—and there is reason to believe that is possible—the entire drive of the courts against labor unions will be stopped. That is a tremendous thing to contemplate! That will be an achievement of heroic size.

The injunction in labor disputes has been a weapon in the hands of employers actively and frequently used for a great many years, never resting upon law or constitutional warrant, but resting solely upon an accumulation of precedent, which often is a stronger foundation than law.

This structure of precedent upon precedent will be wiped away if the senate bill becomes law. There will then be no more Red Jacket decisions.

The American Federation of Labor has declared its support of the bill as it stands—not that it is perfect, but because it is so nearly adequate that to seek further improvements might result in no action. The American Federation of Labor has leaped from the Parker battle to a larger and an even more important battle.

The magnificent support which came from trade unions throughout the country in the fight to stop Parker in his tracks will undoubtedly continue in the epochal struggle to enact a law that will finally put an end to the vicious injunction.

There is a phase to the injunction business often overlooked. The injunction is issued by a judge, sitting all by himself. For the moment he becomes the law-giver, mighty in his realm. He need ask no counsel, heed no warning. He is supreme, like the kings of old. His, for the time, is an unlimited monarchy, he the monarch.

As monarch he makes the law, he decides who is guilty of violation and he punishes—strange business in a democracy.

Many men crave that kind of power, many love to wield such power.

Beyond doubt the thirst to know the taste of unbridled power leads many a judge to seize the power and use it to the full.

The injunction as we have known it has given a great many judges the chance to know how it feels to be a King George the Third, entirely unhampered by legislative enactment, entirely beyond statute enactment, free, without bond or restriction of any kind—how it feels to say: "This is my will and so shall it be, though all other men disagree with me."

It is time, high and nip time, the United States congress met these tyrants within the temples of law. Not even the president of the nation could wield the unrestrained, unmeasured power possessed by Judge Parker, whom the senate has rejected. It is time, long overdue, that power was ended.

Let the senate act, forthwith!

SENATORS NOT "YES" MEN

The constitution (Art. 11, Sec. 2) empowers that the president "shall have power, by and with the advice and consent of the senate" to appoint judges of the supreme court. Despite arguments and privilege [illegible] the need for a [illegible] print in their business, [illegible] standing by the president." The constitution ordains otherwise.

The president—regardless of whom he may be—has no sweeping powers in the appointment of supreme court judges. His word is not law. He must go to the senate for advice and consent. Senators are placed on an equality with the president in such case, and to talk of "standing by the president" is to call on senators to violate their oath. Senators have the constitutional right—and duty—to discuss a judicial appointment. To waive this right and duty would mean that senators surrendered their prerogative and are mere "yes, yes" men.

To bring the senate to this low level is the purpose of attacks on the nation's forum, where issues and men are discussed.

Such discussion is distasteful to groups who want things sneaked through under the guise of "standing by the president." No citizen who believes in Americanism—who opposes the Mussolini ideal—should be a party to these slanders against the senate. These attacks are never directed against the chief executive, the judiciary, or the house, where debate can be stopped and the most important measures are "railroaded." The slanders are always against the senate. The reason is plain.

Unlimited discussion develops facts.

WHY THE YELLOW DOG IS YELLOW!

Pertinent and Profound Portions of Addresses in United States Senate Debate on Parker

This Is the First of a Series of Selected Extracts

Senator Hiram Johnson, of California, said:

"I read just a line of the 'yellow dog' contract, so-called, in order that it may be in juxtaposition to some words that I wish to read of a man whom it is unfashionable to quote nowadays here, or perhaps in this materialistic age to utilize as an authority upon any subject whatsoever. These are the controlling provisions of the contracts that have been the subject of discussion:

"'That during his employment said employe will not become a member of any labor union, and will have no dealings, communication or interviews with officers, agents or members of any labor union in relation to membership of such employe in any labor union, or in relation to the employment of such employe.'

"Again: 'I agree, during employment under this contract, that I will work on efficiently and diligently, and will not participate in any strike nor unite with employes in concerted action to change hours, wages or working conditions.'

Wicked and Destructive.

"Words utterly fail me in characterization of contracts such as that. I care not whether they have been enforced by the one court or another; they are void as against public policy.

"Socially they are wicked and destructive of ordinary human relations. Economically they are unsound as resting upon necessity on the one side and coercion on the other; and morally they are infamous, denying fundamental rights and disrupting the dearest human associations.

"These contracts that are part of the discussion in this case, upon which the mind of this appointee has been indicted in the Red Jacket case, come before us now finally for our determination, at a tangent it may be and only incidentally, but finally for ultimate determination.

"'Socialistic,' says my friend from Ohio (Mr. Fess), are assaults that are made upon the supreme court in this chamber.

"'Socialistic,' re-echoes man after man in this body, in relation to what may be said about this applicant or another. Socialistic to stand here and denounce a contract such as that that has been upheld by Judge Parker in the Red Jacket case.

"Socialistic—and exactly the same epithet was hurled in the United States some years ago upon another case of like character, the Dred Scott decision, wherein human liberty was at stake; no more important than this, where industrial freedom is at stake.

What Lincoln Said.

"And I read with such taste as I may what was said by Abraham Lincoln on the occasion when he discussed the denunciation of Stephen A. Douglas of his characterization of the Dred Scott decision and the United States supreme court.

"How apt it is! How prophetic were the words then! No longer fashionable is it to quote Abraham Lincoln in this materialistic age. No longer it is apposite, in this era of ours, where everything apparently is devoted to exploitation and to the making of money—no longer is it the appropriate thing to speak of Lincoln and his humanity and his desire for equal opportunity for all men and for all women in this land.

"Lincoln dared criticize the supreme court. Lincoln dared criticise a decision of the supreme court. He said, coining a word, that it was an 'astonisher,' and that he 'went for reversing it.'

"I say to you, paraphrasing what Lincoln said, this decision upon the 'yellow dog' contract is an 'astonisher,' and I go for reversing it, as Mr. Lincoln said, in any fashion by which I may voice that endeavor to reverse; and here comes an opportunity finally for us, in the senate of the United States, to voice our views upon this inhuman, this cruel and this wicked contract that rests upon the necessity of human beings and the hunger of innocent women and innocent children."

"I'SE REGUSTED."

The Passing Show

Note and Comment on Things Doing in the March of Events

British newspaper men, through the National Union of Journalists, have been for some time negotiating with British provincial publishers for a five and one-half day week, with three weeks' vacation period, according to H. D. Nichols, retiring president. Negotiations thus far have failed, but they have not been dropped.

The union has an active membership of 5,000 and a reserve of about $18,000. During the past year $55,000 was received in dues, $7,000 was paid in unemployment benefits, $3,500 was paid to distressed members and $7,300 was paid to widows and orphans of members. The union has been in existence 23 years and during that time has paid out over $302,000 through its various beneficial funds.

American journalists would do well to heed the example of their British fellow-craftsmen.

Women who work—and those who employ them—will find food for thought in the sage remarks of Mary Anderson, made in a recent address. Said this United States labor department official, whose job it is to understand the problems of women workers:

"On the other hand, the problems of married women wage earners are particularly acute because of the prejudice existing in so many quarters against their employment. Protests are made on the basis that married women who have husbands to support them take jobs from men and single women.

"The great majority of these married women have sought paid jobs because of financial needs and not from desire for a career or to escape household drudgery. They have become breadwinners because of the husband's insufficient or irregular earnings or because of his unemployment, illness, or inability to provide for the family. The wife, therefore, must help support the home and children, or often shoulder the full responsibility.

"In other instances married women have become wage earners to help buy a home, to give their children greater opportunities, or to raise the family above the poverty level.

"These women do not escape household drudgery as the public is prone to believe. Home duties must be performed and the children cared for before and after the hours of employment."

Under the title of "The Most Surprised Man in America: A Study of Government and Business, or How Things Happen to Happen in Washington," Judson King, director of the National Popular Government league, Washington, D. C., tells the interesting story of the experiences of Walter H. Wheeler, consulting engineer of Minneapolis, in seeking to lease the big power site in the Flathead Indian reservation in Montana. The Montana Power Company doesn't want Wheeler to have the lease and thereby hangs the tale.

The story is too long to even outline briefly here but the gist of it is that Wheeler was blocked and circumvented in every move he has made to get the lease, though apparently it would be greatly in the public interest that it be awarded to him. He has been trying to get the lease more than two years and is still trying. One example of what he has been up against is typical. Personal acquaintances in the utility field will not touch his proposition, saying: "Yes, it is good, but it is in the territory of the Montana Power Company. Sorry."

The story is enlightening. It gives an idea of the workings of the power interests and does not by any means reflect credit on the way they do things.

MARCH KING FROWNS ON "CANNED" MUSIC

Washington.—John Philip Sousa, America's march king, frowns on the army plan to have a mechanical musical device mounted on a truck for marching infantrymen.

"The boys who do the marching will not be stirred by such a device," said the bandmaster.

"Will the truck keep in step, too, do you think? I doubt if mechanical music can ever produce the same effect upon its auditor as personal music."

Yale's Scrub Women Are Paid Low Wage

New Haven, Conn.—"Why object to Harvard University paying scrub-women 35 cents an hour when Yale University pays 'slightly over 25 cents an hour?'" asks a student of Yale, writing in the publication issued by the senior class of that institution. He says this pauper wage can not be defended because women in local shops earn less.

Harvard recently dismissed a score of women workers because the Massachusetts minimum wage commission insisted that a 37-cent rate be paid.

The two universities are the richest in America, Harvard leading with an endowment of $90,000,000 and Yale having $69,000,000.

The Yale student says women in the dormitories receive $8.75 a week. They work from 8 to 1 on week days and from 9 to 1 on Sundays, "so that their average is slightly over 25 cents an hour. (It is surprising how well off the Harvard scrubwomen were.)

"Of course, these women have a certain income from tips at Christmas and June, but it is doubtful if this would raise the average wage more than a cent or two. Again, it might be pointed out that women in New Haven shops often earn less than this. But this is a very slender apology for the university's policy."

Forbid 5-Day Week In Single Contract

New York.—The American Newspaper Publishers' Association, representing 500 leading papers in this country, voted that no member should sign a five-day-week contract until and unless a national policy is jointly agreed upon and recommended by the association and the international printing trades unions.

The publishers approved a letter by one of its members to Secretary Randolph of the International Typographical Union wherein it was stated that the five-day week is "unsound."

The association declared for arbitration, but its stand on the five-day-week means that this change must be applied nationally, and that local and any especial condition shall not be considered.

The convention elected Harry Chandler of the Los Angeles Times president. Chandler is a leading anti-unionist on the Pacific Coast and his paper is considered a national spokesman for this element.

LONG HOURS FATAL TO TEXTILE TRADE

Atlanta, Ga.—"Long working hours are an economy boomerang," said Henry Kendall, of Boston, head of five southern textile mills, in an address to the Atlantic Cotton association.

"Long hours," said Mr. Kendall, "have meant that for certain periods goods are turned out in such volume that an overproduction periodically recurs.

"Overproduction means curtailed employment and, reduced, the latter means lessened purchasing power. The new and sound practice of other advanced industries is to maintain purchasing power first."

State Department Official Brands Overproduction and Unemployment As Deep-Dyed Stain on Civilization

(By International Labor News Service.)

Washington, May 22.—Over-production and unemployment form a vicious circle and untold millions of human beings are being deprived of even an approach to happiness because of a faulty economic system, Dr. Wallace McClure, of the department of state, recently said, in pleading for the removal of impediments to international trade. The interview was notable for undiplomatic plain speaking.

Dr. McClure, who is assistant chief of the state department's treaty division, said that there seems to be pretty general agreement that both the United States and the world at large are in the midst of economic depression. The situation is affecting profoundly the welfare of all walks of economic life, he added.

"Over-production and unemployment form a vicious circle in economic affairs," Dr. McClure said. "Each is a result of the other, and efforts to correct either, as long as the other persists, are likely to be unavailing.

"It is difficult to imagine a stain upon present-day civilization more deep-dyed than this. The entire human race, save for the little handful of persons who comprise the wealthy classes, is crying out for more and more goods. The full time of every worker every day is needed to produce the goods desired. Yet untold millions of human lives are being deprived of all approach to happiness today because we have been unable so to organize our industrial system as to conserve and make fruitful our human resources.

"Commercial policy cannot shoulder the main responsibility, but a wisely directed commercial policy may perhaps be not only a source of substantial relief but the only source available to practical statesmen at the present time.

Nurse Tells How CARDUI Helped Her

Mrs. W. A. Cox, a well-known professional nurse, of Burnside, Ky., writes:

"I was in very bad health, and only weighed 110 pounds. I read in the papers about Cardui, and thought I would give it a try-out. After I had taken one bottle, I could see that I was improving. After I had taken it a month or two, I began to gain, and I weigh at present 168, and have weighed that for some time. I am now 55 years old, and can do as much work as the average middle-aged woman can.

"I would advise any woman, who is weakly and in a run-down condition, to try Cardui, but not to expect one bottle to make her well. I take two or three bottles a year, now, and I feel fine."

Postoffice Squibs

By R. B. LANE

Henry Oehlsen tells me how ungrateful Frank Brooks is. While they have been recovering from their injuries they have been staying at Brooks' home. Brooks was bewailing the fact that he had to feed them all. Now Oehlsen says that ever since he has been there he has gotten Brooks' breakfast for him, letting him sleep till breakfast was ready for him. The "ungrateful hound!"

A patron of the postoffice called up Station B recently and told Supt. Tom Solomon that one of their carriers had run over him. When asked if he was driving a truck, he said, "No, he was on foot." They are laying it on Harry Gribben as he was walking to Station B that week.

By the way, the superintendent sent Gribben out to East Lake, saying they had taken off fourteen blocks from the route he was working. He said he got so far over into Georgia that they tried to collect poll tax from him. Mr. Walker says he just wandered out there and got lost.

Oh, yes, Capt. W. A. Myers was at home Monday and Tuesday building a porch, so he said, but I learned that the stork flew down at his house and left a baby boy, Michael Robert, the fifth.

E. H. Dawson has built a home on the edge of Red Bank and moved to that suburb.

Sam Britten, of St. Elmo station, who was operated on for appendicitis, will be off for several days yet.

Brother Dailey is a plumber. He can take a pipe around, over and under a brick pillar if it happens to be in the way, providing, of course, that it is a flexible pipe. Oh, you plumber!

Louis Brehm, from the postmaster-general's office, dropped in and gave us a talk concerning the Credit union, which was appreciated.

I heard that one of the Highland Park station boys said I did not know anybody but the main office guys. Well, I have asked all of the office force to give me any news concerning the postoffice and I will be glad to publish it. So boys, when any one is sick or off for any reason let me know. If you don't tell me how am I to know? I am no mind reader, so I ask you all to co-operate with me. (Editor's Note—Amen, brother!)

The game out at Engel field Wednesday reminds me of a story of two colored baseball teams playing. Someone asked one of them what the score was. He said, "About forty runs." "How many have you?" "Oh, we have not been at bat yet." The Lookouts didn't get to bat.

LABOR FOES CAN'T EXPLAIN REFUSAL OF SENATE TO PUT O. K. ON PARKER NOMINATION

By JOSEPH A. WISE

Chicago, May 22.—The refusal of the United States senate to confirm the appointment of Judge John J. Parker as a justice of the supreme court has proved an embarrassment to those elements in Chicago which never overlook an opportunity to hold organized labor up to ridicule and contempt and which delight in linking the unions with the underworld. They can not explain why it is that the persons comprising the unions and whom they would have the general public believe are undesirable citizens should have been able to so influence "the most august deliberative body in the world," representative in the highest degree of the entire American people.

The critics of organized labor here are either silent or they say, "'Tain't so!"

The Chicago Daily News is in the latter class. It pooh-poohs the claim that organized labor had any great influence in the fight that resulted in thumbs down for Judge Parker.

The defeat of Parker followed closely on the heels of an abortive attempt of the Daily News to convince the people of Chicago and of the country at large that organized labor of this city was about to fall into the hands of Scarface Al Capone.

It now develops that the Scarface Al Capone scare in reference to his alleged seizure of control of the unions here was a deliberate attempt to influence the people of the United States against organized labor at a time when the Parker controversy was at white heat in the senate. The Chicago Tribune played this reprehensible game with the Daily News and many daily newspapers in other parts of the country fell for the hoax when it reached them over the press wires. The labor press was greatly helpful in refuting the untruthful story.

It would be well if persons residing in other parts of the country were to stop, look and listen whenever a scandalous story in reference to organized labor emanates from Chicago. It is very likely that such a story will synchronize with a big public issue in which the labor movement and the common people generally are vitally interested.

LABOR INSTITUTE TO BE HELD AT PRESSMEN'S HOME, LIKELY TO BE OF IMPORTANCE TO SOUTH

[illegible], May 22.—[illegible] that the labor [illegible] ing arrangements in June [illegible] importance to labor [illegible] Up to this [illegible] the program [illegible], but [illegible] to show [illegible] and organizations, also to a man [illegible] their willingness to [illegible] will be added [illegible] the councils of the [illegible] of Labor and [illegible] Textile Workers of [illegible] tentative program also [illegible] attendance of representatives [illegible] of the leading universities and colleges, north and [illegible] as well as economists and [illegible] throughout the country.

[illegible] date fixed, but not unalterably, [illegible] week of June 16, although the preliminary plans, according to Paul W. Fuller, director of workers education in the southern organizing campaign, who will be in charge of the general arrangements, make provision for some preliminary numbers for Sunday, June 15. This day will be devoted to the reception and registration of delegates, Major George Berry being scheduled to deliver the speech of welcome. Mr. Fuller to outline the purpose of the institute.

Complete definiteness is retarded mostly because a number of those whom the committee of arrangements would like to be present and to speak, have thus far been unable to arrange their engagements so as to meet the dates assigned to them at the institute. Many acceptances have already been received. Subjects which have been decided upon as being helpful to those interested in the welfare of the south have been suggested, however, and give a pretty fair idea of what the conferences is to be like, among them these:

"What is the Problem of Organizing the South?" "Social Background of the South." "Economic Background and Industrial Development of the South." "The South as I Know It." "Standards of Living in the South." "Importance of Trade Unionism to Women in Southern Industry." "Building Trade Unionism in the South." "The Southern Campaign and State Federations." "Union Management - Co-Operation." "Planning Trade Unionism for the South." "Social Value of Trade Unionism in the South," etc.

Those arranging the program explain that much of value and interest may be looked for in the discussion "The New Trade Unionism," and which is to be led by Geoffrey C. Brown, consulting engineer, American Federation of Labor.

HAVERTY'S OFFERS UNUSUAL BARGAINS

Warehouse Clearance Sale Brings Great Reductions in Home Furnishings.

Haverty's Warehouse Clearance Sale, beginning Saturday morning, will offer unusual reductions in every kind of home furnishings, and R. W. Dinkins, manager, expressed the belief Friday that the sale will add scores of new customers from the ranks of organized labor. Mr. Dinkins called attention to the fact that his company has always been regarded as friendly to the workers, and with the unusual bargains and easy terms offered during the coming sale he believes that Chattanooga working people will take advantage of the opportunity to purchase needed furnishings at the low prices. The sale will run for several days, but a wider choice is offered those who visit the store early, while the stocks are full.—(Adv.)

Crafty Anti-Unionists Know Labor's Purpose

Duluth, Minn.—"The big men on the inside understand the objective of the A. F. of L.," said William E. McEwen, editor The Labor World, of this city, in a radio talk on "The New Freedom."

"These business men know the meaning and import of collective bargaining," said the veteran trade unionist. "They know that its recognition means the building of machinery to introduce democracy in industry so far as the relations between management and employes is concerned.

"So it is with a fine bit of cunning that they use the term 'open' shop to win popular sympathy in their effort to curb the growth and power of organized labor. In practice their so-called 'open' shops are closed to all union men.

"The purpose of the anti-union shop is to head off collective bargaining."

EIGHT MAJOR LABOR LAWS PASSED BY 1930 SESSION OF NEW YORK LEGISLATURE

(By International Labor News Service.)

Albany, N. Y., May 7.—Organized labor scored heavily in the 1930 session of the New York legislature, the New York State Federation of Labor reports. Eight of the major proposals supported by the federation were made law by the legislature, which recently adjourned.

In addition to these major legislative proposals about two score amendments to the workmen's compensation law, the state labor law and other general laws proposed and endorsed by the New York State Federation of Labor were also enacted and more than a dozen bills which sought to weaken the existing labor laws were defeated.

The major legislative proposals enacted into law include abolition of ex-parte injunctions in this state, so that no injunction can hereafter be issued in an industrial dispute except after notice to both parties and a hearing in court; declaring the elimination of highway-railroad grade crossings to be public work and applying the eight-hour work day and prevailing rate of wages sections of the labor law to such work, which is being done under a $300,000,000 fund voted by the people, and which will mean that the workers employed will receive from $22,000,000 to $25,000,000 more in wages than would be paid by railroad contractors under the old law, and that New York state workers will do the work instead of imported groups from other states and foreign countries; amending public work article of labor law so as to provide that citizens and voters of New York state shall be given preference in employment on all state and local public work; prohibiting the importation into this state of prison-made articles and goods of any kind from any other state under the grant of power given by the Hawes-Cooper federal act; providing state administered regular money relief for aged needy of both sexes who are 70 years of age and have been residents of this state for ten years, the first big forward step in the program for a general old age pension law; securing to the employed women and minors of this state in factories and stores a guaranteed five and a half day week under the compromise forty-eight hour week law of 1928, with a weekly half-holiday commencing at noon despite the permissible overtime of 78 hours a year, thus overcoming an adverse court decision; the creation of a commission to carry out Gov. Roosevelt's proposal for state owned and state administered development of electricity from the St. Lawrence river waterpower site with provision that such hydro-electrical energy shall be provided for the home, farm and workshop at the least possible cost to the consumers; and providing state and local public funds for immediate undertaking of a program of public works and construction to relieve unemployment that will aggregate half a billion dollars.

Commenting on the results of the session, the State Federation of Labor Bulletin says:

"The 153rd annual session of the New York state legislature will take an honored place in the annals of labor legislation. For quality and quantity of legislative enactments devoted to the interests of the wage-earning citizens of our state it finds its only parallel in this generation with the labor legislative achievements of the session of 1913, which is described in the records of the New York State Federation of Labor as 'a red-letter one in labor legislation, when forty-four new labor laws were enacted (including the workmen's compensation law under a constitutional amendment), the bulk of which were the result of the vigorous and earnest work and full report of the Wagner-Gompers-Smith factory investigating commission supplemented by the co-operation of this federation and its constituent unions.'"

GRUNDY IS SCORED BY MINERS' CHIEF

Philadelphia.—"Labor has no greater foe than Senator Grundy," declared John L. Lewis, president United Mine Workers, in a radio appeal to Pennsylvania workers to retire the junior senator of this state to private life.

"Grundy has championed the strong and attacked and humiliated the weak," said the miners' chief. "Brutal in his arrogance, ruthless in his execution, he has fought reforms advocated by organized labor with unexampled ferocity.

"Grundy is an intellectual throwback who might have descended from a robber baron of the Middle Ages."

What Is More Tragic Than Unemployment? Who More Hopeful Than Statisticians?

An etching by Reginald Marsh. Courtesy The Downtown Gallery.

Many months have rolled across the face of the calendar since the big crash centered attention on unemployment.

Unemployment had existed in out-of-proportion amount long before the big crash, but the newspapers were so busy with their joy-singing about dividends that such matters as unemployment weren't news.

But the crash changed the tune. Suddenly unemployment became news. Also it became worse.

Then the so-called leaders got together at the White House and decided that all should be made well again.

But something more than magic was necessary and all has not been made well.

Unemployment gives way with such deliberate slowness that the doctors are puzzled. They don't know why recovery is so slow, or if they do know they don't tell.

Unemployment is but little less acute than it was three months ago.

The remarkable delineation of despair, printed with this editorial, is as true to the facts today as it was last winter, except in minor degree.

Nothing is more tragic than unemployment. Few human beings have been more optimistic about it than the statisticians. They gather up their facts and they make their charts. Everything will soon be fine. But everything is not soon fine, nor, getting down to the bitter dregs of desperate truth, will it be in the immediate future.

Suffering is less in summer than in winter, but unemployment is not going to be cured by seasons.

The automatic machine has brought up something that requires drastic readjustment, and industry is so unwilling to yield to the plain facts in the case that rapid readjustment is impossible.

The most hopeful thing in America today is the rapid organization of wage earners into unions whose program is the one truly healing thing in sight.

Mail Order Giants Abandon Merger, But Many Worries Still Beset Them

General Wood, of Sears, Roebuck, Reported to Have Unburdened His Qualms About Non-Union Printing Contract to New York Banker—Army Experience Didn't Prepare Him for Industrial Issues.

By JOSEPH A. WISE

Chicago, May 28.—Plans for a merger of Sears, Roebuck & Co. and Montgomery Ward & Co. have been abandoned, it is announced. Instead there will be "a friendly spirit of co-operation between the managements of the two companies," it is said.

Fear of interference by the federal trade commission were the two giant mail order houses to be merged caused abandonment of that plan to put the two concerns on their feet, it is said. There seems to be a fear, too, that the federal trade commission may become inquisitive if the "friendly spirit of co-operation" becomes too friendly.

Net profits of Montgomery Ward & Co. were $4,269,900 less in 1929 than they were in 1928. The reduction is ascribed to cut-throat competition with Sears, Roebuck & Co., in the matter of prepayment of freight and postage. The latter firm is silent as to its losses last year.

Both Get Unfavorable Publicity.

Both of these firms have received much unfavorable publicity during the last fourteen months because they placed their huge printing contracts with the unfair R. R. Donnelley & Sons Co. It was also brought to light that they had placed large contracts for prison-made products.

Neither firm has admitted for publication that their unfair attitude toward organized labor has seriously affected the sales of their hundreds of branch stores scattered all over the continent. However, Gen. Robert E. Wood, president of Sears, Roebuck & Co., made a significant admission in a private conversation with a New York banker, the Chicago bureau of International Labor News Service is reliably informed.

Gen. Wood, our informant said, told the New York banker that he was "very unhappy" over the situation created by the letting of the $30,000,000 printing contract to R. R. Donnelley & Sons Co. The general stated, we are told, that Sears, Roebuck & Co. needed all the friends it could acquire, but that the numerous stories sent from the Chicago bureau of International Labor News Service to the labor press of the country were having a very bad effect upon the firm's old and prospective customers. He wished that he were out of the bad mess, the general is alleged to have said.

Easy to Believe Statement.

Aside from the fact that the person who related the foregoing story is of the very highest standing and is in a position to obtain much information, it is easy to believe that Gen. Wood made such a statement. He was quartermaster general of the United States army during the world war. Being a regular army man, he knew little about organized labor until he became connected with Julius Rosenwald, the boss of Sears, Roebuck & Co.

Gen. Wood's real education along trade union lines started when Julius Rosenwald, alleged philanthropist, decided that Sears, Roebuck & Co. should embark upon the treacherous sea of non-unionism. Being a high-class gentleman and imbued with regular army ideals, it is only natural that Gen. Wood's finer sensibilities should revolt against the un-American policies laid down for his guidance by Rosenwald, who has an ambition to become the czar of the mail order and chain store business of this country.

Express Sympathy For Earp Brothers

Local trade unionists are of one mind in extending sincere sympathy to the surviving relatives of L. W. Earp, well-known local citizen, who passed away at the home, 1111 Highland Park avenue, last Tuesday. Besides a widow and two daughters, Mr. Earp is survived by three sons, Russell, Frank and Whitfield, who are long-time members of the Chattanooga labor movement, each being employed by the Southern railroad, and members of Lodge 1450, Machinists.

Funeral services for Mr. Earp were held last Thursday, the remains being laid to rest in Fisher cemetery, Fort Payne, Ala.

Paul J. Aymon came home to attend the funeral, deceased being a relative by marriage.

The Labor World joins with many other friends in offering heart-felt condolences to the boys and their mother and sisters, in the loss of their loved one.

Cuthbert Leads In Typos' Election

T. R. Cuthbert, active member of Chattanooga Typographical union and of Central Body, outdistanced two competitors in the race for delegate to the Houston convention of the I. T. U., which meets at Houston, Tex., in September, M. M. Beavers, of the Times chapel, and H. Clay Timmons, of the News, being close to the winner when the votes were counted Wednesday.

The delegate's election was incidental to the annual election for international officers of the parent body, and the local union gave an overwhelming majority to the "progressive" candidates. Results of the international election will probably not be known for several days.

DR. COWAN TO BE GUEST OF CIRCLE

Dr. T. B. Cowan, pastor of the Third Presbyterian church, will be a guest of honor of Circle club at its regular semi-monthly meeting Monday night, and an address by the minister will constitute the entire program for this session.

Immediate occasion for the presence of the local pastor at Circle meeting is a campaign of preparation for observance of the anniversary of the Christian church, which will be held in all churches next Sunday under auspices of the Chattanooga Pastors' association. Circle club's contribution to co-operation sought by the pastors consisted in an invitation to Dr. Cowan, who has accepted.

Officers of the club express the hope that a good attendance will be present Monday night to honor the minister as well as the occasion which brings him as a guest of the organization.

EMPLOYERS SEE NECESSITY FOR POLICY CHANGE

Depression Begins to Pinch in High Places.

EDGERTON POLICY NOW REPUDIATED

Philosophy of Sage of Lebanon Denounced by Associates as "Treacherous."

(By International Labor News Service.)

Washington, May 29.—With "a very slight change" in unemployment shown for April by the United States bureau of labor statistics, the refusal of the industrial situation to yield to conversational treatment was shown in corporation reports disclosing reduced income for 306 firms in representative industrial groups. The average drop in income was 18.6 per cent, according to the Standard Statistics company, of New York, comparing April, 1930, with April, 1929.

While the government report shows a "marked increase" in building trades employment, it reveals a net loss in both employment and pay roll money in seven of the thirteen industrial groups from which the bureau of labor gets figures regularly. Spread over the whole industrial field, the bureau figures a net loss in employment of two-tenths of one per cent out of about 5,000,000 employes.

It is pointed out here that the astonishing factor is not the volume of lost employment, but that there should be any loss, after so much has been said about improving conditions.

Many Decreases Called "Seasonal."

Decreased employment is reported in manufacturing, bituminous and metal mining, crude petroleum production, telephone and telegraph operation, wholesale trade and hotels. The department seeks to soften the blow by pointing out that these drops are almost wholly seasonal, but alleged seasonal drops, added to the accumulated effect of the general crash, creates something that is described by labor men as depression plus. The bloom has been knocked off some of the rosy predictions of optimistic statisticians and political forecasters.

Paradoxically, it is reported that some of the industries reported as showing a loss for the month, over March, are reported as actually having more employes than they had for April a year ago. If this means anything it means that conditions a year ago were desperate in these industries, while the country generally was gloating over a condition of fancied and much-touted prosperity.

Per Man Wages Drop.

As a matter of fact the interpretations of government reports on employment, or unemployment, require much interpreting before their meaning is clear. Out of the group reports of increases and decreases, there emerges this sentence from the government report:

"Per capita earnings in manufacturing industries in April, 1930, were 0.3 per cent lower than in March, 1930, and 4.5 per cent lower than in April, 1929."

Which reveals, in part, the extent to which employers have broken the White House agreement not to reduce wages. For these figures are not wage rates in the aggregate—they are per capita rates. They are rates per employe. In the year wage rates per employe have fallen 4.5 per cent in manufacturing industries.

How much of this per canita wage reduction is due to discharge of skilled workers and the substitution of recruits at lower rates and how much is due to reductions imposed without turnover is not revealed by the government statisticians.

New Policies Needed.

Aside from government figures which emphatically picture a continued condition of terrific unemployment, another situation is developing. Employers, in considerable groups, throughout the country are coming to the conclusion that new policies must be adopted to meet a condition that does not yield to any of the ancient shibboleths.

International Labor News Service learns, from many sources, that a wage of insurgency is on against the anti-union administration of the National Association of Manufacturers and the idea generally represented by the Davenport-Emery-Edgerton brand of opposition to modern industrial principles.

As a matter of fact this feeling, born out of the facts of the day, is so serious that within the last two weeks one important manufacturing group that cannot at this time be named, repudiated the Edgerton program and denounced it as treacherous. The leaders of this group declared that revival of industrial prosperity can come only through reduced hours of work and increased wages and they declared that if employers did not hold themselves willing to deal with trade unions they shortly would have to deal with a destructive force instead.

Similar Views Gain Ground.

Reports of similar views in many responsible quarters have been gathered, showing respectable proportions within the ranks of employers. These employers are facing the situation as it is, with the certain knowledge that permanent unemployment cannot exist and that permanent unemployment must be avoided either by constructive measures within industry or by an upheaval that will destroy the present order of industrial operation.

Charles F. Kettering, vice-president of General Motors, by no means a concern sympathetic to trade unionism, last week declared that either science must develop new types of employment at the head of the procession or there would have to be a dole system at the end of the procession, bringing himself thus about half way toward meeting the problem, to the creation of which the efficiency of General Motors and its wages and hours policies are a considerable contributing factor.

With the report of corporation earning decreases added to the unemployment figures, it is clear that prosperity has not been revived and that measures thus far taken have not been effective.

Low Textile Pay Stirs Protest In Japan As In United States

The United States is not the only country in which low textile mill wages are arousing resentment. In far-off Japan, employes of textile mills have recently been fighting low wages. Here is a picture of girl employes of the Kanagafuchi Spinning company, clad in native dress, holding a meeting in protest against the company's decision to cut their pay.

Huntsville Paper's Threats Fail To Disturb Labor Organizers

Paul J. Smith Declares Attitude of Huntsville, Ala., Times Does Not Correctly Reflect Public Opinion---8,000 Mill Workers Eager to Join Union and Improve Their Condition.

By C. S. GARRISON

Birmingham, Ala., May 28.—A threat published in the Huntsville (Ala.) Times that a movement was on foot to "kick all labor agitators out of Huntsville" because of their organizing activities has not disturbed organized labor in this district, Paul J. Smith, chairman of the southern organizing campaign committee, said.

Chairman Smith said the only thing that amazed him was the designation of American Federation of Labor organizers as "reds," and "red flag wavers."

"The American Federation of Labor is one of the strongest institutions in America standing as a bulwark against communism and the wavers of the red flag. Its representatives went into Huntsville at the earnest request of the workers and merchants, long fed up on the open shop plan and many on the verge of bankruptcy.

"The very day the Huntsville newspaper published the threat against organized labor I had a long distance telephone call from a prominent merchant of Huntsville urging us to 'hurry' the work of organizing that city. The Huntsville newspaper does not correctly reflect the opinions of the people of that city—the workers and merchants and other business men. The merchants are fully aware that the size of the pay envelope of the workers determines the prosperity of any community, Huntsville included."

There are some 8,000 mill workers in the Huntsville district, and most of these are anxious to join the union, Mr. Smith said. Workers receive an average of $8 to $12 a week for ten or twelve hours' work. The same issue of the Times that carried the threat to run organizers out of town also carried advertisements of chain store groceries, quoting sweet potatoes at 6 cents a pound; flour, $1.25 for a 24-pound sack; ham, 45 cents a pound, and other meats in proportion. How many workers can buy that sort of food on $8 per week? It takes more than a day's wage to buy a bag of flour and almost that much to buy three or four pounds of the cheapest meat, not to mention coffee and sugar and some of the other barest necessities of living. As a matter of fact these workers live on "white pork" (salt meat) and use corn meal instead of flour. As to buying a suit of clothes or a pair of shoes, that is an event that rarely comes. Is it any wonder that the merchants are urging the American Federation of Labor to come and help?

The Huntsville Times said editorially that labor there was "happy, contented and efficient;" that any worker ought to be glad he "had a meal ticket." Merchants point out that they can not prosper when the worker has only a "meal ticket," therefore they want a change.

Despite threats and secret reports of opposition, there are several prosperous organizations in Huntsville, including the textile workers, painters, barbers and carpenters, and still others being organized.

Mrs. C. E. Smith Passes to Beyond

Mrs. C. E. Smith, sister of Harris D. Hix, former president of Circle club and active in the councils of Chattanooga Typographical union and Central Body, passed into the beyond Wednesday morning at the home of her daughter, Mrs. W. P. Gregory, 2014½ McCallie avenue.

Mrs. Smith had been in failing health for several years, and a recent fall, in which she shattered a hip, is believed to have hastened the end. She was a member of a prominent north Georgia family, and leaves many friends in this city and Catoosa county to mourn her loss.

Mrs. Smith is survived by a large number of relatives. Funeral services were held Thursday from the home of a daughter, Mrs. Ernest G. Taylor, on Union avenue.

The Labor World speaks for the entire local movement in extending to Brother Hix and the other bereaved relatives of this good lady sincere and heartfelt condolences.

RETAIL PRICES HOLD

Washington, D. C.—Retail food prices remain stationary, despite general unemployment and attempts to reduce wages. The United States bureau of labor statistics reports that these prices increased slightly more than three-fourths of 1 per cent on April 1, 1930, when compared with March 15, 1930, and decreased slightly less than one-third of 1 per cent since April 15, 1929.

LABOR POUNDS AGAINST DIXIE REACTION'S LINE

TENNESSEE SOON TO BEGIN CAMPAIGN

Merchants Join With Workers in Movement for Higher Standards in South.

(Special Correspondence)

Birmingham, Ala., May 28.—Organized labor in the south is beginning to feel its responsibilities in the matter of better wages and working conditions and shorter hours for the unorganized. At Columbus, Ga., where American Federation of Labor organizers have been working, sentiment is unusually strong for the idea of trade unionism. A series of mass meetings, one each night, were held for a week and attended nightly by 1,000 to 1,500 workers and business men. A local union of textile workers has been organized with a charter list of 350 members. Bricklayers and moving picture operators have organized local unions and several other crafts are organizing under the direction of George L. Googe, representing the American Federation of Labor.

Francis J. Gorman, international vice-president of the United Textile Workers spoke before a Columbus audience of some 1,000 textile workers, declaring trade union organizers had come into Columbus with a message of peace and good will for workers and employers. "If there is any trouble in Columbus," he said, "that trouble will not be caused by the workers in Columbus under the leadership of the United Textile Workers of America or the American Federation of labor." Gorman denounced the "stretch-out" system, low wages and the exploitation of women and children in the mills. He declared the leaders of labor believed in scientific management of industry and asked the co-operation of employers to this end. He denied that the union in Columbus was being organized for strike purposes. "Where a real union is organized strikes are next to impossible," Gorman said.

Some employers of labor in Georgia have been distributing "loyalty pledges" among the workers, which is the "yellow dog" contract under a new name. Some workers have signed them under fear of losing their jobs, President Petry of the Georgia State Federation of Labor said.

Virginia trade unionists, at their recent convention at Petersburg, adopted a resolution calling on the state legislature of 1932 to enact an eight-hour day law for women workers. Another resolution adopted indorsed the principles of a state insurance fund for workmen's compensation.

The state federation is strong for the movement to organize the school teachers of the state under the American Federation of Teachers. The threatened reduction of 10 per cent in teachers' wages in Richmond has crystalized sentiment among the teachers of Virginia. Teachers in Atlanta, Memphis, Raleigh, N. C., and Columbia, S. C., are organized.

Organization work in Tennessee, Alabama and other southern states, including the textile districts, is making progress, according to reports received at the general headquarters, Birmingham, Paul J. Smith, chairman, said. Despite the tirade against organized labor by the Huntsville Times and the report that organized labor had "quit" in that city, work is progressing rapidly and several hundred new members have been added to local unions already organized and chartered, Chairman Smith said. Independent merchants of that city have joined in with the American Federation of Labor in the organizing campaign. In a statement to Chairman Smith the leader of the merchants said they were "tired of the open shop and low wages" and "wanted a change."

"Organized labor and the trade union idea are further along in the south than they have ever been in the history of the movement," Paul J. Smith, southern organization chairman said. "Reports received at headquarters show this to be true. The 300,000 textile workers, not to mention all the other crafts of southern industry, are being forced to organize because of economic conditions, long hours of labor and poor working conditions." New organization work will start shortly in Tennessee, Louisiana and parts of Alabama where little or no work has been done.

CLOSE SENATE VOTE DEFEATS DEBENTURE

Washington, D. C.—The senate, by a 43-41 vote, waived its position on farmers' debenture for export wheat. The senators also changed their position on the flexible tariff when Vice-President Curtis broke a 42-42 tie.

The house opposed debenture and favored the flexible clause. The senate takes a contrary position on these issues. Conferences between the two legislative branches proved fruitless and the senate changed.

"De trouble 'bout beatin' roun' de bush is, you nevah kin tell whut liable to jump out AT you!"

LABOR QUERIES

Q.—When were public employment agencies first established?

A.—France had the first public employment agencies or bureaus, it is thought. In 1848 such bureaus were established in Paris. The first agency of the kind was established in 1885 and the first in this country in Ohio five years later.

Q.—Where did cooks and waiters have the first organization?

A.—Chicago claims this honor. As early as 1880 there existed in Chicago a local independent union of workers in the catering industry. In 1884 affiliation was made with the Knights of Labor with charter No. 7475. Later the organization left the Knights of Labor.

Q.—What international union was organized in Holyoke, Mass.?

A.—The International Brotherhood of Paper Makers.

Q.—Who said: "The greatest good which trade unionism can accomplish is to instil the principles of self-reliance and independence, and encourage wage earners to resist every form of imposition or injustice which industry may attempt to apply?"

A.—John P. Frey

A local man and his wife were hotly discussing the merits of a book. Finally, the wife said: "No, John, you can't appreciate it—you never wrote a book yourself."

"No," retorted John, "and I never laid an egg, but I'm a better judge of an omelet than any hen in the state."

INJUNCTION CREATES SERFS

The New York circuit court of appeals ruled that organized workers cannot refuse to install non-union organs. The court reasons thusly: An organ cannot be sold if the purchaser fears it will not be installed by skilled men. Refusal to install the organ is, therefore, a conspiracy in restraint of interstate commerce and can be enjoined.

The decision accords with the United States supreme court's rule (Bedford and Duplex cases) that a refusal to handle non-union stone and printing presses interferes with interstate commerce, and trade unionists can be forced by the injunction to work against their will.

These decisions shock persons who have old-fashioned ideas that the federal constitution, outlawing compulsory labor, is in effect.

The injunction judge rules otherwise. He sits as a court of conscience, to protect profits. He is not interested in human rights, as is a court of law. Freedom for man—his right to work for any reason satisfactory to himself—is ignored by the new system that exalts property and profits, regardless of human liberty and constitutional guarantees.

To say that workers refuse employment for the purpose of conspiring against interstate commerce is rampant legalism. Such interference is incidental to a lawful act by free men who would improve, or maintain, their living conditions.

Workers alone are denied such liberty when it lessens profits. If a plaintiff asked that other citizens be denied such liberty, he would be laughed out of court. He would be told he has no relief when he is injured in a clash of equal rights.

The labor injunction is an enslaving process that has been silently developed to the point where compulsory labor is applied in the United States. The constitution (Art. 13, Sec. 1) declares:

"Neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime whereof the party shall have been duly convicted, shall exist within the United States, or any place subject to their jurisdiction."

This amendment has no double meaning. It should not be twisted by silky theorizing or by juristic reasoning that is intended to force workers to labor against their will.

These decisions fasten wage earners to commerce as securely as serfs were held to the land during the Middle Ages. If men care for their precious national inheritance, for their country's fundamental principles, they should raise their voice against these court orders that turn citizens into serfs.

DOESN'T APPLY TO LABOR.

The one-sided reasoning of men with a property outlook is shown in an editorial in Barron's, financial spokesman, published in New York City, which protests against the government's attack on the radio trust.

"If any one of those defendants owned a patent for any part of a radio, under the laws of the United States, it was the company's sole property," says the editor. "Holding it tight within its own control would not be a restraint of commerce."

But note the difference when labor attempts to hold "tight within its own control" its labor power. This, the United States supreme court has ruled, is a violation of interstate commerce.

Human liberty, inherent in man, is denied when commerce is affected, but patents, which are the gift of government, must be protected, regardless of the effect on commerce.

OUT-OF-DATE THEORIES.

The optimistic theory that technological employment releases workers for new industries can not stand analysis. Automatic machinery can be applied to new industries, as well as to old. The machine—wherever operating—produces more than can be consumed.

E. R. Reeser, president American Petroleum institute, was recently quoted that "the depression existing today in many industries is due to efficiency."

Bernard M. Baruch, New York banker, stated in Boston, recently, that "we have business stagnation because there is more of everything than can be sold at a profit." He classed as "public lunacy" a system that decrees unlimited production of "indigestible masses of unconsumable products."

Henry P. Kendall, president Kendall company, speaking before the Atlantic Cotton association meeting, at Augusta, said: "Overproduction means curtailed employment and reduced earnings, and reduced earnings mean lessened purchasing power. The new purchasing power should come first or industry will choke down," he said.

Theodore M. Knappen, associate editor the Magazine of Wall Street, declares that "American industry can easily make in eight months all that it can dispose of in twelve," and that "jobs become scarcer and scarcer."

These statements justify organized labor's claim that hours should be reduced and wages increased. Old slogans of stand-pat economists must be junked. The cry for more production, and still more production, must be replaced by a demand for equitable distribution.

WHY THE YELLOW DOG IS YELLOW!

Pertinent and Profound Portions of Addresses in United States Senate Debate on Parker

This is the Second of a Series of Selected Extracts

Senator George W. Norris, Of Nebraska, Said:

I have here a cartoon taken from a newspaper. It is the picture of a man applying for a job. He is standing before the rich manufacturer. He is out of work. He wants to be able to support himself and his family, and as he presents himself before the mahogany-top table of the employer he is presented with a yellow-dog contract. In substance, that contract says, "I agree not to organize for my own protection."

What does he do? In the mists that seem to surround him and that pervade the atmosphere of the room he sees a picture. Dimly behind the scenes in his mind's eye he looks into his own home. He sees the wife of his bosom standing there, holding to her shriveled breasts her babe, his child, and beside the pleading mother stands at her feet a little boy, the image of his father, his son, grasping the tattered fragments of the torn skirt of the mother and looking up into her face through blinding tears, pleading with that mother for bread. When he sees that picture, what does he do? What would you do, brothers? What would I do? What would the professor of history do?

I know, and you know, and God knows, that there is only one escape. We must sign on the dotted line, and so this man signs. He goes, perhaps, down into the bowels of the earth. The coal king's slave he is, digging there the coal. He has signed a contract by which he has agreed not to join a union, not to consult with his fellows about bettering his condition. He has signed a contract that says that the employer can change the hours of labor, the conditions of labor, and the price of labor without his consent. He has agreed to it all in advance to save the wife and babe and boy. But as time goes on the hours are lengthened. He has to work longer. He has to commence earlier. He has to work later. The wages, perhaps, are cut down; and after a while he realizes that he is losing his physical strength. He sees that he is being ruined; that he cannot live and keep up the pace. So he consults his fellow workmen—men in the same condition, with the same kind of a family. He violates his contract when he does it, and he does it stealthily. He is afraid he will be caught; and after he has consulted with the men, his companions, they come to the conclusion that they cannot stand the labor that they are doing; they cannot put up with the inhumanity; they cannot remain the slaves of this coal king without a protest. So they organize, so that combined they may demand better working conditions and better wages. But when they do it they violate this sacred "yellow dog" contract, and they know it. They are afraid. They are cowed. They must do something to save their own lives and to protect their wives and families, and yet the very thing they are doing they have agreed not to do.

What would you do? What would I do? What would the professor of history do? What would any man do? We would do just what they have done. We would organize regardless of this wicked contract; and when the court came on, it would enjoin our own wives from giving us assistance! It would enjoin our own friends from giving food to our children! It would enjoin anyone from coming to our aid, from furnishing an appeal bond if we wanted to stay under the shelter of the roof where we were paying rent to a landlord. We would be enjoined from all that.

Would we feel like obedient citizens? Would we feel like law-abiding citizens? Would it be any wonder if we broke some law, if we violated some rule? Would it not be human to find wrongdoing, to find destruction of property, and all that follows those things?

I want to read you one more injunction. I could read you fifty. They are all about alike; but there is a new one, one that is not thirty days old, issued by a federal judge in the great state of Iowa; and the "yellow dog" contract in its usual form comes in there. I have the contract here. It is just the same as the one the senator from Rhode Island (Mr. Herbert) read, I think, word for word, with the exception of the names of the parties. I am going to read you, senators, the important part of that injunction. This is the case of the United States Gypsum company against John Heslop and others. This is the permanent injunction issued on the 5th day of April, 1930, less than thirty days ago:

Here is a law I am going to read, which covers a part of the state of Iowa. It was not made by the legislature of Iowa, it was not made by the congress of the United States; it was made by a federal judge in an injunction proceeding.

When I first read this injunction I did not believe it; I said, "It cannot be true. The man who sent this to me is trying to impose on me. He wants to get me into a false position." I wired the clerk of the court to send me a copy, and here it is from the clerk. I will read from that instead of the other copy. They are just the same, word for word. Nobody has deceived me at all.

Now, therefore, you and each of you are permanently enjoined—

That means forever. That is not for a week. That is a statute which no legislature can repeal, which no congress can repeal. If congress passes a law which the people do not like, they can defeat the men who passed it and get men who will pass the right kind of a law. But when a judge passes a law you cannot repeal it. He is there for life. He makes the statute, and this judge has made one in this case—

Now, therefore, you and each of you are permanently enjoined from directly or indirectly, by yourselves or your agents, servants, attorneys, confederates, and all persons acting in aid of, or in conjunction with you, or any of you, or under your authority, suggestion, or direction

You are permanently enjoined from—

combining and conspiring together to injure complainant's interstate business, trade, and good will; and/or to restrain, defer, and destroy the interstate commerce of complainant in selling and delivering its products; and or compel the complainant to operate its Fort Dodge plant on a closed-shop basis; and from doing any and all acts whatsoever in furtherance thereof to accomplish any of the aforesaid purposes, and in particular—

Now, we are coming down to particularities—from doing any of the following acts in furtherance thereof.

Now, listen to this:

From printing, publishing, issuing, circulating and distributing, or otherwise communicating directly or indirectly, in writing or verbally to any person, association of persons, or corporation, any statement or notice of any kind or character whatsoever, stating or representing—

If there is anything that is not contained in that, this judge would give a premium if you would suggest it to him, no doubt.

1. That there is a strike at the mill or plant of complainant at Fort Dodge, Iowa.

Think of that! You can not tell your wife that there is a strike. You cannot tell your father or your son. You could not tell it to a minister of the gospel to whom you went for spiritual advice in the premises. You could not tell it to a lawyer if you thought you had some right that was invaded and wanted legal advice. You cannot tell anybody that there is a strike on at the plant of complainant.

Or that the strike of 1921 is still in existence; or that there is a controversy over wages or conditions of employment between complainant and its employes.

You cannot tell anybody that there has been a disagreement. You will not dare advise with a single soul, directly or indirectly, that there is anything whatever wrong. All those things may be true; as a matter of fact, all of them are true. But you will not dare tell them, and I am about to read the first provision by which you are enjoined from making a false statement. There might be some reason for that.

Or any false statement with reference to conditions of employment at complainant's plant.

Here are some more of the things you are enjoined from doing. You will see these as they are printed. This is paragraph 2, and this is one of the things you are enjoined from telling—

That complainant is unfair to organized union labor, or that its products are or were unfair to organized labor, or are on an unfair list.

You cannot tell that to anybody. You will see further on that the organization cannot even do it in the lodge room. Listen to this one:

3. That complainant forces or requires its employes to sign or subscribe to the so-called "yellow dog contract."

That is the injunction, just as I have read it. You will not dare tell a soul that this company requires its men to sign this contract before it will give them employment.

Think of it! Think of it! This is the United States, and Iowa is one of the great states of the Union, and that decree came without a statute, came without any legislative enactment, came like a thunderbolt from the bench, issued by a federal judge, whose job lasts him for life.

Next:

From inducing, or attempting to induce, by persuasion, threats, or intimidation, any person, association of persons, or corporation to refrain from the purchase of or labor upon any of complainant's products; and from stating or representing, directly or indirectly, by any combination of words or phrases that complainant should not be patronized or dealt with, or its products purchased, handled, worked upon, or dealt in.

That is the injunction. So many people read that and say, "I do not believe in that." Very well; suppose they are doing something of that kind that is a violation of the law. They are liable in civil courts, and the right to sue them exists. But this judge issues an injunction restraining—

From using any and all ways, means, and methods of doing any of the aforesaid forbidden acts and from doing through by-laws—

You see, they will not let them do it by passing a by-law. A union cannot pass a by-law at its meeting that they will do any of these things—by-laws, orders, directions, or suggestions—

You will not even dare make a suggestion—suggestions to committees, associations, officers, agents, or otherwise.

"Otherwise" takes in the whole world, any other way you think of. You could not do it, that is all, without being liable to be sent to jail for contempt of court.

Witness the Hon. George C. Scott, judge of the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of Iowa this 5th day of April, 1930.

LEE McNEELY,
Clerk United States District Court,
Northern District of Iowa.
By VIOLA MARTIN,
Deputy Clerk.

Senators, it seems to be that when such things are done, I think without law, by the judiciary, it is time for us to heed the words of Theodore Roosevelt when he called attention to what we ought to have on the bench. Remember that these men are put on the bench for life. We ought to know from which side they approach these questions. We ought to know whether they have a feeling for the liberty of their fellow men, or whether they are willing to issue injunctions that shall enthrone the men who want to bear down upon those who toil.

SUPREME COURT UPHOLDS ORGANIZED LABOR IN FIGHT ON "COMPANY UNION"

Right of Workers to Designate Own Spokesmen Affirmed—Unanimous Opinion Approves Injunction Obtained by Clerks' Brotherhood Against Southern Pacific Railroad Line.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Washington, May 29.—Organized labor won a big victory when the United States supreme court ruled against a railroad "company union" and upheld the right of employes to designate their own representatives to deal with employers.

The decision was made in affirming an injunction obtained by the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks against the Texas & Pacific railroad, a Southern Pacific line. The injunction, granted by the district court, southern district of Texas, restrained the railroad from interfering with the right of the road's clerical employes to designate their own representatives and organize as they saw fit.

Chief Justice Hughes handed down the opinion of the court, which is considered a severe blow to "company unionism." The opinion was unanimous.

Hits Yellow Dog Contract.

The decision, in the view of trade union authorities and on the basis of preliminary analysis, forecasts the doom of the yellow dog contract in the courts and is therefore regarded as of far-reaching importance.

"The legality of collective action on the part of employes in order to safeguard their proper interests is not to be disputed," Chief Justice Hughes said. "It has long been recognized that employes are entitled to organize for the purpose of securing the redress of grievances and to promote agreement with employers relating to the rates of pay and conditions of work. * * * Such collective action would be mockery if representation were made futile by interference with freedom of choice."

How Case Started.

The case started when suit was brought by the clerks' brotherhood to restrain the railroad company from interfering with, influencing or coercing its clerical employes in organizing and designating representatives for the purposes set forth in the railway labor act of 1926.

The railroad organized a "company union" and attempted to "intimidate" employes into withdrawing from the clerks' union. The district court granted a temporary injunction. The railroad company recognized representatives of the "company union," asserting that they displayed authorizations from a majority of the employes affected.

The company systematically violated the terms of the injunction. Contempt proceedings were brought and the railroad was ordered to disestablish the "company union" and reinstate the Brotherhood of Clerks' representatives. The court also ordered the restoration to duty of discharged employes.

Company Severely Criticized.

In its decision, the court severely condemned the course of the railroad and its officials, saying in part:

"While it is hard to believe that a railroad and its officials would deliberately seek to set at naught both the legislative and the judicial power of the United States it is difficult to avoid the conclusion that the violation of the statute and of the injunction was the result of a strong and settled purpose to defy both."

The injunction was made permanent and the circuit court of appeals affirmed the lower court. The railroad thereupon appealed to the supreme court.

The case was based on a section of the railway labor act providing that "representatives for the purposes of this act shall be designated by the respective parties in such manner as may be provided in their corporate organization, or unincorporated association, or by any other means of collective action, without interference, influence or coercion exercised by either party over the self-organization or designation of representatives by the other."

Authority of Congress Upheld.

In the opinion Chief Justice Hughes said in part:

"We entertain no doubt of the constitutional authority of congress to enact the prohibition (against interference or coercion). The power to regulate commerce is the power to enact all appropriate legislation for its protection and advancement; to adopt measures to promote its growth and insure its safety; to foster, protect and control and restrain.

"Exercising this authority, congress may facilitate amicable settlements of disputes which threaten the service of the necessary agencies of interstate transportation. In shaping its legislation to this end, congress was entitled to take cognizance of actual conditions and to address itself to practical measures.

"The prohibition by congress of interference with the selection of representatives for the purpose of negotiation and conference between employers and employes, instead of being an invasion of the constitutional right of either, was based on the recognition of the rights of both."

Wagner Sees Duty of Government To Cope With Unemployment Evil

Senator Urges Prompt Passage of His Three Bills by House and Declares Only Co-ordinated Strength of Nation Can Deal With Problem of Finding Work for Idle.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Washington, May 29.—Declaring that prevention of unemployment is a distinctly national obligation, Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York, made a strong radio plea for prompt passage by the house of three unemployment bills, which he introduced in the senate and which the senate passed. The senator pointed out that there has been plenty of talk and investigation of unemployment and that the time for speedy action had come.

"These bills can become law in time to prepare the country against next winter's hardships," Senator Wagner contended. "Should the house be denied the opportunity to act on this legislation at the present session, the country will know exactly where to place the responsibility for our lack of economic preparedness when next we undergo another severe attack of acute unemployment.

"Unemployment today is not produced by local causes," Senator Wagner continued. "The forces which make for the shutdown of factories, the curtailment of activity in the mines and on the railroads are forces which operate on a national and world-wide scale.

Individuals Are Helpless.

"The individual workman, the individual business, the state, are helpless when an economic storm breaks upon the country. Only the co-ordinated strength of the entire nation is competent to deal with such powerful economic forces.

"The bills which have passed the senate would have the federal government undertake so much of the job of preventing unemployment as it can most effectively accomplish. The sooner the federal government does its share the sooner will states, municipalities and private industries be in a position to contribute theirs.

"What portion of that task properly belongs to the federal government?

"First: The federal government should collect accurate information of employment, unemployment and part-time employment.

Such Data Fundamental.

"Such information is fundamental. No intelligent effort to control unemployment can be exerted without it. Today we have no such information. The federal government is the agency best equipped to secure it.

"Second: The federal government is always engaged in constructing highways, developing rivers and harbors, erecting flood control structures and public buildings. It should plan these projects in advance and time them so as to make available opportunities for employment when private business slackens.

"Third: The federal government should join with the states in the establishment of a nation-wide system of public employment offices, so as to assist workers to find jobs and to assist employers to find workers with the least amount of delay and with the least amount of friction.

"This is but a bare outline of what the federal government can do towards the prevention of unemployment. It is such a plan which is written into the three bills which have been passed by the senate.

Definite Results Seen.

"If the federal government should begin to exercise these functions certain definite results may be expected. We shall know where we stand from month to month. We shall no longer grope in the dark.

"The information will be useful to the federal government, to the states and municipalities, and to each and every intelligent farmer and business man in the country who will be enabled to guide production of prospective consumption.

"We shall begin to know something about the unemployed. We shall learn what happens to the men displaced by machines and mergers; what is the fate of men who lose their employment after 40. If we know the facts I believe we shall find solutions. As long as we remain in ignorance we never can find a remedy."

WORK OUT OF DOORS INCREASED IN APRIL

Washington, D. C.—The employment situation is not "satisfactory," but there are indications of an improvement in industrial plants the present month and a further expansion of outdoor work, said Francis I. Jones, director employment service of the department of labor.

Curtailed schedules continued in many major industries in April, Mr. Jones said, with "considerable idleness" in some localities. The bright spot was an increase in outdoor activities, he said.

NOTES FROM THE NEWS CHAPEL

By CLAY TIMMONS

Well, the campaign is over, and, as usual, yours truly ran last. My congratulations, hearty and sincere, to the winner, Remy Cuthbert. I couldn't, he could, and I'm glad he won, but I'm going to bounce right back for more.

I'm announcing here and now that my hat's in the ring for next year, regardless of who is in the race or where the convention is to be held, and I'll guarantee to be in there batting for the job from here on out. Also understand that J. W. Growden, Gilded Dome operator, is going to toss his chapeau in the circle. And if the convention goes to Canada, as is the popular opinion, it's going to be a free-for-all, and ye may lay to that.

I take this opportunity to thank the twenty-six friends who voted for me from the bottom of my heart. It was not as the old saying goes that a prophet is not without honor, etc., for my biggest vote came from the News chapel, as was to be expected. I'm coming back for more.

State Education Urged by Teachers

Washington, D. C.—Federal aid to states in their illiteracy fight features a bill introduced in the senate by Mr. George, of Georgia, and in the house by Mr. Hammer, of North Carolina.

The American Federation of Teachers, an A. F. of L. affiliate, objects to the national illiteracy commission's theory that illiteracy can be eliminated by enabling men and women to trace their names. The teachers are assisting in the excellent work now being done in several states to reduce the number of persons in this country who can not read a newspaper. The teachers estimate that these illiterates approximate 20,000,000.

Realizing the poverty of many states where illiteracy is highest, the George-Hammer bill, drafted with cooperation of organized teachers, provides that the federal government appropriate $1,000,000 annually for five successive years to states in proportion to their illiterate population.

Money for this work is now coming from private sources and the unionized teachers insist that public education should be publicly supported.

Stove Workers Fired For Joining Union

Birmingham Concern Denies Right of Men to Organize and Rebuffs Federal Government Mediator.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Birmingham, Ala., May 29.—The Unit Stove and Furniture company, a Birmingham enterprise, has no use for trade unions. Some sixty colored molders employed in this plant recently joined the Molders' union. When Vice-President Leopold of the company found it out the leaders were promptly discharged. As a result all but eight of the workers went out on strike, demanding the reinstatement of the discharged workers on the ground that they had a constitutional right to belong to a labor union chartered by the American Federation of Labor.

The company refused to reinstate the men and George H. Van Fleet, a federal labor commissioner, was sent in by the government to adjust the difficulty. He was told by the management to "beat it" as the company had nothing to discuss, and flatly refused to have any thing to do with the government representative.

Meanwhile the strike is on and the plant is attempting to operate with "green hands." The management denies the right of any of its men to belong to a labor union.

INSURANCE FOR IDLE DOESN'T HARM ENGLAND

Washington, D. C.—English employers do not regard unemployment insurance in that country demoralizing, says a Monthly Bulletin of the United States bureau of labor statistics.

"These employers, in many cases, foster schemes providing for unemployment benefits that supplement those paid under the public system," says the monthly bulletin, which describes several of these plans in its current issue.

Labor Fights Big Railroad Grab Attempt

Stove Employers Paying Unorganized Workers 50 Per Cent of Union Rate Seek Government-Enforced Advantage.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Washington, May 29.—Whether southern manufacturers shall add a freight differential to low wages as a means of capturing northern markets for their output, all at the expense of labor, is the question being fought out in Washington before the interstate commerce commission. The issue bears directly on the American Federation of Labor's southern organizing campaign and puts squarely up to the commission the question of subsidy for non-union manufacturers.

With rate differentials suspended pending decision by the commission, southern railroads appeared this week before the commission which had before it an examiner's report on the situation. The roads applied for a differential on northbound cast iron stoves which, in a shipment between Birmingham and Detroit, for example, would amount to about 40 per cent in favor of the southern manufacturer and shipper. The examiner's report favored the discriminatory rate, but labor entered the hearing to challenge the proposition and to demand abolition of all differentials.

The fight is the West Virginia coal rate fight in a new dress.

Northern railroads and northern stove manufacturers also appeared in opposition to the differential.

John P. Frey, for the Metal Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor, and Robert McCoy, for the International Molders' union, appeared in the case as counsel representing labor. Frey declared to the commissioners that adoption of the differential would be equivalent to allowing the southern states to enact tariff legislation against other states, an argument which appeared to carry much weight.

It was brought out by labor counsel that cast iron stoves are made in the Birmingham district at wages exactly half the wages paid to union stove molders in the organized foundries of the north, and in the organized foundries of the south also. To this 50 per cent lower wage rate the manufacturers would add a 40 per cent freight differential, the whole amounting to a tremendous state-enforced subsidy for anti-union employers, to be paid by railroads whose dividends are guaranteed by the government.

The brutal truth behind the effort to annex the freight rate grab was revealed by an attorney for one of the southern roads when he told the commission plainly that the industry in the south depends upon selling its surplus output in the north and for that purpose "must have" the discriminatory rate and that it was the "duty" of the interstate commerce commission to give this assistance to southern manufacturers.

Southern Liberals Created by Unions

New York, N. Y.—"There will be no liberal movement in the south until there is a labor movement," said John W. Edelman, editor The Hosiery Worker, replying in the Daily News Record to statements by Dr. Robert C. Dexter, secretary social relations department American Unitarian association, which reflect on the unionization campaign in the south.

The Hosiery Worker is the official organ of the American Federation of Full Fashioned Hosiery Workers, a unit of the United Textile Workers. The Daily News Record is a textile publication.

Mr. Edelman asks this paper why reports on the south by the Federal Council of Churches were not featured, as was the Dexter statement.

Dr. Dexter's survey is the result of an 18-day visit in the south. He urges that mill owners be approached "by intelligent persons not connected with the unions." "I can assure Dr. Dexter," says Edelman, "that some of the finest men in America did approach mill owners in Marion and Elizabethton—all to no avail. This has happened in many other cities.

"The need of organizing southern workers is admitted by Dr. Dexter. Therefore, it seems to us poor taste for an ethical advisor to say in the next breath that the trade union movement should desist in its efforts to accomplish what he considers to be a desirable social condition.

"There will be no liberal movement in the south until there is a labor movement. If this statement sounds sweeping we would ask historians to pass an opinion as to whether facts will not bear out this contention."

CHOOL BOYS OUST MEN AT HILL STORES?

d Employes Replaced by Youths, Is Report.

EATCUTTERS WILL RENEW CAMPAIGN

hain Stores Said to Have Again Cut Wages, With Result That "Helpers" Quit Jobs.

An interesting story, and one which fits in well with past policies of the Nashville-owned Hill chain grocery stores, is told this week by representatives of the Meatcutters locked out by ukase of the big chief of the wealthy corporation at Nashville.

It was said that the chain corporation, probably on orders from the Nashville headquarters, notified certain employes this week that wages would be cut to a scale of $15 per week. It was not known whether $15 is the maximum, but belief was expressed that this will be something near the highest pay received by these overworked servants of the Nashville merchant prince. When the announcement was made, the story goes, some of the victims of this low-wage concern were so disgusted that they immediately left their jobs, and it was said that in at least one case it is known a young man who had been receiving the princely salary of $22.50 per week, when notified that his stipend would be cut to $15, immediately resigned and was just as quickly replaced with a public school student who desired some kind of employment during vacation time, and who accepted the position at $8.00 per week. Some of the locked-out meatcutters expressed the opinion that this might become a fixed policy of the Nashville company. An interesting sidelight in the reported situation was furnished by one meatcutter who has a mania for figures. He said that Hill chain-store employes work from 70 to 80 hours per week. Figuring from the maximum, therefore, the $8-a-week young man receives for his hard labor just 10 cents per hour.

Local trades unionists recalled that the local manager of the Nashville stores company testified in city court that wages for store managers" ranged "from $5.00 to $65.00 per week." Asked how many received the higher figure, however, he was silent. If reports are accurate, wage scales in the local stores of the Nashville company have been radically reduced since the meatcutters' lockout. However, it is obvious that not quite so much Chattanooga money is being sent out of the city through this source since the public has been informed of the methods of the Nashville corporation.

However, it's an ill wind that blows nobody good, and in some cases it appears that former Hill store employes have profited by the situation created when the "big boss" decided to turn his old meatcutter employes into the streets. In Rossville, where the Hill business was formerly so great an additional store building was rented to care for the large volume of business, a former Hill store manager is declared to be doing a splendid business of his own near where one of the Hill stores was closed, and one of the locked-out meatcutters is also regularly employed here. In St. Elmo, where another Hill store was recently closed, the former manager has opened a business for himself, and is said to be enjoying a liberal patronage.

Officers of Local 600 said Thursday that the campaign of publicity, which was interrupted to some extent while efforts were being made by outsiders to adjust the controversy with the Nashville boss, will be renewed, and additional pickets will be placed near all local stores of the company. Thousands of stickers explaining the situation were printed this week, and are being distributed throughout the city and surrounding territory.

MANY MACHINES INJURE INDUSTRY

New York.—The hosiery industry is affected by machinery and consequent overproduction. Several large companies have passed dividends that are a result of price cutting and excessive plant production.

Leaders in the industry complain that manufacturers of hosiery knitting machines sold large numbers of machines on easy terms to small mills. Increased output resulted.

Manufacturers agree that production must be restricted and stocks kept within reasonable limits."

MACHINISTS IN JOINT SESSION

Committee Urges Members of Both Local Lodges to Attend the Session.

Call for a joint session of Lodges 56 and 1450, Machinists, has been issued, and a special committee of members from both lodges is urging a large attendance on next Tuesday night at Central Labor hall.

It is understood the session will have to do with plans for the forthcoming shopcrafts convention, which convenes in Chattanooga on Monday, June 23, for several days' meeting. Among the outstanding national labor officials to be guests of the local workers during the convention is A. O. Wharton, president of the International Association of Machinists, and it was said an important communication from Mr. Wharton requires the consideration of every member of both local lodges.

The call for the joint session Tuesday night is signed by Tom F. Hall, chairman; W. F. Lange, W. D. Sively, W. H. Carlisle, W. A. Lance, Harry Kelley, W. L. Wergin, C. W. Pfeiffer and Joe Hardin.

Foreign War Vets Seeking Members

Lookout post, No. 1289, Veterans of Foreign Wars, is conducting an intensive membership campaign throughout the Chattanooga district, with splendid results, according to Alexander Spear, chairman of the drive committee.

Mr. Spear explained that the organization is composed of those who have seen service overseas, and is one of the oldest vets' organizations. Lookout post, he said, has been organized many years, and has accomplished much good for disabled and needy former soldiers of Uncle Sam. It is the purpose of the present drive, he continued, to build the post to such proportions that it will be a credit to the city and the state.

An unusually large number of local members of organized labor are eligible to membership in the veterans' organization, said Mr. Spear, and it is hoped that these will be enrolled practically 100 per cent during the present campaign.

House Members Favor Quota for Mexicans

Washington, D. C.—The Harris bill, that would establish an immigration quota for Mexicans, approved by the senate, was favorably reported by the house committee on immigration and naturalization.

The bill was amended by including administration provisions of the Box bill which specifies that the secretaries of state, commerce and labor shall jointly make the determination of the quota to be applied under the terms of the present immigration act.

The quota is opposed by the department of state on the ground that this legislation might lead to ill feeling between the two countries and would hamper international negotiations on certain important matters, such as flood control on the borders and claims of American citizens against Mexico which involve many millions of dollars.

Opponents of restricted Mexican immigration protest against this competition with American labor, which destroys living standards in the west and southwest.

Porto Rican Kiddies Are Poverty Victims

Washington.—Sixty per cent of Porto Rican children are underfed, said Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., governor of Porto Rico, who is in this city. He urges congress to pass an appropriation of $3,000,000 for hurricane relief in that island.

The restoration of property is necessary, said the governor, who also said that "conditions on the island have never been good because there has never been a general diffusion of prosperity" and conditions have been aggravated by the cyclone.

"Next, we must build up school facilities, for at present only 40 per cent of Porto Rican children can go to school. There are no facilities for the remainder.

"Also, the health situation is desperate. Sixty per cent of the children are underfed. Annually, there are about 40,000 sufferers from tuberculosis, and the death rate from the malady is four and one-half times that of the states."

Trade unionists who are acquainted with economic conditions in Porto Rico point to Gov. Roosevelt's statement of a lack of "general diffusion of prosperity" as the reason for child undernourishment, disease and faulty education.

The island is a victim of merciless absentee landlordism. Wealth is being taken from Porto Rico by American and foreign corporations who refuse to contribute, in the form of taxes, their share of maintaining the government. They have seized the land and driven peasants from the country. These workers are housed in cities and are paid from 40 to 60 cents a day.

NONPARTISAN JOINT BODY TO MEET MONDAY

State Committee to Consider Political Situation.

MUCH SPECULATION AS TO ATTITUDE

Local Unionists Interested in Announcement of Session by Federation and Brotherhood Officials.

Local trades unionists will note with considerable interest the results of deliberations of the nonpartisan political campaign committee of the Tennessee Federation of Labor and the Railroad Brotherhoods, which has been called to meet in Nashville Monday morning.

The meeting Monday is in conformance with suggestion to the committee by the Chattanooga convention of the federation, and much speculation has been indulged as to the probable attitude of the committee with respect to the various races for major state offices. The committee, in its report to the annual session of the federation, indorsed the candidacy of the Hon. Cordell Hull for the United States senate, but action in respect to other races was not taken at that time, and under instructions of the convention the committee was to meet at a later date for further consideration of the situation.

The opinion appears to be general among trades unionists that not in many years has there been a greater need for united action of all progressive groups on the state political field. Issues which will directly affect the masses of the people are in the making or have already matured, and the personnel of state and county representations in the nation and state is looked upon as of vital importance to the whole people.

Because of the position of individual members of the state nonpartisan committee, each of whose duty it is to make a study of political conditions as they affect the workers particularly, action of the committee carries much weight with the rank and file, and while there are naturally at times trades unionists who disagree with the judgment of members in some particular, the decisions always are given every consideration.

The state committee consists of three executive officers of the Tennessee Federation of Labor—Paul J. Aymon, president; W. C. Birthright, secretary, and David Hanly, legislative chairman—and the legislative chairmen of the respective rail brotherhoods—H. V. Reid, Brotherhood of Railroad Firemen and Enginemen, who is chairman of the state committee; Perry E. Daly, Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen; W. E. Jacobs, Order Railroad Conductors, and W. A. Christman, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers.

The committee will be called to order Monday morning at 10 o'clock, at the Labor Temple, Nashville.

Radio Trust Gouges Film Theater Owners

Washington, D. C.—The American Telephone and Telegraph company has charged motion picture theater owners $25,000,000 more than they would have to pay independent manufacturers for the installation of sound equipment, C. C. Colby, of the Audio Research Foundation, told a senate committee.

The witness said the company forced these theater owners to agree to pay an additional $50,000,000 for "service" during the next ten years.

Earnest R. Reichmann, general counsel for the Radio Protective association, and other independent radio interests, told the committee that the Radio Corporation of America and its affiliates have for years tried to create the impression that in some way or other they have received the sanction of the government.

"Now that this propaganda has been disproven by the government's anti-trust suit, the radio monopoly would create the impression that the suit is merely a technical test of some abstruse legal proposition that has no relation to the public interest. This is a further attempt to mislead the trade and the public."

CONSTRUCTION UP

Washington, D. C.—Building operations in the larger cities increased more than 11 per cent in April, as compared with March, according to the United States bureau of labor statistics.

Permits for residential buildings were 8.6 per cent and for non-residential buildings 14.9 per cent higher.

Number of Jobless Remains at Figure Reached in January

April and May Failed to Show Usual Spring Gain and Situation Is Still Serious, A. F. of L. Reports.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Washington, June 4.—Predictions of a speedy improvement in business conditions are not being borne out and the recovery, if there has been any recovery, is so slow as not to be reflected in employment figures. Reports received by the American Federation of Labor show that unemployment among union members is still as serious as in January. There was a very slight improvement in May but so slight as to offer little encouragement.

In making public May figures on unemployment, President Willitm Green of the A. F. of L. said:

"Unemployment reports for May show very little improvement. Trade unions in twenty-four cities had as many still out of work as in the month of January, although there is usually a 27 per cent improvement by this time of year. Our figures show 20 per cent out of work in May as compared to 21 per cent in April (revised figures). The last two months have failed to show the usual spring improvement, due partly to the serious situation in building, and also to the general slow recovery of trade and industry. After the crisis of 1928, improvement from March to May was five times as great as in the same months this year. Last year in May hardly more than half as many union members were out of work, and in metal trades four times as many are unemployed in May this year.

No Gain for City Workers.

"Casual laborers who drift into cities in winter from farms and nearby country towns have now largely found work in agriculture, road building and other outdoor activities. Bread lines are no longer necessary. But of the city wage earners who have been unemployed since January, comparatively few have gone back to work permanently, and others have recently been laid off.

"The largest improvement was in the building trades. The number out of work decreased from 40 per cent in April to 36 per cent in May. But even this change for the better is only half the improvement from April to May after the crisis of 1928, and 44 per cent more building tradesmen are out of work than in May two years ago. In metal trades unemployment increased slightly from April to May, and in printing the same high level holds, with twice as many printers out of work as in May last year. The figures follow:

All trades	20	21	11
Building trades	36	40	26
Metal trades	20	19	5

Census Data Ready Soon.

Rapping the feverish desire of many cities to show that they have made big gains in population, William M. Steuart, director of the bureau of the census, declares that civic authorities and organizations should be more interested in keeping down the unemployment figure in their community than in merely seeing that their city has made numerical progress. These people and organizations should be more solicitous of whether the population is economically secure than if the city has grown, he said.

Unemployment figures will be made public in a short time, Steuart said, but the exact date of beginning these releases and the manner of announcing them will be left to the discretion of Secretary of Commerce Lamont. These figures will be preliminary, he said, and are subject to revision.

High Living Standard Defeats White Plague

Atlantic City.—Good economic conditions and not health prevention societies is the most effective weapon against tuberculosis, said Dr. Shirley W. Wynne, health commissioner of New York, in an address to the New Jersey Hospital association.

"We are trying to take credit for the decline in tuberculosis during the last twenty years," said Dr. Wynne. "Let us not fool ourselves or the public. This is not due to the preventative societies, but to the improved economic conditions under which the American people are now living."

The commissioner attacked the attitude of these societies for their methods in handling cases. He said entirely new methods of combating disease and a more conscientious cooperation on the part of doctors and nurses are necessary to insure the future of public health.

Last fall Dr. Wynne called on housewives to boycott unsanitary stores.

By CHESTER M. WRIGHT
(By International Labor News Service.)

Washington, June 5.—American labor's biggest political campaign in years is in the making at this hour.

The Parker case made the paramount issue and the Shipstead anti-injunction bill is doubling its size.

Labor's national spokesman, President William Green, declares that labor is going into every state where a pro-Parker senator is up for re-election this year to wage a fight to a finish.

Among the outstanding targets of labor's most sizzling fire will be Senator McCulloch, of Ohio.

That means that Ohio, for decades a pivotal fighting ground, will be once more a battle center upon which national attention will focus.

Ohio is President Green's home state and he knows it like a book. He was a state senator in Ohio, in which capacity he secured enactment of the best workmen's compensation law in America.

A. L. of L. to Join Forces.

Not only will state federations of labor marshal their forces to defeat every senator who voted for Parker, but the American Federation of Labor itself will go into those states to lend its aid. This is going to be a fight.

Adding to the fury of the contest will be the record on the anti-injunction bill and the tricky footwork of the senate judiciary committee in referring the measure to the United States attorney-general will not abate the resentment of trade unionists.

"These committee votes count," President Green said. "We regard the action as an unfriendly action."

Was Political Maneuver.

Beyond question the move was a piece of political opportunism. Senators who didn't dare vote against reporting the measure favorably to the senate voted to send it to the attorney-general, hoping, of course, that he would ponder over it until this session of the senate is adjourned.

It was an amazing procedure. To say that trade union leaders were shocked and stunned by the side-stepping puts it mildly.

"We insist upon a vote, for or against," said President Green. A vote will join the issue definitely, but scarcely more definitely than did the side-stepping move, for a count has been entered against every senator who joined in the majority that sent it over to the attorney-general, who is not known as a friend of labor.

Five Joined Opponents.

Five senators who voted for Parker joined in the move to sidetrack the injunction bill. It is to be expected that these five, or those who face the electorate this fall, will come under as hot a fire as can be directed their way.

From President Green on, all along the line, there is boiling, seething resentment; and it doesn't stop at the senate in all cases. There is a feeling which its possessors by no means disguise, that if the administration wanted this bill to pass as badly as it wanted Parker nominated there would have been no tricky reference to the attorney-general.

So the forces are being marshaled for a tremendous electoral battle. It will be a battle of men, not of money. Men, fired with a zeal for freedom, will pour their effort into a campaign in which real issues will be fought out. And in the end, on that inevitable morning after, there will be lame ducks, squawking dismally that they didn't know it was loaded so goshawful heavy!

JOHN S. BOYD BARBER CHIEF

Chosen by Local 415 to Succeed George W. Perry, Resigned to Enter Business

John S. Boyd, one of the most popular tonsorial artists in the Chattanooga territory, was, Monday night, selected by the members of Local 415 to head that organization, replacing George W. Perry, who had resigned when he opened a business of his own.

Mr. Boyd will serve until the regular annual election in January. The new chief is by no means a stranger to the official family of Local 415, his many years of conscientious and able service to the local including several positions of trust in the organization. He is employed at the Star barber shop, Rossville avenue.

BARBER SHOP BLUES

(By Amanuensis)

John Brown, manager of the Read House barber shop, came to the editorial sanctum the week sorely troubled and seeking advice. Invited to unburden his problems on the sympathetic ears of the editor, the old-timer said it was something like this: Now Gaston Helm was a good barber; yea, with many customers up until recently, all males. But (John said) recently Mrs. Helms departed for an extended visit with friends in Birmingham, and since that time the shop's manager (he said) has had many complaints from Cy's old customers, the menfolks claiming they can't get waited on for the large number of lady patrons which Cy has suddenly accumulated. Now John wants to know what to do about it. The subscriber sending in the best solution to the problem will receive a handsomely bound copy of The Labor World, free of charge.

Residents out Wauhatchie-way are said to favor shorter hours for the barbers, so Massey can get in and out of that thriving community without waking all the neighbors in the morning. Massey owns a model X Ford, which is the grand-daddy of them all. He is said to have received several requests from leading historians to place the antique in the Smithsonian institution at Washington, but Massey, being patriotic, intends to place it in the Union depot, beside The General, when a new and larger depot is built. Until then, he says, he needs his "car" for business and pleasure.

The following, then, is printed to keep some of them from cutting said editor's throat: Artie Hester, the best barber in town (says he) is on the first chair; Jimmie Ball, the best barber in town (says he) is on the second chair; J. A. Wilson, the best barber in town (says he) is on the third chair; L. R. Adams, the best barber in town (says he) is on the fourth chair; Mrs. Aileen Norman, the best manicurist in the world (says—says—says all the barbers in the shop), presides over the "beauty department," and Austin, the best shine boy in town (says he) is also on the job.

The following notice was received by The Labor World Thursday, with a request for publication:

The board of barber examiners, located at 201 Cotton States building, Nashville, will be ready to receive applications and issue certificates for the year 1930-31 on June 9, 1930. All barbers in the state must secure license before July 1, 1930.

George T. Garrett, well-known Nashville trades unionist, is chief clerk of the board.

SOCK MILL OWNERS CHIEF OPPONENTS

More Trades Unionists in South Now Than Ever Before, Says Chairman Smith.

(Special Correspondence.)

Birmingham, Ala., June 5.—That the southern organization efforts of the American Federation of Labor have made a deep impress on employers as well as the workers of the south cannot be denied, said Paul J. Smith, chairman of the southern organization committee, in analyzing the last month's work.

"Some employers," he said, "have gladly accepted the organization activities in the spirit in which they have been tendered—a constructive policy intended to help all factors in southern industry. Others, I find, give out the explanation that they have 'No inclination to giving up control of their own business,' whatever that means.

"The latter situation is especially true of those cotton mill owners who have long exploited southern labor for whatever they can get out of it, and who, incidentally, know nothing of the aims and purposes of organized labor. Some of these mill owners are quoted as saying they 'lack faith in union promises' although none of them have tried the faith.

"I noticed recently an article on the Cotton Goods Record which said that 'If it could be assured that labor unions could make good their promises to co-operate fully with the mills, to increase efficiency and to bring about improved conditions generally, there are a number of mill executives who would favor an alliance of this sort.'

"Reading between the lines it can be seen that the mills need more efficiency and improvement in 'conditions generally.' Then why not give organized labor a chance? The mill owners have had things their own way ever since the mills have been established in the south. Yet the industry was never worse off than now. Organized labor has a constructive program for this situation, and yet the mill owners declare they 'are not inclined to give up control of their own business. Nobody has asked them to give up control, but organized labor has asked them to co-operate with the other half of the business—the human element.

"As a matter of fact the mill owners are not interested in the human element only as it connotes dividends. When there are no dividends the first attack is made on the workers' pay and the management looks no further. Until that economic outlook is changed the textile industry will continue on its bankrupt way."

Chairman Smith declared that unusual interest was being manifested in the organization of the textile workers in all parts of the mill regions of the south. Where new local unions are organized the increase in membership has been steady and strong, he said. In some sections, while no outward objection is made to the workers joining a union by employers, the leaders in the activities lose their job on some pretext or another, Mr. Smith said. He said a number of such instances had been brought to his attention.

In analyzing the progress of organization work among other industries of the south, Chairman Smith expressed appreciation of what had been accomplished thus far. He said he was now collecting data on what had been accomplished from the establishment of central bodies to the increase in membership among local unions as a result of the organization activities. "There are more southern workers members of trade unions at the present time than there has been in the history of the south," Mr. Smith said.

TAX REFORM MEASURE SEEKS HIDDEN WEALTH

Springfield, Ill.—The state senate approved a constitutional measure, to be passed upon by the people, which will give the legislature greater latitude in enacting tax laws. The resolution now goes to the house.

"We have a great hidden wealth amounting to something between $15,000,000,000 and $17,000,000,000 which is escaping its share of taxation," said Governor Emmerson, in advocating the amendment.

"The best way to lower taxes is to bring to light this great amount of property which is now paying no part of the cost of government, and forcing it to bear its fair share.

"Under our present revenue system three classes of property owners are being imposed upon—the home owner, the farmer and the small business man."

LABOR QUERIES

Q.—Where is labor considering the question of establishing a daily newspaper?

A.—In Chicago where a committee appointed by President Fitzpatrick, of the Chicago Federation of Labor, is investigating the possibilities of establishing a daily. The committee recently made a preliminary report.

Q.—Who carried Card No. 1 in the Cigar Makers' International union?

A.—Samuel Gompers.

Q.—What did Senator Norris say during the senate debate on the Parker nomination about the danger to liberty from the issuance of injunctions?

A.—"I cannot get away from the idea that if we will not some time, somewhere, put a curb upon the injunctive process of the federal judges the time will come when our boasted liberty will fade away, when chains of human slavery will be fastened upon every man who toils."

What Next!

A German engineer announces he has invented a typewriter which can write up to 1,000 words a minute. The machine is said to attain high speed by printing whole words to be spelled with the pressure of the fingers. The inventor made a study of ordinary business letters and found that 70 per cent of the words used in such letters were the same hundred words written over and over again. Accordingly he worked on the idea of a machine which would print both words and letters. He found 164 keys were necessary to embody ordinary usage and to provide letters for forming other words.

THE SPIRIT'S THE THING

The spirit of a movement is everything; numbers are secondary. When the spirit—the courage, the will to do, the power to initiate, the confidence in one's self and his cause—is destroyed, the effectiveness of the movement ends. These spiritual forces constitute "morale." Morale is given first place by every military scientist. No one is a better judge of the value of morale than men who direct armies upon which the life of a nation—and often a civilization—depends. Napoleon said morale, as compared with all other factors, is, in importance, as three is to one. Marshal Foch, chief of the allied forces in the world war, said: "Proofs and instances could be given indefinitely of the great importance of morale in war."

Military scientists agree that when morale is destroyed an army is disorganized and defeat invariably follows. The power of morale is as true in peace as well as in war. We are told that "the blood of the martyrs is the seed of the church." This is another way of saying that the church grew when men "carried on" regardless of consequences.

Every business man strives to inculcate his organization with this faculty to act, to do, to overcome obstacles, while at the same time working with the organization.

Morale in the trade unions is equally of first importance. A labor organization without spirit is ineffective. It has permitted an invincible power to pass. The larger anti-union employers are alert to the power of morale. They may not be capable—as the military scientist—of explaining this psychological fact, but they know the value of discouraging trade union employes.

Military strategists strive to destroy the morale of their foe by impressing him with the hopelessness of his cause. The anti-union employer has the same objective. He no longer openly combats the union. He weakens its morale by the injunction and by giving workers "something just as good." The substitutes include the company "union," life insurance that the workers are told is free, stock ownership and various forms of paternalism.

These employers act on the military theory that a foe is defeated if he can be impressed with his inferiority if he concedes that he is in a losing fight. The employer knows that victory is largely a matter of will, and that if unionists' will power is snapped, their organization will be weakened and eventually be destroyed.

This new warfare permits anti-union employers to pose as advocates of unionism. They have abandoned force and center their efforts to destroy the workers' will.

Trade unionists should keep in mind the value of morale. Any group of men, whether large or small, who possess a morale, are "on their toes." They are known as "fighters." Any group, be it religious, labor, business, fraternal or military, that is inactive and pleads that "nothing can be done," has no morale. Its spirit is broken and it is unable to be an aggressive unit.

COMPANY "UNION" WRECKED

The U. S. [illegible] court's decision in the case of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks versus the Texas [illegible] railroad, a far-reaching effect on the company "union" [illegible]

The court [illegible] prohibiting the [illegible] from [illegible] with mail [illegible] representatives [illegible] wage cuts. The rail [illegible] organized a company "union" for this purpose and the [illegible] by two lower [illegible] was a violation of the railway labor law.

A voluntary action is impossible under the company "union" system, and the railroad's activities constituted "an unwarranted interference with the liberty of its clerical employes in the selection of their representatives," said Chief Justice Hughes.

The decision is the hardest blow that has been given the company "union." Its pretense is unmasked.

The Brotherhood of Railway Clerks has performed a distinct service to the trade union movement for wrecking this alleged rail "union" that the highest court in the land calls "a mockery."

The moral effect of this decision will undoubtedly be felt in the industrial field.

GRUNDYISM MARCHES ON

Senator Grundy has been overwhelmingly defeated in the Pennsylvania primaries by Secretary of Labor Davis, but the spirit of Grundyism marches on. Grundy, the individual, is driven into private life, but it will take more than one skirmish to defeat the things he typifies.

Grundyism and anti-unionism are identical. Child labor, low wages, long hours and opposition to collective bargaining is another name for Grundyism. This citadel of injustice can not be overthrown by defeating one of its leading defenders.

The foundation of this stronghold must be demolished. This can be accomplished if the workers act with the same grim purpose and determination as when they marched to the polls at the recent Pennsylvania primaries.

WHY THE YELLOW DOG IS YELLOW!

Pertinent and Profound Portions of Addresses in United States Senate Debate on Parker

This is the Third of a Series of Selected Extracts

What is this much-discussed instrument, the anti-union contract? How is it made? What are its uses? What are the effects of its use? I should prefer to discuss it, first, with out regard to its legal status, and to appraise it from the point of view of the layman.

An anti-union contract is sometimes a promise exacted by an employer from an employe not to join a union so long as he remains in his employ. Sometimes it is a condition of employment imposed by the employer that the employe shall refrain from joining the union as long as he is employed. This arrangement is consummated either by having a written instrument to that effect at the time of the hiring or during the course of employment, or by orally informing the applicants for employment that the shop was operated non-union and that all employes were expected not to belong to the union.

The use of this instrument is a very unique one. No employer ever sued any employe for violating it. No employer ever expects to do so. That is not its purpose. Its utility lies solely in the fact that it affords a basis upon which to apply for an injunction restraining anyone from attempting to persuade the employes to unionize.

In a general way that is what occurred in the Hitchman case. That is what occurred in the Red Jacket case. There are differences between the two which I shall discuss later. That is what the company attempted to do in the Interborough cases. Before discussing the legal validity or the legal consequences of this arrangement there are, to my mind, some plain, simple layman reactions to this whole business which ought to be stated.

"I'SE REGUSTED."

The layman understands that every contract is essentially a bargain. Let us now try, if we can, to visualize how this strange bargain, if it be one, comes into being.

How John Smith Feels.

John Smith, an unorganized worker out of work, comes to the factory of the X Y Z Co. in search of a job. He meets the personnel manager, hat in hand. He is told that a job is open, but he is given to understand that the plant operates on a non-union basis and that one can not belong to the union and work there. He understands he is directed to sign a card stating that he will not join a union so long as he is employed by the X Y. Z Co. He signs. What else can he do? Is he to refuse the job because of the curtailment of a possible right in the exercise of which he has no present interest? Can he hope to persuade the smart-looking personnel director that the contract interferes with what he regards as an inalienable right freely to associate with whomever he pleases? And if he should fail by persuasion, can he possibly hope to change his employer's attitude by holding out? Every day it costs money to live and every day's labor lost is gone forever beyond recovery. There is the job, together with its terms. Take it or leave it and go hungry. Of course, he takes it.

To jobless John Smith it does not occur at the time that he is consenting to an arrangement which will render him powerless ever to insist on better terms of employment. And if it does occur to him, there is nothing he can do about it.

All this is but another way of saying that between the large employer and the unorganized worker there is such a disparity and inequality of bargaining power that the talk of a contract between them arising out of the free assent of the two parties is as fictitious but not as harmless as the old Mother Goose rhymes.

Smith's rejecting the job means nothing to the X Y Z Co. If Smith will not have it Brown will. To Smith it means rent, food, clothing, and schooling for his children. The employer can afford to wait until his terms are met. Smith cannot wait. His employer knows conditions; knows whether employment is plentiful or scarce; knows what he wants and knows how to get it.

(Part II will be published next week.)

The Passing Show

Note and Comment on Things Doing in the March of Events

It takes money to deal with unemployment, Senator Wagner, of New York, told a senator who objected on ground of cost to his bill providing for an adequate free employment service, nation-wide in scope. The bill is one of three for the relief and prevention of unemployment introduced by Senator Wagner and passed by the senate.

"Let me say that if we want to solve this subject of unemployment, if the government is to do anything toward its solution, it has to create the machinery and select the personnel to perform that work," Senator Wagner said. "That costs money; but let me say that if, as a result of this legislation, a million men can be brought to the job one day sooner—and that is an exceedingly conservative estimate—assuming that the average earning per day is $4, which is also a small average, a million men brought one day earlier to a job would save the nation $4,000,000 directly in salaries, besides the wealth which these employes create during that particular day."

It does cost money to fight unemployment, but the gains from effective action far outweigh the cost, as Senator Wagner pointed out. Unemployment is a great and widespread evil and trying to remedy it by feeble, piffling methods won't work. Decisive action on a large scale is imperative.

Senators didn't like dial telephones in the capitol and senate office building and ordered them taken out. Senator Glass and others said the dial telephones increase unemployment, which very likely is true. The same charge was made in the house.

Congress has not shown any great interest in unemployment caused by machines. Now that senators and representatives don't care to operate the dial phones, they indict them on the ground that they throw wage earners out of work. This is true of other new machines and processes, yet congress has displayed no great excitement over the matter. Only when machines touch them personally, do they make the welkin ring with denunciations of machine-created unemployment. It seems to make a difference whose ox is gored, as was said some thousands of years ago.

The American progressive committee for the support of Il Nuovo Mondo, Italian labor daily of New York, has been formed with Clinton S. Golden as treasurer. The address is 81 East Tenth street, New York City.

Il Nuovo Mondo, established in 1925, has fought a good fight against Fascism. It is the only pro-labor and anti-Fascist daily for Italians living in the United States. The other Italian dailies are subservient to the Mussolini regime. Il Nuovo Mondo was a leader in the opposition to the Fascist League of North America and was instrumental in causing the disbandment of the organization, which sought to make all Italians supporters of the Fascist tyranny.

The paper has been maintained at great sacrifice by the devotion of a group of Italian trade unionists and progressives with some help from well-known Italian liberals. At present the paper is in need of help and the committee named in the foregoing is sponsoring the raising of a $15,000 promotion fund for Il Nuovo Mondo to make possible an aggressive campaign for subscriptions and advertisements. The paper has done much to expose the evils of Mussolini's dictatorship and deserves the support of friends of democracy and progress.

Tribute is paid to Henry F. Hilfers, nationally known as a trade unionist thinker and leader, by the Newark (N. J.) Star-Eagle, which says words worth repeating, as follows:

"Demand by Henry F. Hilfers, of this city, organizer for the American Federation of Labor, that there should be a frank and fair expose of irregularities, if any, which may have been practiced by labor leaders, accords with the principles which govern the body he represents.

"Through a long career as a labor leader he has built up a clean record. Like the federation, he has battled for fair treatment of labor, willing to reciprocate with fair treatment of employers by labor. It is logical therefore that when charges are made against some labor leaders he should resent any implication that the condition is general.

"The decent element of union labor in general undoubtedly will be gratified if leaders who may have exploited them can be exposed. It is to the advantage of laboring men that any leaders who manipulate the general body of their organizations for their own selfish ends should be driven from power.

"The most general complaint in this territory has been about conditions in the building and allied trades. The suspicion there is reason for it is evidenced by the intervention of federal agents in the situation.

"The aim of Mr. Hilfers is, in substance therefore, one which will redound to the benefit of labor in general and the prosperity of the country."

A new phase in grade crossing accidents developed in the southern district of Illinois when a court decision awarded $10,000 damages to a railroad against the owner of a truck who drove his vehicle in front of a freight train, overturning the locomotive and five freight cars.

This is a distinct reversal of the idea that the railroad company is always wrong. Thousands of railroad grade crossing accidents have occurred because of careless drivers who never seem to learn that there is more room behind a moving train than there is in front of it—and infinitely more safety.

Technically the auto driver contributes in all cases—and so does the railroad. Also do the people of every state and nation contribute to deaths and accidents where the grade crossing is allowed to continue as a death trap.

The railroads hailing this decision as a victory will still more stubbornly resist all efforts toward abolishing deadly grade crossings—profits always first, human safety last. Some day the people will arouse and stop this slaughter.

The three Wagner bills for the relief and prevention of unemployment have passed the senate and are now before the house. Well founded reports say that house "Old Guard" leaders will do all they can to prevent passage of the bills. This is taken to mean they will not be allowed to come to a vote in the house.

Enemies of the Wagner bills have made a bad mistake if they think they have popular support in opposing the measure. The bills have met with nation-wide approval. There is a feeling that there has been talk enough in congress about unemployment and that the time has come for action.

The Wagner proposals are not new. They have been discussed and studied for ten years. They have been indorsed by organized labor and other progressive elements. They are in line with the constructive program favored by President Hoover for dealing with unemployment. It is almost unthinkable that the country should be allowed to face another depression without the protection of the bills, simply because of the opposition of reactionary forces in the house of representatives.

Let no worker fool himself that the defeat of an individual will check the army of wrong. Such individual is quickly replaced by one who is less frank in his defense of injustice. The system continues.

Go to your Union Meetings

Don't say you are too tired; the weather is bad; or there is too much quibbling and "hot air" to interest me.

Every time you miss a meeting and leave it to the other fellow to look out for your interest, you are doing an injustice both to yourself and your organization.

Your views on especially vital subjects should be represented in discussion and by vote, and the only way for this to be done is for you to be at your union meeting.

You are responsible for the good and welfare of your organization, and non-attendance of union meetings on your part is not excuse enough for you to voice your opinion after a measure has been passed. It is then time for you to concur in what has been done and work in harmony with the officers and other members of your union.

Go to your union meetings regularly and induce others to do the same, because one important thing to remember is the meaning of the slogan:

"United we stand, Divided we fall."

JURY FINDS STRIKEBREAKER COMMITTED NO CRIME WHEN HE KILLED TRADES UNIONIST

(By Staff Correspondent.)

Philadelphia, June 5.—A jury of twelve typical Philadelphia citizens has said it is all right for a strike-breaker to shoot and kill a trade unionist in the streets of this city. William Pfeiffer, brazen, red-haired, callow little strikebreaker from the Aberle mills, was aquitted of having murdered Carl Mackley, union hosiery worker, on March 6.

It is a foregone conclusion now that the three companions of Pfeiffer, Walter and Preston Kane and Daniel D'Acenzo, strikebreakers riding with him, who also pumped bullets into the Mackley car, will now be freed. William Zimmerman, union hosiery knitter riding with Mackley on the night of the shooting, was seriously wounded; John Cooper was wounded, and the fourth man in the car, Walter Morrow, escaped death by a miracle.

Officers and members of the American Federation of Full Fashioned Hosiery Workers were stunned at the verdict. A manslaughter verdict and a jail term of at least twenty years was the smallest sentence that was expected.

Case Was Remarkable.

The case was one of the most remarkable in many ways that has ever been fought in a city criminal court. Of the large staff of lawyers attached to the office of district attorney in Philadelphia it is known that only one man was willing to interest himself in prosecuting the strikebreakers. And in his concluding remarks to the jury Assistant District Attorney Gordon charged that the weight of the police department was thrown on the side of strikebreakers and that the district attorney's office had to fight its own detectives in order to get all the data on which to base a successful prosecution.

It was noted that throughout the case the police were friendly towards Defense Lawyer Edward A. Kelly, Vare chieftain and political boss, and were hostile towards the prosecutor's office which has fought the Vare faction here. It was noted that Milton Room, junior defense council, attorney for H. C. Aberle and other anti-union employers in this city in their fights with organized labor, had the ready co-operation of the police. It is a notorious fact that the Bell detective agency, active against the union, hires policemen who get into trouble because of favoritism towards employers or the like.

In his charge to the jury Judge Samuel Reed from Cambria county, sitting in the city here because of a shortage of local judges, clearly enough indicated to the jury that there could be no thought that there was sufficient provocation in anything that the union men had done during the strike to have caused the taking of a human life. Lawyers believed the charge definitely favored a second degree murder or manslaughter verdict.

Tells of "Brain Convulsion."

Medical experts proved that Mackley met his death from a bullet fired from the gun out of which Pfeiffer fired seven bullets into the unionists' car. The three men riding with Pfeiffer took the stand as did Pfeiffer and all told stories amazing in their similarity and planning. Pfeiffer described having suffered "a convulsion of the brain" as the Mackley car pulled in front of him and how he put up his gun, which was carried in a holster strapped to his steering rod, and he fired to "attract the attention" of a police officer who was directing traffic in the thoroughfare less than a stone's throw from the point where the car stood.

The strikebreakers' whole case was based on the plea that they shot after the windshield in their car had been shattered by some missile which was never identified, which came from no one knew where, but which was variously suggested to have been a bolt or a hammer which Mackley is supposed to have tried to pick up just before the firing began.

Evidence showed that the four boys had left the mill with a whole box full of ammunition on the seat of their auto in addition to the cartridges in the guns. All of them carried their guns on their laps. Two of the accused men said that they had been passed by a car in which were some men they thought were strikers before the shooting took place. None of them could testify that their lives had been directly threatened before the killing.

Right or Wrong Ignored.

The whole case simply suggests the conclusion, observers here say, that any group of plain citizens in this town, seeing the representative of the political power of this city with the police solidly lined up back of him fighting to acquit a man will simply do as they feel the ruling element wishes them to do, apart from any right or wrong in the matter. The outcome of this case, it is suggested, is simply the logical outcome of the hopelessly supine attitude of the people of Philadelphia for the past two generations in all civic matters. Rotten politics has rotted the moral fibre of the people.

BIG MAIL ORDER HOUSE SEEKS TO WIN BACK PUBLIC FAVOR

By JOSEPH A. WISE.

Chicago, June 5.—The Julius Rosenwald fund has announced a gift of $75,000 to finance a study of the causes of sporadic and seasonal unemployment in the Philadelphia area. The study will be made by the department of industrial research of the Wharton school of the University of Pennsylvania.

Rosenwald, principal owner and chairman of the board of Sears, Roebuck & Co., non-union Chicago mail order house, is not spending any money to investigate the acute unemployment situation in this city. Were he to start such an investigation in Chicago attention might be directed to the status of the hundreds of former employes of Sears, Roebuck & Co., who were thrown out of work when the printing plant of that firm was put out of business following the turning over of a $30,000,000 printing contract to the unfair R. R. Donnelley Sons company last March. Many of these former employes of the "philanthropic" Rosenwald are still walking the streets vainly seeking work.

The probable reason that Rosenwald is spending $75,000 for such an investigation at Philadelphia is that the eastern headquarters of Sears, Roebuck & Co. are located in that city and that the firm is keenly feeling the public disfavor into which it has fallen in that territory since the adoption of a non-union policy.

Philadelphia is the distributing center for the eastern states for the mail order business of Sears, Roebuck & Co., just as Dallas, Tex., serves that purpose for the southwest and Seattle and Los Angeles the far northwest and Pacific coast regions.

The huge catalogues for each of these branch mail order houses are now being printed under the worst possible non-union conditions. Also the printed matter for the chain of 315 retail stores operated by this firm is being executed under the same conditions.

Rosenwald will have acquired a great bargain if he can regain the good will of the people of Philadelphia and adjacent territory at the cheap rate of $75,000. All of Rosenwald's "charities," for which he is world famous, are designed with an eye to their advertising value as business getters and incidentally to create an aura of sanctity about his head.

In a further effort to overcome widespread unfavorable public opinion, the general offices of Sears, Roebuck & Co., in this city, have announced that they will inaugurate the five-day week for their Chicago mail order employes for the months of July and August. Employes of the 315 retail stores will receive a weekly half holiday during the designated period. The announcement is ambigous as to what the mail order employes of the firm at Philadelphia, Dallas, Seattle and Los Angeles are to expect in this connection.

It is safe to conjecture that none of these employes would have received this concession at this time if the labor policy of Sears, Roebuck & Co. had not become a national scandal through the medium of the labor press.

Telephone Workers Are Proud of Their Chosen Vocation

At the close of the day's work telephone men and women have the satisfaction of knowing that they have had an important part in rendering an essential service to their fellow citizens.

In the Southern Bell System 23,600 of them, working as a highly skilled team, complete 8,000,000 local calls and 100,000 long distance calls every day and maintain more than 4,200,000 miles of wire, serving more than 1,000,000 telephones.

A job of this magnitude could be so well done only by intelligent, experienced workers who have a pride in their vocation and a sincere interest in the welfare and happiness of the communities they serve.

The courtesy and cooperation of the telephone folks who serve you is an expression of the desire of the entire telephone organization to render to the public the best possible service at the least possible cost.

SENATORS PREVENT ACTION ON ANTI-INJUNCTION BILL

Judiciary Committee Refers Proposed Legislation to Attorney-General, Blocking Further Consideration of Measure at Present Session of Congress.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Washington, June 5.—In an apparent attempt to delay action on the revised Shipstead anti-injunction bill, the senate judiciary committee has referred the measure to the attorney-general for an opinion on its constitutionality.

The committee's action means that no further action will be taken on the bill at this session, according to Senator George W. Norris, of Nebraska, chairman of the committee and supporter of the bill. The move of the committee amazed trade unionists and resulted in a strong statement by President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, who assailed the action as an "obvious desire to delay action on the proposed legislation."

The committee voted 8 to 4 on a motion by Senator Stewer of Oregon to refer the bill to the attorney-general. This action followed a vote in which fourteen members of the committee were divided, seven to seven, on reporting it favorably to the senate.

How Senators Voted.

Senators voting to refer the bill to the attorney-general were: Deneen (Rep.), of Illinois; Gillett (Rep.), of Massachusetts; Robinson (Rep.), of Indiana; Stewer; Waterman (Rep.), of Colorado; Hastings (Rep.), of Delaware; Overman (Dem.), of North Carolina, and Stephens (Dem.), of Mississippi. Those voting "nay" were Senators Borah (Rep.), of Idaho; Blaine; Ashurst (Dem.), of Arizona, and Norris. Senators not recorded on this vote were: Hebert (Rep.), of Rhode Island; Walsh; Caraway (Dem.), of Arkansas, King (Dem.), of Utah, and Dill (Dem.), of Washington.

Fourteen of the seventeen committee members had been recorded on the motion to report the bill favorably when the motion to recommit was made. Those favoring a report were: Norris, Blaine, Walsh, Caraway, Dill, Ashurst, Borah. Those against were: Waterman, Hebert, Hastings, Stephens, Gillett, Stewer and Overman. Senators King, Deneen and Robinson had not been recorded on this motion.

Senator Norris issued a statement on the committee's action, in which he cited the history of the Shipstead measure and said in conclusion:

"At a meeting of the committee a motion was made to refer the bill to the attorney general, although during the entire two years, when the bill has been before the committee, no one has even suggested that such reference be made. Upon the vote upon this motion, the matter was referred to the attorney-general. The practical effect of all this is that the bill has been postponed by action of the committee and it is fair to assume that no further consideration will be given it by the committee during this session of congress."

President Green said in his statement:

"To the utter amazement of the officers and members of organized labor a majority of the members of the senate judiciary committee voted to refer the anti-injunction bill to the attorney-general of the United States. Not even an obscure reason was assigned for this unprecedented action. All members of the senate judiciary committee who voted to refer to the attorney-general this injunction relief bill in which labor is tremendously interested are eminent attorneys who have acquired high legal attainments.

"The friends of this injunction relief bill are of the opinion that the action of the committee was prompted by an obvious desire to delay action on this proposed legislation and thus prevent its passage before the adjournment of congress.

"There is an intense public interest in this measure. The discussion upon the 'yellow dog contract' upon the floor of the United States senate recently has intensified and aroused public interest. Labor has been promised relief from the abuse of the use of the writ of injunction through the declarations contained in both political platforms.

"This injunction relief bill has been pending before congress for two years. No piece of legislation has been so thoroughly studied and investigated. Numerous hearings have been held and the proposed bill represents the best judgment of an eminent sub-committee of the judiciary committee made up of Senators Norris, Walsh and Blaine.

"It is the purpose of labor representatives to call upon the senate judiciary committee to meet its responsibilities and vote upon a final report of the anti-injunction bill without further delay."

Building Industry Favors Strike Ban

Washington, May 7.—"There should be no strikes by any trade in the building trades industry to enforce jurisdictional claims for the next 90 days."

This far-reaching and record-making recommendation was made by representatives of the National Association of Building Trades Employers and the building trades department, A. F. of L., at a conference in this city.

The parties held several conferences to reach an agreement on the elimination of these strikes. Another meeting will be held not later than July 28. The building trades department will instruct presidents of affiliates to suggest, within 30 days, amendments to the proposed anti-strike plan.

Representatives of the building trades department who aided in the tentative agreement were: President McDonough, Vice-Presidents Arthur M. Huddell, Stationary Engineers; John J. Hynes, Sheet Metal Workers; L. P. Lindelof, Painters; P. J. Morrin, Structural Iron Workers; Wm. J. McSorley, Lathers, and H. H. Broach, Electrical Workers, and Secretary Wm. J. Spencer.

Study of Accidents Proposed in House

Washington.—The house committee on labor made a favorable report on a bill that would create a division of safety under the department of labor to study accidents, disseminate facts and encourage preventive measures.

The proposal has been urged by organized labor and has the indorsement of Secretary of Labor Davis.

In his letter to the committee, Mr. Davis estimates that the probable annual number of industrial deaths range from 12,500 to 35,000, and the number of disabling accidents approximate 2,453,000. The annual wage loss, he said, is at least $1,000,000,000. Compensation paid to these workers approximates $200,000,000 annually, leaving workers bear four-fifths of the economic burden. This is aside from their suffering.

Wage Workers Tricked To Buy Life Insurance

Vancouver, B. C.—Anti-union employers in this city are inducing workers to donate 15 cents a week for a $1,000 life insurance, which will be increased to $3,000 after ten years' service.

The employers claim they contribute, but fail to state the amount. They also fail to state that they can discharge for any reason or no reason during these ten years.

Employes of the anti-union Morris packing plant in Chicago had a bitter experience along these lines several years ago. They were induced to shun the union, accept low wages and contribute to a pension fund. When the company was taken over by a competitor, these employes asked for a court order to compel the company to fulfill its promises. The court refused, but ordered a return of contributions made to the fund by employes. Many of these workers were employed for twenty years at low wages, and remained outside the union in the belief that they would secure a pension.

PICTURE PAINTING WON'T END IDLENESS

Denver, Col.—Painting rosy pictures and optimistic talk won't end unemployment, said Dr. John A. Ryan of Washington in an address to the Catholic conference on industrial relations in this city.

Over production is the cause of unemployment and clever phrases can not conceal the result of machine installation, he said.

"Money to buy goods must exist not merely for the well-to-do, but for the masses. Workers must have high wages in order to make effective their demand for goods. Increased power to consume must be extended to the only class which possess in large measure the unsatisfied desire to consume.

"Instead of seeking to arouse new wants in the jaded appetites of the rich and well-to-do, why not supply the proper and reasonable wants of the toiling masses?"

April Building in Chief Cities Shows 11 Per Cent Gain Over March

(By International Labor News Service.)

Washington, June 5.—According to reports received by the bureau of labor statistics of the United States department of labor from 285 identical cities having a population of 25,000 or over, there was an increase of 11.1 per cent in total building operations in April, as compared with March.

The estimated cost of all building operations in these 285 cities in April was $179,891,611, compared with $161,910,584 in March. There was an increase in indicated expenditures for residential building of 8.2 per cent and for non-residential building of 14.9 per cent.

According to permits issued during April 12,676 families were provided with dwelling places in new buildings. The permits issued during the month of March indicated that 11,669 families would be provided with dwelling places in new buildings in these 285 cities. This is an increase of 8.6 per cent over March.

Increases in total building operations were shown in every district except the New England states and the mountain and Pacific states. There was an increase of expenditures for residential building in the New England states, middle Atlantic states, west north central states, and mountain and Pacific states.

The club will meet at Deuberry dining room, at the usual hour of 7 o'clock.

DISCUSS PLANS FOR THE FUTURE

Central Body Holds Busy Session—Barber Shop Placed on "Unfair List."

One of the busiest sessions in recent months kept a large attendance of delegates to Central Body in session until after 10 o'clock Monday night.

Although two or three pending matters required some time for disposal, they were of such nature that no publicity is desired at this time.

After investigating complaint of several crafts against a new barber shop recently opened on Chestnut street by C. C. Lawson, the executive board made report, and following discussion the delegates formally declared the shop "unfair."

Delegates from the Meatcutters reported the campaign of publicity against the cheap-labor Hill chain grocery stores had been renewed, and, thanking brother unionists for their hearty support in the past, urged its continuance in their battle for a fair deal from the Nashville concern.

"Good of the Order" developed several plans for the future which indicate a busy and prosperous session ahead for the entire local movement, and the splendid spirit displayed by the number of delegates participating in the discussions demonstrated that progress of the past has created a confidence in the future.

The state political situation had its part in the deliberations, and it is believed that a foundation is being laid which will insure the proper participation of the workers in the coming elections.

To Honor Ben Tillett On His 70th Birthday

Widespread Interest Shown in National Tribute to Be Paid Veteran British Labor Man in September.

(By International Labor News Service.)

London, June 12.—A national birthday tribute will be paid Ben Tillett, veteran British trades unionist and labor member of parliament, on his seventieth birthday in September.

The organizers of the testimonial have constituted an informal committee representing all sections of the trade union movement, including Tillett's colleagues on the Trade Union Congress General council. The project has awakened an immediate response in the organized movement and many unions have contributed generously.

Numerous individual contributions have also been received from members of parliament, and others, and the list is a striking indication of the widespread interest taken in the tribute it is proposed to pay Tillett. Among the first of the contributors was Prime Minister MacDonald. In the circular issued by the testimonial committee it is recalled that Tillett began to serve the workers' cause nearly fifty years ago: "In trade union organization and propaganda, in socialist activities and in labor politics he has played the part of a pioneer. No man living has contributed more, by single-handed effort, to the all-round development of the labor movement. He brought to its service a wonderful gift of eloquence, sincere comradeship, courage and organizing ability. In loyalty and devotion he has never wavered. Our movement has had from him the best that he could give. In the evening of his days we wish to pay him this national tribute, not by way of reward, but as a manifestation of our affection and esteem, and in gratitude for what he has done."

HOUSE VOTES LEASE FOR MUSCLE SHOALS

Washington, D. C.—The house rejected the senate proposal for government operation of Muscle Shoals, long urged by Senator Norris.

The house favored leasing the nitrate and power properties on the Tennessee river to private interests, through a leasing board appointed by the president.

The house vote is a reversal of two years ago, when government operation was favored.

State Committee Submits Results Of Investigations

Political Races Reviewed by Representatives of the Workers—Point Out Official Shortcomings of Governor and Commend Gwin to Consideration of Voters---Light Thrown on Records of Various Candidates in State and National Offices in Both Democratic and Republican Primaries.

Unquestioned drift toward the candidacy of Senator L. E. Gwinn for the democratic nomination for governor was reflected in the action of the non-partisan political campaign committee of the Tennessee Federation of Labor and the Railroad Brotherhoods, which met in Nashville Monday and Tuesday.

Although condemnation of the official acts of Gov. Horton was inevitable, there had up until the last few weeks been some doubt as to whether the labor representatives would make formal indofsement of the candidacy of any aspirant, but the growing strength of Mr. Gwinn convinced the committee, evidently, that citizens of Tennessee are tired of Hortonism and are rallying to the support of the West Tennessean.

The report of the committee declares that the present executive has clearly indicated that he has no sympathy whatsoever with affairs and problems that are vital to the workers. "On the other hand," the report says, "he has at every opportunity shown a spirit to want to crush and subdue every effort made by the workers to better themselves."

Attention is again called to the illegal use of troops at Elizabethton, for which the governor was "publicly rebuked by the secretary of war."

The committee declares that public utterances and statements by Mr. Gwinn convince the members that he is "infinitely preferable to Gov. Horton," and commends him to the consideration of labor voters.

Indorsement of the Hon. Cordell Hull for the full term, United States senate, follows similar action by officials of the American Federation of Labor and the Railroad Brotherhoods.

Others whose records, if any, are briefly reviewed by the state labor representatives are: Senator John R. Neal, Hon. Andrew L. Todd, Hon. Joseph W. Byrns, Hon. David M. Dodson, Hon. W. E. Brock, Hon. Benton McMillan, Hon. Harvey H. Hannah, Hon. C. Arthur Bruce, Hon. Harry E. Burn, Hon. Todd Meacham, Maj. Paul E. Devine and Hon. J. W. Stone.

With respect to Senator Brock, the committee declares the most important matter upon which the Chattanoogan has been called upon to vote since he was named by Gov. Horton to succeed Hon. L. D. Tyson was the confirmation of Judge Parker, in which case Senator Brock voted "right."

The report, in full, follows:

In accordance with the authority vested in this committee by our respective organizations, we hereby submit our report and recommendations in the coming primary elections for governor, United States senator, long and short terms, and public utilities commissioner.

Governor—Democratic Primary.

Gov. Horton's official acts as speaker of the senate during the 1927 session of the general assembly and as governor since the death of Gov. Peay have clearly indicated that he has no sympathy whatsoever with the affairs and problems that are vital to the workers, both organized and unorganized, in the state. He has never at any time, in a public utterance or otherwise, so far as we know, expressed a desire to do anything that would be of benefit to the great masses of men and women who are employed in the various industrial and agricultural pursuits in Tennessee. On the other hand, he has at every opportunity shown a spirit to want to crush and subdue every effort made by the workers to better themselves, even going to the extreme of hiring the state militia to private corporations to be used to break a strike and allowing the corporation to pay the members of the militia, to be later reimbursed by the state. He was publicly rebuked for this act by the late United States secretary of war, James W. Good.

This committee is convinced, from its observation of the attitude and acts of Gov. Horton, that if he is again elected governor, we can hope for nothing but continued oppression of the working men and women in Tennessee, and we therefore urge our people and their friends to go to the polls on August 7 and do all in their power to defeat him.

Gov. Horton is being opposed in the gubernatorial primary by L. E. Gwinn, of Shelby county, and George M. Dunn, of Washington county, with the race apparently between Horton and Gwinn. We are convinced from his public utterances and his statements to this committee that Mr. Gwinn is infinitely preferable to Gov. Horton.

We therefore commend Gwinn to the membership of our respective organizations and urge that they and our friends throughout the state vote for him on Aug. 7.

United States Senator—Full Term.

Hon. Cordell Hull is now and has been for many years a member of congress, representing the Fourth congressional district of Tennessee.

On the record he has made by his vote on labor legislation he has been indorsed by the national legislative representatives of the Transportation Brotherhoods and the legislative representatives of the American Federation of Labor.

The Fourth congressional district of Tennessee is predominantly agricultural in its population. It contains a small number of organized workers. Therefore there was no political pressure to urge him to vote in favor of labor legislation.

We therefore indorse Hon. Cordell Hull as the democratic nominee for United States senator in the primary of that party, to be held on August 7, 1930. We call upon the organized workers and their friends to vote and work for his nomination.

John R. Neal.

John R. Neal has served two terms in the Tennessee legislature, one in the house of representatives and one in the senate, and has been active in the political and public affairs of Tennessee for the past twenty years. He has at all times, both as a member of the Tennessee house and senate, and since that time, been the friend of organized labor and of the common people. He is eminently worthy the confidence of every working man and woman in Tennessee, and if he should be elected to either the short or long term in the United States senate, we are confident that the interests of the people would be safe and secure in his hands.

Hon. Andrew L. Todd.

Hon. Andrew L. Todd has served as a member of both the senate and the house of representatives in the general assembly of Tennessee. He has served as speaker of the senate and house. As a member of both the senate and the house, his record was for the most part favorable to the corporate interests and against labor legislation.

Hon. Joseph W. Byrns.

Hon. Joseph W. Byrns, of Davidson county, is now a member of congress from the Sixth district, being elected first in 1908. Mr. Byrns has a record friendly to labor.

David W. Dodson.

David W. Dodson has no record as a public official.

United States Senator—Short Term—Hon. W. E. Brock.

Hon. W. E. Brock was appointed by Gov. Horton as United States senator to serve out the unexpired term of Senator L. D. Tyson, deceased.

The most important matter on which he was called upon to vote was on the confirmation of Judge Parker. Senator Brock voted against confirmation. He is a manufacturer of candy at Chattanooga, Tenn.

Hon. Benton McMillin.

Hon. Benton McMillin has been an active figure in politics in Tennessee for many years. While governor of Tennessee he signed the first child labor law passed in this state. He was a friend of the late William Jennings Bryan and has always been aligned with the progressive element in the democratic party.

Railroad and Public Utilities Commissioner, Democratic Primary.

Hon. Harvey H. Hannah is the only candidate in the democratic primary for this office.

Republican Primary—Governor.

C. Arthur Bruce, of Memphis, and Harry G. Burn, of Sweetwater, have been qualified as candidates for governor in the republican primary.

United States Senator.

Major Paul E. Divine, of Johnson City, is a candidate for both the full term and the short term for United States senator in the republican primary.

Todd Meacham, of Chattanooga, is a candidate for the short term. Mr. Meacham has no record as a public official.

Major Paul E. Divine is a friend of labor.

Railroad and Public Utilities Commissioner.

J. W. Stone, of Rockwood, and Harry G. Burn, of Sweetwater, have been qualified as candidates for this office in the republican primary.

Study of Draft Plan For Property Voted

Washington.—A commission to consider amendment of the constitution to provide taking over private property by congress in time of war, was voted by the senate.

The resolution declares "that said commission shall not consider and shall not report upon the conscription of labor."

Such study of conscription of labor is unnecessary, as the principle was finally established in the world war by an act of congress.

The resolution as presented called for a study of a constitutional amendment that will provide that "private property may be taken by congress for public use without profit during war."

On motion of Senator Dill the words "without profit" were stricken out.

"INSIDERS" AWARE SLUMP WAS COMING

New York.—"Next July will mark one year of declining business," says a local financial journal. "The beginning of the turn downward in business dates from last July, although the depression did not gain momentum until six months or so ago."

This statement should be of interest to those who accepted stock market announcements between July and November, when the crash started, that this country was entering on a new business era.

While the public was gambling in stocks, the "insiders" were unloading—and then the inevitable happened.

"ECONOMY" STOPS EMPLOYMENT STUDY

By International Labor News Service.

Washington, June 12.—The United States bureau of labor statistics, United States department of labor, whose work has been supported by organized labor, must drop thirty-two employes before July 15 because congress has not continued an appropriation of $37,000. The announcement was made by Commissioner Ethelbert Stewart, of the bureau, who explained that the appropriation was for use in a study of employment throughout the country.

STAGE SET FOR BIG MEETING

Southern Shopcrafts to Entertain National Officials at Convention Beginning June 23.

Plans for the entertainment of delegates and visitors to the convention of Federated Shopcrafts of the Southern and Allied Lines, which meets in Chattanooga for several days beginning June 23, are progressing nicely, according to local committeemen, and a real welcome will be extended.

Outstanding officials of each craft are scheduled for a place on the program, and some of the crafts are planning individual entertainment for their respective officials.

A committee named by the machinists at a joint session of the two local lodges Tuesday night has scheduled a great mass meeting for all local machinists, union and non-union, on the night of the 24th, to be addressed by A. O. Wharton, president of the international association, who has a national reputation as an outstanding labor official and one of the best speakers in the movement. Other plans are being made for the entertainment of Mr. Wharton as well as officials of the other crafts to be represented, and the tentative program includes participation by officers and members of Central Body.

The local Shopcrafts workers expect the convention to be one of the most noteworthy in the history of the organization, and it is believed that its deliberations will attract nation-wide attention.

The sessions will be held at Hotel Patten, beginning at 9 a.m., Monday, June 23, and will continue until the business is completed.

Committee to Study Compensation Bureau

Labor Represented on Group Which Will Advise Changes in Operation of New Jersey's Law.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Trenton, N. J., June 12.—Charles R. Blunt, state labor commissioner, has named representatives of five interested groups as an advisory committee to study and advise any changes thought necessary in the workmen's compensation activities of the department.

Labor, manufacturers, insurance underwriters and the medical and legal professions each have a representative on the commission, the labor representative being Thomas B. Eames, of Millville, first vice-president of the State Federation of Labor. He was recommended by State Senator Arthur A. Quinn, president of the State Federation of Labor.

It is proposed, Commissioner Blunt announced, that the commission "investigate all phases of the organization of the workmen's compensation bureau, its procedure and operations, with a view to recommending constructive changes in the laws and rules governing the same and in the bureau's personnel and organization, if such recommendations are deemed necessary."

He added that it was not desired "that the conclusions be a coat of whitewash, but a picture of the entire subject in its true colors."

BRITAIN DISTURBED BY IDLENESS GROWTH

London.—Britain is worried over the growth of unemployment. The number of idle is now 1,759,500, an advance of 20,000 in one week.

There is no sign of recovery in the week's trade reports, and such basic industries as coal, textiles, iron and steel continue to be depressed.

The situation has become so acute that industrialists are accepting the opinion that unemployment should be considered a national emergency.

IDLENESS HARMS MORALE.

New York.—The tragedy of unemployment lies in its devastating effect upon the morale of idle workers, said Whiting Williams, author and lecturer on industrial problems, in an address to a convention of business women.

ANTI-INJUNCTION BILL IS GIVEN ANOTHER JOLT

Senate Committee Is Forced to Act.

VOTE TO REPORT AGAINST MEASURE

Chairman Norris Holds Out Little Hope for Passage at This Session.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Washington, June 12.—Forced to take action on the Shipstead anti-injunction bill by the refusal of Atty.-Gen. Mitchell to express an opinion on its constitutionality, the senate judiciary committee has voted to report unfavorably on the measure.

Formal reports from both the majority and minority divisions of the committee were filed immediately by Senator Steiwer, of Oregon, from the majority, and Norris, of Nebraska, from the minority.

Complete reports from both divisions will be filed on or before June 20, Norris said. When the preliminary reports were submitted in the senate it was agreed by Senators Norris and Steiwer that, should congress adjourn before that date, the complete reports might be submitted before adjournment.

The committee last week sent the bill to the attorney-general, apparently seeking to delay action and to dodge responsibility for it. The attorney-general returned the bill to the committee, refusing to give an opinion on it.

Mitchell Cites law.

In a letter to Senator Norris, chairman of the judiciary committee, Mitchell cited the law which allows him to give opinions only to the heads of departments and pointed out precedents for refusing to give the committee his opinion of the bill's legality.

Senator Norris, a strong supporter of the bill, read the attorney-general's letter to the committee and insisted that action be taken. The decision to make an unfavorable report followed.

There was no record vote on the report. In a previous poll of the committee, the members divided as follows:

For the bill—Norris, of Nebraska; Borah, of Idaho; Blaine, of Wisconsin; Ashurst, of Arizona; Walsh, of Montana; Caraway, of Arkansas; Dill, of Washington.

Against the bill—Deneen, of Illinois; King, of Utah; Gillett, of Massachusetts; Robinson, of Indiana; Stephens, of Mississippi; Steiwer, of Oregon; Waterman, of Colorado; Hastings, of Delaware; Hebert, of Rhode Island; Overman, of North Carolina.

Action Now Doubtful.

Questioned as to the possibility of obtaining action on the bill this session, Senator Norris said that the committee's action "doesn't necessarily mean that we will not, but I doubt it very much.

"I know everybody is talking about adjournment, and I shall try to get an agreement to take this bill up on a certain day following reconvening in December," he said.

"I think I know what will happen as soon as we get rid of the tariff and the rivers and harbors bills," he declared. "A quorum will simply disappear."

Mussolini Unmasked; Is Making War Talks

New York.—Mussolini has discarded peace pretenses and is making frenzied war talks throughout Italy, while his ambassadors assure the world that Mussolini abhors war.

Foreign press correspondents, who have praised the dictator, are compelled to explain his jingo policy that has increased the tension between France and Italy. Practically every other continental country is affected.

Territory, now controlled by France and her allies, is sought by Italy. Another objective is to make the Adriatic sea an "Italian lake."

The French press is filled with anti-Italian sentiment. Cables from Europe indicate that no one seriously believes there will be a war, but Mussolini's ranting shows what he would do if he had the natural resources.

Italy, as present considered, is not a first-class country. She lacks coal, iron and oil, and must import wheat. She must depend in large measure upon Great Britain, for if that country closed the Straits of Gibraltar and the Suez canal the flow of food and raw material to Italy would be stopped.

LABOR QUERIES

Q.—Does organized labor favor the election of federal judges, as opposed to their appointment by the president?

A.—The American Federation of Labor has declared in favor of a constitutional amendment providing for the election of federal judges by vote of the people.

Q.—Have any American unions jurisdiction over more than two countries?

A.—Yes. The International Association of Machinists, for example, has jurisdiction over the United States and its possessions, Canada and Mexico.

Q.—Were any labor unions ever secret organizations?

A.—Some early labor bodies were secret organizations. The Knights of Labor was secret from its organization in 1869 to 1881.

Q.—Which state was first to pass legislation for sanitary labor camps?

A.—California. The law applies to all camps where five or more workers are employed.

AN HUMILIATING ROLE.

The senate judiciary committee is composed of seventeen lawyers, many of whom are constitutional students. This committee considers intricate legislative proposals and prepares bills that will stand court tests, so far as it is possible for a group of skilled lawyers to take such action.

The submission of proposed legislation to the attorney-general of the United States was an unknown procedure—until the pending anti-labor injunction bill was thus disposed of. The attorney-general declined to act and the committee then voted an unfavorable report.

The attorney-general is the head of the department of justice. He represents the federal government before the supreme court in matters of exceptional gravity, has general superintendence over federal district attorneys and federal marshals, and gives advice and opinions when requested by the president or by the heads of the various executive departments. It is not his duty to pass on the legality of proposed legislation, except where it involves purely administrative procedure.

The senate committee's action was evasive and was contrary to the prerogatives, high ideals and traditions of the senate. This reference to the attorney-general was acceptable to defenders of government by injunction and others who would destroy the law-making branch by centralizing power in the president and his appointees.

Plans are now being quietly discussed for the creation of a commission that will pass upon important legislation before final action by congress. This "commissionizing" of America is another name for Mussolini's system. The committee's action can be used as a precedent that will advance this revolutionary policy.

The so-called labor injunction is not a "labor" question. Equity (injunction) courts are extending their power and are being substituted in every direction for government by law. Citizens who are indifferent to labor's fight to end this evil will discover that they have paid a costly price for taking no part in this struggle.

The committee's action may haunt indifferent citizens. These senators have lowered the high dignity of the senate and have played into the hands of reaction by weakening the foundation of this law-making structure. Dodging responsibilities is a dangerous expedient when a surrender of perogatives is involved.

PRIVATE ARMIES OF AUSTRIA.

Conflicting information comes out of Austria, disturbing to the rest of the world to a degree greater than is generally realized.

Austria, with provincial control of armed forces, has two armed bands, aside from the forces of the nation. One is the pro-fascist Heimwehren; the other the Schutzbund, called by some a socialist force, by others a republican force.

Chancellor Schober was rejected from one cabinet to have [illegible] to disband the [illegible]. He has announced [illegible] for control [illegible] special to federal [illegible] the strength of [illegible] are pressed.

[illegible] to Italy [illegible] Anti- [illegible] that [illegible] Freedom [illegible] to [illegible] agreement to [illegible] Austrian [illegible] on the [illegible] from them Rome [illegible]

[illegible] with the op- [illegible] in the United [illegible] wish bad luck to any [illegible] between Mussolini and any [illegible] who goes to Rome hunting [illegible] support for a private army. [illegible] such a pact the world could [illegible] set ablaze.

DEVELOP HOME MARKETS.

Men ignore the unlimited possibilities of our home markets. They talk of the need for exports and for a gigantic navy and for expensive machinery in the consular service and other units of the department of commerce to protect this foreign trade.

If our exports could be increased $1,500,000,000 this would be considered a triumph of statesmanship. Such an increase in our domestic market without government aid is possible if wages were increased $1 a week for every wage earner in this country.

An increase of $4 a week would add $5,600,000,000, or enough to keep all our factories busy at their normal rate for more than one additional month. This development of our domestic market is too simple for statesmen, economists and industrialists. They prefer to befog people with their jargon that veers men from the major cause of depressions.

PUBLIC OPINION BASIS OF LAW

"Laws are not made by ukase or by dictate, but are based upon the public conscience," said New York state supreme court Justice John F. Carew, in a New York speech.

If every member of organized labor understood this basis of law they would continuously agitate and educate. They would understand that it is futile to elect lawmakers or select judges until the foundation for law is laid. This foundation, as Justice Carew points out, is public conscience.

The public must accept new viewpoints. Agitation can create such a public conscience that is greater than parties or individuals. Under the kingly system a public conscience is not necessary—the monarch does the people's thinking. A democracy can not function when our foundation of law is ignored.

WHY THE YELLOW DOG IS YELLOW!

Pertinent and Profound Portions of Addresses in United States Senate Debate on Parker

This is the Third of a Series of Selected Extracts

Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York, said:

PART II.

It is extraordinarily simple and easy to insert yellow-dog contracts into terms of employment. If employers should be foolish enough to use them, and the courts should enforce them by injunction, then the well-organized, responsible trade unionism we have known is doomed. Only underground, rebellious, revolutionary, secret association will flourish in its place. The injunction will silence the voice of every responsible union organizer. But the underground revolutionist who pays little attention to law and less to injunctions will flourish like a green bay tree.

Requires No Lawyer.

These are considerations which appeal to the lay mind as well as to the professional. One need not have read Blackstone to understand that there is something inherently unfair in such an arrangement. No acquaintance with supreme court decisions is necessary to understand the probable effects of such a regime upon the future of industrial relationship. Nor is it necessary for us to consider at this time whether an employer may insist that only unorganized labor shall be employed in his plant.

For purposes of present discussion it is sufficient to inquire whether, if he so insists, he must educate his employes to be satisfied with his terms or whether the courts will render him immune from the flow of ideas and the current of world discussion and the persuasion of workmen that in union lies their salvation.

Does the fact that an employer hangs a sign on his factory gate, "No union men wanted here," at once call into play all the force and all the power of the equity courts of the nation exerted in their full strength to silence everyone who would tell any of his employes that unionism is worth while? The citizen untrained in the law will naturally draw his own analogies. He will ask: "Would the courts be equally solicitous to protect the man who insisted that only the heathen could work in his plant? Would a court enjoin a missionary from preaching the gospel to his employes? And suppose that he employed only republicans in his plant?

"I'SE REGUSTED."

Would a court of equity enjoin a democrat from electioneering among the employes? Or suppose that the employer insisted upon unmarried men in his plant, would the court restrain the clergyman's blessing upon a marriage vow?" Of course, none of these would be enjoined, but under identical conditions the effort of men to organize to better their conditions of employment was balked by Judge Parker's injunction.

To the worker organization means bargaining power, security, self-respect. So long as he continues unorganized he must accept terms of employment just as they are as tendered. It is only through organization that he achieves the power to withhold that which he sells. The arrangement known as the anti-union or yellow-dog contract is ordinarily an undertaking on the part of the employe that he will continue to remain in the same helpless condition which compelled him to make the yellow-dog promise in the first place. Is it good social policy to give full play to a device to accomplish that which medievalism accomplished through class stratification? Is it sound American practice to permit that system to be reproduced on this continent? Already in the mining towns of West Virginia the employer owns the miner's home, from which a court of equity will at the operator's request expel him. The employer owns the worker's city, his school, his church. Is he also to own and control his power of speech and association?

Cites Notable Opinions.

These briefly are the terms of the anti-union contract, the way in which it is made, the purposes for which it is entered into, the effects which it is likely to have, and the questions which it raises.

The following is what Prof. Edwin R. A. Seligman, well-known professor of economics of the Columbia university, said in reference to the anti-union promises:

* * * The world has not yet succeeded in finding a solution for the so-called labor problem. Whatever that solution may be, both history and philosophy conspire to advise against the adoption of any policy which will render the solution more difficult and perhaps impossible. The conditions of this contract seem to the affiant clearly to fall within the latter category. The affiant would therefore strongly urge that the court withhold its approval from such a reversal of public policy which certainly presents no clear advantages, and which contains such potential dangers.

Paul Howard Douglas, professor of economics, University of Chicago, reacts to the anti-union promise in the following language, which I read because it is so pertinent to this discussion:

To grant the injunction which is sought would permit employers to put a legal ring around their plants to prevent their being unionized. To grant such further protection of the law to the ability of the strong to force terms upon the weak, which the latter would not consent to were he on approximately equal terms with the other party, is to bring the boasted equality of the law into disrepute and is to inflict a heavy and unwarranted blow at the institutions which the comparatively weak have built up to protect themselves.

Our own commissioner of the bureau of labor statistics, Ethelbert Stewart, gives expression to a view that is commonly held when he says:

In fact, I think the law should make criminal these one-sided so-called labor contracts.

Especially persuasive is the report of the United States coal commission on labor relations in bituminous coal mining, which made a special investigation of the effects of the use of the anti-union contract in coal mines:

We recommend that such destructive labor policies as the use of spies, the use of deputy sheriffs as paid company guards, house leases which prevent free access, and individual contracts which are not free-will contracts be abolished.

Of peculiar interest is the finding of the United States coal commission on civil liberties in the coal field:

Many operators—

Operators, mind you—

however, do not use the "yellow dog" contract, believing that it is immoral.

It was this sort of an agreement that was presented to Judge Parker in the Red Jacket case.

The Passing Show

Note and Comment on Things Doing in the March of Events

Under the heading, "Wanted—Reserves for Wages," the monthly survey of business of the American Federation of Labor says:

"It is the custom of industries to lay aside a reserve fund to provide dividend payments to stockholders in dull periods when profits are low. If a similar reserve were set apart to maintain wage payments, the problem of unemployment would be well on its way to solution."

In other words, workers deserve at least the same consideration as stockholders. The idea was put in another form by Morris E. Leeds, Philadelphia manufacturer, who told the United States Chamber of Commerce at its last annual meeting that unemployment must be met by developing in American industry a sense of responsibility for keeping wage earners at work just as for maintaining dividend payments. Following of this suggestion would prevent much human suffering and lowering of standards of living.

Warden Lewis E. Lawes, of Sing Sing prison, says that former Assemblyman Baumes, author of the Baumes laws of New York imposing life sentences on fourth-term felony offenders, is dissatisfied with the operation of the law and is going to recommend that it be modified.

Baumes' change of attitude is a victory for justice and humanity. The Baumes laws are arbitrary and unduly harsh, leaving no latitude to the court in imposing sentence, no matter what the circumstances may be. International Labor News Service and this paper have frequently criticized the Baumes laws and similar laws in other states patterned after them. Apparently even Baumes himself is now ready to admit that the criticism has been justified.

Approach of the newspaper "silly season" is heralded by such items as the following, which recently appeared in many papers, under a New York date line:

"The average woman likes to stay in bed after she awakes in the morning, it is indicated in statistics being gathered by Dr. Donald A. Laird, of Colgate university, who is studying the sleeping habits of guests at one of New York's largest hotels."

Where is the news in this item? It would be just as sensible to waste good space with a yarn saying the average man likes to stay in bed after he wakes in the morning. Disinclination to get up in the morning until one is good and ready is a common human trait, not peculiar to women, and there is nothing new about it.

Yet papers that publish such stuff call themselves "news" papers!

The late Senator Henry R. Gooding, of Idaho, once said:

"The greatest question that confronts every government on earth is that of finding employment for its own people."

Can anyone dispute that statement? Is there any other question really more important for government?

SLEEPING CAR PORTERS SUE PULLMAN COMPANY

St. Louis, Mo.—A score of Pullman porters have filed civil suits in the circuit court against the company because they were dismissed for refusing to vote in the company "union" and refusing to sign a "yellow dog."

H. E. Fields, one of the porters, testified he has been in the company's employ for fifteen years and was censured by officials and later dismissed for opposition to the company "union" and for associating with officials of the organized porters, affiliated to the A. F. of L.

Fields testified he was told if he voted for the company "union" his job would be immediately restored.

PROHIBITION POLL SHOWS WETS LEADING

New York.—A poll of 5,000,000 citizens on the prohibition issue, conducted by the Literary Digest, shows that 1,464,098, or 30 per cent, favor enforcement; 1,399,314, or 29 per cent, favor modification, and 1,943,052, or 40 per cent, favor repeal.

The vote indicates that 70 per cent favor either repeal or modification.

Only five states—Arkansas, Kansas, North Carolina, Oklahoma and Tennessee—went into the dry column. Five others, Connecticut, Louisiana, Nevada, New Jersey and Rhode Island, went absolutely wet.

FEDERAL PUBLIC WORK ON LONG-HOUR SYSTEM

Minneapolis, Minn.—The Ford dam work, a federal construction operation, is being done on the long-hour basis.

The Minneapolis Labor Review says the government has issued no warning to the Northern States Constructing company. Employes are being worked nine, ten and eleven hours a day and some as many as fourteen hours a day, with the seven-day week not uncommon.

"If the government is in earnest about relieving the critical unemployment situation," says this labor paper, "it should immediaely cancel this company's contract because it is violating the eight-hour law."

IDLENESS AT PEAK.

Philadelphia. — Unemployment in this city is 40 per cent greater this spring than it was in the spring of 1929, according to a survey by the bureau of compulsory education. The probers say unemployment "has passed its peak."

A house-to-house canvass of 36,100 families during the last week in April showed that of the 71,895 employable persons in these families there were 8,377 persons, or 11.7 per cent, who were unable to secure work.

TRUSTEE'S SALE

By virtue of the authority vested in the undersigned trustee by a deed of trust executed by the Volunteer Oil Refineries, Incorporated, dated June 21st, 1929, and registered in book "B," volume 24, page 708, et seq., of the register's office of Hamilton county, Tennessee, to the record of which reference is hereby made for a full recital of the terms, powers and provisions therein contained, I will, on

within the legal hours of sale at the west door of the courthouse in Chattanooga, Hamilton county, Tennessee, sell to the highest and best bidder at public outcry for cash in hand, and in bar of the equity of redemption, as provided in said deed of trust, the following described real estate, in the city of Chattanooga, Hamilton county, Tennessee, to-wit:

A tract of land commencing at a point 25 feet south of the center of the Belt Railway Company's right of way (present) on the east line of Tennessee avenue (old Blowing Springs road); thence south along the east line of said Tennessee Avenue, 70 feet, more or less, to the present line of the Town of St. Elmo, disposal or septic plant road; thence southeastwardly along the line of said Town of St. Elmo disposal or septic road 122 feet, more or less, to the northwest corner of J. V. Lewis' shop site; thence eastwardly along the north line of said J. V. Lewis' shop site and parallel with and 122 feet south of the Belt Railway Company's right of way 288 feet, more or less, to the west line of the Town of St. Elmo Company's disposal or septic plant land; thence northwardly along the line of said Town of St. Elmo disposal or septic plant land 47 feet, more or less, to the northwest corner of said disposal or septic plant land; thence southeastwardly along the line of said disposal or septic plant to the Chattanooga creek; thence north 240 feet, more or less, along Chattanooga creek to a point 25 feet from the center of the present Belt Railway Company's right of way; thence northwestwardly and parallel with said Belt Railway Company's present right of way to the point of beginning.

Being the same property that was conveyed by Fowler Lewis Oil Refining Company, Inc., to the Volunteer Oil Refineries, Inc., by deed registered in book X, vol. 22, page 679, of the register's office of Hamilton county, Tennessee, including equipments, machinery and patent rights of said Volunteer Oil Refineries, Inc.

Said deed of trust warrants the title as clear, free and unencumbered, but said sale will be made as trustee only.

Said sale will be made subject to all taxes and assessments that are a lien and unpaid.

This the 28th day of May, 1930.

Go to your Union Meetings

Don't say you are too tired; the weather is bad; or there is too much quibbling and "hot air" to interest me.

Every time you miss a meeting and leave it to the other fellow to look out for your interest, you are doing an injustice both to yourself and your organization.

Your views on especially vital subjects should be represented in discussion and by vote, and the only way for this to be done is for you to be at your union meeting.

You are responsible for the good and welfare of your organization, and non-attendance of union meetings on your part is not excuse enough for you to voice your opinion after a measure has been passed. It is then time for you to concur in what has been done and work in harmony with the officers and other members of your union.

Go to your union meetings regularly and induce others to do the same, because one important thing to remember is the meaning of the slogan:

"United we stand, Divided we fall."

WORKERS' HELP IS APPRECIATED

Union - Labeled Cigarettes and Tobacco Sales Grow—Once-Proud Camel Loses Ground.

Appreciation of the Tobacco Workers' International union for hearty and effective support of the organized workers of Chattanooga in placing union-labeled cigarettes and smoking tobacco on the local market, and in giving widespread publicity to the low-wage, anti-union policy of the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco company, makers of Camel cigarettes and Prince Albert smoking tobacco, is contained in a letter received by Secretary Gerlach and read at Monday night's meeting of Central Body.

The once-proud Camel, says the letter, is no longer the leader, and cigarettes made under American working conditions are coming into their proper place.

In connection with the letter, which follows, it was recalled that Carmen cigarettes and "54" smoking tobacco, brands which are declared to have no superior for the discriminating smoker, are now for sale in many places in the Chattanooga territory, as well as the Clowns, which have been on the local markets for several years:

During 1929, an eventful twelve months for our great movement, every month registered an important happening, by which organized labor made some constructive advancement that sunk deeper and deeper into the public mind the righteousness of labor's great cause.

In a letter issued to you at the close of the year, we gave expression of appreciation for the most wonderful response to our appeal for support in our contention for the God-given right to organize, which the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco company refused and resisted, and also for consistent opposition to that company's unfair Camel cigarettes and Prince Albert smoking tobacco.

Now we come again to thank you for the continuity of your effort, which is now more than ever having a most telling effect.

The once noble Camel cigarette, which proudly rode at the head of the procession of its competitors, finds itself in hiding under the dealer's counter, and when a customer asks for a Camel, he reaches under the counter for it and in silence hands it out.

The poor old Camel is now occupying the place once occupied by the union labeled tobaccos and cigarettes. The cigarette bearing the union label now has the proud distinction of having the front rank presentation.

Millions of Camel cigarettes shipped out, in the hope of giving joy to the consumer, are now coming back in carloads. Ladies and gentlemen, members of our great movement, for this cooperation we thank you indeed.

ACQUITTAL OF STRIKEBREAKER BRINGS DECLARATION OF WAR AGAINST ANTI-LABOR JUDGES

(By International Labor News Service.)

Philadelphia, June 12.—Declaring that the acquittal of William Pfeiffer, strikebreaker, for killing a hosiery striker, was a "miscarriage and travesty of justice," the Central Labor union has instituted a state-wide campaign against the present judiciary.

The central body authorized organization of a demonstration to arouse sentiment of workers and public against the "politico-judicial combine arrayed against labor" and threatened to add in November its votes to the protest.

Action was taken following a recital of the grievances afflicting the hosiery and textile workers of the state by officers of these unions.

Phillips Heads Committee.

John Phillips, chairman of the legislative committee of the central body, and recently elected president of the State Federation of Labor, heads the protest committee. Other members include Fred Lauterwasser, president of the Textile Workers' District Council of Philadelphia, and a vice-president of the State Federation of Labor; Warren D. Curry, a vice-president of the central body, and Frank Burch, its secretary.

Its first task will be to arrange a huge demonstration expressing the resentment of the unions over the Pfeiffer verdict.

That done, it will seek to arouse public opinion in its favor and then carry the anti-injunction battle to the general elections and the next session of the state legislature.

Judges Harry S. McDevitt and James Gay Gordon, Jr., were scored for their judicial attitude toward organized labor.

Judge's Actions Assailed.

Judge McDevitt has granted a number of injunctions to Philadelphia mill owners against the American Federation of Full Fashioned Hosiery Workers. One of the most drastic, forbidding all picketing, figured in the five-month H. C. Aberle strike in which Carl Mackley, a striking union member, was killed. William Pfeiffer was tried for the killing of Mackley but acquitted.

Judge Gordon was assailed because of his dismissal of two strikebreakers early this year after they had been arrested in the headquarters of the union where they had brandished guns.

Alexander McKeown, president of the Philadelphia branch of the hosiery workers' federation, told the delegates that McDevitt's injunction and Gordon's dismissal of the strikebreakers were largely responsible for Mackley's death.

Killing of Mackley Followed.

"When the strikebreakers saw two of their number go free despite their violation of the law against carrying arms, they felt themselves empowered to carry guns and the killing of Mackley resulted," he said.

McKeown bitterly assailed McDevitt for "abuse of the injunction process."

"We have had more injunctions granted against us in six months," he complained, "than the total handed down against the remaining units of the entire labor movement."

Poor Lizzie; Poor Readers; Poor George!

(Editor's Note—During the past few months The Labor World has received several requests to republish the following masterpiece by George Forbes, known throughout the length and breadth of the local post office as a poet of sorts. The "poem," with the communication which accompanied it when it was published in these columns some two years ago, follows):

Editor Labor World:

While engaged with some baling wire tonight fastening the new license on my ancient Ford, the words of an anonymous poet kept running through my alleged mind. The first verse went something like this:

I called my boy to my knee one day
And I said: "You're just past four.
Will you laugh in that same light-hearted way
When you've turned, say thirty more?"
Then I thought of a past I'd fain erase,
More clouded skies than blue,
And I anxiously peered in his up-turned face,
For he seemed to say: "Did you?"

Then it happened that "Lizzie" and I got in a conversation, when she seemed to remark, "Well, you waited until the last day to buy them licenses, didn't you?" I am used to being balled out by the female of the species and my sweet disposition prevented me from replying unkindly to my old Ford, so I took my spite out on the readers of The Labor World by penning these few lines and dedicating them

TO LIZZIE

I am starting you out on another year,
My dear, you are just past six;
When I trade you off in the early spring,
You'll be in a h— of a fix.
Will you start? Will you run in the same old way?
Will you always rattle, too?
Will you always stop for the pretty jane? * * *
And I thought she said "Will you?"

You've been true to me on many a trip,
And I'm glad you are deaf and dumb;
You are slow to start, and slow to stop,
And you've got an awful hum.
Will you always know how to hold your tongue,
And never haul mountain dew?
Answer this question, yes or no, * * *
And she seemed to say, "Will you?"

I looked in her eyes, so dim and sad,
And I said, "Oh, Ford of mine!
Will you run true in the after years?
Will you leave no heart to pine?"
Then out of the past came another's eyes,
Sad eyes of a tear-dimmed blue—
"Will you never make them walk back home?"
And Lizzie said, "Will you?"

Minnesota Gag Law Before High Court

Washington, D. C.—The Minnesota gag law, which permits an equity (injunction) judge to padlock newspapers, will be passed upon by the United States supreme court.

The purpose of the law was to "get" an editor who opposes politicians in that state. The act was upheld by the Minnesota supreme court, and newspaper publishers throughout the country are contesting its validity.

The legislature of that state gave this power to equity courts and the newspaper men insist that this violates both the federal and Minnesota constitutions which guarantee free press.

WORLD DEPRESSION SHOWN BY REPORTS

Washington. — Business depression is world-wide, according to the department of commerce. Virtually without exception the government's trade commissioners in Asia, Europe, Latin America and elsewhere report a prevailing dullness of business conditions.

Men Need Courage, Borah Tells Youth

Washington.—"Young men fail to win and hold popular confidence because they lack that higher faith which puts aside temporary advantage for permanent achievements," said Senator Borah in a radio address on "The Graduate."

The Idaho lawmaker pleaded with the thousands of young men who are leaving schools to have courage and insist on their ideals.

"Do not be afraid of being called a radical," said Senator Borah. "A radical in these days is one who believes in the constitution of the United States and who will not barter his principles for the sake of so-called party regularity, and for the sake of being with the majority.

"Political parties and organizations have their place and a very important place. But they are not entitled to control the judgment and conscience of those who sincerely believe that the party method is wrong. 'Trust thyself. Every heart vibrates to that iron sting.'

"There is not a crooked interest, there is not a special privilege, there is not an ill-gotten dollar, there is not a vested wrong, but are constantly crying out for regularity, for leaving things as they are, for the status quo.

"These political machines are most of them enemies of free government. The history of the world in every age and of all times teaches that the selfish, corrupt, political chicanery can not stand up in the long run against fundamental moral courage, intelligently and perseveringly directed."

SUPREME COURT EVADES STAND ON WAGE DISPUTE

Washington, D. C.—The United States supreme court refused to pass upon a labor union rule regulating wages to be paid by outside contractors. The controversy has ended, said the court.

The case involved the Painters' union and the Baker Painting company, of New York, which did work in Somerville, N. J.

The union's law provides that in these cases the highest wage rate shall prevail. The company insisted on paying the Somerville low rate and appealed to the courts.

The same company recently lost a similar case in the District of Columbia courts, which rejected its plea that the painters were "interfering with interstate commerce."

Thin, Pale, Weak

"I HAD been through a bad spell of sickness which left me very weak," says Mrs. Virginia Spruce, of Stapleton, Va. "I was pale and felt lifeless, and my strength did not return.

"I spent most of my time on the bed. I was very nervous, and the least thing upset me. I did not have strength enough to lift a broom. At times I would have bad headaches, which would hurt me until I could hardly see.

"Someone asked me why I did not try Cardui. I had read of it, so I thought I would see what it would do for me. It was really remarkable how I came out. My strength returned, and my health was better than it had been in years. I gained in weight about ten pounds. My color was good, and I ceased to suffer from headaches. I have told my friends about Cardui because I was benefited after taking it."

There is much discussion pro and con as to the merits of the Chattanooga baseball club. Much chagrin is felt by all the fans on the showing being made by it. We believe there is something rotten in Denmark. If it is on account of the manager, then get rid of the manager; if it is on account of the players laying down, get rid of them. We are not paying good money to see tail-enders.

NOTES FROM THE NEWS CHAPEL

By CLAY TIMMONS

A rush telephone call came into the city editor's desk Monday morning, saying that there was a negro hung somewhere in the wilderness of darktown. Charlie Poe only had one reporter on hand at the moment, but this reporter is considered the star of the staff, so one sent this copy reader to investigate. After diligent search, the news hound discovered that the hanger was a small colored girl, very much alive, but stuck in one of the structures made famous by Chas. Scott's "Specs-cutout." And the reporter blamed Charlie Poe for playing a crude joke. Can you beat it?

Well, sure enough, we got that new Scott Newspaper, high-speed press on the job on Monday morning, and what a sweet paper mill sat right [illegible] and boy, when it got to turning over it was something to hear. Now, all I can hear is a [illegible] hum from the other [illegible]

The proofreader grinds no more, for the pressman, black and dirty, has posted on the pressroom door the newspaper symbol—"Thirty."

Ring Lunatic Lane—Some low-down sucker stole about 75 pennies from the cigar-box safe of Moron's, the well-known purveyor of [illegible]. If you've got something you want to get rid of, just leave it laying around loose over here. It'll vanish. . . . Total thefts during the past week—One $10 bill, a pair of overalls, a pica stick, my pennies and several minor articles. . . . Harry Kennedy, chairman, is attending the national musicians' convention in Boston, and will return in about ten days. . . . Walter Gardner has slipped up a sub and gone to St. Augustine, Fla., for two weeks. . . . "Old Folks" Woolfolk showed up Tuesday morning and relieved the tight machine sub situation a bit. All subs are working every day these days. . . . Dan Power, recently returned from Hot Springs, where he took the bath cure and returned in seeming good health, began eating "east" when he returned. Whether it was the "east" or his insurance, I don't know, but old Dan is a pretty sick boy now and hasn't been at work in two weeks. . . . B. H. McLaughen also threatened to be ill several days ago, but seems to be able to make the jig every day. . . . This cool weather has caused a decided slump in the stock of Moron's, Inc. The first of the week saw a recession from its high peak of the previous week, the stock going from a new high to a new low for the year. With Bill Possum predicting warmer weather, however, a brighter outlook is held for the stock. . . . Baseball fans over here were all agog Tuesday, when the report was circulated that Bill Rodgers was going to resign as manager.

See by Al Mynder's editorial in Monday's paper that it requires a "whole factory of linotypes, stereotype machinery and printing presses" to get out a modern daily paper. They've got the latter two, all right, but as to the first, I think they need the Merganthaler factory down here to put these gadgets in running order. The whole push and kaboodle of them are going to fall right over in the floor some fine morning, and then where will that new $100,000 press and all that stereotype equipment be?

Labor Sees National Menace in War Of Union Pacific on Omaha Unions

By V. B. KINNEY.

Omaha, Neb., June 12.—Labor disputes that are not openly national in character seldom attract much interest except in the locality directly concerned.

Therefore, the nation-wide importance being attached to the battle in Omaha with the Union Pacific, would seem on first thought to be rather unusual.

However, the underlying principles involved and the wanton manner in which the powerful corporation thrust itself into the affairs of Omaha building trades unionists has fired the antagonism of the entire American labor movement as has seldom happened.

So long as Union Pacific confined its anti-union activities to its own shops and headquarters, little general attention was attracted outside of Omaha.

Even when the company was accused of openly discriminating in the purchase of printing, it was laid at the door of some hard-boiled subordinate who had been fed up on the dope peddled by the wage wrecking crew.

But when last year, the Union Pacific began its extensive building program in Omaha, it became apparent with the letting of the contract for the headquarters extension that the company was going to back the drive on the building trades inaugurated by the wage wreckers.

When the contracts were let for the $4,000,000 terminal the whole anti-union drive was exposed. Not only were contractors compelled to enforce rules that would make sure of non-union workers on the job, but the long-established eight-hour day was thrown into the discard, and nine and ten hours became the rule, with correspondingly archaic hour pay for mechanics.

The joint committee of the Omaha Central Labor union and Omaha Building Trades council, after long deliberation on the part of the central body, decided that it was necessary not only to maintain the integrity of the Omaha labor movement, but to protect other communities from like invasion, to make known to the labor world just what was happening in Omaha. The sympathetic response from near and far, from east, west, south and north, is evident that the American trade union movement is alive to the situation and will not brook such unwarranted and audacious interference with the rights of citizens.

The Omaha committee is receiving daily assurances of sympathy and support, and each mail brings copies of letters being written to Union Pacific officials from leading labor bodies all over the land.

You Get What You Pay for

You can't possibly get the full food-value you should have in bread from a loaf made to meet a cheap price.

If you have children, they fail to get from such bread many nourishing food elements quite necessary for their development. Why should children be denied any of the essentials of growth? Or why should you cheat yourself by eating inferior food?

Good bread, the best bread, is not expensive. It is the cheapest food you can buy at the regular grocer's prices and at those prices bread comes to your table with far smaller profits than are taken in any other manufactured, ready-to-eat food.

CENTRAL BODY TO INVITE A. F. L. OFFICIALS TO REGULAR MEETING

Martin F. Ryan, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen of America and for many years treasurer of the American Federation of Labor, and A. O. Wharton, former member of the railroad labor board, former president of the Railway Employes' department of the American Federation of Labor, and at present president of the International Association of Machinists, will be invited to visit the regular meeting of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council Monday night, officials of Central Body announced Friday morning.

Whether or not the two labor executives, each of whom is a member of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor, will be able to accept the invitation remains to be seen, but shopcraft officials expressed the opinion that both would be glad to have the opportunity of visiting with the local unionists.

PRESIDENT WHARTON TO ADDRESS OPEN MEETING FOR MACHINISTS

W. F. Lange, chairman of a joint committee from Lodges 56 and 1450, Machinists, announced Friday morning that arrangements have been completed for a great open meeting at Central Labor hall Tuesday night at 7:30, which will be addressed by President Wharton. It was stressed that all machinists in Chattanooga, whether union or non-union, are cordially invited to attend and hear the address of Mr. Wharton. The chief of the International Association of Machinists has a national reputation as a speaker, and it is believed the large hall at Central Body will be filled with local craftsmen when the meeting is called to order.

Tentative plans also call for a dinner to the Machinists' executive, which will be given probably Tuesday evening, at 6 p.m., at Hotel Patten. Arrangements for this feature, however, awaited word from federation officials, to whom the entire program for President Wharton has been submitted by him.

breakers were recruited from various places and given the jobs formerly held by skilled craftsmen.

"Efforts to adjust the matter through the Sterchi-Fowler stores met with no success whatever, and our local union, followed by Chattanooga Trades and Labor council and the Tennessee Federation of Labor, declared the Mascot concern and the Sterchi-Fowler chain of stores 'unfair to organized labor.'

"The 'battle' has been waged continuously until recently, when events transpired which led us to believe that an agreement was possible and we slowed down somewhat our publicity campaign. We have stood ready at all times to enter into a reasonable agreement, and use all power at our command in building back what a mistaken business policy has obviously torn down.

"But it appears that those in control of the Mascot company are not yet ready to deal with us, and there is nothing left to do but continue our publicity program. This we will do with renewed vim, and we will not stop until every trades unionist and every believer in fair play throughout the territory covered by the Mascot interests is informed of the true condition of affairs."

Officials of Local 53 also said Thursday that at the regular meeting Friday night a committee will be asked to appear before the convention of Southern shopcrafts in this city next week, and ask each and every delegate to take back to his respective city the news of failure to adjust the Mascot trouble.

These officials requested The Labor World to again express great appreciation of the local and international molders' organization for the hearty and unselfish co-operation which has been extended by trades unionists and their friends in the efforts of the workers to maintain American standards for their craft in Chattanooga.

President Is Urged To Speed Navy Work

Washington.—President Hoover was urged to accelerate construction and repair work in the navy yards to relieve unemployment.

The request was made by a delegation of organized metal trades workers, headed by William Green, president A. F. of L.

"Unemployment in the navy yards is causing us concern," said Mr. Green. "There are 2,000 less men employed in the navy yards now than last November when the stock market disturbance occurred. Unless something is done it will aggravate the whole unemployment situation, because it is still very bad."

The president assured the unionists that he would do anything he can to relieve the situation.

Building Cost Rise Is Due to Shift in Types

Composite Figure Shows Price of $6.32 Per Square Foot, Highest on Record, Because Home Building Dropped to 20 Per Cent of Total.

By RALPH F. COUCH.

Washington, June 19.—New buildings being erected in the United States this year represent an investment of approximately $6.32 for each square foot of floor area planned for the finished structure.

This figure is a composite of the average contract price being paid per unit of area for all types of construction exclusive of public works and utilities.

The 1930 unit price represents a distinct advance over the average for the corresponding period of 1929, which amounted to $5.68. It is, in fact, the highest found for any year covered by data of the F. W. Dodge corporation, from whose records the averages were computed.

In 1928 the price paid contractors was $5.63 per square foot. In 1927 it was $6.02, in 1926 it was $5.89, and in 1925, $5.45.

The increase in this year's price per unit of space is seen as reflecting a marked change in the proportions of principal types of work undertaken, rather than an upward movement in construction costs.

Home Building Drops.

Residential building, which commonly is one of the lower-priced classes of work in proportion to floor area, amounts to little more than 20 per cent of this year's investment as compared with nearly 40 per cent in 1929. Office buildings, factories and other business structures, which cost more heavily in proportion to space, make up a larger proportion of the building total than last year.

The trend toward apartment dwellings which has been apparent in cities of the United States in recent years shows a slight falling off in the newest housing data of the United States labor department.

DEMAND PUBLIC WORK TO LESSEN IDLENESS

Washington.—Bond issues of from two to three billion dollars as a remedy for unemployment was urged by Darwin J. Merserole, of New York, on his visit to the White House.

"Employment is the only remedy for unemployment," said Mr. Merserole. "The situation of the jobless is getting steadily worse, since the Wall street market collapse.

"There have been many conferences but no constructive federal legislation has been adopted to provide a system of public works to bring relief."

RAISES VOICE AGAINST USE OF DEFECTIVES

Former Chattanoogan Deplores Report Insane Workers Will Build State Asylum.

Protest against the reported plan to use inmates of the Western State Hospital for the Insane in building an addition to that institution is contained in a communication from William L. Moss, former Chattanoogan, who calls attention to newspaper accounts of similar action taken by the Associated General Contractors of America in raising their united voices against the proposal.

Mr. Moss, who will be remembered as a frequent and valued contributor to The Labor World in years gone by, declares it is up to the citizens of Tennessee to insist that the state administration abandon their reported plans, and sets out various reasons for protesting against such a precedent being set by the state government.

The communication follows:

Editor The Labor World:

In a prompt and vigorous protest that is weighted with words of grave professional wisdom the Associated General Contractors of America, in session at Washington, D. C., Saturday branded the plan of the Horton administration to use inmates for common labor in the proposed erection of the $300,000 addition to the Western State Hospital for the Insane at Bolivar, Tenn., as a most foolhardy piece of business. A. E. Horst, president of the association, in announcing the protest correctly points out that to carry through to ultimate conclusion such a ridiculous suggestion as to use insane men on construction work of such size and complexity—as well as cost—as the Bolivar addition to the Western State Hospital is destined to jeopardize the interests of the people of the state and immeasurably hold back the completion of an otherwise sound structure.

In their protest the national contractors' organization also remind the people of Tennessee that such a move as the Horton administration contemplates is a direct blow at the attempted nation-wide relief of the unemployed. "This move," says the protest, "at a time when building programs are being expedited for the purpose of relieving unemployment, is most unfortunate. With building contract prices at rock-bottom there is less excuse for governmental agencies to enter the construction business today than at any time in history."

These experienced contractors in this protest from Washington simply make it plain to the people of Tennessee who care to heed their professional warning that if Gov. Horton and his commissioner at the head of the Tennessee department of institutions, Capt. Richard H. Lyle, are permitted to use insane men as common laborers to handle material in the construction of the Bolivar project it will keep Tennessee men dependent upon their own resources for a livelihood out of employment and materially increase the cost of such a building enterprise by using mental defectives as assistants of highly specialized building trades craftsmen.

Such a plan as suggested by the commissioner of public institutions is unthinkable, not only to the minds of these national contractors, but to the people of Tennessee as well. A moment's reflection by anyone, whether a professional contractor or not, would inevitably lead to the conclusion that to use these unfortunates as helpers of trained building craftsmen would be detrimental to the best interests of the people as well as impair the soundness of the construction of the building itself. It is up to the citizenry of Tennessee to insist that Gov. Horton and his commissioner make use of their better judgment and throw to the discard the idea of using these public charges as laborers in the construction work of the Bolivar addition to the Western State Hospital for the Insane.

Reds Unchecked By Government, Witness Says

Has Had No Power to Act Since 1924, Fish Committee Is Told; Green Tells Investigators A. F. of L. Position; Cites Record

(By International Labor News Service.)

Washington, June 19.—Communism is being raked fore and aft by the special house committee headed by Congressman Hamilton Fish and it was made clear this week that the raking had just begun, though half a dozen witnesses already have fired heavy guns.

The resolution under which the committee is working specifies that the committee is to investigate Amtorg, the soviet trading and financing organization, and to investigate every other soviet organization, with full power to subpoena witnesses and records.

President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, was heard this week and he presented a tremendous indictment of the communist machine.

Just before President Green took the stand, Chairman Fish made a statement in which he smashed a good part of the rumor factory output which has constituted the first stages of the red defense.

Unions First Defenders.

Congressman Fish said that not only was the committee not hostile to labor in the investigation, but that it was friendly to labor and regarded the trade union movement as "the first line of defense against communism." He said further that the investigation was not in any sense to be conducted with a view to curbing free speech or any constitutional guarantee and that it was not concerned with either socialism or pacifism.

It was made clear that it is intended as an investigation of revolutionary communist propaganda and plotting and will be held to that line.

President Green made clear to the committee the position of the American Federation of Labor and went at length into a recital of facts as to the manner in which communist propaganda has been engineered against trade unions.

Vice-President Matthew Woll is another outstanding labor witness scheduled to be heard soon. It was Woll's charge that a huge fund had been brought into the United States from Russia that was largely responsible for the introduction of the investigation resolution by Congressman Fish.

PULLMAN PORTERS FIGHT FAKE "UNION"

New York.—Pullman porters, affiliated to A. F. of L., are warring on the company "union" of that corporation.

The porters call attention to the United States supreme court's decision in the case of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks versus Texas & Pacific railroad that a company "union" is a "mockery," because it denies workers the right of representation.

Pullman representatives force these workers to vote for company "union" proposals under threat of discharge, and porters and maids are reported if they attend a meeting of the regular union.

LAUNDRY DRIVERS UNITE.

Birmingham, Ala.—Laundry drivers in this city organized. They start off with a membership of 140 and are chartered by the Brotherhood of Teamsters.

Prominent Officials to Be on Local Program.

THIRTEEN STATES ARE REPRESENTED

Sessions to Open Monday at Hotel Patten—Stabilization of Employment Feature for Deliberation of Delegates.

Credentials for approximately 150 delegates to the fourteenth regular convention of the Federated Shopcrafts of the Southern and Allied Lines, which convenes in Chattanooga Monday, had been received at presstime by Secretary W. H. Baldock, and officials of the affiliated organizations were looking forward to one of the most interesting sessions in the history of the federated crafts.

Rail workers throughout the country will have their eyes upon Chattanooga next week, and the deliberations of the convention delegates are expected to have much weight upon the future course of sister organizations in all sections of the United States.

The Southern convention, composed of delegates from thirteen states, will have for its principal consideration the program adopted by the Railway Employes' Department, American Federation of Labor, at the Chicago convention recently. Stabilization of employment was the main topic at the Chicago meeting, and it was said that members of the Railway Labor Executives' association, consisting of the executives of twenty-one standard rail organizations, were of one mind on the subject. Being practical, experienced men, they realized that varying obstacles were to be met and overcome by the distinctive groups within the industry—the transportation group, the federated trades, the clerical, the maintenance-of-way, etc. Accordingly, after consideration covering a period of some eighteen months, representatives of all groups involved presented to the Chicago meeting a detailed program, providing for:

1—Reduction in hours.
2—Reduction in apprentices.
3—Lengthening of the terms of apprenticeship.
4—Gradual elimination of helpers.
5—Vacations with pay.
6—Minimum force agreement.
7—Railroad work in railroad shops.
8—Maintenance reserve.

Unusual importance of the convention beginning Monday is indicated in the fact that a large number of outstanding labor executives in the national and international unions will be official visitors.

As a matter of fact, the meeting will bring to Chattanooga the largest number of national labor figures ever to assemble in this city. Among the outstanding visitors will be Bert M. Jewell, president of the Railway Employes' department of the American Federation of Labor; A. O. Wharton, president of the International Association of Machinists and vice-president of the American Federation of Labor; Martin F. Ryan, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen of America and treasurer of the American Federation of Labor; Roy Horne, general president of the International Association of Blacksmiths; C. J. McGlogan, vice-president of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers; E. H. Wicklein, vice-president of the Sheet Metal Workers' International union; William Atkinson, president of the Boilermakers' International union, and others of similar note in the labor world.

Tentative plans for the convention call for separate meetings of all crafts Monday morning, and the official opening of the general meeting at 2 p.m. in the ballroom of Hotel Patten. E. G. Burton, chairman of the local

LABOR QUERIES

Q. Of what state legislature was President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, a member?

A.—The Ohio legislature. He was a member of the state senate, 1911-15.

Q.—What is meant by economic action of the workers?

A.—In general this term is used with reference to action of any sort by organized labor in the economic field, as opposed to political action. The term is of a little broader significance than industrial action in that it may include such measures as trade union co-operative activities and enterprises.

Q.—When was the British labor party formed?

A.—Its beginning was in 1899, when largely through the efforts of the independent labor party the formation of an independent organization for promoting the election of labor members of parliament was decided upon by the Trade Union congress. The following year this resulted in the formation of the labor representation committee, which in 1906 was named the British labor party.

Q.—How long has Edward Flore been president of the Hotel and Restaurant Employes' and Beverage Dispensers' International Alliance?

A.—Since 1911.

What Next!

New York Central railroad announces that an entirely new type of steam-driven, combination passenger and freight car, has been developed and will soon be tested. It is understood the car is driven by an enticely new type of steam engine, using fuel oil, developing unusual power and requiring little space. The car is expected to aid railroads to meet motor car competition.

AN IMPORTANT DECISION.

The United States supreme court's unanimous decision in the case of Brotherhood of Railroad Clerks versus Texas & Pacific Railroad rejects the philosophy of table-pounding railroad managers, "I run my business." The morality of the decision will be generally accepted, and will eventually affect private employers, if trade unionists acquaint the public with the court's rule.

Congress declared, in passing the railroad act of 1926, that rail managers shall treat with employes' representatives who are selected by these workers. This clause was ignored by the Texas & Pacific when its organized clerks began a wage movement. The company formed a hand-picked "union" and Vice-President Lull, of the railroad, assured President McDonald, on May 24, 1927, that he could have the company "union" accept a wage increase of $75,000 annually, while the demand of the legitimate trade union meant an advance of $540,000. Lull's letter was a frank statement why the company "union" was favored, and why the Brotherhood of Clerks was opposed.

Chief Justice Hughes, speaking for the supreme court, said the company's refusal to treat with representatives of the clerks was a violation of the railway labor act. He called attention to the rail management's activity in promoting the company "union," and declared that "these activities constituted an actual interference with the liberty of the clerical employes in the selection of their representatives."

The purpose of congress in passing the railway labor act, said the chief justice, was to provide voluntary machinery for the prevention of strikes. Such procedure, he insisted, is impossible when one of the parties is intimidated or coerced. "Such collective action would be a mockery if representation were made futile by interference with freedom of choice," he said.

Trade unionists should keep in mind these features of this notable case:

The nation's lawmakers repudiated the company "union" in public utilities over which they have jurisdiction.

The nation's highest judicial tribunal has declared that the company "union" is a "mockery" and has shown that its purpose is to check wage increases.

In view of this record, how can unorganized workers give consideration to an employer who talks of his company "union" and his willingness to treat with "my men?"

The company "union" can be discredited throughout the country if organized labor tells this story at every opportunity.

EQUITY REACHES INTO BUSINESS.

The management of a new hotel in Anderson, Ind., wants the securities commission of that state to oppose the sale of securities for another hotel. "Anderson is not big enough for two large hotels and our securities holders will suffer," asserts the hotel management.

Here is the natural development of the new theory that marriage and prospective babies are "property" and can be protected by the states, backed by guns. By construing patronage and prospective profits as "property" rights and denied liberty rights, the law is set conflicts with [illegible] injunction.

A [illegible] application of this theory [illegible] Anderson, where a group [illegible] be prohibited by the [illegible] entering a business because competition may lessen the income of their competitor. The average [illegible] ignores the historical fact that property continually expands.

[illegible] men look upon workers' [illegible] to the injunction and the [illegible] of property as "a last right." When the Anderson process threatens to become general, labor's plea will be considered "respectable."

COURAGE ALWAYS WINS.

"Dare to be yourself," declared Senator Borah in a radio address to thousands of school graduates who are entering the arena of life. The Idaho lawmaker reminded young men that privilege seekers and their political agents cry for political regularity that the status quo be maintained.

"If you have an issue of worth and moment," said Mr. Borah, "the machine will follow like a whipped cur behind you."

Trade unionists should retain this thought. Political machines—and in fact, the world—pay no attention to men who fear censure by the supposed "great."

The world may pity—but never respect—the whiner. That's why men command attention when they dare to do. They sweep others into their ranks by courage and disinterestedness.

The world is filled with men who fear to take chances. They waste their lives in the vain hope that those who have seized power will some time, some how, voluntarily surrender such power.

WIN FIVE-DAY WEEK.

Norwich, Conn.—Organized bricklayers secured the five-day week. Hod carriers and laborers are equally successful.

MORE ABOUT RAIL SHOPCRAFTS' CONVENTION

Federated Shopcrafts, will call the session to order, introducing Mayor E. D. Bass, who will deliver an address on behalf of the city, and M. H. Ortwein, who will extend fraternal greetings from Chattanooga Trades and Labor council. Further proceedings will be outlined later, officials said.

Entertainment features had not been formally completed as The Labor World went to press, but it was announced that, aside from a general program, each of the several crafts will provide some entertainment for their respective international officers.

Executive board of the Federated Shopcrafts of the Southern and Allied Lines, which has been busy for several weeks making arrangements for the gathering, is composed of the following:

B. B. St. Clair (Machinists), president, Knoxville; W. H. Baldock (Sheet Metal Workers), secretary, Knoxville; W. W. Dyke (Carmen), Knoxville; W. M. Wands (Boilermakers), Spencer, N. C.; Logan Waddle (Electrical Workers), Somerset, Ky.; T. M. Melton (Blacksmiths), Chattanooga.

Credentials have been received for delegates from the following states: Tennessee, Kentucky, Georgia, Alabama, North Carolina, South Carolina, Florida, Louisiana, Mississippi, Indiana, Illinois, Virginia and Ohio.

The Passing Show

Note and Comment on Things Doing in the March of Events

Led by Mr. George H. Platt, of the Cuban American Cancocorporation, a group of financiers has formed what the gentlemen are pleased to call the Cuba good will committee.

This is lovely. These gentlemen are on the investing end of the game. They don't want any stirring of the waters. They don't want any agitation that will disturb "friendly relations" between Wall Street and the crooked, brutal political outfit in control in Havana.

Under their noses Cuba flouts the United States and enters a treaty with Japan, bound to result in Japanese colonizing in Cuba.

Meanwhile the wage earning population in Cuba can continue to get it in the neck at the hands of the united plunderers.

It's a great game—while it lasts. But someone ought to tell the financiers that enough squeezing will take the insides out of even the juciest orange, entirely aside from whatever little question of human juice may be involved.

What a wide-awake labor paper can do is shown by the record of the Council Bluffs Labor News, Council Bluffs, Ia., of which W. C. Harris is editor. The paper is only about two years old but in this short space of time it has been instrumental in increasing the membership of the Council Bluffs trade unions by about one-third. This is a record to be proud of.

Mr. Harris started the Labor News by giving away the first thousand copies. All the mechanical work was done in outside shops, but the paper now has a complete plant of its own.

At the last county and state primary elections, the paper was recognized as being one of the leading factors in the defeat of candidates unfriendly to labor.

Labor papers all over the country are doing the same good work for trade unionism. They are helping to build up the trade unions, are dispelling prejudice against them, are telling their story when other avenues of publicity are closed and in short, are towers of strength to the labor movement.

Speaking in the house on unemployment, Representative LaGuardia, of New York, declared that the best time to solve unemployment problems is "when we have no unemployment." True, but that is no reason why attempts at solving unemployment should not be made during periods of depression. The Wagner bills, for the relief and prevention of unemployment, constitute such an attempt. They have passed the senate and are now before the house, which seems in no hurry to act on them. The end of the session is near and there is danger nothing will be done about them before adjournment.

The Wagner bills embody constructive principles and policies long advocated by President Hoover and many eminent authorities who have studied unemployment, its causes and its remedies. They are the most promising legislation dealing with unemployment now before congress. If the house takes no action on them, representatives should be made to do a lot of explaining between now and the fall elections.

Nation Not at Work, Says Senator Wagner

Washington.—Senator Wagner, author of three unemployment bills that are held up in the house, differs with the Pollyanna claims of Secretary of Agriculture Hyde that "the nation is back at work;" that "we have suffered from little more than seasonal unemployment," and that "there was relatively little distress."

"I wish," said Senator Wagner, "I could be as cheerful about the present unemployment situation as Secretary Hdye. If some good could be accomplished by this 'all's well' announcement his obvious departure from the true facts could be used. But these cheering statements have become so frequent in the fact of continuing and increasing unemployment that no one is either misled or encouraged.

"It is nonetheless astounding that a cabinet officer should declare that the nation is back at work when the government's own figures indicate that more men are being laid off both in manufacturing plants and in industries generally. It is a shocking abuse of words to call the present unemployment normal, seasonal slack.

"In all of the presently published records of the government Secretary Hyde will not find a single April in which the index of employment fell as low as in 1930, and the same is true of the entire first quarter of the year.

"What pathetic apathy to human difficulties Mr. Hyde reveals when he reports his conclusion that there was relatively little distress produced by unemployment of the past winter.

"Nothing at all is accomplished by denying unpleasant facts instead of grappling with them."

HAGGERTY ELECTED.

Baltimore. — John B. Haggerty, president International Brotherhood of Bookbinders, was elected president of the board of governors of the Allied Printing Trades association, at their meeting in this city. The new official succeeds President Berry, of the International Printing Pressmen's and Assistants' union, who resigned.

The association has charge of the allied printing trades label, and adjusts jurisdictional disputes between the five international printing trades unions.

This is the first time in twenty years that a bookbinder has held this position.

TRUSTEE'S SALE

By virtue of the authority vested in the undersigned trustee by a deed of trust executed by the Volunteer Oil Refineries, Incorporated, dated June 21st, 1929, and registered in book "B," volume 24, page 708, et seq., of the register's office of Hamilton county, Tennessee, to the record of which reference is hereby made for a full recital of the terms, powers and provisions therein contained, I will, on

within the legal hours of sale at the west door of the courthouse in Chattanooga, Hamilton county, Tennessee, sell to the highest and best bidder at public outcry for cash in hand, and in bar of the equity of redemption, as provided in said deed of trust, the following described real estate, in the city of Chattanooga, Hamilton county, Tennessee, to-wit:

A tract of land commencing at a point 25 feet south of the center of the Belt Railway Company's right of way (present) on the east line of Tennessee avenue (old Blowing Springs road); thence south along the east line of said Tennessee Avenue, 70 feet, more or less, to the present line of the Town of St. Elmo, disposal or septic plant road; thence southeastwardly along the line of said Town of St. Elmo disposal or septic road 122 feet, more or less, to the northwest corner of J. V. Lewis' shop site; thence eastwardly along the north line of said J. V. Lewis' shop site and parallel with and 122 feet south of the Belt Railway Company's right of way 288 feet, more or less, to the west line of the Town of St. Elmo Company's disposal or septic plant land; thence northwardly along the line of said Town of St. Elmo disposal or septic plant land 47 feet, more or less, to the northwest corner of said disposal or septic plant land; thence southeastwardly along the line of said disposal or septic plant to the Chattanooga creek; thence north 240 feet, more or less, along Chattanooga creek to a point 25 feet from the center of the present Belt Railway Company's right of way; thence northwestwardly and parallel with said Belt Railway Company's present right of way to the point of beginning.

Being the same property that was conveyed by Fowler Lewis Oil Refining Company, Inc., to the Volunteer Oil Refineries, Inc., by deed registered in book X, vol. 22, page 679, of the register's office of Hamilton county, Tennessee, including equipments, machinery and patent rights of said Volunteer Oil Refineries, Inc.

Said deed of trust warrants the title as clear, free and unencumbered, but said sale will be made as trustee only.

Said sale will be made subject to all taxes and assessments that are a lien and unpaid.

This the 28th day of May, 1930.

MACHINISTS NOTES

Bro. E. H. Weller has returned from Hot Springs, after boiling out a rheumatic attack. Ed is feeling "fit as a fiddle," and his friends are glad to welcome him home.

Bro. E. H. Schneider is still confined to his home by illness.

Bro. J. E. Cantrell, who has been visiting homefolks at Bull's Gap, has returned, and is endeavoring to "shake off" an attack of illness.

Many members of Lodges 56 and 1450 learned with regret of the passing Wednesday of J. W. Howard, former member of both lodges, who had resided in Florida for the past few years. Bro. Howard was laid to rest Thursday, and a large number of members attended the last rites.

* * *

Bro. Tom Hall has had as a visitor for the past week young Robert J., who is a student at the medical school of the University of Tennessee at Memphis. Mr. Hall, Jr., is employed during the summer months on the advertising force of a Memphis daily. He returned to the Bluff City Tuesday.

"JIMMIE."

LABOR WINS LONG FIGHT.

Baltimore.—The municipal board of estimates fixed the minimum wage to be paid by contractors on city work.

The Maryland Employers' association, true to its anti-union policy, declare they will ask the courts to set aside the decision.

Labor has urged such a minimum wage for nine years.

UNIONS INCREASE.

Mankato, Minn.—Increased membership in several local unions is the result of individual effort by members of these organizations. Sheet metal workers increased 20 per cent and plumbers 25 per cent.

WITH THE ELECTRICAL WORKERS

By E. E. CROSBY

J. H. (Dutch) Lofty had his Ford out for an airing last Sunday after having it penned up all winter.

About ten of the brothers have been working on the new addition to a local stove works for the past two weeks. All the brothers have been working.

Had a report that Fred Simons has bought a coal mine up on one of the mountains. It's too hot for coal now, Fred, just keep it until next winter. The brothers might want a little credit.

Wendel Worley has tired of city life and moved out near Red Bank.

Brothers, the school bell rings promptly now at 7 o'clock on Friday nights. Brother Bill Williams will be in charge.

W. P. Howard has been on the sick list this week, but is improving and probably will be back on the job next week.

Just because a fellow comes in with his hands all scratched up now he hasn't been fighting the cat. Blackberries are ripening.

C. E. Cofer nearly had an extra shower bath this week. W. B. Dykes saw a lot of smoke and discovered it in time. Cofer was just lighting his pipe.

Postoffice Squibs

By R. B. LANE

The boys are getting a great kick out of a little incident which occurred last Saturday. Yeah, so am I.

J. A. Clark left on vacation Friday night, going to Memphis and points in Arkansas. H. B. Lewis is going to Washington to visit his son.

Don't forget the letter carriers' picnic on the 26th at East Lake park. All carriers expected to bring basket lunch. Wanted: Two old maids to pack lunch and go with Harry Gribben and J. L. Miller to the picnic.

* * *

W. A. Myers and Mrs. Myers celebrated their thirteenth anniversary with a dinner last Sunday. Had all their children with them. By the way, that is the reason Bill is driving a Packard, to provide more room for their accommodation.

The Spanish-American War Veterans are feeling better since congress passed an amended pension bill.

Supt. John S. Walker borrowed a rifle to shoot rabbits, which are eating up his garden. Why, he says they are so bold he can't go into the garden for fear of being attacked.

They are figuring out a new carrier route for North Chattanooga, which is badly needed.

J. L. Turner has been off a few days, having trouble with his feet. (Did you ever try water?)

* * *

J. T. McPherson, of the parcel post division, will return to work Monday after a couple of weeks' vacation.

M. L. Read, superintendent of special delivery, returned to duty after using the balance of his vacation.

Vacations for this year start on July 1, the writer being among the first to go. See you later.

Back Quit Hurting

"I was in a very weak condition from a serious sickness," writes Mrs. I. Leonard, 571 Joseph St., New Orleans, La. "I was so weak, I wanted to sleep all the time. I did not have strength to do anything. My back ached nearly all the time. I was just in misery.

"My mother told me I must arouse myself from the sleepiness, and take something to help get my strength back. She had taken Cardui and had been helped, so I decided to take Cardui, too. After my first bottle, I could see that it was helping me. I took four bottles at this time. My strength came back and I gained weight. Pretty soon, I was my old self again.

"My back quit hurting, and I haven't had any more trouble since I took Cardui."

LONG WORK DAY IN TEXTILES IS CONDEMNED AT NATIONAL CONFERENCE ON SOCIAL WORK

(By International Labor News Service.)

Boston, June 19.—The long work day was vigorously attacked at the national conference of social work during a discussion of the problems of the southern textile mill industry.

Thomas F. McMahon, international president of the United Textile Workers of America, proposed education to break down the wall separating management and labor.

Henry P. Kendall, president of the Kendall company, of Boston, operators of southern mills, proposed limitation of output and scientific management linked with common sense and consideration of the point of view of employes to solving problem.

James Myers, industrial secretary of the church and social service of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, declared labor troubles in the southern mills were mostly due to conditions in the mills themselves rather than to agitators.

Miss Caroline Manning, expert of the United States women's bureau, told the conference that paradoxical as it may sound, a young woman of 29 often suddenly discovers that she is an old woman when seeking a job.

"Industry is acting upon the assumption that you can not teach an old dog new tricks and has not used practical tests to demonstrate fitness for simple jobs; nor has it proven that other qualities may not compensate for loss of speed," in the opinion of Miss Manning.

That production automatically decreases upon reaching a certain birthday is an absurd theory, the sooner discarded the better, she believed, in view of the fact that it has not yet been proven at what definite age maximum efficiency is reached.

Illustrative of the difficulties of girls of 25 or so in trying to get through the employment gate were the experiences quoted by Miss Manning of women whom she had interviewed in a recent survey. For example, a 28-year-old forelady in a cigar factory who had lost her position through the merging of her plant with another in a different locality had discovered on seeking new work that she was "too old to get a good job."

"When you go looking for work they all want kids" has been the explanation offered Miss Manning by a woman of 29.

To the woman of over 40 forced to seek a job the situation seems almost hopeless, Miss Manning had found from talking to such applicants. One 46-year-old woman was reported as saying, "My husband and I seem to have passed the age when we are expected to live."

Chicago Carmen Sign New Wage Agreement

Terms of Contract, to Run Year From May 31, Include Pay Scale in Effect for Last Three Years.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Chicago, June 19.—Union employes of the Chicago Surface Lines have signed a new wage and working agreement with the company. The terms of the contract include renewal of the wage scale which has been in effect for the last three years and will run one year from May 31, 1930.

The employes of the Chicago Rapid Transit company, operating the elevated lines, will vote on a proposition to renew their old contract without change. The expiring contracts of both groups were the result of arbitration in which Alderman Oscar F. Nelson, vice-president of the Chicago Federation of Labor, and Guy A. Richardson, representing the Surface Lines, acted as arbitrators.

The contract agreed upon in this settlement gave the 15,000 employed on the surface lines increases from 75 to 77 cents an hour, and the elevated employes increases from 77 to 79 cents an hour, maximum pay.

Wage Gains Are Easy For P. O. Politicians

Washington.—Congress has quietly raised the salaries of fifty-two postmasters in the leading cities of the country.

The largest gains were secured by New York and Chicago postmasters, whose "wage" was increased 50 per cent, or from $8,000 to $12,000 a year.

These postmasters are the politicians of the service—and they are the highest paid. Their knowledge of handling mail is less than their ability to "get out the vote" at election times.

Postmaster-General Brown urged congress to grant the increases which he declared were "conservative."

Mr. Brown, however, took a contrary position when postoffice laborers asked that they be advanced from $1,500 a year to $1,700. One would suppose that no one would dare ignore such pauper wages in a government department, but the demand shocked Mr. Brown. He assured these workers that such a request is out of the question.

The postal chief recently opposed the 44-hour week before a congressional committee and he declared that wages should be based on the number of job seekers. This system does not seem to apply when his political aides are involved.

Department economy only applies to the men who do the work. It does not include ship subsidies, called "mail contracts;" airplane grants or salary grabs for office ornaments.

"Insulated Life" Assailed by Butler

New York.—"The insulated life is the selfish, the self-centered, the narrow, and, sooner or later, the embittered life," declared Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president Columbia university, at the commencement exercises of that institution.

The educator scored intolerance, lack of understanding and narrowness of knowledge of the average person.

"There are comparatively few men and women alive in the world, although there are hundreds of millions of human beings," he asserted, in pleading for a liberal education. Such an education, he said, "is that which is worthy of a freeman and which fits man for intellectual and spiritual freedom.

"A liberal education is not to be confused with mere attendance at school or college or with the possession of a certificate to that effect, still less with formal instruction of any kind, although it may and usually does make good use of all these."

UNITING WAITRESSES.

Boston.—An organizing campaign in behalf of waitresses is on in this city. The movement is directed by the Hotel and Restaurant Employes' International alliance.

"I wish We had a telephone! nobody asks us to go places."

● In a home without a telephone, this is an often repeated complaint. And the children are not the only ones who feel the need for a telephone. Mother, too, is frequently inconvenienced and even embarrassed when forced to answer to friends who say "I'll call up some time" that "we haven't a telephone." ● Why continue to deprive yourself and family of the satisfaction and comfort of a telephone in your home? You too, can afford a telephone, with all its convenience and protection in emergencies, for the cost is so low as to be within the reach of almost every one. ● Find out, today, how easy it is to have a telephone and how little it costs. Just call the Business Office.

Consider for a moment how much your name in this book will mean to you and your family. Your position in your community, your family's social activities, your opportunities to enjoy life require that you be always within quick and easy reach of your friends and business associates. A telephone in your home provides for these contacts.

5,000,000 AMERICAN FAMILIES NOW BELOW HEALTH STANDARD

President of American Federation of Labor Pleads for Action by Nation's Lawmakers Before Adjourning of Congress. Striking Facts Presented Before Committee Considering Unemployment Bills.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Washington, June 19.—If the five-day week doesn't put the idle at work, then bring on the four-day week; if higher wages do not provide the purchasing power, then still higher wages. And it would be "inconceivable" for congress to adjourn without providing relief.

Thus President William Green put the question of what to do about unemployment before the house judiciary committee this week. For more than two hours the president of the American Federation of Labor offered facts and answered questions in a hearing on the trio of bills known as the Wagner bills, already passed by the senate and now before the house.

These bills would create federal-state unemployment agencies, provide for a constant survey of unemployment and create a rolling fund available for government work to forestall unemployment.

Four planks were in the definite program offered the committee by President Green as labor's program. They follow:

LABOR'S PROGRAM.

1—Shorter daily and weekly work periods in order that more workers shall be employed and all shall have leisure to enjoy the products of industry.

2—Higher incomes for wage earners in order that this vast potential market may be able through its purchases to stimulate industries to their full capacity.

3—A system of federal employment agencies for the workless so that they may have most efficient services in finding all work opportunities.

4—A vocational guidance service connected with employment offices to help workers whose crafts are displaced by new production methods, to equip themselves for positions under new industrial conditions.

President Green charged that unemployment is as great as in January—with the astounding total of 20 per cent idle. In figures the number idle, he said, is 3,609,000, a slight drop from the 3,700,000 idle in February.

More Idle Than in January.

"Building trades men are the only trade group showing any improvement," he said. "Ten per cent of those out of work in April have found employment, but this is a very small improvement, considering the large number seeking work. Thirty-six per cent are still unemployed. After the crisis of 1928, the improvement for building trades men from April to May was more than twice as great. In metal trades, the number unemployed is actually increasing. Twenty per cent are now out of work, four times as many as at this time last year. The dull condition of the metal industries is making it harder than ever for members to find work. Unemployment has actually increased from 15 per cent in January to 20 per cent in May, when unemployment is usually improving at this season of the year. In printing 6 per cent are still out of work, an unprecedented number, and twice as many as at this time last year.

"Wage earners have been stating in emphatic terms that they would like to live better and if they had the money there would be no surplus of bath tubs, shoes, dentists' services, books, automobiles, good clothing. Higher wage rates and more stable employment would increase wage earners' incomes so that they might buy those things they want and need.

Five Million in Squalor.

"There is at our very doors a huge potential market for American products which should be used to turn the tide of business upward toward prosperity.

"Over 7,000,000 families in the United States have no automobile; about 20,000,000 have no adequate radio set. In our cities alone, without counting farm population, there were in 1928 over 4,000,000 families who had no bathtubs in their homes, and over 3,000,000 who had not even a kitchen sink with running water, and probably no plumbing of any kind in their houses. Over 13,000,000 families in our cities have no telephones; over 4,000,000 live in homes not wired with electricity.

"About 5,000,000 families in America today are living below the minimum of health and efficiency level; they need furniture, clothing, food, better housing. And the four and one-half million who have barely enough to support themselves at a minimum of health level are only too eager to raise their standard of living by buying industrial products. All these are eager to be customers of our industries.

"Take the hosiery industry, for instance, which is now suffering from overproduction. It would not have the least difficulty in selling its products if the thousands of women who want silk stockings could buy enough to satisfy their needs. The cotton industry would not be calling for drastic curtailment if wage earners could buy all the cotton goods they need for clothes and household supplies. Automobile manufacturers could keep on expanding production instead of reducing if the 7,000,000 families who have no cars were able to buy. And so with other industries.

An Army of Needy.

"Here is an immense potential market for our goods. Developing this market will mean higher living standards for thousands who have not yet shared in American prosperity. It will mean human progress along with industrial progress; the creation of better homes, happier families, a higher quality of citizenship, greater opportunity to develop the fine human qualities latent in thousands of our underprivileged citizens.

"The market of the future is with the wage earners. Mass production calls for mass buying, and our problem is to make it possible for the millions who are not yet customers to buy according to their needs. How can their buying power be financed?"

Turning to a detailed examination of the unemployment created constantly by displacement of men by machinery, President Green fired statistics broadside.

"Take, for instance," he said, "the manufacture of electric light bulbs. In 1918 it took one man a whole day to make forty electric light bulbs. The next year came a machine that made 73,000 bulbs in twenty-four hours. Each of these machines threw 992 men out of work. In the boot and shoe industry 100 machines take the place of 25,000 men. In the manufacture of razor blades, one man can now turn out 32,000 blades in the same time needed for 500 in 1913. In automobile factories similar changes have taken place.

Miracles of Machines.

"In a middle western state today a huge machine turns out completed automobile frames almost untouched by human hands. About 200 men are needed to supervise this vast machine, and they turn out between 7,000 and 9,000 frames a day. Compare this with a well-known automobile plant in central Europe where the same number of men are making automobile frames by older methods. They turn out thirty-five frames a day. In steel blast furnaces seven men now do the work of sixty in casting pig iron, and even in the last two years, since 1927 the improvements in technical processes have reduced the necessary work force in the bessemer process by 24 per cent in machine shops; one man with a 'gang' of semi-automatic machines replaces twenty-five skilled mechanics. Thirty workers with ten machines can now do the work of 240 in the Sun Tube corporation machine shop. A new machine installed by the de Forrest Radio company will turn out 2,000 tubes an hour with three operatives as against 150 tubes from the old machine with forty operators.

"What happens to these displaced workers? Take the record for all manufacturing industry in the United States. In the decade from 1899 to 1909 production increased 59 per cent. Improved machinery played some part in this increase, but it was largely made possible by taking on more wage earners, for the number of wage earners employed by our factories increased 40 per cent from 1899 to 1909—that is, 1,903,000 more wage earners were taken on to bring about this 59 per cent increase in production. Similarly in the decade from 1909 to 1919 production increased 35 per cent and employment increased 38 per cent. Increased production was made possible by employing 2,481,000 more wage earners. This meant jobs for nearly two and a half million more men and women.

Fewer Workers; More Output.

"Now in the decade from 1919 to 1929 developments took an entirely different turn. Production increased as before, so that our plants were turning out 42 per cent more in 1929 than in 1919. But this increase was made possible without any increase in the number of wage earners employed. Employment actually decreased 7 per cent from 1919 to 1929. Forty-two per cent more goods were produced with 585,000 fewer workers. This general increase was made possible by the introduction of new machinery and modern methods of manufacture. Increasing production instead of creating more work, actually took away 585,000 jobs.

"The purchasing power of the average wage earner increased 11 per cent in the twenty years from 1899 to 1919, but in the short space of ten years from 1919 to 1919 (half as long) it increased 53 per cent.

"These great changes have so limited the number of wage earners needed in our manufacturing industries that men and women are forced to walk the streets looking for work. To be sure some jobs are created in the several industries, where employment has been increasing in the last decade, but these are not nearly enough to make up for the change in manufacturing."

HAMMILL DEFEATED.

Des Moines, Ia.—Trade unionists in this state are jubilant over the defeat of Gov. Hammill, who was a candidate for United States senator.

Hammill has the blackest labor record of any Iowa governor. He threw every power at his command against workers when they attemnted to correct the convict labor evil in this state.

SHOPCRAFTS ADOPT PROGRAM FOR SHORTER WORK WEEK AND STABILIZATION OF EMPLOYMENT

Fourteenth Regular Convention Over

OLD OFFICERS ARE RE-ELECTED

Entertainment Features Declared Most Enjoyable. Many National Figures Guests of System Federation Convention.

OFFICERS RE-ELECTED.

At the concluding session of the convention Thursday evening all executive officers of the System Federation were re-elected, as follows:

B. B. St. Clair (Machinists), president, Knoxville.
W. H. Baldock (Sheet Metal Workers), secretary, Knoxville.
W. W. Dyke (Carmen), Knoxville.
W. M. Wands (Boilermakers), Spencer, N. C.
Logan Waddle (Electrical Workers), Somerset, Ky.
T. M. Melton (Blacksmiths), Chattanooga.

The entire program outlined by the Railway Employes' Department, American Federation of Labor, was approved and officially adopted by the fourteenth convention of the Federated Shopcrafts of the Southern and Allied Lines, which officially closed its sessions Thursday night after a four-days' meeting which was generally described as the most successful gathering ever held by the southern craftsmen, and hearty approval was given by each of the six affiliated crafts in separate meetings. The program as adopted, with particular stress laid upon the shorter work-week and stabilization of employment, includes:

1. Reduction in hours.
2. Reduction in apprentices.
3. Lengthening of the terms of apprenticeship.
4. Gradual elimination of helpers.
5. Vacations with pay.
6. Minimum force agreement.
7. Railroad work in railroad shops.
8. Maintenance reserve.

Featuring the deliberations were a splendid spirit of complete harmony and singleness of purpose, and decisions of the general meetings, held each afternoon, were immediately and enthusiastically approved at separate executive sessions the following morning.

Two hundred delegates from thirteen states were joined by officers and representatives of the grand lodges of each craft, the whole constituting probably the greatest gathering of labor officials ever held in Chattanooga.

The general sessions were opened Monday afternoon at Hotel Patten, and after official greetings and the usual preliminaries were disposed of, President B. B. St. Clair delivered his annual report, printed copies of which were furnished each delegate. Detailed reports of all wage conferences were also given the delegates. The remainder of the day's session was given over to addresses by international officials, the chairman introducing in succession Martin F. Ryan, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Carmen and treasurer of the American Federation of Labor; A. O. Wharton, president of the International Association of Machinists and vice-president of the American Federation of Labor; Roy Horn, general president of the Blacksmiths' International union; C. J. McGlogan, vice-president of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers; J. N. Wilson, vice-president of the Boilermakers' International union; Arthur Milligan, representing the Sheet Metal Workers' International union; T. M. Jewell, president of the Railway Employes' Department, A. F. of L.; J. F. McCreery, vice-president of the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen; George Woomer, representing the Electrical Workers; George Marshall, representing the Machinists; Edward Ware, vice-president of the Carmen; J. M. Ellis, secretary-treasurer of the Carmen, and Earl Miller, representing the Machinists.

Address of Paul J. Smith, chairman of the southern organizing campaign of the American Federation of Labor, was a feature of Tuesday's session, and Capt. O. S. Beyer, consulting engineer of the Railway Employes' Department, delivered an interesting speech on Wednesday.

Among the resolutions adopted pertaining indirectly on the shopcrafts was one indorsing the Wagner unemployment bills, condemning as reactionary lawmakers who are opposing or holding up these bills, and calling upon senators and congressmen from each district territory to actively support them.

ENTERTAINMENT FEATURES IN ENTERTAINMENT.

Apparently every spare hour of the delegates and visitors was taken up with some entertainment feature, many of these being joint affairs and others staged by the separate craft organizations in honor of their international and grand lodge officials.

On Tuesday President Wharton, of the Machinists, addressed a meeting of Machinists at Central Labor hall, attended by both union and non-union craftsmen in this city. Wednesday evening Mr. Wharton was honored with a banquet spread at Hotel Patten, attended by some fifty or sixty local members and practically all of the visiting officials. Several of the local officials entertained their grand lodge guests in their homes.

Boilermakers and Blacksmiths held "blowouts" on Tuesday night, and on Thursday evening the Carmen staged an enjoyable affair at the ladies' building at Warner park, a feature of this affair being the presentation to President Ryan of a diamond stickpin. Sheet Metal Workers held forth at Odd Fellows' hall Thursday night, honoring J. H. Baldock, president of the district and secretary of the general federation.

Many lady visitors accompanying the delegates were also entertained, functions, dinners, sightseeing trips, etc., being numerous. A theater party at the American theater was also an entertainment feature of Monday evening.

E. G. Burton, chairman of the local shopcrafts federation, and T. M. Melton, general chairman for the same organization, assisted in the preparations and general conduct of the convention.

Local union committees included: For the Carmen, O. D. Ramsey, J. H. Wood and J. W. Fuller; for the two Machinists' lodges, W. F. Lange, W. A. Lance, W. L. Wergin, W. M. Carlisle and Tom F. Hall; for the Sheet Metal Workers, J. N. Walker, A. T. Morton and N. L. Kerby.

The delegates were of one mind in proclaiming the convention the most successful and enjoyable of any yet held, and many expressed appreciation of courtesies extended by local craftsmen.

SHOPCRAFTS TO AID LOCAL UNIONISTS IN HILL-MASCOT CASES

Delegates From Thirteen States Pledge Assistance to Publicity Campaign in Matter of H. G. Hill Company and Mascot Sterchi-Fowler—Letter From Local Labor Officials Written in Records.

Delegates to the Shopcrafts convention, who come from thirteen states in this territory, Thursday pledged every assistance to the Chattanooga labor movement in giving publicity to two major controversies into which local workers have been forced by union-hating corporations.

On Wednesday a letter was addressed to Secretary W. H. Baldock, of the Federation, from the executive board of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council, calling attention to the situation with respect to the Mascot-Sterchi-Fowler concerns and the H. G. Hill chain grocery corporation.

In referring to the Mascot affair, the letter said, "The details of this occurrence are too long a story to go into at this time, but we are content to say that the lockout was one of the most unfair and unreasonable actions which the local movement has ever had to contend with," and states that in the lockout of meatcutters by the H. G. Hill chain stores, "this firm has also taken a cold-blooded and unfair attitude towards organized labor."

Delegates to the convention were asked to report the affairs upon their return to their respective homes, and assurance were given Friday that this would be cheerfully done.

Motion was unanimously carried to include the letter in the proceedings, copies of which will be sent to all affiliates.

The letter, which was read to the convention Thursday, follows:

June 25, 1930.

Mr. W. H. Baldock, Secy.,
Federated Shopcrafts,
Hotel Patten,
City.
Dear Sir and Brother:

The Chattanooga labor movement has been engaged for some time in two separate controversies which involve principles upon which our whole movement is founded, and we are asking that you place the following information to your convention, in order that they may report same to their brother workers in all lines when they return to their respective homes:

The Mascot Stove company, formerly a strictly union concern, some three years ago arbitrarily locked out union craftsmen and filled their places with strike-breakers. The details of this occurrence are too long a story to go into at this time, but we are content to say that the lockout was one of the most unfair and unreasonable actions which this local movement has ever had to contend with. This concern has since maintained a very unfriendly and "hard-boiled" attitude, refusing all efforts to renew its relations with us.

Mascot products were formerly sold over a wide territory, and we believe there may still be a sale for these stoves in some parts of the territory from which your convention delegates come.

In connection with the Mascot trouble, the Sterchi chain furniture stores, which also cover a wide territory, and the Fowler stores, locally, were declared "unfair to organized labor," on information and belief that these firms had close connections with the Mascot ownership, if not in fact owning the concern outright.

Another bitter controversy in which a labor-hating chain firm has laid down a challenge to local workers is that between Chattanooga Meatcutters and the H. G. Hill grocery company, with headquarters in Nashville and operating grocery stores in a number of southern cities. This firm also has taken a cold-blooded and unfair attitude towards organized labor, and we are endeavoring to inform all friends of labor of the circumstances.

Chattanooga Trades and Labor council and the Tennessee Federation of Labor have declared the above firms "unfair to organized labor," and we would appreciate it very much if you will read this letter to your convention, and urge all delegates to give the matter widest possible publicity upon their return to their respective homes.

Thanking you in advance, and with all good wishes for the greatest success of your convention.

Sincerely and fraternally,
CHATTANOOGA TRADES AND LABOR COUNCIL,
M. H. ORTWEIN, Pres.
MATT GERLACH, Secy.

PAINTERS PLAN ANNUAL PICNIC

Barbecue at Winnepesaukah July 30---J. G. Burkes Named President of Local 226.

J. G. Burkes was named president of Local 226, Painters, at the regular weekly session Thursday night. Mr. Burkes succeeds Horton Morrison, who resigned after serving several terms in the office. The new president's term will expire in one year, Mr. Morrison having been elected in January for an eighteen-months term.

Roy Bowen was nominated for trustee, without opposition, and will be formally elected at the regular meeting next week.

"The biggest and best ever" is solemnly promised by a committee named Thursday night to arrange for the eighth annual barbecue picnic of Local 226, Painters and Decorators. The local has accumulated quite a reputation for staging enjoyable affairs each summer, and this year's committee is assuming a big task and making a big promise.

W. A. "Zeke" Witt, famous throughout the territory for his ability to prepare a barbecue feast, is chairman of the committee, and will have direct charge of the "eats" feature of the affair. Associated with him are others who have had a part in making "Painters' day" a highly-enjoyable occasion for the past several years. Charles Melford, T. H. Rosser, F. S. Thurston and E. L. Blair complete the general committee, who will early next week select subcommittees for various features of the undertaking.

The outing will be held at Lake Winnepesaukah on July 30, and an extensive program of athletic contests will augment the regular concessions at the popular playground.

HOME FOR AGED ON PROGRAM OF MEAT CUTTERS

Convention Votes to Establish Institution.

FIVE-DAY WEEK IS ALSO ENDORSED

Old-Age Pensions Approved at Largely Attended Annual Gathering.

By JOSEPH A. WISE

Detroit, Mich., June 26.—The convention of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America, just held here, adopted plans submitted by the general executive board for the establishment of a home for aged and incapacitated members. There was considerable opposition to the proposal, but the many arguments in its favor presented by President Patrick E. Gorman, Secretary-Treasurer Dennis Lane, Vice-President Michael J. Kelly and other members of the executive board caused several of the objectors to reverse their position.

The convention voted unanimously in favor of the five-day week in the packing industry.

A resolution favoring old age pensions was adopted.

Consent Decree Defended.

The convention went on record as strenuously opposed to any action by the United States government that would set aside the packers' consent decree, which would have the effect of legally permitting the packers to operate retail meat markets in competition with the thousands of retail dealers who must purchase their supplies from the packers.

The convention advised all members to refrain from handling all fresh and frozen packaged meats coming from the packing houses for delivery to the consumer. The president and secretary-treasurer were instructed to employ chemists and bacteriologists to conduct scientific tests to determine the wholesomeness of meats prepared in this manner. The delegates to the next convention of the American Federation of Labor were instructed to call this matter to the attention of the general labor movement with a view of investigating the manipulation of certain packers' patent rights in the processing of frozen packaged meats, and, if deemed advisable, to take steps to obtain legislation that would end a monopoly.

Union in Fine Shape.

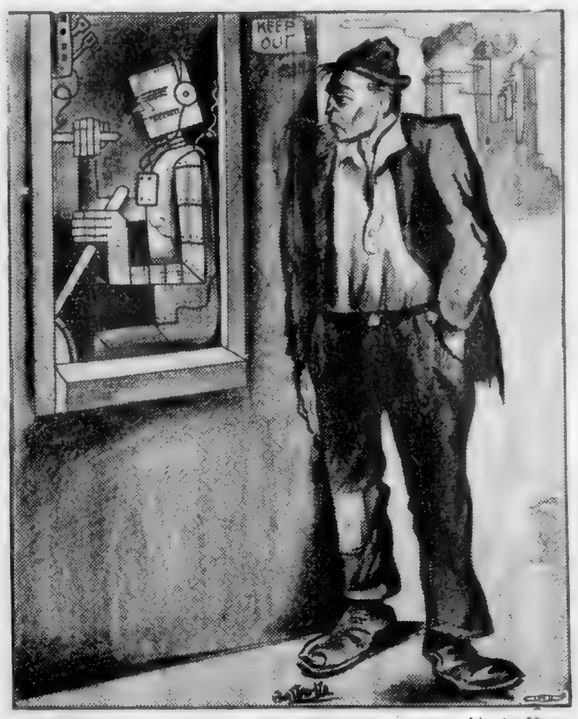
Secretary-Treasurer Dennis Lane reported to the convention that the organization is in a flourishing condition and that the delegates in attendance were twice the number that attended the previous convention, held at Louisville, Ky., four years ago. President Gorman expressed gratification over the great increase in membership in the northwest and on the Pacific coast.

Vice-Presidents Kelly and MacCreash and Delegate Joseph Y. Henderson were appointed as a special committee to solicit individual subscriptions for the Molders' Defense committee, which is endeavoring to obtain the release of Tom Mooney and Warren K. Billings from San Quentin prison.

The following officers were elected: Patrick E. Gorman, Louisville, president; Dennis Lane, Chicago, secretary-treasurer; Michael J. Kelly, Chicago, vice-president; T. A. McCreash, Des Moines, vice-president; E. W. Jimerson, East St. Louis, vice-president; J. P. McCoy, St. Paul, vice-president; John J. Walsh, New York, vice-president; John Malone, Ft. Worth, vice-president; F. W. Garlich, Oakland, Cal., vice-president; Herbert H. Tunney, San Diego, vice-president; Joseph Hofmann, Seattle, vice-president.

GREEN, WAGNER SCORE SOLONS FOR REFUSAL TO AID JOBLESS; HOUSE COMMITTEE DENOUNCED

"BUSINESS IS GOOD!"



"The nation is back at work," glibly announces a cabinet officer, and, "we have suffered from little more than seasonal unemployment." But the hundreds of thousands who have been shunted "from pillar to post" in their desperate but fruitless quest for employment may hardly be expected to give three cheers for the present brand of "prosperity." The Labor World staff artist has pictured above one of the greatest problems ever to face the American people.

Senator Holds President Responsible

UNEMPLOYMENT BILLS EMASCULATED

Proposals for Ending Distress Made 'Empty Shell,' Declares New York Lawmaker.—Labor Head Disappointed.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Washington, June 26.—Sharp criticism of congress for its failure to enact unemployment relief legislation was made by President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, and Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York, in statements scoring the house judiciary committee for its handling of the three Wagner unemployment bills passed by the senate.

President Green denounced the action of the house judiciary committee in referring one of the Wagner bills to a subcommittee as an expression of hostility and opposition to the measure. Senator Wagner, holding President Hoover responsible for the failure of congress to enact unemployment legislation, declared the house committee had amended his bills so as to destroy their value.

"The present congress is an absolute failure as far as dealing constructively with the problem of unemployment," Mr. Green said, while Senator Wagner declared the country "will stand aghast at the action of the house judiciary committee" in referring to a subcommittee his bill for federal employment agencies and his public works measure to make it "an empty shell."

Labor Deeply Disappointed.

"The officers and members of the American Federation of Labor are deeply disappointed over the action of the house judiciary committee in voting to refer Senator Wagner's employment agency bill to a subcommittee," President Green said. "We construe such action as an expression of hostility and opposition to this proposed measure. Reference of this measure to a subcommittee will obviously delay favorable consideration and action upon this measure at the present session of congress.

"We are also disappointed over the action of the same house judiciary committee upon the bill providing for long range planning of public works in order to deal more effectively with the problem of unemployment. The amendments which the committee made to this bill are highly objectionable to labor and will, in our judgment, weaken the bill and render it almost ineffective.

"It is amazing, indeed, that the congress of the United States, meeting at a time when the nation is suffering from the effects of a long continued period of unemployment, would fail, under such circumstances, to do something constructive which in effect would be a partial remedy for the distressing situation."

Hoover Held to Blame.

Senator Wagner said in his statement:

"In the face of an unemployment crisis rivaling any in our history, in the face of a business collapse, the president still refuses to permit congress to provide the necessary machinery for the prevention of such disasters in the future.

"The bill providing for the co-operative establishment of employment agencies has been sent to die in a subcommittee, in spite of the overwhelming demand for its passage and the universal recognition that it is indispensable to a program of attack upon unemployment.

"The bill providing for the long-range planning of public works has been so amended as to destroy all government responsibility for the problem, and to cripple every piece of machinery that is created for solving it. * * * Every committee that has studied the problem, every expert who has examined this legislation has approved it and recommended it.

Amendments Kill Bill.

"The amendments proposed in the long range planning bill strike at its very heart. First, the president would eliminate the preparation of the index of employment. The index is the most modern and scientific way of expressing a million feet of figures in a simple number.

"He would strike out the provision for the acceleration of public works when a depression is imminent. That provision is absolutely essential at all times and is indispensable when congress is not in session. * * *

"He would strike out the provision for advance planning, the kernel of any program of public works as a stabilizer of employment. Evidently, he has not learned from his experience of last autumn that even though we may want to stimulate

Number of Workers Makes Small Gain As Value of Output Soars 33 Per Cent

In Eleven Years, 43,000 More Persons, Or an Increase of 6.9 Per Cent, Were Employed in Canadian Manufacturing, While Production Jumped From $2,873,000,000 to $3,769,800,000, or a Gain of 33 Per Cent.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Ottawa, June 26.—In eleven years the number of persons employed in the manufacturing industries of Canada only increased by 43,000, or 6.9 per cent, while in the same period the gross value of the output increased from $2,873,000,000 to $3,769,800,000, or 33 per cent. If the manufacturing industries had been able to absorb their share of the natural increase in population and immigration, the increase in the number of employes would have been 200,000 instead of 43,000.

The Dominion bureau of statistics has just issued a report on the industrial census for the year 1928. The average number of persons employed in manufacturing is given as 665,943. This compares with 621,694 in 1917. Persons employed on salaries number 98,243, while 556,780 were listed as wage earners. Average yearly wages were $1,044; average salaries were $1,780.

The capital invested in Canadian manufacturing in 1928 was $4.780,000,000, compared with $2,696,000,000 in 1917, an increase of 77 per cent. An increase of 77 per cent in the capital, against an increase of less than 7 per cent in the number of persons employed, indicates the increasing importance of the role played by machinery in manufacturing.

The raw materials used in Canadian manufacturing industries in 1928 were valued at $1,950,800,000; the manufacturing processes added a value of $1,819,000,000.

Salaries paid aggregated $174,770,000 and wages $580,408,000—a total pay roll of $755,178,000. In 1917 the pay roll was $509,400,000. The increase in the pay roll was about 48 per cent.

MAY SALES SEARS, ROEBUCK DROP MORE THAN $2,000,000

While Big Chicago Non-Union Mail Order Concern Was Recording Losses, a Group of Forty National Chain Store Organizations Was Making substantial Gains, According to Latest Figures.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Chicago, June 26.—That the volume of sales of the chain of retail stores operated by Sears, Roebuck & Co., non-union Chicago mail order corporation, has greatly decreased during the last year was shown by figures recently made public. The drop in total sales came despite the fact that the company is operating a large number of stores than formerly. A statement issued at the year's close of business at the end of last December said the company was operating 315 stores at that time. A recent statement places the number at 320.

Total sales of the Sears, Roebuck & Co. retail stores for May, 1930, amounted to $30,685,991, as against $32,693,853 for the same period of 1929, a decrease of 6.1 per cent.

Total sales of this same group of stores for the five months ending May 31, 1930, amounted to $140,800,870, as against $144,179,104 for the like period of 1929, a decrease of 2.3 per cent.

While the Sears, Roebuck & Co. retail stores were recording these losses, a group of forty national chain store organizations, including the Sears, Roebuck chain, showed substantial gains. Total sales of the group of forty chains for May, 1930, were $217,285,623, as against $212,235,875 for May, 1929, a gain of 2.37 per cent. The same group had total sales of $986,361,220 for the five-month period ending May 31, 1930, as against $954,918,577 for the same period of 1929, a gain of 3.29 per cent.

These figures would seem to indicate that the non-union policy adopted by Sears, Roebuck & Co. a year and a half ago has worked great injury to that corporation. A drop of more than $2,000,000 in sales during May, 1930, over the same month of 1929 surely cannot altogether be accounted for by the business depression, especially when other chain store organizations not as strong as Sears, Roebuck & Co. have reported substantial gains.

THE FORD DEFICIT WAGE

Set alongside the living wage, the saving wage, the cultural wage and all the other kinds of wages, we now have the Ford deficit wage. It appears that the average Ford employe in Detroit ends his fiscal year with a deficit of a little over $7—not much, but a deficit just the same. If the average employe has a yearly deficit it would appear that the average employe will never get out of debt.

The Ford statistics, set forth in detail elsewhere in this issue, are worth considering. Few Ford employes have telephones, only about half have automobiles. But more important than these things, the average Ford employe has anything but steady employment.

Continuous process manufacturing doesn't seem to mean continuous employment. The average Ford employe at Detroit has work only 250 days a year and he earns about $1,694. There is something terribly wrong with an industry that can do no better than that. Mr. Ford is an autocrat and much ink has been spilled in gushing over his alleged miracles. But it is safe to say that thorough unionization, with employe-management cooperation, such as exists on the Baltimore & Ohio railroad and in the Naumkeag textile mills, would produce some miracles of which Mr. Ford, by himself as autocrat, can never bring to pass. The Ford workyear is about as it should be, when the compensation is adequate. It allows for a five-day week, generous holidays and vacations and for sick leaves. But an industry that works 250 days a year and leaves the average employe in debt is sick, as far as the employes are concerned.

By one clever device after another a great Ford myth has been built up. There has been just enough foundation for good myth-making. But facts are persistent things and they will come out in due time. It may be that Ford, in a competitive market, feels he is doing the best he can do. But that is not what the myth-makers tell us. They tell us that Ford is a wizard who is creating a paradise, who is doing things that others cannot do or do not do. That, plainly, is bunk. Slowly, but very surely, we are getting the low-down on this Ford business.

SO SACKETT SOCKS 'EM!

[illegible] comes out of Berlin, where the world power conference is going on. American Ambassador Sackett, it leaks out, was all set to make a speech in which he charged power companies with charging for their output fifteen times its cost of production, when along came Mr. Samuel Insull with the advice that Mr. Sackett had better lay off. First reports were that Mr. Sackett would oblige Mr. Insull and would not make the contemplated speech. Later word was that Mr. Sackett would by all means make the speech. The publicity given the affair left [illegible] no other course to pursue. But [illegible] been to publicize it may [illegible] the ambassador doing. That Sackett [illegible] stock [illegible] the moral [illegible]

DANVILLE SHOWS THE COUNTRY

[illegible] within a few [illegible] movement [illegible] has just [illegible] week. [illegible],000 and more come together to hear speeches and sings there is no mimmizing the fact that the event is a success.

Danville has scored a success. The effect of the event will continue. The feeling of self-confidence created by [illegible] will help bring about [illegible] record breaking.

Danville trade unionists—a goodly [illegible] singing of veterans with hundreds [illegible] recruits—have shown what can be done in this field.

It is worth hoping most ardently that other cities and sections will repeat what Danville has done. If they can improve on the record it is sure none will appreciate the achievement more than the Danville hustlers who know just what it means to perfect the machinery for such an event.

An air-cleaning and cooling system for passenger cars has just been successfully tested, and the Baltimore & Ohio and Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe have installed the system in some of their dining cars. The system is declared to take the bugbear of discomfort out of summer train travel. It is calculated to cool a car from 10 to 15 degrees below outside temperature on the hottest and most humid day.

OIL POOLS FAVORED

Washington, D. C.—Secretary of the Interior Wilbur favors a law that will legalize co-operative units of oil pools.

Under this system oil operators in specified areas can unite and lessen output.

The Passing Show

Note and Comment on Things Doing in the March of Events

Who controls the great corporations? Theodore Knappen, well-known financial writer, discussing this question in the Magazine of Wall Street, in a broad way finds that corporation control generally goes back to the powers of money and credit—to banks, bankers and finance. They have made control their business and shareholders haven't a look-in.

"The great masses of shareholders have nothing whatever to do with the policies of their companies," Mr. Knappen says.

This effectually disposes of the view that workers can control industry by stock buying, a view that has been assiduously advanced in recent years by certain economists. Labor has repeatedly warned against this view, pointing out the danger to the workers of stock-buying schemes and emphasizing that the only control exercised over industry by the workers came from their economic power as manifested in their trade unions.

In September, 1928, the Rocky Mountain Fuel company, of Colorado, made an agreement with the United Mine Workers of America granting wages said to be the highest, except in Wyoming, of any in the soft coal industry. The agreement also provided for a plan of co-operation between management and workers.

Now the committee on applied Christianity of the Colorado Congregational conference reports that the agreement brought the following results in 1929:

The total output of coal increased from 600,000 tons in 1928 to 800,000 tons in 1929. The output per man increased 1,400 pounds or seven-tenths of a ton per day, the cost of production decreased 19 cents per ton and the average annual wages jumped from $1,661,01 to $2,104.30, or 27 per cent. The average number of working days increased from 178 to 216, while the average for all miners in the state was 159 days.

In view of these accomplishments the committee recommends that the state industrial commission "direct the attention of other coal mine operators in the state to this successful industrial experiment" because "it appears greatly to have lessened the likelihood of industrial strife" which "has been notoriously and tragically prevalent in Colorado."

It would be well if the attention of all employers, north, south, east and west, could be directed to Colorado's "successful industrial experiment." There's a lesson in it for every one.

Bludgeoning tactics have always been a favorite with anti-union employers, who don't hesitate to try coercion on those who disagree with them. An example of this sort of thing is given by the Employing Printers' Association of America, which describes itself as the "American plan independent shop" group in the printing industry. The organization attacks the Federal Council of Churches in its bulletin, urging business men to contribute to their local churches only in case the latter refuse to support the federal council: "Business men identified with Protestant denominations may with excellent reason make their future church contributions conditional on the refusal of further support of the Federal Council of Churches."

This effort to curb the freedom of both local churches and the federal council was called forth by a discussion of labor injunctions in a monograph issued in March.

The association says that the federal council has "again assumed an unpatriotic attitude by affiliating with the forces seeking to deprive the courts of the United States of their power to protect the property rights of citizens." This absurd charge is based on the suggestion in the council's monograph that picketing and strikes for union recognition should not be enjoined.

MAIL ORDER HOUSE INCREASES WORK DAY TO GIVE EMPLOYES MUCH BOOMED "5-DAY WEEK"

Chicago, June 26.—The advertising department of Sears, Roebuck & Co. has been expending considerable energy in efforts to give nation-wide publicity to the company's newly adopted five-day week policy for the months of July and August. The innovation, which the company heads say is experimental, is regarded in trade union circles here as merely a gesture to placate public opinion which has become unfriendly toward Sears, Roebuck & Co. because of the company's non-union policy.

There seems to be a string attached to the new departure, however, a careful reading of a Sears, Roebuck press release received by the Chicago bureau of International Labor News Service would indicate. The paradoxical claim is made that some of the employes will work longer hours each day from Mondays to Friday, but still will obtain a shorter work week. Trade unions are familiar with that old but abandoned device for getting around the eight-hour day to obtain a half or whole day off Saturday.

The press release quotes T. J. Carney, vice-president in charge of operations of Sears, Roebuck & Co., as follows on this point:

"In order to give service, it will be necessary to increase in certain divisions the present working hours from Monday to Friday, but the information secured indicates the employes will welcome this decision in view of the shortening of the aggregate weekly hours and in view of the opportunity afforded them for longer week-end vacations."

The new order does not affect the mail order plants at Seattle and Los Angeles, Mr. Carney says. Decision as to the plants in those two cities is under advisement, he says. The mail order plants affected are located at Chicago, Philadelphia, Atlanta, Boston, Kansas City, Dallas and Minneapolis.

The employes of the 320 retail stores of Sears, Roebuck & Co. will get a half day only off each week, the time off to be designated by the store manager, who will be guided by local conditions, the announcement says. It is claimed by Mr. Carney that 39,000 employes are affected by the new order.

The notoriously unfair R. R. Donnelley & Sons company is busily engaged trying to make good on schedule time on the catalogues of Sears, Roebuck & Co. which are now being printed under strictly non-union conditions covered by a $30,000 000 contract which became effective last March and runs for a ten-year period.

U. S. Birth Rate Takes Sharp Drop

Washington, D. C.—The American birth rate is rapidly declining according to figures made public by the United States bureau of education.

In an average group of 200 Americans less than four children were born in 1928, as compared with five children born each year in a corresponding average group in 1915.

This decline is cutting down school registrations. The birth rate for the registration area has fallen without a check from 25.1 to 19.7 and the bureau statisticians expect it to continue falling. Actual decreases in the number of children in the lower grades of school are shown even in fast-growing cities.

There were 4,320,000 children in the first grade in 1920, while six years later, with a population increase of 10 per cent, there were less than 4,000,000.

In Chicago, at the end of September, 1924, there were 260,872 children in the first six grades of the regular day schools. In 1929 the enrollment was 254,666, a decrease of 6,206.

Electricity Cheap? Oh, Yeah! Says Senator Sackett

Ambassador Pricks Holes in the Full Page Advertisements That Tell of Kind-Hearted Corporations That Live to Serve.

Much has been made, in numerous full-page advertisements of certain public utility interests, of the statement that the price of electric current is "the only item of living expense that has not been increased since 1917."

Some explanation of the basic facts in this situation, as well as a revelation of where much of the missing "purchasing power" of the business world has gone, is found in the statement made by Ambassador Frederic M. Sackett, former United States senator from Kentucky, in his address before the World Power conference in Berlin.

"I know of no other manufacturing industry," said Mr. Sackett, "where the sale price of the product to the great mass of consumers is fifteen times the actual cost of production of the article sold. My purpose is sharply to define a weakness that calls for the keenest thought in your deliberations."

"Perhaps the premises of this simple statement may be disputed," he continued. "It may be argued that no such discrepancy exists. It may be excused or explained with the greatest ingenuity.

"But you who are in this business should remember that among the users of your product the class which is the greatest in number and constitutes the basis of that public opinion which in the end judges and controls public utilities is a vast body of men who every month pay a 6-cent charge in their households for an article which we are constantly told is being produced by efficient electric stations for from three-tenths to four-tenths of a cent."

The fact that Samuel K. Insull, notorious in Illinois politics, tried to have Mr. Sackett to suppress these statements, has only served to emphasize their truth, as well as to stiffen the backbone of Mr. Sackett in his determination to bring out what he regards as an important fact.

Average Ford Worker Earns Deficit Wage

Some Have Savings and Some Are in Debt at Year's End, With General Level Below Cost of Subsstence.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Washington, June 26.—Completion of a survey by the department of labor, under the supervision of Ethelbert Stewart commissioner of labor statistics, covering family expenditure of empoyes of the Ford plant in Detroit, is the first step in a process of investigation now under way to determine "international real wages." The following steps will be accomplished by similar surveys in seventeen European cities, undertaken by the international labor office.

The results of the various studies will be an itemized record of the actual purchasing power of the wages being paid at different points where the Ford company either has established, or is considering the establishment of branch plants for the manufacture of its various products.

The results of the Detroit survey will be shown in the forthcoming number of the Monthly Labor Review, and covers a study of 100 families selected as typical of the industry there, with wage incomes of from $6.40 to $7.28 per day, averaging $6.78 per day. It shows that the average number of working days was 250; the average year's earnings for all husbands was $1,694.63, with income from other sources bringing the total up to $1,711.87; and an average expenditure of $1,719.83, leaving an average deficit of $7.96 for the year. Some families reported savings, while others showed bills for medical and other emergency expenses which added considerably to their outgo.

Food Chief Expense Item.

The principal item of expense was for food, $556.12, 32.3 per cent of the yearly expense. Next came housing, $388.81, 22.6 per cent. Then followed clothing, $210.67, 12.2 per cent; fuel and light, $103.20, 6 per cent; furniture and furnishings, $88.55, 5.2 per cent; life insurance, $59.16, 3.4 per cent; street car and bus fares, $37.40, 2.2 per cent; sickness expense, $64.73, 3.8 per cent; school expenses, $6.41, 0.4 per cent; cleaning materials, $16.64, 1 per cent; barbering, $12.37, 0.7 per cent; and miscellaneous, $175.77, 10.2 per cent.

The typical home rented was of four or five rooms, with bathroom, inside toilet, running water, kitchen sink and sewer connection; in a separate house or entire floor of a two-family frame dwelling. All rooms had outside exposures, with one or more rooms per person. The home faced improved street with street lights, and was equipped with individual stoves, with half of the rooms equipped for heating.

Of 100 families, 47 owned cars, and 36 radios, while all took newspapers. Sewing machines were owned by 87, and 21 had vacuum cleaners of which 19 were electric; 5 had telephones, 13 had pianos, 45 had phonographs, and 51 had washing machines of which 49 were electric.

Installment Plan Buying.

Installment plan purchases were being made by fifty-nine of the families, furniture and house furnishings being most frequent on the list, with automobiles next. Tobacco averaged $22.72 for the eighty-four families using it, and the wife was specified as the user in one family at a cost of $6.50. Average expenditure for movies was $5.55, mostly for children who saw the afternoon performances, with an average of thirty-three movies yearly per family.

The International Labor office will conduct its part of the survey in the London, Manchester, Cork, Paris, Marseilles, Berlin, Frankfort, Antwerp, Rotterdam, Helsingfors, Copenhagen, Stockholm, Trieste, Genoa, Barcelona, Warsaw and Constantinople.

This will require a comparison of equivalents in articles and variances in customs affecting dress, recreation, transportation. The Detroit worker's need of a $30 suit might correspond to that of the Warsaw man for one costing $15; while the radios, movies, autos would find other substitutes in European cities. And it may turn out that a wage of $4 per day in Helsingfors or $5 per day in Berlin will give the equivalent in a standard of living as high as that of the Detroit worker who gets $7 per day.

SOUTHERN ORGANIZING DRIVE CONTINUES FINE PROGRESS, SAYS CHAIRMAN SMITH

(Special Correspondence.)

Birmingham, Ala., June 26.—According to a statement by George A. Sloan, president of the Cotton Textile Institute of New York, who was in Atlanta a few days ago attending a conference of textile mill executives of several southern states, the textile industry is recognizing the value of the shorter work-week, advocated by President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, in his two speaking tours of the south.

Press dispatches quote Mr. Sloan as saying that 68 out of 83 narrow sheeting mills in Georgia, Alabama, North and South Carolina have indorsed the "55-50" maximum hours for labor and machinery in these mills. The mills represent 91 per cent of the narrow sheeting mills of the United States.

The revised hours contemplate no reduction in wages for the workers. The 55-hour week is for day workers and the 50-hour week for night workers. This is regarded as the first victory for the organization campaign in the south which has been under way for the last six months, and was one of the first principles advocated by the southern organizers.

Another principle which the American Federation of Labor has been bearing down on, not only the south but over the nation, is greater regularity in employment, Paul J. Smith, chairman of the southern organization committee, said.

The statement of President Green before the house judiciary committee considering the three Wagner bills to relieve the unemployment situation is indorsed unreservedly by southern trade unions, Chairman Smith said.

The textile trades throughout the south see the advantage of it, and trade papers representing the industry declare the movement to be "the most constructive that has come from within the cotton industry during the past decade." Mills both north and south with a spindlage of 23,500,000 or about three-fourths of the active mills, have approved the policy of voluntary adjustment of working hours downward, which, as one trade paper says, "looks more perhaps to the welfare of labor than any other constituent part of the industry."

Workers in most of the mills in the south, it is pointed out, have been compelled to labor from twelve to fifteen hours in excess of the weekly "55-50" plan now being advocated and put into effect in many mills. The plan also obviates any overtime, thus cutting down excess production and stabilizing work time.

Labor leaders believe that the cutting down of work time in the cotton industry will also have an effect in cutting down the long hours in many other southern industries.

The work of organizing the southern workers is making great progress, not only in the textile fields but among other crafts, Chairman Smith said, in an analysis of reports from various sections of the south where organizing activities are going forward. Thousands of workers have joined the textile union in Virginia, Tennessee, Alabama, North and South Carolina, although the unemployment situation in many of these sections has been grave. In the Huntsville district alone there are some 8,000 textile workers who are anxious to join the union, and are doing so at the rate of several hundred per day, organizers report.

Rubber workers in the branch plant of the Goodyear company at Gadsden, Ala., numbering some 1,600, are importuning the southern organization headquarters for organization. Likewise employes of the Gulf Steel company are seeking the shelter of trade unionism. Workers of this concern have gradually lost many of their conditions and wages have been cut repeatedly. At a recent mass meeting of these workers it was decided to present their grievances to the company. The superintendent refused to treat with the men or hear anything they had to say. When he was informed that if he did not grant a conference the matter would be taken over his head, he consented to receive a committee. One worker at the mass meeting said he worked nine hours for 90 cents, or at the rate of 10 cents an hour. In an effort to make a "good showing" mill superintendents give no consideration whatever to workers or their conditions of employment. The employes are being organized and a local union at Gadsden shortly will be instituted.

A series of mass meetings in various key cities of the southern industrial states are being planned by labor leaders in furtherance of the educational values of trade unionism. The recent hot wave which has swept the south has had a tendency to slow up the enthusiasm of organizing, but despite the record-breaking torridity interest in the campaign is still high, Chairman Smith said.

CANAVAN AGAIN HEADS ALLIANCE

Theater Crafts Review Progress at Thirteenth Annual Meeting---Local Delegates Pleased.

Burson Lowry, delegate from Local 259, Moving Picture Machine Operators, to the thirteenth annual convention of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes and Moving Picture Machine Operators, and H. L. Stebbins, who represented Local 140, are highly pleased with reports submitted to the gathering, which closed last week at Los Angeles.

Conditions throughout the United States and Canada for members of the alliance, they declared, are excellent, with the exception of considerable unemployment among the Stage Employes' branch.

The largest number of delegates ever attending an Alliance meeting were present, according to Mr. Lowry, every one of the 846 locals being represented. Wayne Williams, Oba Ayers and DeWitt Ayers attended as visitors. These three, with Mr. Stebbins, drove through, while Mr. Lowry joined other delegates from the Seventh district in a special chartered Pullman. The delegates were entertained by Warner Bros. and Fox Studios.

Other officers elected by the convention were:

First vice-president, William Elliott, of Cleveland, O.; second vice-president, William Covert, of Toronto, Can.; third vice-president, Cleve Beck, of Fresno, Cal.; fourth vice-president, John P. Nick, of St. Louis, Mo.; fifth vice-president, William Harrer, of Philadelphia, Pa.; sixth vice-president, Joe Campbell, of Oklahoma City, Okla.; seventh vice-president, William Madigan, of Minneapolis, Minn.; secretary-treasurer, Fred J. Dempsey, of Boston, Mass.; trustees, W. C. Scanlon, Walter Croft, John M. Carroll; A. F. of L. delegates, Harry Griffin, James F. Burke; conductor, W. E. Johnston.

Fred J. Dempsey, who had served several terms as first vice-president, was named secretary-treasurer to succeed Richard J. Green, who was not a candidate.

Communists Hit Rocks; Their "Unions" Slump

New York.—Communist "unions" in this country have hit the rocks, according to Ben Gitlow, writing in a revolutionary publication.

Gitlow was expelled from the "party" by orders from Moscow and he and other ousted brethren are telling tales out of school.

Gitlow says the National Miners' union is a shadow and communists agree that it has less than 400 members.

The "red" National Textile Workers' union that was supposed to lead southern workers in Gastonia and elsewhere has dropped to less than 200 members. Disaster has likewise overtaken the Independent Shoe Workers' union and other alleged "unions" that were kept in the public eye by frenzied publicity.

AGAIN HEADS EQUITY

Frank Gillmore, president of the Actors' Equity association, who was recently re-elected at the seventeenth annual meeting of the organization held in New York City. It was announced that another effort would soon be made to establish the Equity contract and conditions of employment in the Hollywood talking picture district.

Machine Bars Women When Over 30 Years

Boston, Mass.—Women over 25 and 30 years old are finding it increasingly difficult to secure employment, said Miss Caroline Manning of the United States women's bureau in a talk before the Social Workers' conference here.

These women are assumed to be incompetent to manipulate machinery and perform other factory functions, said Miss Manning.

Where new mechanical devices have been installed in factories such as the cigar industry, large numbers of old employes have been dismissed and because of this arbitrary age handicap they are contributing to the unemployment problem, she explained.

If a woman can learn to run an airplane at 30 and drive an automobile at 50, said Miss Manning, she should be given a chance to demonstrate her ability to watch an automatic weighing machine or pull a lever that starts or stops a wrapping machine, since most of the modern machinery in factories requires little more attention than this.

To the woman of over 40 forced to seek a job the situation seems almost hopeless, Miss Manning had found from talking to such job applicants. One 46-year-old woman was reported as saying: "My husband and I seem to have passed the age when we are expected to live."

COPPER WORKERS CUT; ARE NOT ORGANIZED

Salt Lake City.—The Utah Copper company reduced wages 40 and 50 cents a day. Profits of this concern, last year, totaled $33,000,000 after all charges were met.

These workers are unorganized and the copper barons quickly take advantage of their employes' helplessness.

Nurse Tells How CARDUI Helped Her

Mrs. W. A. Cox, a well-known professional nurse, of Burnside, Ky., writes:

"I was in very bad health, and only weighed 110 pounds. I read in the papers about Cardui, and thought I would give it a try-out. After I had taken one bottle, I could see that I was improving. After I had taken it a month or two, I began to gain, and I weigh at present 168, and have weighed that for some time. I am now 55 years old, and can do as much work as the average middle-aged woman can.

"I would advise any woman, who is weakly and in a run-down condition, to try Cardui, but not to expect one bottle to make her well. I take two or three bottles a year, now, and I feel fine."

TO PARADE OR NOT TO PARADE

Annual Question Is Submitted to Local Unions Regarding Labor Day Celebration.

To parade or not to parade, the annual question with reference to a suitable celebration of Labor Day, was initiated at Central Body Monday night, and will in due course be presented for the consideration of every local union in Chattanooga.

In discussion of the nature of this year's observance of the day, it was developed that some locals are very much in favor of the time-honored feature, while others contend that progress has rendered the workers' demonstration obsolete. In any event, it was apparently agreed that if favorable sentiment predominates the 1930 revival will be one of which workers of Chattanooga will be proud.

ROUTINE BUSINESS FEATURES SESSION.

Routine business featured the session Monday night, prominent national union officials attending the shopcrafts convention being unable to accept an invitation extended them to be present and address the delegates. Among other items of interest, the recorder's minutes contained the following:

W. C. Granam and L. C. Gulley, Elevator Constructors, and D. E. Harrison, Moving Picture Machine Operators, were obligated as delegates.

Letter from Local No. 80, American Federation of Musicians, stated Johnny Mahoney's Ten Tennesseans, local dance orchestra, had been removed from the "unfair ist" of that body, all members of the orchestra having become members of Local 80, and asked that Central Body take similar action. The Mahoney artists were declared "unfair" some time ago through a disagreement with the union, and Central Body delegates expressed their pleasure in seeing them again "lined up" with their organized fellow-artists.

Communications were received from the Tennessee Federation of Labor regarding the lockout of printers on the Nashville Banner, the lockout of local Meatcutters by the H. G. Hill chain grocery corporation, and the Mascot-Storch-Fowler situation.

Communication from the directors of the Southern Summer School for Women Workers, to be held this year at Arden, N. C., near Asheville, seeking scholarships for local working girls, was laid over until next meeting.

Committee to find a new meeting and was given further time to report nail reported on several propositions, definite recommendations.

KENNEDY WON HARD BATTLE

"Inside" Story of Musicians' Convention Fight Told by President of Local No. 80.

By HARRY S. KENNEDY.

"And it is with pleasure that your committee recommends that the thirty-sixth annual convention of the American Federation of Musicians be held in Chattanooga as the guests of Local No. 80." Thus spoke Brother E. D. [illegible] of Indianapolis City, [illegible] committee at the international convention of the federation held in Boston last week. And there went a cheer for recognition of Chattanooga and the south, and Local No. 80 was elected for the [illegible] year, president of No. 80 as delegate, and Richard [illegible] a member of the local [illegible] delegate of the convention, presented Chattanooga's [illegible].

The Chattanooga honors were won [illegible] campaign. Kansas [illegible] was also a contender as the [illegible] city, and injected certain issues that provoked an outburst of oratory such as is seldom heard on a convention floor. Delegates from every section of the United States and Canada championed the cause of Chattanooga and the south. And when we say oratory, we mean just that. Some of the best orators we ever heard come to the musicians' convention. Words of praise for the accomplishments of the south, coming as they did, from the lips of our northern and western brothers, would have made any southern man's heart swell with gratitude.

There has not been a convention of the American Federation of Musicians in the south since 1911, when Atlanta was the host. Chattanooga will be the smallest city, so far as available records show, with the exception of Colorado Springs, to have entertained this important gathering. It will bring here in excess of 1,000 visitors, among whom are some of the most outstanding figures in the musical and theatrical fields of the United States and Canada.

Entertaining a gathering of this sort is a big undertaking, but we predict that Chattanooga musicians will give the visitors one of the most enjoyable weeks they have ever experienced, and they will go away with a feeling that they would like to come again.

LABOR INSURANCE COMPANIES MERGE

Washington.—The John Mitchell Life Insurance company, named in honor of the former miners' official, and the Union Co-operative Insurance association of this city have merged.

Business will continue under the name of the latter organization, which is controlled by the Brotherhood of Electrical Workers. Insurance issued by the combined organization is more than $86,000,000.

P. O. CLERKS OF STATE TO MEET

Eighth Annual Convention Called for July 4-5--Prominent Speakers Listed on Program.

Tennessee Federation of Postoffice Clerks will celebrate Independence Day in a most fitting manner next Thursday, when delegates from cities and towns throughout the state will meet in the capital city to consider problems affecting these employes of Uncle Sam. On the morning of the Fourth a joint session will be held with the Tennessee Association of Rural Letter Carriers and the Tennessee Association of Postoffice Supervisors, and social features will also be enjoyed jointly. Each organization, however, will immediately after the opening meeting launch into the business concerning the particular branch which the delegates represent, and it was said the sessions will probably extend through Friday, the 5th.

William Brown, of Birmingham, sixth vice-president of the National Federation of Postoffice Clerks, will represent President Leo George at the convention, and among other prominent guests expected to deliver addresses are Senators McKellar and Brock and Congressmen Byrns and McReynolds.

George Forbes, Chattanooga, is president, and Branch No. 92 has elected also G. B. Pierce. With these brothers and their families a large delegation from the local branch will attend the sessions. The ladies' auxiliary will also hold annual sessions in the capital city on the same days.

Mr. Forbes said Friday that principal features will be a sort of celebration of the passage by national lawmakers of the retirement bill which was sponsored by the postoffice employes, and consideration of pending and proposed legislation providing for the 44-hour week and other desirable improvements in employment conditions.

Officers of the state association are: George Forbes, Chattanooga, president; E. R. Hatcher, Nashville, secretary-treasurer; J. W. Lyon, Lebanon, first vice-president; C. V. Duggan, Knoxville, second vice-president and state organizer, and D. E. Stotts, Memphis, third vice-president.

MAIL CARRIERS ENJOY OUTING

New Band Makes First Appearance at Annual Picnic Supper at East Lake.

By R. B. LANE

The picnic supper of the Letter Carriers held at East Lake park Thursday evening, June 26, was a success, the band making an auspicious debut. Lots to eat and drink (spring water).

Brush Smith Visits Rail Convention

T. J. "Brush" Smith, former president of the Tennessee Federation of Labor and mayor of Graysville, Tenn., was an unofficial observer of the Shopcrafters' convention Thursday.

"Brush" came down to suggest an unemployment remedy to Treasurer Ryan, of the A. F. of L., but refused to divulge the details of his proposition for publication.

Rail Clerks' Victory Wrecks 'Parrot Union'

Houston, Tex.—The Texas & Pacific railroad is conferring with representatives of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks.

This action follows the United States supreme court's decision that that railroad's "parrot union" is a mockery on collective bargaining, and that refusal to recognize the regular union is a violation of the railway labor act.

Officers of the "parrot union" indicate that this echo of the rail management has collapsed.

Members of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks are jubilant over their victory, but they are alert to the need for organization. If they permit their union to lose its aggressiveness, the same force that dissolved the "parrot union" will revive this institution and set it up as spokesmen for these employes.

The silence of anti-union elements on the Supreme Court decision is significant. They dare not criticize the court and they can not question the logic of the decision.

Their uniform policy is to ignore the decision in the hope that trade unionists will not realize its far-reaching consequences.

The unions, however, are taking a contrary position and declare they will drive "parrot unions" out of the rail transportation industry.

Editor Is Silenced By Wave of Unionism

Huntsville, Ala.—The wave of unionism that is sweeping this section has silenced the Huntsville Times.

This newspaper recently warned "agitators" that they would be "kicked out of town" unless they ceased their activities. The mob appeal failed, as business men publicly express their friendship for labor.

Business men agree that the low-wage policy of anti-union employers has failed. The test, the business men show, is a reduced purchasing power of unorganized employes.

The average textile wage here is $9 a week. Young girls, around 16 years of age, are paid 5 cents an hour for a 12-hour day. This $3.60 weekly wage makes poor customers for business men, who also note that the girls do the work of older employes.

Trade union sentiment has developed to the point where a central labor union, with eleven affiliates, has been perfected. Moving picture operators and electrical workers are the latest to be organized in Huntsville.

Hosiery workers in Decatur, barbers in Culman, textile workers in Athens, and workers in other sections of the state are uniting.

Sentiment toward organized labor in most of the mill towns seems to be rapidly changing, organizers report. Public meetings are being held and the discrimination policy against unionists is abandoned.

Boston, Mass. — Employment of building trades workers by 383 contractors decreased 1¼ per cent in May, as compared with April, according to the Department of Labor and Industries. The amount paid in wages decreased 8.8 per cent.

ADDITIONAL HILL MARKETS QUIT BUSINESS

ormerly Prosperous Units Are No More.

HOPCRAFTS ASK MORE INFORMATION

ant to Have Full Story of Cold-Blooded Lockout of Local Unionists.

Effectiveness of the publicity campaign being conducted by Chattanooga trades unionists respecting the labor-hating attitude of the H. G. Hill chain grocery corporation, with headquarters in Nashville, was again indicated this week, when it was announced that two more meat markets operated by the Hill concern in Chattanooga closed their business out last Saturday night. The latest Hill units to give up the battle were located at Chamberlain and Willow streets and at 424 Vine street. Both had been operated for a long time, and it is said that each enjoyed splendid business prior to the cold-blooded lockout of Chattanooga workers at the command of the wealthy Nashville owner of the chain.

The exact number of Hill stores and meat markets which have closed since the lockout could not be learned at presstime, an official of the MeatCutters' local union stating he would have to "check up" before he could state positively the number.

Delegates to the convention of Southern shopcrafts, which met in Chattanooga last week, before leaving the city called on local union officials for further information regarding the lockout. These delegates stated it was their desire to have first-hand and accurate information to impart to their brother trades unionists and their friends when they returned to their respective homes. It will be remembered that executive board of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council addressed a communication to the convention asking assistance in the publicity campaign, and the delegates unanimously agreed to render all possible aid in other cities where the chain corporation operates stores.

An official of Local 600 said Thursday that pickets would continue to inform the public of the attitude of the Nashville concern, and no stone would be left unturned to keep all friends of fair play informed of the situation.

J. J. HENNESSEY GETS 'HOMESICK'

Old-Timer Writes Local Friend He Still Yearns for the Old Home Town.

James J. Hennessey, who has worked in Chattanooga "off and on" for a half century, but who has been a resident of Florida for a few recent years, writes a friend here that he is still fond of his old home town and enjoys The Labor World every week.

Mr. Hennessy is now well past his allotted "three score and ten," but still vigorous and active in the work of the Typographical union at St. Petersburg. He was a charter member of Chattanooga Typographical union No. 89, organized in 1882, and the story is told that he carried this charter around in his pocket when the organization did not have enough members or a place to meet. Incidentally, he has been elected as a delegate to the International Typographical union convention at Houston, Tex., in August, and says he will be there "with bells on."

Mr. Hennessey came to Chattanooga from up around Lexington, Ky., when a young man, and soon became noted for his rich Irish wit and good humor. He first worked on The Times in 1881, as pressman. E. R. Ames, veteran printer, now a resident of East Chattanooga, was foreman of the composing room at that time. Before that he worked on the old Chattanooga Democrat with L. G. Walker, now editor-in-chief of The Times.

Mr. Hennessey owns a home in Chattanooga and six of his children reside here. He says he has to stay in the Alligator State because of the health of his wife, but that he yearns to be back in this city, where he has so many friends.

The old-timer represented Chattanooga Typographical union as a delegate at the last convention held in the south, at Atlanta, and says the printers' union is the only organization of which he is a member.

Barber Shops in Consolidation

Two of the best-known downtown barber shops consolidated on July 1, the Climax moving from 734 Broad street to the building occupied by the P. D. Booth shop at 18 West Eighth street. The shop will be operated as the Climax.

E. C. English, for many years operator of the latter shop, and Joe Burton, are now at the consolidated shop, together with P. D. Booth and Louis Massey.

E. D. Stevenson, formerly of Booth's, is now at the Broadway, 830 Broad street.

All of the gentlemen named are among the best-known tonsorial artists in the city, and announcement of the change will prove of interest to many friends of each.

GENERAL BOYD GIVEN REWARD FOR GALLANTRY

Gov. Horton Presents Auto on Behalf of State. (?)

"LARGE, FINE CAR" FOR USE OF SOLDIER

Elizabethton Farce Recalled by Records in Office of Comptroller at Nashville.

According to a Nashville correspondent, Gen. W. C. Boyd, in immediate command of the "army of occupation" which invaded Elizabethton last year, under orders of Gov. Henry H. Horton, and in violation of federal laws, has been rewarded by his excellency, our governor, by the presentation, for the especial use of the soldier, of a "President" car, price $1,795, paid for out of National Guard funds.

Many other than working people will recall with a blush of shame the tragedy at Elizabethton, when the resources of the state were tendered German-owned and German-managed corporations in the efforts of these greedy foreigners to keep in virtual slavery the fathers, mothers, brothers and sisters of many who had made the supreme sacrifice but a few short years before, to make the world safe for democracy, against the same brand of autocracy with which a great American state, through its governor, was then joined hand in hand. The state is said to have received claims for indemnity, and there is little doubt, judging from past performances, that the citizenship of Tennessee will pay the full toll demanded by the foreign corporations.

The news item from Nashville, signed by I. C. Forrister, follows:

Nashville, July 3.—An investigation of the records in the state comptroller's office on capital hill reveals that voucher No. 306712, for the sum of $1.795, issued September 9, 1929, and paid October 3, 1929, to the Broadway Motor company, was in payment for a large, fine car, a "President," made and sold by the Studebaker Motor company, and paid for out of the National Guard funds, for the especial use of Gen. W. C. Boyd, adjutant-general of the state of Tennessee.

This was so ordered by Henry H. Horton, governor of Tennessee, as a special award and complimentary to Gen. Boyd for his services as head of the state militia in the Elizabethton strike last year.

In doing so Gov. Horton commends Gen. Boyd for the merciless abuse of his military power in forcing the poor, half-starved, hard-working and helpless people to submit to the dictates of the German-owned and German-managed Glanstoff Manufacturing company, at Elizabethton, East Tennessee, and accept their scale of wages, which were inadequate for a respectable existence. It has been said that Gen. Boyd's conduct in the premises, officially and militarily, was inconsiderate, rough and inhuman, and unbecoming a man in his high official position.

It is alleged the governor of this state, Henry Horton, also permitted the Glanstoff company to pay from their treasury the salaries of the National Guard, officers and soldiers, for their services during the time for which they were on duty during the Elizabethton strike, thus enabling the Glanstoff people to control them, absolutely, in their interests as against the strikers. Since the strike was closed the Glanstoff people have endeavored to have the governor reimburse them for their expenditures to the extent of approximately $43,000. Whether this has been done could not be learned.

The Elizabethton strike is one of the dark pages in the history of the present state administration, and cannot be satisfactorily explained to the working people of our state.

Shoe Co. Manager Pleased With Job

G. C. Kirk, local manager for the Hanover Shoe company, Thursday expressed his pleasure at the fine craftsmanship shown on the remodeling of the store's new location at 827 Market street. Mr. Kirk declared none but union men were used, and employment was given quite a few skilled workmen for several weeks. A list of those employed in the work was given The Labor World, as follows: Carpenters, Z. B. Bender, Frank Pursley, W. A. Wheeler, H. C. Prince and W. F. Mays; Electrical Workers, C. E. Cofer, J. H. Lofty and C. H. Irwin; Signwriters, C. R. Ruggles, R. W. Wimpee and Raymond Faulkner; Plasterers, Henry Dobbs and J. B. Dobbins; Painters, W. L. Lusk and Claude Cole; Sheet Metal, H. Deficit Wage Shown Common To Seven Cities

Washington Board of Trade Follows Announcement of Ford Rates With Figures Giving Other Averages — Baltimore Low, Richmond Foots List.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Washington, June 30.—If the Ford wage, reported by the United States department of labor as averaging $1,694.63, is a deficit wage, it became clear this week that the deficit wage is the affliction of millions, spreading into every city in the land, including Detroit, home of the Model A king.

On the heels of the labor department's announcement of the average Ford wage and the average Ford worker's deficit, which is $7.96 a year, came announcement this week by the Washington board of trade of comparative wage rates in seven industrial cities, this list also including Detroit. Detroit, Washington and New York lead this list. Philadelphia, Boston and Baltimore scale down in order, with Richmond falling hard for a rap at the bottom of the list.

Ford worker living standards were shown by the department of labor as anything but luxurious, which leads to a drab picture for those earning less.

While the Ford figures are for a single industry in a single city, the figures made public by the Washington board of trade are for all industrial workers in the cities named and include workers in extremely low-wage occupations, as well as those employed in occupations comparable to the Ford plant occupations in Detroit.

The Washington board of trade tabulation does not include professional persons, office or commercial employes, and is therefore confined to industrial workers. The tabulation follows:

Detroit	$1,677
Washington	1,646
New York	1,637
Philadelphia	1,374
Boston	1,357
Baltimore	1,112
Richmond	886

Richmond, which stands at the bottom of the list, is covering big billboards on the main highways with mammoth posters, advertising the "enthusiastic labor" of Richmond.

Another table, taken from the 1927 department of commerce reports, gives the average wage of Richmond workers as $985, and the average product per worker as $11,400.

It is pointed out by trade union leaders that every wage scale in the organized trades in every one of the cities listed would produce a much higher wage than the average reported by the board of trade.

Water Power Wasted; Private Greed Blamed

Washington.—The mayor and city council of Muscle Shoals have again appealed to the secretary of war to sell them surplus power which continues to go to waste over Wilson dam at Muscle Shoals on the Tennessee river.

The little Alabama town has made several efforts to secure this power.

Senator Black, of Alabama, charged on the floor of the senate that the citizens of Muscle Shoals are blocked by the Alabama Power company, a unit of the power trust.

"The Alabama Power company is buying only about one-fifth of the power and the remainder is going to waste," said Mr. Black. "The government is not getting a dime for it. The town of Muscle Shoals, which is immediately adjacent to the dam, requested several years ago and sent a delegation to the war department for the purpose of buying some of the surplus power which was going to waste. The Alabama Power company declines to buy this power.

"This municipality has offered to buy it. It has even offered to pay more than the company is paying. It has offered to buy it on the same kind of contract. It has offered to purchase it with a thirty-day cancellable clause.

"There is only one reason why it is not sold. The power companies object to a precedent being established by the government selling any of this power. This power is wasted for one reason—that is, the great influence of the power companies of America."

CENSUS DATA ON OUT-OF-WORKS IS MISLEADING?

Figures Said to Give False View.

WIDE VARIATION IN CALCULATIONS

A. F. of L. Figures Show One-Third More Idle Than Government Statistics.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Washington, July 2.—Incomplete census figures on unemployment, which apparently show considerably fewer jobless men and women than previous data and estimates, made public by the bureau of the census, have aroused sharp controversy. Trade unionists feel that the figures are misleading and give a false view of the unemployment situation.

According to preliminary returns covering about one-fourth of the population of the country, the total number of persons usually having a gainful occupation who were reported at the time of the census in April as having no job, although able to work and looking for a job, amounted to 574,647, or 2 per cent of the total population of the territory covered, which numbered 29,264,480.

The figures as given would indicate a total unemployment of about 2,400,000, if the percentage given should hold good for the nation as a whole, a total that falls far below any authoritative estimate so far made, including the estimates of Secretary of Labor Davis and the American Federation of Labor. It must be remembered, however, that the figures are for only one class of the unemployed, i. e., those able to work and looking for a job, and does not include persons who reported that they had a job but were sick or "temporarily" laid off and for those usually unemployed but physically unable to work at the time of the census.

Many Idle Not Included.

It was pointed out at headquarters of the American Federation of Labor that inclusion of all classes of unemployed in the report might easily bring the total to approximately the federation's estimate, which has not been under 3,600,000. It was said that the number of those "temporarily" laid off must be large and that workers thus affected should be included in the unemployment total, as they have no assurance of getting back their jobs.

Simultaneously with the publication of the census bureau report, figures on trade union unemployment in June were issued by the American Federation of Labor. The report shows that unemployment among trade unionists was no better in June than in the previous month and that there has been no material improvement since January. Based on the trade union figures, the federation estimated that a total of 3,600,000 workers were unemployed in May.

The figures in the census bureau report covered 756 counties and seventy-five cities not included in these counties. There was no indication as to what cities were included in the compilation, with the exception of Chicago, the figures for part of which indicated a percentage of 4.3 unemployment. This was the highest percentage for any of the cities. The lowest percentage for cities is 1.4 for Tennessee.

County Figures Cover Cities.

The percentage of unemployed as shown in the report for counties is 1.5, while that for the cities is 3 per cent. It was explained by William M. Stuart, director of the bureau of the census, that the figures for the counties were for completed or nearly completed counties. He added that the completed counties include many large cities, so that the county figures must not be assumed to represent rural territory. The figures for the counties and cities are not weighted. If weighted for city population, the percentage would be 2.25. This would make the total number out of work in the nation 2,745,000, based on the 574,647 persons reported unemployed in the report.

Commenting on the unemployment figures of the American Federation of Labor for June, President William Green placed emphasis on the tremendous financial loss due to unemployment since Jan. 1.

"Unemployment in the first six months this year has meant a loss to the country equivalent to wiping away the entire product of manufacturing industry in the United States for one week and every building constructed in two months in the thirty-six eastern states," Mr. Green said. He continued: "We estimate that wage earners in the United States have lost over $2,000,000,000 in wages through unemployment in the first six months this year. The country has lost much more than this amount, for these men and women would have created far more than $2,000,000,000 worth of wealth if they had been employed.

3,600,000 Jobless Estimated.

"The federation's preliminary estimate of the total number unemployed in May is 3,600,000. This figure does

PENSION PLAN VOIDED BY TRICKY DECISION

Cheyenne, Wyo.—The old-age pension law of this state has been voided by Atty.-Gen. Wilson's decision that the act is a "voluntary" one, and that it "may" be enforced by county commissioners.

The State Association of County Commissioners, last fall, set themselves above the people and refused to enforce the act.

Organized labor will carry the fight into this fall's campaign and will elect legislators who favor enforcing the popular will.

"Hard-Boiled" Employers Attempt to Block Progress of Unionism in South.

(Special Correspondence.)

Birmingham, Ala., July 3.—In an effort to forestall the progress of the march of organized labor in the south, through the activities of the southern organization campaign of the American Federation of Labor, the Republic Iron and Steel corporation, of Birmingham, has joined the procession of the hard-boiled employers making "concessions" to the demands of southern labor for improved conditions.

Not that the Republic corporation has phrased its announcement of the establishment of the eight-hour day in the coking and blast furnace plants, that it is "making concessions" to labor. Far from it. The statement from W. H. Oldham, vice-president of the corporation, explains that the move is made as a means of "improving unemployment conditions in the district" by setting up the three-shift day of eight hours each among workers in the coke ovens and blast furnaces. Heretofore these employes have worked twelve hours a day.

Under the plan wages will be based on the ten-hour day for eight hours of actual labor.

Abolition of the seven-day week for some of the workers was accomplished some time ago. All workers are now on the six-day week basis, but, with the exception of the coke oven and blast furnace workers, they are compelled to labor ten hours a day.

"I am not surprised that the Republic Iron and Steel corporation has inaugurated the eight-hour day in some parts of its plant here, even at this late day," Paul J. Smith, chairman of the southern organization campaign of the American Federation of Labor, said, when asked for a statement.

"It has been admitted to us by business men and by attorneys for corporations and by some of the employers themselves that the betterment in conditions, which have taken place in various industrial plants, and those that are contemplated, is for the purpose of forstalling the organization of their plants. We anticipated this long before the establishment of federation headquarters in Birmingham. It is the same old process of chloroforming the workers in an effort to have them believe that the employers are the great benefactors instead of permitting them to see that it is the organized labor movement bringing about these remedial changes. As time passes and the activities of the American Federation of Labor in the south becomes more pronounced there will be other similar announcements to the one just made me Where Women Work Cheaply With Thousands Idle and Eager," Is Message Sent Broadcast—Wages Run From $4 a Week Upward and There Are No Legislative Restrictions.

(By International Labor News Service.)

rmingham, Ala., July 2.—A ed Niagara of white women's la- power—73,000 native white en, of 10 years old and upward employed, in the city of Birmingg a veritable reservoir of power, ng for someone to call it into never yet utilized, a surplus of , of intelligence and white hufingers, hands, arms and bodies; d on by keen human desires and and such aspirations as are ted to such; this is the picture by the Birmingham industrial in its call for someone to come rmingham and set in motion and action this potential mine of power."

e women are crowded out of tic service by the colored ; too many of them already gone into the business colleges special training—at least the ket" for that kind of labor is pplied; and they are ready to d to almost any offer of labor is backed up by from $5 per upward.

domestic service they are receivrom $4 per week upward; in the mills, $10 to $12 per week; l workers get from $10 to $30 eek—but there are too many of waitresses are paid $5 to $12 eek, besides the tips; laundry workers accept $6 to $12 per week; food packers, $8 to $10; telephone operators, $10 to $14; bakery workers, $4 to $8 per week.

If the prospective employer is at all squeamish about employing "women" of the age of 10 years, let him deduct the approximate 10 per cent of the total representing those from 10 to 14 years, and he will still have about 60,000 potential days' work—every day—of the sort which the southern booster has been advertising as "docile" labor, who are pictured as standing somewhere, between the little cottage in which they live and the poorhouse—waiting for a man or a corporation to give them employment at $4 per week and upward.

Alabama is not among the states which have seen fit to place a legal limit to the working day of women, though there are restrictions for girls under 16.

The record so far is that of about 4,000 women in manufacturing, nearly 1,000 had an 11-hour day, while over 2,000 worked ten hours, going to work at 6:30 to 7 o'clock a.m. and working until 5:30 or 6 p.m., with one hour off for noon lunch.

The circular closes its statements about the opportunities offered here with this graphic invitation: "Manufacturers who are in search of a new reservoir of female labor would do well to consider Birmingham."

Wheels Seem Greased to Facilitate Two Billion Public Utility Merger

Network of Companies Brought Together Through North American, While Mere Billion-Dollar Steel Combine Fights Over Rough Road to Complete Deal.

(By International Labor News Service.)

New York City, July 2.—While court difficulties are being raised against the billion-dollar Steel merger between the Bethlehem Steel corporation and the Youngstown Sheet and Tube company, announcement made of the proposed two billion-dollar merger of public utility interests, reaching from San Francisco to Ohio, indicates that similar difficulties are not likely to arise in the latter case.

In the steel merger it is charged that certain stock voted in favor of the merger was not owned by those who voted that stock. In the public utility merger there have been going on for some time a complicated set of deals by means of which the control of the various properties has been gradually centered largely in the hands of one man, Harrison Williams.

Mr. Williams and his interests are the largest owners of the North American company, which recently turned over its interests in the Great Western Power company, the San Joaquin Light and Power corporation, and the Midland Counties Public Service corporation to the Pacific Gas and Electric company, receiving in return more than 33 per cent of the common stock of that Pacific coast system. And it is reliably reported that to this large proportion the North American company has recently added large holdings.

To this operation, the first of a series, there is to be added the acquirement of the Southern California Edison company, Ltd., and the Pacific Lighting corporation, by means of an exchange of capital stock. This latter is to be made possible by a proposed issue of 50,000,000 shares of common stock and 5,000,000 shares of serial preferred by a vote of the stockholders of the North American company, to be taken Aug. 6.

In addition to what is reported to be a controlling interest in the North American company, Mr. Williams is also said to control the Central States corporation and the American Cities Power and Light corporation, holding companies which have large holdings of North American, Pacific Gas and Electric, Southern California Edison, Pacific Light Corporation, and the North American Light and Power company, and both of them large systems which the Williams interests and the North American company have made efforts to acquire.

The North American system serves many large cities, including St. Louis, Cleveland and Milwaukee, and its properties extend through portions of Ohio, Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, Wisconsin and other states.

The three western systems named above represent total assets of above $1,054,000 alone, which will bring the total values of the Williams interests when thus assembled to above $2,000,000.

LABOR QUERIES

Q.—When was the carrying on of public construction work as a means of relieving unemployment first advocated?

A.—This is not known. The idea is not a new one, having been proposed in 1525 by Juan Luis Vives in a treatise on "The Relief of the Poor."

Q.—Where will the headquarters of the American Federation of Labor be during the 1930 convention in Boston?

A.—Hotel Statler.

Q.—Why was President Green, of the American Federation of Labor, recently awarded one of the 1930 medals of the Roosevelt Memorial association?

A.—For his efforts in behalf of co-operation in industry. The citation of Mr. Green says: "As president of the American Federation of Labor he has both symbolized and directed the new policy of co-operation in industry, representing the American concept of industrialism and self-reliance, and fighting with success the disruptive influence of the radical element preaching communism and class war. In a period of unrest and readjustment to new industrial conflict and at the same time emphasized the position of the trade union in the social order."

WORK IN MARYLAND DROPS.

Baltimore.—An employment decrease of 3.6 per cent and of 2.2 per cent in wage rates in selected manufacturing enterprises in this state from April 1 to May 1 is reported by the commissioner of labor statistics.

A "FEW" INJUNCTIONS

The majority of the senate judiciary committee opposes the pending labor injunction relief bill. One of their reasons is that there are "few" federal injunctions and that most of these writs issue out of state courts.

This adding-machine argument is illogical. It is the favorite plea of attorneys for employers' associations who ignore principle that may be outraged by one decision.

The Dartmouth college case, in 1819, illustrates this point. Here was a dispute between the president and trustees of a small educational institution in New Hampshire that finally reached the United States supreme court. The decision has become historic and is now used by public utility corporations to hold perpetual franchises. No decision has been so effective to thwart popular control of these corporations.

Eight particular injunction decisions by the United States supreme court in the last thirty-five years may be of no interest to the senate judiciary committee, but these court orders have stripped organized labor of every constitutional right and has made it possible for the judiciary to smash any strike they elect.

A purely local strike may now be thrown into a federal court on the plea of one shareholder residing in another state. This was done in the recent New Orleans street car strike when Federal Judge Borah placed federal deputy marshals on the cars at the request of a New York banking house.

The first of the eight decisions was the Debs case, in which the supreme court held that an injunction judge can deny constitutional guarantees to citizens who suspend work. The Debs case was the first time the supreme court held that federal courts can issue such orders.

In the Bucks Stove and Range case the supreme court outlawed freedom of speech and press when profits are interfered with. The court took the same position in the Danbury Hatters case.

In the Tri-Cities case the court again denied free speech and ruled that picketing (permitted under the Clayton law) is unlawful unless directed by the court.

In the Truax case the court held that patronage is property and workers can be enjoined as conspirators if they induce others to withhold their patronage. The same position was taken in the Duplex case.

In the Coronado case the court held that trade unions can be sued for individual acts of members. No other voluntary association is held liable for unauthorized acts of its members.

In the Bedford case the court ruled that union stone cutters can not refuse to handle non-union stone. They must work against their will, as refusal is "an interference with interstate commerce."

When the majority of the senate judiciary committee say "few" federal injunctions have been used, they fail to point out that those "few" are the starting point to attack every right [illegible] from organized labor. Under these decisions the institution means nothing when employers would smash strikes and use citizens back to objectionable working conditions.

It [illegible] that [illegible] skilled lawyers in the United States senate are [illegible] attempt to [illegible] effect of these court decisions.

JUDGE SUGGESTS FASCISM

Judge Frederick E. Crane of the New York court of appeals, recently [illegible] graduates of the New York law school, and is reported as following public opinion, [illegible] today in the general [illegible] of society than in merely [illegible] rights."

"Law" Judge Crane refers to is [illegible] of judges. These individual [illegible] are not the declarations of people, through their duly-elected representatives. "Court law," or judge-made rule, is an ideal system to protect property at the cost of human rights.

Judge Crane is unusually frank. Jurists, as a rule, do not talk so plainly against the constitution and declaration of independence. The founders of our government believed certain individual rights are inherent in man; that these rights preceded every form of government and that the fundamental purpose of government is to protect these rights.

The American government was built on this foundation. For more than 150 years the American principle has undermined the autocratic ideal that the state is supreme and that the individual has no rights that can not be taken from him.

Mussolini revamped the autocratic ideal and garbed it in new terms. Inherent human rights are not recognized in Italy. The right of free speech, free press and to suspend work are at the disposal of the dictator, who holds as Judge Crane, that the general welfare is more important than individual rights.

This kingly reasoning makes it easy for injunction judges to smash strikes—they interfere with public convenience, patronage and prospective profits. Rights of a citizen or a group of citizens, who are wage workers, are of no moment.

How can lawyers escape being champions of government by injunction when they are taught in this fascist atmosphere."

The logical application of Judge Crane's theory lands us in the fascist camp and wrecks the American system of government. These upholders of the fascist ideal should re-read their constitution. They might with profit consider the United States supreme court's decision in ex parte Milligan, 4 Wall. 2, decided more than sixty years ago, and also Justice Day's opinion in the Adamson case in the same court, March 19, 1917, in which he said: "I cannot agree that constitutional rights may be sacrificed because of public necessity, nor taken away because of emergencies which might result in disaster or inconvenience to public or private interests."

The organized labor movement, true to its historic mission, must challenge the doctrine that constitutional rights of the individual can be sacrificed for the convenience of others.

NO FIGHT IS HOPELESS

Primaries and conventions that will select candidates for congress and for state and city offices are now being arranged throughout the country. Privilege is pleased when men profess to have "no interest in politics." Privilege, in these cases, gladly selects public officials. Men who profess such indifference to popular rule realize their mistake when they later plead for remedial legislation.

Let no worker be discouraged by the supposed strength of an opponent. Opposition has given the trade union movement its present standing. Men don't progress by "easy" fights. They win by swinging the majority to their side. This can only be done when workers will to do—when they have spirit and courage; when they refuse to believe they can not win.

No strike was ever lost. No fight is hopeless.

Industrial Success Is Based On Co-operation, Green Says

By WILLIAM GREEN
President, American Federation of Labor

We have much to give to industry through organization. We have much to give in the way of advice, co-operation, skill and training. Not only are we willing to give our individual service, but we are willing to meet management around the conference table, in the conference room and there, free from acrimonious discussion, decide the questions regarding wages, hours and conditions of employment, giving to management the best of our brain, advice and suggestions in the solution of purely managerial problems.

We believe that in the conference room is a better place than the strike field. We believe that peace and good-will will make more money for the mill owner than passion and hate. We believe that the co-operation of the workers, satisfied workers, contented workers, workers who are not smarting under the consciousness that they are denied the exercise of a right, will make more money for a mill management than a group of workers who hate the management because they will not let them organize.

We believe the very fundamental principle of industrial success rests in good-will, in co-operation, in understanding, in mutuality, in the development of the highest degree of co-operation, in the mills and in the factories of the country.

The Passing Show

Note and Comment on Things Doing in the March of Events

Secretary of the Interior Wilbur signed, last April, the contracts approving the deals made for the delivery of the power from the new great Boulder dam waterpower plant, at a rate which is said to guarantee the return to the government of all it will invest in the plant, at a rate of 1.63 mills per kilowatt hour. That is less than two-tenths of one cent per unit. Now, if it costs another two-tenths of a cent per kilowatt hour to get that juice delivered to the consumer, and if it is sold to him at 6 cents per kilowatt hour, that will make the selling price exactly fifteen times the total cost.

The six hundredth and fifteenth anniversary of magna charta was celebrated recently in Washington and elsewhere. Orators told how King John had been shorn of his tyrannical prerogatives and declared that the signing of the "great charter" had dealt arbitrary power a deadly blow.

Arbitrary power is still on the job, however, despite the blow given it by magna charta. It's wielded nowadays by the injunction judge, who makes the law, sentences violators of it and sends them to prison. The provision of magna charta that no free man should be imprisoned or proceeded against except by the lawful judgment of his peers, means nothing to the injunction judge, who is judge and jury in one.

America needs a magna charta, one that will strip the injunction judge of his arbitrary and tyrannical power, as King John was stripped of his.

It would have been a most useful thing if the governor of Ohio on his inauguration might have spent his first month as governor in the penitentiary at Columbus, the Rev. Dr. Charles N. Lathrop told a social welfare conference in Boston the other day.

"It would have been helpful if it were the obligation of every judge on the bench first to be an inmate of the penitentiary to which he sends convicted felons," Dr. Lathrop continued. "I wish we might have the judges dealing with criminal cases clapped into prison for a couple of weeks before they are qualified to take their places on the bench, that they might know intimately the conditions of our penal institutions, and our penal systems."

Good suggestions. If the governor of Ohio had been an inmate of the Columbus penitentiary, changes might have been made that would have prevented the terrible fire there, with its great loss of life. If judges knew the inside of prisons from personal experience, they might not be so fast to send offenders to prison, especially first offenders who are often started on a life-long criminal career by their initial prison sentence.

Manufacturers Fight Women's 48-Hour Bill

Louisiana Employers Oppose Progressive Legislation on Plea It Would Work Hardship on Plants.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Baton Rouge, June 30.—The 48-hour bill for women by Senator W. C. Boone, recently introduced in the senate, is being fought by the Louisiana Manufacturers' association, says a bulletin issued by the association. The bill, according to the bulletin, would work a hardship on Louisiana plants competing with similar plants in other southern states working ten or more hours a day. It was pointed out that at several consecutive sessions a similar measure was introduced, but defeated, and that the basis for these defeats was the same principle as is now involved.

The bill affects all females employed in industry in Louisiana, also children between ages of 14 and 16 years. The bill, in addition to specifying a 48-hour week, also stipulates there shall be one hour allowed each day for dinner, but that such dinner period shall be included as part of the working day. In the event two-thirds of the employes desire it, time for dinner may be reduced to not less than 30 minutes. These provisions, it was pointed out in the association's bulletin, will mean a seven-hour actual working day in the event the dinner period is one hour and a seven and one-half-hour working day if the dinner period is 30 minutes.

Incentive Wage Plan New Speed-Up System

New York.—"Incentive" wage payments is the new speed-up system that is proving successful, according to the national industrial conference board, representing a score of anti-union employers' associations.

Rates are based on the output of the group, each member being a driving force to speed up associates.

The system can only work in large production plants, and is not applicable to small plants. Clerical and office work does not generally lend itself to the scheme, the board states.

Output under this plan has been raised from 10 to 400 per cent. Earnings of labor increased from 10 to 100 per cent. The higher earnings are one-fourth less than the output. Unit costs have been cut from 10 to 50 per cent.

Go to your Union Meetings

Don't say you are too tired; the weather is bad; or there is too much quibbling and "hot air" to interest me.

Every time you miss a meeting and leave it to the other fellow to look out for your interest, you are doing an injustice both to yourself and your organization.

Your views on especially vital subjects should be represented in discussion and by vote, and the only way for this to be done is for you to be at your union meeting.

You are responsible for the good and welfare of your organization, and non-attendance of union meetings on your part is not excuse enough for you to voice your opinion after a measure has been passed. It is then time for you to concur in what has been done and work in harmony with the officers and other members of your union.

Go to your union meetings regularly and induce others to do the same, because one important thing to remember is the meaning of the slogan:

"United we stand, Divided we fall."

Unionism Can Not Be Denied; Labor Will Unite, Says Green

(By International Labor News Service.)

Danville, Va., June 30.—"If workers are not permitted to openly organize, history will repeat and they will find other ways to organize," said William Green, president A. F. of L., at a mass meeting in this city.

"Workers are brought into contact by their environment," said Mr. Green. "You cannot prevent them from realizing that their life depends on the life of their association. If they are denied the right to openly organize, they will join secretly and attend secret, underground gatherings."

The meeting was largely composed of workers employed in the local textile mills that organized the first "industrial democracy union" in this country. This has been repudiated by employes who have affiliated with the United Textile Workers.

President Green quoted from declarations of several church and religious organizations, asserting that the churches of America believe in the right of workers to organize and have representatives of their own choosing.

"If we believe in the fundamentals of Christianity, if we believe in the doctrines of the Teacher of Nazareth, what basis have we for objection to a comon American right?" asked President Green.

"Laborers cannot be brought into contact and be kept individualistic. Our factory system has wiped out individualism in workers. It is as hard to hold back the inevitable tide as to prevent the organization of workers.

"They are brought into contact by their environment. The worker no longer lives in a hut in the hills in Virginia and North Carolina. He has been brought into congested village, factory and city life and these conditions made organization an inevitable development.

"There have been no trade unions in the south to prevent the manufacturers from doing as they pleased. In some instances these manufacturers have attempted to exercise almost absolute social control. We can not have dictatorship here.

"Under such a management policy conditions have grown worse and worse until the manufacturers in the south have approached the verge of bankruptcy. Now let's try the other method—trade unionism. The manufacturers have failed. What can stabilize conditions except trade unions? If the wage scale is maintained and the living standard is raised, production costs will fall. We offer to help stabilize conditions through co-operation.

"Increased power and wealth can be created by the co-operation of industry and organized labor. No man is a good citizen who interferes with the right of workers to organize. The individual cannot make his voice heard except through unions. The voice of the union becomes the voice of all.

"We cry out for industrial peace. We want to transfer our problems to the conference room. We plead with industry to let us come in and work with them. If they refuse, the responsibility rests on them."

The local Central Labor union tendered a luncheon to Mr. Green at which business and professional men were invited. Mayor Wooding referred to President Green as "one of the honored and exalted citizens of our country."

Sweat Shop Must Go Is Workers' Resolve

Baltimore.—"Free men and women cannot exist where sweat shops thrive," declared Benjamin Schlesinger, president International Ladies' Garment Workers' union, at a mass meeting in this city.

"The sweat shop worker strikes; he has nothing to lose, but the employer overlooks an opportunity to build up the industry," said Mr. Schlesinger. A 70-hour week and wages as low as $10 and $12 a week for women who are employed in this highly seasonal industry of thirty-four to thirty-five weeks a year must be driven out of Baltimore."

The international union has been aiding the local to perfect its organization and the mass meeting was preparatory to inviting employers to a conference where improved conditions will be discussed.

Other speakers included A. F. of L. Secretary Frank Morrison, General Secretary-Treasurer David Dubinsky, of the Garment Workers' International, and Edward F. McGrady, legislative representative A. F. of L.

The speakers scored deplorable conditions in this city's cloak industry, and insisted that the workers' only hope is through organization.

"These employers will try to scare you, as they always do, but it is our experience that when we perfect a 100 per cent union the employer will quickly agree to a conference," said Secretary Dubinsky. The unionist said other cities had the same grim record as Baltimore until the union forced a change.

MINERS' WAGE PARLEY TO BE HELD IN NEW YORK

New York.—Anthracite miners and coal owners will hold their wage conference in this city. The existing wage agreement, negotiated after a six-months' strike, will expire on Aug. 31.

The miners' representatives are under instructions from the recent Hazelton (Pa.) convention to obtain the most satisfactory agreement possible "on the basis of no reduction in wages."

Business Men Ignore Economic Facts; Low Wage Pleaders Scored by Editor

Akron, O., June 30.—Bankers and business men who suggest wage reductions were scored by the Akron Beacon Journal in a sizzling editorial. The banker is declared "by training and sometimes by nature, a glorified pawnbroker."

This city is the center of the nation's rubber industry, and exploitation of these employes has lowered their purchasing power and affected small business men.

"The manufacturer we place upon a somewhat higher plane than the banker," says the editor. "He has shown himself willing to move with the world instead of living under three balls.

"We have never felt an overwhelming awe of the super-intelligence of either the captains of industry or of the banker.

"The man who today gets less wages than he did yesterday, buys less of the world's goods. If overproduction has caused most of our present troubles we shall add to it a degree of underconsumption that is bound to increase the very evils we are trying to cure. It is a self-evident proposition, of course, that 200 wage earners at $2.50 a day are worth no more to stores and banks than 100 at $5.

"In Akron something occurred which was a lot more humorous than any of the comic strips. The great rubber companies, in justifying a tire cut of 5 per cent, said they did so to meet the competition of the mail order houses, which, by the way, they had set up in business by selling them tires at a very little profit. Of course, it may be good business to make and sell things at a price that our customers can go into competition with us, but our guess is that such a reduction is not going to create any appreciable factory demand at a price that will pay dividends.

"This case is not exclusive, but symptomatic of a situation which is general. If the manufacturer will tackle his job with the same fine energy and intelligence that have made him the wonder of the world, and if the bankers can get over the idea that society does not need them as note shavers, but that their function is a creative one to build rather than to foreclose mortgages, there will be no necessity to deflate wages, which would produce a greater disaster to the country than a dozen stock market collapses."

Talk, But No Action, On Idleness Issue

New York. — Resentment against the house for failure to act on Senator Wagner's three unemployment bills was expressed by students of this question in this city.

Miss Frances Perkins, state industrial commissioner, said it was especially deplorable that the bill to establish a national system of employment bureaus was not passed.

Ernest G. Draper, member of Gov. Roosevelt's committee on stabilization of employment, said:

"Nothing has been done on the subject of unemployment after twenty-five years of researching. Here is an opportunity to do something tangible for the unemployment situation. It is tragic to find that after such extended discussions of the unemployment situation we are now where we were before the bills were introduced."

"It is dangerous to kiss girls who are reducing because their resistance is low" says a noted dentist. And, we might add, it is even more dangerous to kiss a girl whose resistance is high.

Middle Life Suffering

"Years ago, I was in bad health," says Mrs. J. B. Bean, of Kirbyville, Texas. "I was going through a critical time, and I suffered a lot.

"My back hurt almost all the time, and my legs and ankles ached. My head hurt me until sometimes I would be almost past going.

"As I had used Cardui before, and knew how much I had improved after taking it, I got a bottle and started taking it. I continued to use it for several months. After awhile I regained my health, and I feel that I could never have gotten through that awful time without Cardui."

ANTI-INJUNCTION LEGISLATION DEAD FOR PRESENT CONGRESS

Opposing Reports on Shipstead Bill Filed, With Majority of Senate Judiciary Committee Declaring Yellow Dog Contracts Are Legal and Enforceable Under State Law.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Washington, June 3.—Asserting, among other things, that the bill trespasses by indirection upon the legislative powers reserved to the states, and pointing out other alleged weaknesses, the majority of the United States senate judiciary committee has filed its report condemning the Shipstead anti-injunction bill.

The minority, too, has filed its sustaining report. That ends all efforts to procure anti-injunction legislation for some time and surely for this congress.

The majority report is a strictly legal document. It delves into the question of property rights in yellow dog contracts and makes the astounding assertion that "any statute attempting to accomplish this (inhibition) would not only be an unconstitutional encroachment upon the judicial power of the court having jurisdiction of the subject matter or of the parties, but would be as well a denial of constitutional liberty and property without due process."

With apparent abhorrence the majority members declare that the proposed remedy "would make the labor contracts in question the same as if they were mere scraps of paper."

Legal Difficulties Cited.

The majority members assert that "under state law the labor contracts in question (yellow dog contracts) are legal and enforcable" and go on to point to difficulties, such as diversity of citizenship, that would arise if the congress were to divest of legality contracts that are legal in the states.

The majority members do not deal with the Wisconsin law signed by Gov. Kohler, which does not declare yellow dog contracts illegal, but which seeks to achieve the result by declaring them unenforcible at law. That law is being [illegible] before the Wisconsin courts but it has not yet been overthrown. Good authorities believe it will [illegible] the test.

Back of the two reports, minority and majority, by which anti-injunction legislation [illegible] in this congress, there is a record of trading and [illegible] work that has disgusted observers and that has served to [illegible] whether even [illegible] friends of injunction relief are sincere in their professions, though that there has been a [illegible] is not disputed by [illegible] are in position to know.

Report Thoroughly Legalistic.

The tone of the majority report [illegible] the bill its coup de grace seems to [illegible] a laugh at the move [illegible] to induce the attorney-general to pass on the measure. The committee members, all lawyers, have written a thoroughly legalistic document, demonstrating their ability to [illegible] through a piece of slaughter as even the most hostile attorney-general could have done.

Anti-injunction legislation right now is dead.

Pledged by Both Parties.

Reciting the history of the legislation, the minority report points out that the "limitation of the jurisdiction of federal courts to issue injunctions in labor disputes has been a subject of public discussion for several years."

"It is fair to say that public sentiment on the subject has reached the conclusion that some such limitation is absolutely necessary," the report continues. "Both of the great political parties in their last national platforms had promised remedial legislation upon the subject. It is, therefore, a non-partisan question, and, assuming that both of these great political parties in their national conventions were acting in good faith, it follows that either this bill or some other legislation of similar import, carrying out the pledges made to the people of the United States, should be promptly enacted."

As to the yellow dog phase of the bill the minority says in part:

"At first blush it would seem unnecessary to pass any legislation upon the subject, because it is difficult to see how any court could sustain such a contract even though there were no statute condemning it. Many of the most eminent jurists have always believed that such contracts were void for several reasons."

Continuing, the minority report says: "Since such contracts have been held by the courts to furnish a legal basis for preventing employes from organizing for self-help, it seems to be necessary that some legislative action should be taken to liberate workers from a servitude thus imposed. The bill declares that such contracts are: 'contrary to the public policy of the United States, shall not be enforceable and shall not afford any basis for granting of legal or equitable relief by any court of the United States.'"

The report says further: "There can be no question that there has been created, as a result of writing law into injunction orders and then enforcing these orders by the same judge who wrote them without a grant of trial by jury, that condition of uniting the two powers of making and enforcing laws in one person or one body of men wherein, using the language of Blackstone, 'there can be no public liberty.'

"It is difficult to see how any civilized people could indefinitely submit to such tyrannical procedure. It is not difficult to understand how such cruel laws, made not by any legislature, but by a judge upon the bench, should bring our federal courts into disrepute."

Unemployment Grows With New Machinery

Butte. — The automatic machine, scientific processes and combinations are sweeping all classes of workers into the unemployed army, declares the Montana Labor News.

"Due to modern machinery 100 miners get out as much ore in Butte mines as 400 did in the old days of Marcus Daly and former United States Senator Clark. Yet these men, operating on 10 and 11-cent copper, made hundreds of million of dollars," says this labor paper.

"One man at a local manganese plant in South Butte throws an electric switch and the nodulating of that ore is completed without the aid of man power.

"Five years ago 70,000 field laborers left St. Paul and Chicago for harvest work in the Dakotas, Montana and other wheat states. Last year but 5,000 left and 2,000 of these were unable to secure unemployment. The reason is that the new combine takes the place of fifty harvest workers.

"But the man who labors in overalls is not the only one affected by displacements. Electric addressing machines and other appliances have replaced thousands of white collar workers. Mergers have ousted entire staffs and smaller units have been closed down. Chain stores have placed the small business men and employes on the street, while far-sighted business men agree that we are producing too much and that jobs become scarcer and scarcer."

Mob Parades Futile, Communists Confess

New York.—Occasional outbursts of the masses will not bring on the revolution, the central committee of the communist party reported to the "red" convention in this city.

This evil of reliance on the value of these outbursts must be corrected, the committee said. The remedy is, "into the shops."

Recent leaders of the "party" have been expelled because they failed "to make the turn in policy required by the growing crisis of world capitalism and the concurrent radicalism of the masses."

The "party" is in need of additional purging, according to the committee, which states that the "party" has not "completely made the turn in methods and tactics."

These methods are figured out in Moscow, and if they are not followed the bank roll will be closed.

GRAND JURY SUGGESTS LAWYERLESS COURTS

Augusta, Ga.—A lawyerless court in which defendants will plead their own civil cases involving amounts up to $25 is suggested by the Richmond county grand jury.

The grand jury urged that minor civil cases be tried in a court with a salaried judge to hear them, and plaintiffs be required to deposit a court cost of $1 before the case would be heard. That would be the only cost and no lawyers would be permitted.

not include office workers or farm laborers. The preliminary figure shows a gain of only 3 per cent since February when 3,700,000 were out of work. The loss in wage earner purchasing power has been of major importance in prolonging business depression.

"The hoped for improvement in unemployment did not materialize in June. Reports from trade unions in twenty-four cities show unemployment just as high as in May, with 20 per cent of the union membership still out of work. This figure shows just as many unemployed as in January (20 per cent), though there has been a slight improvement since the February peak when 22 per cent were unemployed. Usually over one-third (39 per cent) of those out of work in January are back at their jobs by June. More than twice as many are out of work this year as in June last year, the increase being 122 per cent.

"Our June figures show a very serious unemployment situation. Nevertheless, the fact that June shows no improvement over May is not cause for discouragement as to the future. Layoffs always come with the beginning of the summer dull season in June. With the usual fall pickup in business, employment will improve in the late summer and autumn. But meanwhile the summer months will bring hardships to hundreds of thousands of workers who have already been out of work from three to six months. And the low level of workers' purchasing power will continue to delay business recovery. The six months' unemployment has already meant arrears of debt and many failures among grocers and merchants who depend on wage earners' accounts and those who have sold on installment.

Slight Building Gain.

"In building trades there was a slight decrease in unemployment which indicates that the situation is improving a little. Nearly twice as many are still out of work as in June last year. In metal and printing trades, the number out of work is increasing; the summer dull season seems to have begun earlier than usual. More than twice as many are out of work in printing as in June last year, and over four times as many in metal trades."

by the Republic Iron and Steel corporation."

Chairman Smith called attention to the opening of part of the new Gulf States Steel corporation plant at Gadsden, Ala., and said employes of that plant were seeking to be organized, and in fact had partly accomplished organization and were in a fair way to secure a return of some of the former conditions enjoyed by the workers. Wages and working conditions in this plant have been unusually bad, Mr. Smith said, due partly to the desire of superintendents to make an economic "showing" for the company. One employe of the company, in urging union organization, said he had been working an average of nine hours a day for the munificent sum of 90 cents, or 10 cents an hour.

The Gulf States concern started steel production in its new $2,000,000 plate mill on June 27, having a capacity of 21,000 tons a month. Other units of the plant are under construction, including a sheet mill, 500-ton blast furnace, four 125-ton steel furnaces and other lesser mills. The $1,000,000 blooming mill was completed last month and the operation of the new sheet mill will start July 5, it was announced. Employes of the plant are seeking organization, federation organizers reported to the Birmingham headquarters.

Washington. — The International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, by a referendum vote of 89,581 to 5,405, favored revision of the constitution by a committee of eleven, appointed by President Broach, together with Mr. Broach and International Secretary Bugniazet.

Changes in the constitution will "go into full force and effect—after the committee has finished its work—upon notice to the local unions."

BEAUTICIANS NOW "ALL SET"

Constitution Adopted, Charter Closed by Local Union No. 1 Monday Night.

MISS ROSELYN KORB

Local No. 1, Beauticians, affiliated with the Journeymen Barbers' International Union of America, at a meeting Monday night formally adopted constitution and by-laws and closed the charter with some thirty members.

Actual functioning of the new union has been delayed for some time, due to technicalities arising from the fact that the Chattanooga union of beauty parlor workers is the first in the United States.

The organization was perfected by W. C. Birthright, vice-president of the Journeymen Barbers, assisted by local craftsmen, including W. E. Jacobs, of the Reaves shop.

Miss Roselyn Korb, pictured above, is the first president, and has already demonstrated an aptitude for trade union work unusual for a newcomer in the movement. Miss Korb is employed at Loveman's beauty shop.

Rail Strike Settled; Men Out Eight Months

Peoria, Ill.—The eight-months' strike of shopmen and transportation workers employed on the Toledo, Peoria & Western railroad is settled.

The company signed an agreement with their organized machinists, blacksmiths, boilermakers, sheet metal workers, electrical workers, railway carmen, railroad trainmen, locomotive firemen and enginemen, telegraphers and maintenance-of-way employes.

The railroad, last year, declined to negotiate with these organizations and ignored the railroad labor act of 1926, which provides that railroads must treat with representatives of employes. This law was recently upheld by the supreme court in the case of Brotherhood of Railroad Clerks versus Texas & New Orleans Railroad. The strike followed a refusal to arbitrate. The organizations acted jointly and their solidarity forced a settlement.

Giant Power Trust Reported Forming

Washington.—A power trust, bigger than any other business organization in the United States and financed by the house of Morgan, is more probable than ever, according to the federal trade commission.

The companies involved are the General Electric and the Electric Bond and Share company.

Senator Norris, five years ago, charged that this trust was in the making.

The commission is endeavoring to secure the books of the Electric Bond and Share, but the company resists this move and has carried their case to the courts.

DIVIDENDS SET NEW HIGH MARK DESPITE SLUMP

Industrial Depression Doesn't Hit "Big Boys."

UNEMPLOYMENT NO WORRY—TO THEM

Holders of Stocks and Bonds "Sit Pretty" While Workers Go Hungry.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Washington, July 17. — Despite heavy decreases in certain lines and while the country is in a deep trough of unemployment that has stopped wages for millions of Americans, the total of dividends for the first half of this year set a new high mark and demonstrated that readjustment on a basis of anything like actual values has gone no great distance.

Every indication is that readjustment has been spotty. Not only has the dividend situation been filled with contradictions, some disappearing, some increasing, but trade has likewise shown its contradictory spots. While the Kresge chain showed a decrease in business in the first six months, the Grant chain showed an amazing increase.

So it has been with dividends. Many have completely dropped out of sight, but the total has gained. Utility dividends, generally supported by state regulation, have gone on merrily. It is apparent that exhorbitant profit taking has not subsided, even though commodity prices have sunk by a full 10 per cent since August and even though steel, once an infallible barometer, shows no cause for rejoicing. Production of pig iron for the first half of the year was 16 per cent below the first half of 1929, though only 1.4 below the first half of 1928.

Big Dividend Increase.

It is indicated by preliminary reports received by the United States commerce department that not less than $4,281,771,000 will have been paid to holders of stocks and bonds of the country's principal enterprises by July 1. This is an increase of $560,526,000 over the total of payments in the first half of last year.

The gain is really greater than that shown, since the 1930 preliminary figures undoubtedly will be increased when the final records are compiled.

Fewer Failures in June.

A hopeful sign is that fewer business firms were found bankrupt in June than in any previous month this year. The number of insolvencies during the month as reported by R. G. Dun & Co., was 2,026, as compared with 2,179 in May and 2,198 in April. In March, 2,347 defaults were recorded; in February 2,262, and in January 2,759.

Despite this improvement the rate of business mortality remained well above normal, the June figure being the highest for the month ever recorded. In no previous June, it is stated, has the number of failures risen as high as 2,000. A year ago the total was 1,767. In June, 1928, it was 1,947, and in 1927 it was 1,833.

For the first half of 1930 the total number of commercial defaults is placed at 13,771, which exceeds even the number reported in the corresponding period of 1922, the previous record year for business fatalities.

CARPENTER HAS ANNIVERSARY

Local Unionist Celebrates Twenty-fifth Year in Central Body.

J. L. CARPENTER

Twenty-five years is a long time. Yea. And any man who has a record of twenty-five years of service to his fellow-man in this great American labor movement of ours truly has something to be proud of. Yea again. And the younger generation is given something to think about.

All of which is called forth by the announcement of J. L. Carpenter, member of Local 74, Carpenters, that Monday night marked his twenty-fifth anniversary as a delegate to the local central body. Mr. Carpenter proudly recalled that, as a newly-elected delegate from Local 968, Carpenters, he attended a session of the then Central Labor union held over the old Marble Hall saloon on Market street. George Forbes, Sr., father of the youngster who presides over the parcel post window at the postoffice, was in the chair, and Clarence E. Swick, now international secretary-treasurer for the Brotherhood of Painters, was secretary. Tom F. Hall, as Mr. Carpenter recalls, was the only man present at Central Body Monday night who was also attending that meeting twenty-five years ago. Others taking part in the proceedings a quarter-century ago, he said, were "Johnny" Vogt, "Tommie" Davie, Clarence Carpenter, J. L. Bell and W. L. Bork and G. C. Forwalter, deceased.

Mr. Carpenter said the feature of the meeting was discussion of plans for Labor day, and as he remembers a big parade was the result of the deliberations.

During his quarter-century of service, Mr. Carpenter has filled a number of offices, and has always been among the most active members of labor's clearing house.

BOSSES' UNION PLANS FIGHT ON NEW LABOR LAWS

Walking Delegate Issues New Communication.

WARNS AGAINST "UNION DOMINATION"

Deacon Edgerton's "Patriots" Will Oppose Any Remedial Legislation.

C. C. Gilbert, handy man for John E. Edgerton, who teaches employes of his sock mill at Lebanon to labor long and faithfully and collect their reward in the next world for services rendered the pious industrial leader in this vale of tears, has issued another of his periodical communications to manufacturers in Tennessee who have put up or are likely prospects for a contribution of ten dollars.

This letter, presumably the latest, is filled with typical Edgertonian advice to employers to beware of the hydra-headed monster of trades unionism. Dug up and printed by Progressive Labor at Knoxville, the letter is somewhat less silly than the usual Gilbert tirade, but again is rather interesting as showing that the walking delegates of the employers' union are preparing for a united stand against any and all progressive legislation proposed in the coming general assembly.

This new attack on the workers, unreasonably bitter and inane though it may be, should be carefully read by every worker in the state, and his or her attitude toward legislative candidates should be based on the reaction of such candidates to the destructive policies advocated by the paid mouthpiece of Edgerton, high priest of the profits.

Read it, and ask your favorite candidate for the general assembly where he or she stands:

"Just another communication to let the membership of the association know that its officers are on the job daily watching out for the interests of every manufacturer, corporation and employer of labor in Tennessee. Never has there been a time in this state when alertness, watchfulness and sound advice were more necessary on the part of industrialists than at the present time. Surely these are perilous days for those engaged in industry. Not that we are expecting a famine or a calamity, or even a worse slump in business, but we have in mind the conditions and circumstances which surround us at the present time.

"Each of you know that it has been heralded from the housetops by the American Federation of Labor, and its affiliated organizations, that the south must be unionized; that the interests of the workers must be protected, and that a group of men from 'way off yonder,' who haven't the slightest idea of conditions as they prevail in the south, must come in and save the day.

"Organizers are busy throughout the state selling memberships in the various branches of the labor unions. They are drawing a beautiful picture as to what will come to the workers if only they could get control of the industrial situation in this state.

"Now, we know in this office, and each of you know, that all this is 'bosh;' that the workers in Tennessee are amply and adequately cared for; that their wages are good, working conditions in most instances are ideal, and that the relationship existing between employer and employes is cordial and pleasant.

"This office, therefore, is doing everything in its power to encourage employers to stand firmly for the American principle of employment, and not permit labor unions to come in and take control of their plants.

"We are glad to report than no manufacturing concern in Tennessee has surrendered to the union in the past few months. This association is doing everything in its power to let the people of Tennessee know that conditions, insofar as the employer, employe and the public are concerned, would be far worse under labor union domination. Consequently, we are sending this communication to you that you might know that we are doing our part toward keeping the way open for industrial success and advancement in Tennessee.

"The labor unions have somewhat centered on Tennessee in their plan to 'capture' the south and will use their every effort to elect men to office who will do their bidding in the making and administering of our laws. Several pieces of legislation will be

REAPER CALLS JAMES M. LYNCH

Passing of Veteran Unionist Ends Colorful Career of Constructive Service.

JAMES M. LYNCH

(Special Correspondence.)

Syracuse, N. Y., July 17.—James M. Lynch, former president International Typographical union, died in this city yesterday, after a long illness. He was 63.

He was first elected president in 1900 and served continuously until 1914. He retired until 1924, when he was again re-elected for two years.

He served, by virtue of his office, as a delegate to the A. F. of L. conventions, where he took an active part in shaping policies of the organized labor movement. He became one of the best known trade unionists on the North American continent. He was a man of strong convictions which were expressed in positive terms. In discussing the moral right of labor to refuse to patronize unfair employers, he reported for a committee at the 1909 convention of the A. F. of L. at Toronto:

"We say that when the employer has determined to exploit not only adult male labor, but our women and our children, and our reasoning and appeal to his fairness and his consciousness will not sway him, boycott; we say that when labor has been oppressed, browbeaten and tyrannized, boycott; we say when social and political conditions become so bad that ordinary remedial measures are fruitless, boycott; and finally we say, we have the right to boycott, and we propose to exercise that right."

He was born in Manlius, this state, and learned the printers' trade in this city. After joining the Syracuse Typographical union he became active in civic and trade union affairs. He was president of the Syracuse Trades assembly seven terms. He served as fire commissioner of this city and also as New York state commissioner of labor from 1914 until 1921. His last public work was a member of Gov. Roosevelt's old age pension commission.

President Green, on behalf of the American Federation, gave fitting expression to the life work of the departed and his long years of usefulness in the cause of social betterment.

PLAN SPLENDID PROGRAM FOR PAINTERS' DAY

Annual Observance to Provide Many Features.

BLAIR GIVES OUT LIST OF CONTESTS

Fun and Frolic Promised Young and Old at Winnepesaukah July 30.

Plans for the observance of "Painters' Day" July 30 are progressing nicely, according to the committee in charge of arrangements for the "big doings" to be staged at Winnepesaukah, and an unusual interest is being manifested by the general public in the event. W. A. "Zeke" Witt, general chairman, last week announced his menu for the barbecue, which was of itself interesting, providing a splendid assortment of delicacies for the great noonday meal, prepared as only "Zeke" can cook it, and now comes E. L. "Bully" Blair, chairman of a subcommittee looking after the entertainment feature, with the announcement that there will be "something doing all day, with a long list of real prizes for winners of the various contests calculated to please and interest all comers, from 8 to 80."

Tentative program for this feature is given out by Mr. Blair as follows:

Old men's foot race (60 years and over), 50 yards.

Employers' and bosses' foot race, 100 yards.

100-yard dash for house painters.

100-yard dash for paperhangers.

100-yard dash for sign painters.

A prize for each race and a grand prize will be offered for winner in final.

100-yard dash for the three winners of the above races.

75-yard dash for boys under 15 years old.

100-yard dash for boys over 15 years.

50-yard dash for girls under 17 years.

Bear race for boys under 7 years.

Old-time rolling pin throwing contest for wives of house painters, sign painters, paperhangers and non-members. Four prizes; a grand prize for the winner of the contest between the winners of the four contests.

Baseball throwing for ladies, also for girls under 16 years.

Fat men's foot race, 250 pounds and over, 100 yards.

Potato race for married ladies.

Egg race for married ladies.

Prize for largest family on the grounds at noon of member of Local 226.

Prize for largest family on the grounds at noon of member of Local 299.

Prize for ugliest member of each, Local 226 and 299.

Drawing and word contests for men and ladies.

REGULATION OF OUTPUT KEY TO HIGHER PRICES

Virginia Beach, Va.—Until production is regulated to meet consumption prices will remain at a low level, William L. Cooper, of the department of commerce, told a convention of business men here.

RAYON BARONS' RULE-OR-RUIN POLICY DOESN'T BRING THAT DEAR PROSPERITY

Elizabethton, Where Hoover Made His Speech, Where Horton Guns Have Barked and Mill Tyrants Have Yammered Against Unions, Shows No Marks of Heaving Bank Rolls.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Elizabethton, July 17.—How goes prosperity in this beautiful city celebrated as the place where Herbert Hoover made his only southern campaign speech? How goes prosperity here where guns have barked from the hands of Horton soldiers and deputies and where mill rulers have said, "Thus shall things be because we say they shall be thus?"

Well, not so good, not so good.

Persons are not seen staggering down the main street, past the rambling hotel and into the stores with heaving bank rolls bearing down one corner of their anatomical structures.

Mass meetings to celebrate the good times are not being held in the spacious wooden tabernacle, nor yet on the street corners, nor even in front of the red brick courthouse.

No, it's not so good.

Big Plants Disorganized.

It is reported that the massive Bemberg and Glanzstoff plants are in a disorganized condition. E. T. Wilson, who was brought in to handle employment relations fairly and who was proclaimed as a mighty man of genius, has gone his way, a flop. There was no dallying about his departure. He just went away, as if he cared for no farewells, nor even for a last look at the great serrated roofs under which rayon and artificial silk is made.

And now it comes out from behind the gates that Bemberg is employing only about 200 workers and that Glanzstoff is cutting down. A week ago, so it is reported from behind the big gates, spinning room shifts were cut to eighteen workers, a reduction of nineteen from each shift. There are rumors that inexperienced workers, employed to break strikes and destroy unionism, turned out faulty work and hurt business. There are many reports, which keep coming as if there was a deep well out of which they can be drawn endlessly.

And about the newspapers—oh, yes, about the newspapers. Editor and Publisher, that splendid organ of newspaperdom, once had a page feature about an editor who came here and produced, by his mighty efforts, what was styled one of "the romances of journalism." Perhaps romance was the right word. Much romancing has gone on hereabouts.

Romancing Tendency Strong.

The tendency toward romancing is so strong that a few days ago the Elizabethton Star published a first-page editorial captioned, "Reds Lose Power." The "reds" were those who had supported J. A. Stevenson, barber and supporter of the Textile union. According to this editorial the schools now are safe, and "there will be no encouragement from the city administration for those who desire to keep Elizabethton from prospering." It seems that milk and honey will begin to flow right away, which ought to be good business for the hardware dealers who will doubtless sell many large dippers, pans and pots wherewith a glad populace will gather in the flow.

It seems as if everything here is romance—except the fact that the big plants hate unionism and all the forces that usually fall in lockstep with the biggest plants in a town are, whether they like it or not, lined up the same way.

Unions Keep Plugging Along.

Of course Edward F. McGrady and Alfred Hoffman, who were kidnaped out of the big hotel, couldn't see the romance. But even that picture looks different and more rosy to those who haven't yet gone to jail for the outrage. Meanwhile, in the midst of this romance—and fact—the unions keep plugging along, keeping their heads and knowing they are right.

the labor-haters. The letter follows:

The Riverside and Dan River Cotton mills, of Danville, have been and are discharging great numbers of workers, because of their joining our organization.

These mills are spreading, through posters pasted indiscriminately, notices that mill workers are wanted in their mills in Danville. They do not say on their advertisements or posters that these workers are wanted to take the places of those whom they discharged for membership in the union. No, nothing of the kind. They get them into Danville, then they exploit them.

Will you kindly see to it that all the members of the trade union movement and their friends notify mill workers everywhere they should not come to Danville.

It is an attempt of the management to destroy a splendid union of ours, now functioning in Danville. The organized mill workers of Danville, and they are nearly 100%, are determined to win out. You will help them very much by carrying out the above request.

MORE HILL STORES ARE "CONSOLIDATED"

Number of Hill Red stores "consolidated" this week—which means closed—was variously reported as from four to fourteen. Efforts to learn positively the actual number, however, were fruitless, some stating they had positive information fourteen local stores of the Nashville chain had quit the field. One source of information expressed the opinion that the rumor that fourteen branches had "gone down" probably was based on the figures for the month as a whole.

What is reputed to have been one of the largest of the local Hill store chain, however, is known to have succumbed, the store on lower Market street, next to the Easy Way, displaying one of the "Moved" signs on its barred front. The Easy Way grocery, incidentally, recently doubled its floor space, and reports the largest business in its history. Union meatcutters are employed in the Easy Way.

The promised check-up on the number of places abandoned by the Nashville concern since the Nashville boss gave the order to oust local meatcutters from its chain of stores here was delayed, members of Local 600, Meatcutters, stating they have been so busy looking after the trade of fair markets where they are employed, they have not had time to complete the survey. It was said, however, that the Nashville concern has only about three meat markets left from the wreck.

LABOR QUERIES

Q.—What prominent man said: "No intelligent man who reads the record and goes into the circumstances surrounding the conviction of Tom Mooney can doubt that he was railroaded into the penitentiary by an inflamed war sentiment. No one can question that he is an innocent man?"

A.—William Allen White, noted author and newspaper editor.

Q.—Who were the members of the mediation commission appointed by President Wilson to investigate the Mooney case?

A.—William B. Wilson, secretary of labor; Felix Frankfurter, secretary and counsel; Max Lowenthal, assistant secretary; John F. Spangler, Verner Z. Reed, John H. Walker and E. P. Marsh.

Q.—What union workers are the highest paid in the United States?

A.—Motion picture cameramen belonging to the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes and Moving Picture Machine Operators of the United States and Canada. Many of them receive $250 a week.

Q.—What was the original name of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen?

A.—It was organized as the Brotherhood of Railway Brakemen of the Western Hemisphere. This name was changed in 1890 to the Brotherhood of Railway Brakemen, which in turn became, in 1909, the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen.

TO URGE OLD-AGE PENSIONS.

New Haven, Conn.—A statewide organization, called by the Connecticut Federation of Labor, was organized in this city to draw up an old-age pension law and urge passage of same at the state legislature.

The committee consists of representatives of the unions, fraternal, civic and other organizations.

WATCH "CREEPING" WAGE CUTS

Billions of dollars that are invested in installment buying precludes popular approval of a nation-wide wage reduction movement.

The strategy of low-wage advocates is to profess faith in high wages, while quietly enforcing what it soothingly called "wage readjustments." Former business depressions were blamed on "high" wages, and wage cuts were urged by economists and business men. This policy has been discarded. Industrialists are now expected to give up lip service to the high wage principle, while they quietly "readjust" wages. This "readjustment," of course, is downward.

The Magazine of Wall Street is an exception to the general rule. That financial publication frankly declares:

"We hate to mention it, but it may be that one way to increase work and labor income and restore prosperity is for organized labor to take a lower rate of pay."

The policy of "creeping" wage cuts is slyly advocated by the Wall Street Journal, which drops this hint to manufacturers:

"Cost of living is down considerably from last year and a 10 per cent reduction in wages is not so drastic as one might think."

Trade unionists should be alert to the new plan to reach an old objective. Living costs are not "down considerably." They have dropped but three per cent—three cents on every dollar the workers spent to maintain life. Yet these workers are asked to accept a cut of ten cents on every dollar they receive as wages. Workers should not be lulled by the "creeping" wage-cut policy. A "wage adjustment" is as menacing to workers as the old-fashioned wage reduction. Both have the same results—lessened purchasing power and an extension of the present industrial letdown.

The billions of dollars that are invested in goods bought on credit makes it improbable that retail business men will favor a general wage reduction. This can be silently accomplished, however, by the "creeping" policy of "wage adjustments," while loudly professing faith in "high" wages — as an academic proposition.

Trade unionists should understand the new system that is less theatrical than the old method of lowering wages.

MAIN POINT IN MOONEY CASE

The Mooney case involves more than liberating an individual from prison. It is not a question of Mooney's economic views, or even his innocence or guilt. The point that must be kept in mind by every American who believes in orderly processes is that Mooney charges he has been "framed" in a court of law, and presents affidavits to support that charge. State witnesses have confessed their perjury, police officials publicly agree that Mooney was "framed," and Judge Griffin, who presided at the trial, has declared it was "one of the dirtiest deals ever put over."

Men may discuss Mooney's personality and his innocence or guilt, but the outstanding fact remains that a man barely escaped the gallows and is in prison for life, while men who tried him say he was "framed." It is a situation fraught with danger to the foundation of our governmental structure when such can be unchallenged in the claim that any court in this country can "railroad" a person to the penitentiary.

Our courts are the bulwark of our liberties. Every citizen should insist that justice be unsullied.

AND JERRY SIMPSON WAS "CRAZY"

[illegible] Jerry Simpson, Kansas congressman, and other populists of a generation ago were in the land of the living they would smile at the government's attempt to adjust the present situation. Populists insisted that wheat be stored in government warehouses and receipts for same be negotiable at banks. The populists were classed as "crazy" and "visionary" by our "hard-headed, practical" citizens.

But times have changed. Simpson would now be considered a conservative. The government has tied up more than $50,000,000 in a futile effort to hold prices at a satisfactory level. Government officials are frantically calling for less production, and Secretary Hyde of the department of agriculture and Alexander Legge, chairman of the federal farm board, are making radio talks and touring the middle west wheat belt in favor of a "slow-down" policy.

"Do less work that higher prices can be secured" is the substance of the Hyde-Legge plea that is accepted by industrial captains.

Canadian Dividends High, Too.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Montreal, July 17.—That increasing technology unemployment is not incompatible with the making of high profits by big strategically placed corporations is indicated by two sweep lines on the front page of a Canadian national weekly: "West clamors for help in unemployment crisis." "July dividends millions ahead of last year."

The selected companies whose announced quarterly dividends payable in July are larger than in July of last year number 154, and are representative of large-scale enterprise, but not of small business.

The Passing Show

Note and Comment on Things Doing in the March of Events

It continues to be a strange but gratifying fact in our political life that the senate in Washington is more responsive to public needs than the house.

The record of the last few months will, when compiled, show a much keener sense of responsibility to the people in the upper house of our double-barreled congress.

On almost every question of real importance the senate has furnished the better results. It passed the Wagner unemployment bills as they were; the house passed one, butchered and passed another and ditched the third. The senate defeated Parker and the senate gives more promise of an intention to deal with the injunction issue than can be found in the house.

This will not fit in with the ideas of those who slander the senate in season and out, but there are the facts. When the senate was not a popularly elected body things were otherwise.

A prisoner in Michigan penitentiary had a rare opportunity not long ago and he made the most of it. He was called upon to address the Michigan Prosecuting Attorneys' association, incognito.

The prisoner showed possession of real understanding of the causes of crime and his dissertation contained sound philosophy.

But he stung the lawyers, not with philosophy, but with jibes. He told them they were the champion off-again-on-againers, today defending criminals with all their might, tomorrow, having been elected prosecutors, doing their best to send them to prison.

On this theme the unknown prisoner rang the changes with delicious but biting humor and with that sureness of knowledge that comes from intimate association with the facts.

It is too bad every district attorney in the United States could not have heard this man who said, "There are no Patrick Henrys in my family, so you needn't expect oratory." He surpassed mere oratory.

President Hoover shows every indication of driving the United States into a new policy toward Latin America—a policy of absolute non-interference.

Labor has since time out of mind clamored against intervention to protect vested rights and mere wealth and to protect autocracies that in some cases have been as brutal as any in history.

But we seem on the verge of an era when we must keep hands off, even to the extent of seeing human liberty destroyed so that commerce may thrive.

Business at any price, export trade at any cost, seems to be the developing policy.

Venezuela and Cuba offer us examples of the perfect dictatorship, the full flower of absolutism, to mention two outstanding examples.

There are prices too high to pay for the death of liberty and it is to be hoped that American might is not to be used to compel other peoples to pay that price.

When the Mexican people were struggling for freedom from the old despotism of Diaz we did not keep hands off; we helped them to clear the path to freedom.

Rules of the house of representatives that give arbitrary power to a small group of members, who dictate what shall and what shall not be voted on, are again under fire. The bad record of the house in passing progressive legislation in the session just ended has brought the issue forcibly before the public. The issue is of particular interest to organized labor, as the house powers-that-be, using the rules by which the house has bound and gagged itself, killed unemployment, immigration and other labor measures approved by senate.

Candidates for the house who accept the present rules do not want the house to express the popular will. They prefer to see a small group, working in the dark, control legislation in the lower house. Labor knows this and will not forget it on election day.

In a number of southern states the commonwealth contributes about $8 a year to the education of a school child in rural districts. Children in the larger towns and cities fare better.

A survey of the entire country should be made for no other purpose than a comparison of the amount used in the education of the poor, the very poor, the moderately well-to-do and the wealthy.

The nation is entitled to know about these things. The people should know if there are inequalities of opportunity for the rising generations and they should judge if there is a danger of an aristocracy of intellect that would lead to still greater inequalities in this democracy.

In thinking along this line it might be well to note that at the Yale college commencement exercises the announcement was made that the college year then closing had brought to the institution money gifts totaling $23,405,743. The gifts of a single year to this single school surpass not only its own total productive endowment funds only fifteen years ago but those of any other American college save Harvard and Chicago.

Fully a dozen American colleges have such endowments; half a dozen are in the $50,000,000 neighborhood; Yale is close to the $100,000,000 mark which its ancient rival, Harvard, has already passed, with gifts of $11,265,775 during the year. In backing the colleges, as in some other directions and activities, Americans are doing big things in a big way.

But how about the millions of children who will never have an opportunity to share in these things?

What of the hundreds of thousands who never pass the eighth grade because economic conditions force them out to become wage earners, when, as and if they can get and keep employment?

The Labor Bureau, Inc., New York City, reports that "during June there was a marked increase in the number of wage cuts. For the first time decreases exceeded advances in scale. It is significant that not one of the 57 decreases that were reported was in an organized industry. All of the 57 cuts in rates of pay fall to workers who were not members of a trade union and consequently were not protected by the advantage of collective bargaining and wage contracts."

How's that for an argument for trades unionism? Can any non-unionist "laugh it off?"

Muscle Shoals Power Ordered Sold by Senate

Washington.—The senate, by a vote of 53 to 0, declared that the secretary of war should not discriminate in the sale of power generated by the government's power plant at Muscle Shoals.

The Alabama Power company, a unit of the power trust, uses one-fifth of this power and the remainder is wasted. The municipality of Muscle Shoals would purchase a portion of this wasted power, but the war department refuses the request.

Senator Black, of Alabama, publicly charged that the power trust, fearing the establishment of a precedent by the government, opposes the sale of this wasted water power. Under the senate resolution, the secretary of war is called upon not to discriminate against municipalities, but this power should be sold to them "upon as liberal terms and conditions as such power is sold to private power corporations."

PRINTING LOCKOUT IN NEW YORK CITIES

Elmira, N. Y.—Organized printers in this city and Niagara Falls were forced on strike by the American Sales Book company, whose executive offices are located in Toronto. The company also locked out organized stereotypers in the same cities.

An attempt to enforce the Bedeau speed-up system is behind the trouble. Under this plan a worker is discharged if he does not reach a standard of output, set by the company, which manufactures sales books.

The victimized workers are supported by executive councils of their respective internationals.

Wm. Green To Be Distinguished Guest of Legion

President of A. F. of L. Will Address Annual Convention of Vets at Boston.

(Special Correspondence.)

Indianapolis, Ind., July 17.—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, has accepted an invitation from O. L. Bodenhamer, national commander of the American Legion, to be a distinguished guest of and to address the national convention of the legion in Boston at some time during its sessions, October 6, 7, 8 and 9.

The acceptance of President Green is an added manifestation of the friendship between these two powerful forces in the national life of America, James F. Barton, national adjutant of the legion, said in making the announcement. "It is a mutual friendship which dates back to the early days of legion history when Samuel Gompers attended the legion convention, and leaders in both organizations have continued the courtesy and custom of exchanging visits since then whenever possible. Both organizations recognize the fact that a great many men are members of both, and that we have many ideals and purposes in common."

Both conventions will be in session in Boston at the same time, that of the American Federation of Labor continuing longer than the legion gathering, and President Green's visit will be returned by a similar one from the legion.

This year the friendship between labor and the legion was marked between convention dates by a meeting held in Coshocton, O., in March. Coshocton is the home town of President Green, and he addressed a legion banquet held in honor of National Commander Bodenhamer and Department Commander Dudley White. The views he expressed found a ready sympathy in legion ranks. The Ohio Legion News, the official publication of the Ohio department, in writing of his address, said in part:

"His address, which held the almost breathless attention of the great assemblage, attested the close alliance that exists between the American Federation of Labor and the American Legion.

"On the subject of communism, President Green said communism is the greatest menace the world faces today."

Regarding the legion, President Green was quoted as saying: "Not only do I indorse the aims and efforts of the American Legion, but I urge upon members of the American Federation of Labor, wherever they may be, to align themselves, if they are so fortunate to be eligible, with the American Legion; to join the legion and to stand shoulder to shoulder as advocates and protectors of the ideals of our own America."

Why the Printers Indorsed FINNEY CARTER

A Plain Statement of Fact by Chattanooga Typographical Union, No. 89.

TO THE READERS OF THE LABOR WORLD:

Indorsement of candidates for political office has never been the policy of Chattanooga Typographical Union.

In the election to be held Aug. 7, however, Finney T. Carter, a member of this organization, will seek a position as member of the County Court, and we deem it proper to point out to our brother trades unionists some of the reasons why we believe he should receive the support of all good citizens.

By unanimous order of the members present at last Sunday's meeting, the following is submitted:

He is frank, fearless and capable;

He is unalterably opposed to the iniquitous practice known as "fee-grabbging," and is pledged not to open an office;

He is independent, and his voice and vote in the County Court will be guided only by his conception of the taxpayers' desire;

He established and edited The Labor World;

He has given a quarter-century of competent, untiring service to this organization and the Labor Movement as a whole;

He served three terms as President of Chattanooga Trades and Labor Council;

He is now serving his eighth term as President of his local Union;

He has been a citizen of this community for more than 25 years.

For the above and other reasons, this union, at its regular monthly session Sunday, July 6, 1930, indorsed the candidacy of Finney T. Carter for a member of the County Court.

There are two major classes of Long Distance Service

"Person-to-Person" Calls

A Person-to-Person call is one where you specify that you wish to talk to a particular person at a distant telephone. The rates for this service are the same at all hours, whether you talk during the day or night. Charges may be reversed on all Person-to-Person calls.

"Station-to-Station" Calls

A Station-to-Station call is one where you are willing to talk to anyone who answers at the distant telephone. After the called telephone answers, if you wish, you may then ask for some particular person, but the charges on a station-to-station call begin when the distant telephone answers. The rate for Day Station-to-Station service is lower than the Person-to-Person rate and in the evening between 7 and 8:30 the Station-to-Station rate is about one-fourth less than the Day Station-to-Station rate. Station-to-Station calls made between 8:30 P. M. and 4:30 A. M. cost about half as much as Day Station-to-Station calls. Charges may be reversed on Station-to-Station calls when the rate is 25c or more.

NOTICE TO COAL DEALERS!

Sealed proposals for furnishing a year's supply of coal for use in the city schools, fire halls, market house and the municipal building will be received at the office of the Commissioner of Public Utilities, Grounds and Buildings in the City Hall, Room No. 25, July 24, 1930, 11 a.m.

STANDARDS FOR COAL

Egg (2x5-in.) Minimum 14,000 B. T. U. per pound of coal as delivered.

Egg (2x4-in., 2x3-in. or 3x5-in.) Minimum 13,600 B. T. U. per pound of coal as delivered.

Nut (1x2-in.) Minimum 13,400 B. T. U. per pound as delivered.

Screen lump, 14,000 B. T. U. per pound of coal as delivered.

No. 1 Machine-Cut Mine-Run, not less than 65 per cent. lump. Minimum 13,800 B. T. U. per pound of coal as delivered.

The amount of screened lump to be used will be approximately 300 tons. The combined Egg, Nut and Run of Mine, as above, to be used will approximate 5,500 tons.

The successful bidder will be required to fill the [illegible] before the 5th of September and to furnish such additional supplies from time to time throughout the season as is required.

A maximum variation of 1 per cent. lower than standard thermal value will be allowed and a larger variation may be cause, at the option of the Commissioner of Public Utilities, Grounds and Buildings, for the canceling of the contract.

All deliveries, whether by wagon or truck, must show net, tare and gross weight. The right is reserved to reject any or all bids, or accept any particular one and reject all others.

Bidders' forms upon which all proposals must be submitted, may be obtained free upon application to the office of the undersigned.

Dated and signed this 12th day of July, 1930.

U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics finds the average Detroit Ford employe ends the year in debt, earning a "deficit wage."

POLLYANNA UNEMPLOYMENT PICTURE IS SHOWN TO BE BASED ON DECEPTIVE DATA

Calculations From Earlier Census Returns Indicate Degree of Unemployment Ranging From 5.6 to 9 Per Cent.—No Absolutely Accurate Information Available for Months.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Washington, July 17.—Based on computations suggested by the United States census bureau, the pollyanna picture of unemployment painted by Secretary of Commerce Lamont is being shot to pieces.

Calculations carried out on the basis of earlier census figures as to the ratio of wage earners to population show the present census disclosing a degree of unemployment that ranges from 5.6 per cent of wage earners in Baltimore to the 9 per cent found in Providence. And these percentages do not include those out of work because of "lay-offs."

These figures are not to be taken as accurate. They are approximates—deductions from available facts.

Exhaustive inquiry by International Labor News Service, representing this newspaper, shows conclusively that no absolutely reliable information as to unemployment will be available for months. Information will continue to come as to the number of unemployed who are permanently out of work, able to work and unable to get work. But only the long pull will bring that total of unemployment to be found in final tabulation of figures on those "laid off" because of industrial depression, many of whom are under technical lay-off and may never return to their old jobs.

Meanwhile efforts of political leaders to make capital out of the relation of partial unemployment figures to population totals will be nothing more than deception. The truth appears to be that leaders on both sides of the political fence are attempting to make political capital at the expense of a real understanding of such figures as do become available and at the expense of accuracy.

"Discrepancies" Discussed.

Apparent discrepancies in the census reports so far released on unemployment, as well as the difficulties in making comparisons with other data on the same subject, were discussed by Dr. Leon E. Truesdell, in charge of the division of population statistics of the census bureau, in an interview with a representative of International Labor News Service and this newspaper.

Due to the demand for early reports on unemployment, local supervisors have been making and releasing tabulations of the number of persons in the given district, "usually employed but out of a job, able to work and looking for a job," said Dr. Truesdell. The returns showing the number of people who consider that they have a job, but who have not been working for some time for whatever reason, including the length of time thus unemployed, effect on pay, reasons for not working, etc., are more complicated, and have not been attempted to be tabulated by the local supervisors' offices. These will be assembled later on, and announced in due season.

There have been many objections to the announcement of unemployment percentages in proportion to population. Dr. Truesdell stated that this is the only basis of comparison available at this time, as there have not yet been assembled any of the data relating to the numbers usually employed in the respective occupations. Following the practice in the previous 1920 census, data will be assembled, showing employment by gainful occupations, and a comparison made with this of the figures on unemployment for that industry.

40 Per Cent Wage Earners.

Dr. Truesdell said that the figures of the previous census showed an average of approximately 40 per cent of the total population were engaged in gainful occupations, and that the percentage of unemployment to the number usually employed at the time of this census can be readily ascertained by using this figure, and making comparison of the unemployment figures reported at this time in that relation.

Based on the incomplete returns now in, the following percentages of unemployed, based on the number of those gainfully employed as ascertained by the use of the 40 per cent ratio suggested by Dr. Truesdell, are indicated for some of the principal population centers:

Dayton, Ohio, 8 per cent; Baltimore, Md., 5.6 per cent; Providence, R. I., 9 per cent, and Houston, Tex., 6.6 per cent.

It was learned that in the taking of the last Swedish census the percentage of unemployment was based upon the total population figures. In most of the other European countries the number of unemployed is shown directly in the registration connected with the unemployment insurance systems in operation to so great an extent in those countries.

Final Data in December.

The tabulation of those employed in gainful occupations will probably not be completed until about December of this year, according to Dr. Truesdell, at which time the data then available will be at hand for making comparisons with previous census figures, as well as with other data along the same lines.

Meanwhile, releases of information are being given every few days, showing the total population figures by counties (preliminary) and the number of unemployed on the basis set forth as previously explained.

Tabulations have now been completed covering about 50,000,000 total population, said Dr. Truesdell, and it is expected that there will be issued another summary of these two figures within the next week.

End Night Work to Cure Textile Evils, Mill Executives Advise

(By International Labor News Service.)

New York City, July 17.—Women's Wear Daily, in a dispatch from Greenville, S. C., says:

"The opinion of T. M. Marchant, president of the Victor-Monaghan Mills, that many of the evils of the textile industry could be cured by abolition of night work over the country, and that, as one step toward the goal, women and minor children should be relieved of night work immediately, was given virtually unanimous approval by other Greenville mills executives.

"'Night work should be discontinued,' said August W. Smith, president of the Brandon corporation. 'If it could be abolished entirely the industry would be greatly benefited. In fact, most of the mills are trying to eliminate it. However, it must be achieved slowly for to do it quickly many persons would be thrown out of employment and be subjected to much hardship.'

"'The plan ought to be put into operation,' said Brown Mahon, of Judson Mill. 'Judson has not operated at night for some time. We felt that it was better not to operate two shifts. Very few children under 15 years of age are employed at Judson now, and there will be none at all a year from now. We stopped asking for state permits to employ children from 14 to 15 years of age a year ago and by next year there will be none at all in that plant.'

"'The F. W. Poe Manufacturing company discontinued night operation last July and no children under 16 years of age are employed,' N. C. Poe, Jr., said."

Labor Agencies Bill Postponed by House

Washington.—House leaders postponed action on the Wagner labor agencies bill until the December session of congress. The question was not permitted to come on the floor of the house where a vote could be taken. The National Association of Manufacturers and other powerful anti-labor interests opposed the measure, which was passed by the senate.

The bill for advanced planning and regulated construction of public works during depression was amended. The bill to compile unemployment data was passed.

MORE ABOUT BOSSES' UNION

agitated by them at the next session of the legislature, which no manufacturer can support, and which the public will not sanction if they are familiar with same. For instance, an attempt will be made to pass a law prohibiting an employer from discharging a man because he joins a labor union. Of course it is wholly within the rights of an employer to discharge a man for any cause if his services are not satisfactory, and surely no man's services can be satisfactory in an open shop plant if he is dominated by a labor union. We shall oppose any such legislation if proposed at the next session of the legislature.

"A strenuous effort will be made to considerably liberalize the workmen's compensation law, and give the employe more than he is now receiving. We feel that the present workmen's compensation law is fair to the employer, employe and the public, and we shall oppose any changes in this law, unless it is certain amendments which will protect the interests of the employer on account of recent decisions rendered by our courts.

"There never was a time in the history of industry when employers should co-operate in these common problems as much as at the present time, and we want to assure the manufacturers that this association is not going to fail to express itself on these matters wherein we know that we are right, and in every instance the interests of the employer will be protected. And when we say this, we have in mind also the interests of the employes and the public, because nothing can happen to the employer, either favorably or unfavorably, without likewise affecting the people associated with the employer.

"We are in close touch with the labor situation throughout the state and will keep our membership advised as to movements which are intended to the detriment of the manufacturers of Tennessee. Trusting we may hear from you often on these questions, and assuring you we are constantly looking after your interests, we are,

"Sincerely yours,
"C. C. GILBERT,
"Secretary."

Back Quit Hurting

"I was in a very weak condition from a serious sickness," writes Mrs. I. Leonard, 571 Joseph St., New Orleans, La. "I was so weak, I wanted to sleep all the time. I did not have strength to do anything. My back ached nearly all the time. I was just in misery.

"My mother told me I must arouse myself from the sleepiness, and take something to help get my strength back. She had taken Cardui and had been helped, so I decided to take Cardui, too. After my first bottle, I could see that it was helping me. I took four bottles at this time. My strength came back and I gained weight. Pretty soon, I was my old self again.

"My back quit hurting, and I haven't had any more trouble since I took Cardui."

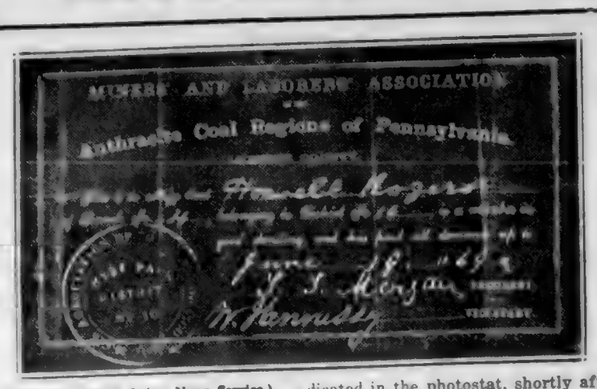
Card of Old-Time Union Miner



(By International Labor News Service.)

Indianapolis, July 17. — W. H. Rogers, of the United States conciliation service of the department of labor at Washington, D. C., is the owner of the membership card reproduced above. It was issued to his father in 1869 and is one of a series of such similar documents that the son today proudly displays.

His story of the card is told in the following letter sent with the copy of the card to International Secretary-Treasurer Thomas Kennedy, of the United Mine Workers of America. He says:

"Dear Tom:

"Herewith is a bit of mute evidence of the efforts of the anthracite miners of the yesteryears. I know you will appreciate this bit of historic interest scattering in the region you know so well.

"Father landed in this country from South Wales in the year 1869. He joined the miners' organization, indicated in the photostat, shortly after his arrival. I have his membership card showing that he joined the American Miners' association, at Caseyville, Ill., in the year 1870. I also have his membership card showing that he joined the Miners' National association of the United States, at Bryant, Ill., in the year 1874. The name of the great character, John Siney, is attached to this card in his own handwriting.

"Father joined the United Mine Workers of America, at Ottumwa, Iowa, in the year 1891. I have his due card showing that he was admitted to membership in L. U. No. 152, U. M. W. of A., May 13, 1891. He passed on many years ago. I can not express in words how much I cherish these cards which are a mute part of my father's life.

"Many good wishes.

"Yours truly,
"W. H. ROGERS,

LABOR WANTS REPRESENTATION ON ECONOMIC BETTERMENT BODY

Workers Wonder Where They Figure in Membership of Proposed Improvement Council for Southern Industry and Feel They Are Entitled to a Voice in Organization.

(Special Correspondence)

Birmingham, Ala., July 17.—Outstanding labor leaders of Alabama and other southern industrial states wonder what the status of labor is in the formation of the proposed southeastern regional council for economic improvement of the industrial south.

In view of the fact that labor is the "other fifty per cent" of industry, influential trade unionists are concerned as to where they come in in the formation of any sort of council for an improvement in economic conditions in the south.

Gov. Bibb Graves has announced the appointment of three Alabama citizens as members of the special committee of twenty-one business men and employers whose duty it is to formulate an organization for economic improvement. He named John T. Cochrane, of Mobile; Col. R. A. Mitchell, of Birmingham, and Charles A. Moffatt, of the state board of administration. Frank Page, of Raleigh, N. C., is temporary chairman of the committee of twenty-one.

The suggestion that such a committee be named with power to organize and operate was the outgrowth of the governors' conference at Asheville, N. C., in April last. Governors of the states of Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Georgia, Alabama and Florida were represented at this meeting. No labor spokesmen were officially present.

"It seems to me that labor ought to be represented on the committee of twenty-one," Paul J. Smith, chairman of the southern organization committee of the American Federation of Labor, said in discussing the proposed organization. "No doubt such an economic body would be a power for good in southern industrial development, but inasmuch as labor is the accepted 50 per cent of industry, I am of the opinion that it should be represented on the committee. Should the question of wages, working conditions or any controversy in reference to labor arise no doubt the council would at least take cognizance of the fact, therefore it seems to me it would be wise to have representatives of labor on the council."

Chairman Smith said, however, that as far as he knew labor had not been approached in the matter of representation, nor had any of the governors of the states represented gone into the subject of labor being represented.

It is understood that the southern organization committee of the American Federation of Labor will suggest that labor be a part of the council, and the governors of the interested states be asked to appoint such labor delegates.

Chairman Smith said he had no idea as to who labor would recommend for appointment on the committee should the various governors agree that labor ought to be represented. He said he had had no assurance that the council would agree to admit labor members on the board.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, is deeply interested in formation of the proposed economic council, and has advised southern workers that they should be represented in the organization.

The Chattanooga chicken dealer wrote Ripley about as follows: "This was no record at all. I have in my employ a woman who killed, picked, cut up and cooked twelve chickens in twelve minutes." Immediately came an answer: "The time noted in my cartoon was a typographical error. It should have read three and one-half seconds. Ripley."

INDS STATE POLICE COST PRETTY PENNY

shvillian Again Digs Into Records.

OLL FOR FIRST YEAR OVER HALF MILLION

rrister Voices Protest gainst Waste of People's loney by Horton Regime.

I. G. Forrister, of Nashville, who g up" a story recently concerning magnanimous gift of a fine auto- ile by the state of Tennessee to . Boyd, commander-in-chief of the rton expeditionary forces at Eliza- ton, has apparently again been ning the records in the state hives, and this time has resur- ed some "dope" on the state police . Mr. Forrister's figures, given the following communication to Labor World, indicate the cost to taxpayers for the first year's vice" of the commonwealth con- bulary is slightly in excess of half illion dollars.

This is another case of extrava- tly wasting the taxpayers' ey," is the terse comment of the respondent.

Mr. Forrister's letter follows:

In regard to the establishment, t and upkeep of the state po- e force of approximately eighty embers, records in the state mptroller's office show the fol- ing expenditures: Voucher No. 6600 for the sum of $3,481.80, id March 14, 1930; and voucher o. 349 for the sum of $1,585.35, id March 4, 1930; total, 667.15. Both of the preceding ills were paid to the Noel Hotel mpany for the rooming and ding of the members of the ate police force, while in train- and being equipped for serv- .

Voucher No. 350001, $129.34, id March 26, 1930; and voucher o. 338625, $3,165.86, paid March , 1930; total, $3,295.20. Paid the L. A. Bauman Clothing mpany, Nashville, for uniforms r the state policemen.

Voucher No. 338622, $1,355.68, id March 26, 1930; Voucher No. 387, $1,734.51, paid March 21, 30. Both of the preceding sums re paid to the Keith-Simmons rdware company for pistols to ip the state police. Total, 090.19.

Voucher No. 331137, $18,558.30, id Feb. 14, 1930; Voucher No. 422, $395.50, paid March 24, 30; Voucher No. 337442, 9.22, paid March 18, 1930; ucher No. 336042, $2,087.88, d March 11, 1930; Voucher 337442, $940.22, paid March 1930; Voucher No. 341208, 7.00, paid April 8, 1930. To- $23,188.12, all of which was d to the McCullough Motor mpany for motorcycles for the te police.

The grand total of the preced- figures is $34,640.66.

The original state police force created several years ago hout authority of law, and n members of the force or- ized a system of remaining secluded places, then suddenly ting out and arresting so- ed speedsters and haling them magistrates' courts, the pub- conscience revolted. When the cuit court rendered a decision olishing the state police, and ich was later upheld by the e supreme court, a more pop- court decision was never ered in this state. When the ra session of the state legis- ure was convened in Nashville ill was passed to meet the de- nds of the Horton administra- , and established a new state ce force, much to the disap- val and displeasure of the ple of this state. There was urgent need or demand for services of these men, and state police force, though sonally men of fine character, today the most unpopular of men in the state. Partic- rly is this true in view of the that their equipment cost taxpayers of this state ap- ximately $35,000, and their aries will run to $366,000 per um. Add to this total of 1,000, $102,000 for personal enses, gasoline, oil and re- s, and the first year's cost of state police to our taxpayers e approximate sum of $503,- 00.

This is another case of extrav- tly wasting the taxpayers' ey.

The state police department created to give men jobs and engthen the Lea-Horton ma- e.

PROGRAM FOR PAINTERS' DAY IS COMPLETED

Picnic - Barbecue to Be Staged Next Wednesday.

ENTERTAINMENT FOR YOUNG AND OLD

Noonday Meal to Be Prepared by "Zeke" Witt, General Chairman.

Next Wednesday, July 30, will mark the eighth annual observance of "Painters' Day" in Chattanooga, and the committee in charge of this year's celebration promises that the all-day program to be staged at Lake Winnepesaukah will be "bigger and better than ever." All of which is some promise, for members of Local 226, Painters, and Local 229, Signwriters, have in the past made quite a reputation for arranging entertaining programs, as well as for preparing a barbecue feast as it should be prepared.

Beginning promptly at 10 a.m., the athletic and stunts program, under direction of E. L. Blair and F. S. Thurston, will get under way, and "Bully" and "Frank" are all pepped up, loudly proclaiming that the games and contests will furnish amusement for all ages, from 8 to 80. That these contests will draw plenty of entrants is assured, not only by past experience, but by the fact that real, worthwhile prizes will be presented to the winners.

Since the idea was first born to hold an annual picnic and barbecue for local painters, its popularity has grown, and thousands of citizens each year have enjoyed the festivities with the trades unionists, their employers, families and friends. The day is declared a holiday, and all local paint stores and shops are closed.

The usual park attractions, including various amusement devices, swimming, boating, fishing, etc., will, of course, be operating full blast, giving a wide choice of entertainment for the workers and their guests. Charles Melford and T. A. Rosser will have charge of the soft-drink concession.

The athletic contest and games program will be as follows:

Old men's foot race (60 years and over), 50 yards.

Employers' and bosses' foot race, 100 yards.

100-yard dash for house painters.

100-yard dash for paperhangers.

100-yard dash for sign painters.

A prize for each race and a grand prize will be offered for winner in final.

100-yard dash for the three winners of the above races.

75-yard dash for boys under 15 years old.

100-yard dash for boys over 15 years.

50-yard dash for girls under 17 years.

Bear race for boys under 7 years.

Old-time rolling pin throwing contest for wives of house painters, sign painters, paperhangers and non-members. Four prizes; a grand prize for the winner of the contest between the winners of the four contests.

Baseball throwing for ladies, also for girls under 16 years.

Fat men's foot race, 250 pounds and over, 100 yards.

Potato race for married ladies.

Egg race for married ladies.

Horseshoe pitching contest.

Prize for largest family on the grounds at noon of member of Local 226.

Prize for largest family on the grounds at noon of member of Local 299.

Prize for ugliest member of each, Local 226 and 299.

Drawing and word contests for men and ladies.

W. A. Witt, general chairman of the committee, will have charge of the barbecue, and few people in Hamilton county do not know of "Zeke's" prowess when it comes to manipulating the barbecue pit.

The menu for the noonday meal, which will be served promptly at 12 noon, follows:

Dill Pickles — Olives
Barbecued Lamb, Pork and Beef
Potato and Pimento Salad
Cold Slaw — Relish — Devil Sauce
Sliced Tomatoes — Bermuda Onions
Bread — Lemonade

The following members of Local 226 will assist in the program: George Durham, Deemer Little, George Sivley, Dave Jones, A. T. Jones, H. R. Gray, R. L. Taylor, Erskine Mabee, J. G. Burkes, C. F. Weidner, P. P. Thurston, Roy Bowen, W. D. Canada, H. M. Ottman, Joe Farmer, J. F. Miller, E. K. Witt and Fred Falk.

TO PAY MINIMUM WAGE

Akron, O.—The city council approved a minimum wage of 50 cents an hour on municipal work. It was stated that rates as low as 25 cents are paid.

BROTHERHOOD AND FEDERATION REPRESENTATIVES WILL DISCUSS TENNESSEE POLITICAL SITUATION

Reid, Hanly and Aymon Accept Invitation to Review Conditions As They Affect Workers at Open Meeting for Railroad and Other Workers Tuesday Night—Central Body Session Postponed From Monday Until Tuesday at 7:15—Speaking at 8—"The Truth About Horton" to Be Told — All Union Members Invited.

Acting on instructions of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council at its last regular meeting, legislative committee of that body has arranged for an open mass meeting for trades unionists on next Tuesday night, at Central Labor hall, Cherry street, at which outstanding labor officials of the state will discuss political matters as they affect Tennessee workers.

After conferring with the executive board of Central Body, the committee announced that regular meeting of the parent organization would be postponed from Monday night until Tuesday night, beginning promptly at 7:15, and the open meeting will follow at 8, in the large hall.

Speakers will include H. V. Reid, chairman of the nonpartisan political campaign committee of the Tennessee Federation of Labor and the Railroad Brotherhoods; David Hanly, legislative chairman of the Tennessee Federation of Labor; Paul J. Aymon, president of the federation and representative of the American Federation of Labor, and possibly others. Perry E. Daly, of Knoxville, legislative representative of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, wired the committee Thursday that a previously-planned trip in the interest of Mr. Gwin would prevent his presence at the local meeting. W. A. Chrisman, legislative representative Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, also wired regrets.

Mr. Reid, whose home is in Memphis, besides having a long record of service as chairman of the joint state committee, is legislative representative of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen. His loyalty to the cause of labor, combined with his ability, have given him a keen insight into problems surrounding the battle for social legislation, and he is known throughout the state as a gentleman of unusual frankness. In his discussion of issues and candidates he may be expected to "hew to the line, and let the chips fall where they may." Mr. Reid's experiences at Nashville and elsewhere in the state make an interesting narrative, and those who attend Tuesday night's meeting will be well repaid for their time.

Paul J. Aymon, it is believed, will have an unusually interesting message for his fellow trades unionists. Mr. Aymon is a veteran of the "battle of Elizabethton," where Gov. Horton's army won its great (?)—if temporary—victory in alignment with a German autocracy against 100 per cent. native Tennesseans, most of whom were women and young girls. How the Tennessee National Guard was used as a strikebreaking agency has been told before by Mr. Aymon, but its repetition at this particular time will doubtless prove doubly interesting, even to those who have heard it on other occasions and in other ways.

Mr. Hanly is known to possibly every trades unionist in Tennessee as chairman of the federation's legislative committee. He is another who enjoys a reputation of calling a spade a spade, and his long years of experience with the workers' legislative program has given him an unusually keen insight into things political. What happened, and how, in the last general assembly with reference to social legislation, as well as prospects for the federation program in the next, will doubtless form the major part of Mr. Hanly's address Tuesday night.

Delegates to Central Body are urged to be present when the regular session is called to order at 7:15 sharp. This meeting will be held in the regular meeting hall, and it is believed that all necessary business can be taken care of in time to start the open meeting in the large hall at 8. In the event of an overflow crowd in the big hall, which will seat several hundred, it is planned to throw the two rooms together, and it is thought that with this arrangement all comers may be comfortably seated.

"Vacation" of Ford Workers Is Screen To Fire Thousands

By C. V. ULRICH

Detroit, Mich., July 24.—The Ford company announced July 11 that 110,000 employes would enter a two weeks' vacation.

The company gives as one of the principal reasons for its shutdown, to enable all employes to have their vacation at the same time. It does not make public the fact that it is engaged in laying off from 17 to 20 per cent horizontally, of all employes permanently. The men are simply told their money is ready and are deprived of their badge, which means complete severance of relations with the company.

It seems strange that the Ford Motor company takes into consideration the desire of its employes in the matter of the vacation period, when at no time in the history of the firm has it taken into consideration the desires of the employes. In fact, there is no channel by which any employe could make his wish known on any matter.

Perhaps the 17 per cent of the employes that are being discharged directly have made their wish known to the company that they want to retire from the business of making Ford cars, having reached a state of affluence in life as a result of working for the Ford Motor company whose wage scale, it has just been established, is a deficit wage scale.

Mr. Ford in the factory is a tyrant, outside he is the buyer of antiques and the savior of wayward bank clerks.

Are these 18,000 men being discharged outright, or to enable them to retire? That question is left for one of the retired to answer. The already large army of unemployed in the city of Detroit will by this action of the Ford Motor company receive an unexpected increase from a firm whose production figure is now at the highest peak in its history.

LOCAL GUEST

JAMES WILSON

President, Patternmakers' League of North America.

Local Patternmakers Friday were entertaining a distinguished guest in the person of their international president, who arrived in the forenoon and was immediately taken in charge by a committee headed by H. A. Burnett and shown the points of interest in and around Chattanooga.

The international official was scheduled to deliver an address at on open meeting for members of his craft Friday night at Odd Fellows' hall.

James Wilson—"Jimmy" to thousands—has just been re-elected without opposition as president of the Patternmakers' league. He is a vice-president of the American Federation of Labor and was a member of two wartime labor missions to Europe.

Congress Failed To Provide Funds For Labor Bill

(By International Labor News Service.)

Washington, July 24. — Because congress failed to vote money to enable the bureau of labor statistics to obtain statistics as provided in one of the three Wagner unemployment bills, it will be impossible to carry out the provisions of the bill at present, Commissioner Ethelbert Stewart announces.

Trade unionists point out that the failure to provide money for the measure was the climax to the thoroughly bad record of congress on the Wagner bills. For this record the house must take the blame, as the bills were passed by the senate. The house held up one bill and emasculated another so that it is of little value. Then it forgot to provide money to make operative the third measure, for the collection of statistics.

Commissioner Stewart explained that the bureau of labor statistics has been forced recently to curtail its activities and cut down its staff because of a lack of money, and to carry out the provisions of the Wagner bill would manifestly be impossible under the circumstances. The bill, it was pointed out, carried no authorization for an appropriation. No money can be had, therefore, until congress makes an appropriation after it reconvenes in December.

Statistics are already being compiled, however, for the majority of the industries mentioned in the bill, Mr. Stewart said. The bureau had made plans to extend its work to include gathering of data on employment in the building trades, not now covered, and with the co-operation of the department of agriculture, it is hoped that figures on employment on farms may be received. The bureau, it was explained, could not hope to cover adequately the thousands of farms in the country, but it is believed that agents of the department of agriculture, located in nearly every county in the country, will be able to furnish a fairly accurate picture of the number of men working on farms and the wages they receive.

PRESENT WAGE STANDARDS TO BE MAINTAINED

Green Declares Workers Will Oppose Reductions.

SAYS UNEMPLOYMENT CAN BE PREVENTED

Destruction of Purchasing Power Dangerous for Whole People.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Montreal, July 24.—Declaring that labor challenged the idea that unemployment cannot be prevented, President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, told the International Brotherhood of Stationary Firemen and Oilers in convention here that if the nation is brought out of the present depression in a reasonable length of time purchasing power of the people must be maintained. He declared that labor will maintain present wage standards and that it is labor's purpose "to establish them on an unassailable basis."

After pointing out that both the United States and Canada are faced with unfavorable economic conditions, President Green said:

"We are in the midst of widespread industrial depression. Thousands of working men in every city of the land, in every town, in every village, in every community, are tramping the streets seeking employment. In the building trades organizations, in the printing, the metal, in the transportation, in the miscellaneous trades, they are grappling with this big problem.

Labor Deals with Problem.

"The American Federation of Labor is dealing with this problem, and so far as we are able, we are calling the attention of the people upon the American continent to the necessity of meeting it and dealing with it constructively, so that the men and women able and willing to work should be guaranteed an opportunity under all conditions that may exist at any time or any place.

"The Federation of Labor contends that the problem need not be a necessary evil. There are economists who argue that recurring periods of unemployment are necessary and inevitable.

"The American labor movement challenges that kind of economic philosophy. To admit that, is to admit that we are incapable of dealing with the economic problem of unemployment. Such an admission would present to coming generations the most gloomy picture we can possibly contemplate.

Can Be Prevented.

"We can grapple with it, we can deal with it, we can prevent unemployment. We can so systematize employment that in the operations of the economic law and the development of industry, men and women can be guaranteed an annual income, rather than a spasmodic daily wage. That is the condition we are striving for.

"Women must not be sacrificed on the altar of commercialism. Men must earn an income annually to protect their women folk and enable them to keep their families in comfort and to have the opportunity of enjoying a greater degree of leisure.

Will Preserve Standards.

"For the first time in the history of cyclical unemployment, our general wage structure has not been assaulted or assailed. We have preserved our standards during this distressing period, and it is our purpose to establish them on an unassailable basis.

"We maintain that any reduction in purchasing power which follows a reduction in wages would be injurious, not only to the great mass of the people, but to the whole of society. If we are to be brought out of the present industrial depression in a reasonable length of time, we must maintain the purchasing power of the people, because you cannot sell goods if people cannot buy and they cannot buy unless you pay them wages to buy with."

FIREWORKS PLANT SECURED NO LICENSE

Trenton, N. J.—Explosion of a fireworks plant at Neptune, in which four persons lost their lives, revealed that the plant operated seventeen years without a license.

The fireworks were manufactured in a "home" factory. Charles Weeks, deputy commissioner of labor, who investigated the case, reports "it is very unfortunate" that the owner of the plant did not acquaint state officials with his operation.

MILL WORKERS PIN HOPES ON TRADE UNION

See Relief From Oppression in Organization.

LAY FOUNDATION FOR IMPROVEMENTS

Depressed Industrial Conditions Fail to Check Southern Campaign.

(Special Correspondence.)

Birmingham, Ala., July 24.—While the unemployment situation in the southern industrial states is not showing any appreciable improvement, due to depressed business conditions, substantial progress in the trades union movement is reported to the Birmingham headquarters of the southern organization campaign by field workers, Paul J. Smith, organization committee chairman, said today.

Textile manufacturers in the south, employing in normal times some 300,000 workers, are adhering to a tacit understanding of curtailing cotton and knit goods production because of poor market conditions and surplus stocks. Despite the sizzling heat which has gripped the south for many days, the work of organizing by the American Federation of Labor has proceeded without interruption, Mr. Smith said.

In many districts in the textile states mills are operating part time or with sharply reduced forces. The Glantzstoff mills recently let out about 400 workers in addition to those already on the street. The determination of the Cotton Manufacturers association of North Carolina to abolish night work for all persons under 18 years of age has met with approbation among mill owners, but has gained little in actuality. Night work, however, in some of the mills has been discontinued temporarily at least due to slack business.

Improving the economic conditions of the mill workers is a paramount question throughout the south, and in view of the accomplishments of the American Federation of Labor, workers in many regions have lost some of their hopelessness and believe a new day is dawning for them through the Textile Workers of America.

In the Huntsville (Ala.) district, where the mills employ some 8,000 hands, the movement toward unionization has been unprecedented, field workers report. Local union No. 1690, recently organized at Huntsville, has approximately 4,000 members, and new members are coming in at the rate of 200 a week. The merchants of Huntsville have come out openly for the union. In public addresses at labor mass meetings, and through communications to the officers of the local unions, business men have assured the workers of their sympathetic attitude and declare they are tired of "low wage prosperity," although many of them subscribed to this theory in full page advertisements when this town went "open shop" a few years ago.

Textile unions in Danville, Va., Columbus, Ga., and other southern centers report substantial gains in membership, indicating the earnestness of the workers in building up a trade union organization. In some cases the mill management has brought about the discharge of local leaders, workers who had long been employed in the mills in many instances. In other cases the management has accepted the situation with feeble protest.

The same condition in reflected in other southern industries, Chairman Smith said. Opposition to organizing efforts flames in one place and in others is accepted as a part of the industrial development of the south. Colored workers have displayed eagerness to enlist under the union flag. In New Orleans hundreds of negro longshoremen have joined the union and chartered directly by the American Federation of Labor. Longshoremen at New Orleans now have a strong organization of approximately 4,000 members and nearly 100 per cent organized. Holt J. Ross, president of the Mississippi Federation of Labor, has been in the district under the direction of the American Federation of Labor. In the Birmingham and Gadsden fields some 800 colored workers have been chartered by the American Federation of Labor.

A series of labor mass meetings is being arranged in southern cities. The first to be held probably will be at Augusta, Ga.

LABOR QUERIES

Q.—Who said: "We believe the proper function of courts is to expound and administer law but not to make it?"

A.—This was a declaration made by the American Federation of Labor convention in 1906 in demanding amendments to the United States constitution depriving judges of the power to set aside laws enacted by congress.

Q.—Has organized labor declared for the establishment of free legal bureaus?

A.—The 1913 convention of the American Federation of Labor favored the establishment of free legal municipal bureaus from which the people may obtain advice on all questions affecting their affairs, the bureaus to be maintained at public cost and in connection with the courts. The object was declared to be to protect workers who are exposed to the machinations of shyster lawyers.

Q.—When did the American Federation of Labor first ask a census of the unemployed?

A.—In 1889, when the convention held that year declared it of vast importance to ascertain in the census the number of unemployed and the duration of such lack of employment, and instructed the executive council to urge congress to authorize collection of this data.

LABOR'S POLITICAL POLICY

When organized labor declares it "rewards its friends and punishes its enemies," it takes the same position in politics as other groups of citizens.

Labor's policy does not differ from business interests, wets, drys, or other elements. These elements may not voice our slogan, but they apply it. Citizens are not expected to vote for candidates who disagree with them.

Labor party advocates who oppose our non-partisanship cling to the European ideal—that government is apart from the people. This system is applicable where class stratification is clear-cut, but in this country the people are sovereign. The preamble of the American constitution declares: "We, the people of the United States."

Government in Europe is supreme. This makes these people politically minded. Americans do not have that faith in political parties and government. That they often fail to exercise their sovereignty does not affect the principle. Final power rests in them and they develop a public opinion to which their lawmaking representatives respond.

Labor's policy of "rewarding our friends" fits into the American ideal, which is not understood by those who talk of a labor party, and who constantly refer to Europe as a guide for conditions here that are wholly dissimilar.

Political partisanship in the United States is at its lowest ebb in 100 years. All semblance of party spirit is destroyed and various groups now openly favor labor's policy of voting for men who represent their views—of voting for their friends.

The National Association of Manufacturers presents its "bill of grievances" to the conventions of political parties. Both wets and drys take similar action and publicly declare they will work and vote against candidates who do not agree with them.

Opponents of the A. F. of L. nonpartisan policy call this a "begging" policy—when applied to wage earners. They conveniently overlook that it is a national characteristic. The A. F. of L. non-partisan plan, when first advocated, was called "intimidation." Its practice is now country-wide.

Labor party advocates also overlook the important point that trade unionists claim there is no such thing as "labor legislation"—that is, that all legislation urged by labor has a direct bearing on the nation's welfare.

The labor injunction was formerly considered a "labor" issue, but equity's encroachment into business and control of the press has placed the injunction in its true light. The abolition of child labor, unemployment, dependent old age and other problems extend beyond the confines of labor. A solution of these problems depends upon a new social consciousness of all the people. Voters of all parties must be appealed to—if results, rather than the exaltation of a few individuals, is desired.

BILLION-DOLLAR BUSINESS

That big business is now measured in billions is shown by the fact that there are now thirty-three billion-dollar concerns doing business in the world.

Of these, nine are industrial organizations, seven are railroads, thirteen are banks, and four are insurance companies. Several exceed two billions, and one insurance company is slightly over three billions.

One of the railroads is Canadian; two of the banks are in London, one in England and one in Canada. All the rest of these organizations are in the United States.

The lone workman who insists upon going along all by himself, without a union, is a good deal like the dodo bird. And there are plenty of newspapers ready to pat him on the back and tell him how wonderful he is. And so he is—wonderfully easy.

WORK PLACES CHANGING

Time was when these United States were predominantly agricultural in occupation. "Them days are gone forever." If you go back as far as 1820, those employed in all occupations numbered 2,281 thousand, of which number 2,082 thousand were engaged in agriculture. In 1870 the number engaged in agriculture was 6,961 thousands, and all other occupations included 6,965—almost exactly the same. At that time manufacturing and mechanical employments had 2,746; trade and transportation had 1,347; domestic and personal service had 1,318; professional service, 379; and mining had 176—all measured in thousands.

In 1910 the tide turned, and of the total of 37,454 thousands employed in all occupations, 11,946 thousands were in agriculture, 10,629 in manufacture and mechanical employment, with trade and transportation running a close third with 7,989 millions.

The year 1929 showed trade and transportation leading with 13,650 thousands, manufactures and mechanical with 13,000 thousands, and agriculture with 10,400—or 489 thousands less than in 1900.

From now on, the increasing industrialization of the nation, together with the constant mechanization of farming activities, will show a decided decrease in the number of those engaged in agriculture, not only relatively but in actual numbers. The high point was reached in 1910, since which time there has been a reduction in the actual number of those occupied in agricultural pursuits.

In spite of the great increases in city populations during the one hundred years, and the more marvelous changes in the standards of food and of living, we shall have need of a constantly decreasing number of people doing farm work. And one incidental fact is this: we are using almost three-quarters of a bushel less of wheat per capita than formerly, and about three bushels less per capita than the Canadian people do now.

Injunction Is Paramount

William Green, in American Federationist

The American Federation of Labor is much concerned for the enactment of injunction legislation by congress. Regulation of the use of the injunction writ and elimination of government by injunction is of paramount importance to American labor. The injunction is used to hamstring unions.

The chief tool that wage earners need to promote their best interests is organization. Organization makes them ready to deal with problems and opens the way to steady development and constantly greater ability to cope with larger problems.

Whenever the use of this tool is restricted or the tool itself is proscribed, wage earners find themselves handicapped by employers' fear of their most efficient tool. Employers' fear is based upon their inability to understand that management and union together can produce more efficiently than can management and individual workers who do not function as an organized group. The union is a tool for shaping economic progress which provides the foundation for social betterment.

The American Federation of Labor has made the injunction our paramount interest in the coming elections. We shall make the injunction one test issue upon which we shall ask all candidates to declare themselves.

Both democrat and republican parties included in their 1928 party platforms declarations for legislation to prevent abuses of the injunction. We expect all party representatives to carry out these pledges.

The Passing Show

Note and Comment on Things Doing in the March of Events

Fine progress already made with inadequate resources shows beyond a doubt that southern workers can be organized. They've had enough of low wages and excessive hours of labor and are ready to join a union and have something to say about the conditions under which they toil.

All the southern organization campaign needs for smashing success is stronger support. Workers reached with the message of unionism are responding but the field is large and hundreds of thousands of workers have not yet had the advantage of unionism presented to them. The southern organization committee is doing splendid work, loyally backed by southern trade unionists, but it has not the men or resources to reach the whole territory.

Adequate support of the southern campaign, financially and otherwise, is up to the labor movement. The employers are not going to back the campaign. That must be done by the organized wage earners. If they do their duty, the southern campaign is going over big.

Chicago has had a public school named after Samuel Gompers for some years and New York is soon to have one. The New York school is the "Samuel Gompers industrial high school for boys" and construction of the building will begin early in the fall. It will cost $1,666,000, will accommodate 1,700 students and will be of the most modern type.

In naming schools for Gompers, fitting tribute is paid to the great leader of labor, who fought steadfastly, all his life, for the education of the masses. He knew that education makes for enlightenment, the foe of child labor, poverty, disease and the exploitation of man by man.

New York and Chicago have done well to name schools for Gompers. What city will be the next to follow their good example?

Secretary of the Treasury Mellon and his hired men have turned loose a lot of money on the country at one time or another. But it refuses to stay loose. There is even less of it loose than there was a month ago—less by 29 cents per capita. The amount now supposed to be in actual circulation amounts to $37.30 per capita, which would be about $150 per person "usually gainfully employed." Have you got your hundred and fifty? Banks are complaining about having too much money on deposit in their vaults, on which they are paying interest, and for which there seems to be no appropriate use. One of the possible definitions of money is, "The principal lubricant of the machinery of good business." But when it is bottled in banks it does not lubricate anything or anybody.

Recently a member of the federal farm board remarked about the reduction in wholesale prices of beef not being followed by a corresponding drop in retail beefsteak. Shortly after the remark was made the retail price did drop. Maybe that farm board is of some use, after all.

Wheat Prices Sag; Federal Aid Fails

Washington.—The administration's farm relief plan has resulted in a loss of $15,000,000 to the government and the price of wheat is lower than at any time since the world war.

The federal farm board bought 60,000,000 bushels of wheat in a futile effort to check sagging prices. The administration rejected Senator Capper's suggestion that an additional 100,000,000 bushels be bought.

Government officials are calling on southwestern farmers to plant less wheat, as stocks now in storage will be increased by this larger output. Northwestern farmers heeded the warning to plant less, but the southwestern farmers ignored the call.

The government's activity in farm relief, and the spending of millions of dollars to hold prices, is a contrast to former pleas against all forms of paternalism by men who now urge the new policy.

JOIN UNION AND LOSE JOB IS RULE IN BIG HUNTSVILLE TEXTILE MILLS

That's Un-American Policy Followed by Bosses, Who Care Nothing for Constitutional Rights and Fire Union Members on One Pretext or Another.

By C. S. GARRISON.

Huntsville, Ala., July 24.—This is the anthology of textile mills workers in the Huntsville district. Of men and women who exercised a right guaranteed under the constitution—joined a trade union, and the price they paid:

Claude Segroves, for twenty years a weaver, a faithful and efficient employe. Claude had vision and joined the union with his fellow workers. "It's just too bad, Claude, but we don't need you," the boss told him.

Ada Lee Warren, 16 years old, and young in the mills. Youth serves best and Ada Lee Warren was efficient. She was only paid 60 cents a day for 12 hours' work, or 5 cents an hour. Living on 60 cents a day is an economic impossibility. Ada is a good girl. Her friends knew it and made up a donation and gave it to her. That same evening the boss curtly dismissed her from the job. He was good enough to explain that he didn't like the way she was getting her pay.

Marshall Derting was born and raised at Helen Mills and had worked in the mills all his life, a faithful employe. One day Marshall found he was jobless. "Why, you don't live in the village," the boss said.

J. M. Spearman, a No. 1 weaver, decided to join the union and did so. One day the boss waved him aside. Spearman is jobless.

Long Service Means Nothing.

Jim Baker is a good hand and for years had been employed by the Merrimack Manufacturing company. He inscribed his name on the union roll—and his long service to his boss didn't mean a thing. Jim is hunting for a job.

William Luttrell worked faithfully for years as an employe of the Lowe Manufacturing company. He joined the union—and zip went his job. He got work at the Helen Mills, but it only lasted three days, or until one management put William on the black list—and now he's "carrying the banner."

Richard McNeal is a section hand in the card room, and a good one. So good that when the management heard that Richard had gone union he brought him in on the carpet three times trying to show him the evil of his way. Richard refused to enter the Benedict Arnold class, so the boss put the skids under him.

J. B. Lewter thinks he had a tough break. At the time he was not a member of the union, but he lost his job anyhow. The foreman told him his work was O. K. but he didn't cherish the idea of Lewter's son being a union man, so Lewter senior had to go, a case of father paying for the "sins" of his son. It's a gay life.

Married Couple Lose Jobs.

J. R. Cope and wife worked side by side. They had been weaving for twenty years. They were good weavers, too, being first class trade unionists. The boss called them in and told them they were not making perfect cloth. It took the head man twenty years to find out these two weavers couldn't weave, but he found it out at last, so Mr. and Mrs. Cope are jobless. There are bright foremen in some of the mills.

Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Dudney had worked for the Lincoln Mills of Alabama for ten years, weaving. One day they joined the union and the boss discovered they made bad cloth just a day or two after Dudney made a talk at a union meeting. He got another job at the Lowe plant but as soon as the word was passed around about his union affiliations he was out. It only took ten years to find that Dudney was no weaver. But foremen are bright.

And there are others. None of these men and women regret joining the union. It is their American right guaranteed by the constitution, and they merely exercised it. There is nothing more contemptible than firing a worker for joining a trade union, says President Wililam Green, of the American Federation of Labor.

Anti-Unionists Fail To Terrify Workers

Huntsville, Ala.—Anti-unionists in this section overplayed their hand when they attempted to terrify textile workers from joining the union.

The workers and the public generally suddenly realized these employers were making their lurid anti-union claims to continue their "prosperous poverty," known as pauper wages.

The recent anti-union attack by a local newspaper has proven a boomerang and there has been a remarkable change in the public attitude toward organized labor.

Merchants have grown weary of hearing claims that Huntsville labor is "generally employed." This is true, but they receive no wages, and thus are poor customers.

Local business men have addressed mass meetings of the workers, or written to union officials, who were commended for their organizing efforts. It was only recently that these merchants were inveigled into signing full-page advertisements declaring for the anti-union shop.

There are 10,000 textile workers in the Huntsville district and they are joining the union at the rate of 200 a day. Other craftsmen have been affected by the trade union wave and several new locals, such as carpenters, painters, machinists and barbers, are functioning.

UNIONS ARE "SELFISH" SAYS PRISON LABOR MAN

Concord, N. H.—Levin J. Chase, secretary New Hampshire board of prison trustees, doesn't like the Hawes-Cooper act, which goes into effect 1934, and which provides that when prison-made goods are shipped into another state, these goods come under the law of that state.

Mr. Chase said the "selfishness and illogical reasoning of labor unions, women's clubs and a group of manufacturers" made the law possible.

"No matter what the legislation, it is not possible to end competition between prison and free labor and it is worse than foolish to attempt it," said Mr. Chase.

He is mad clear through at the "selfishness" of organized labor.

CHILD'S DRESS MAKERS PREPARING FOR STRIKE

New York.—Organized children's dress makers are arranging for a strike to destroy sweat shop conditions.

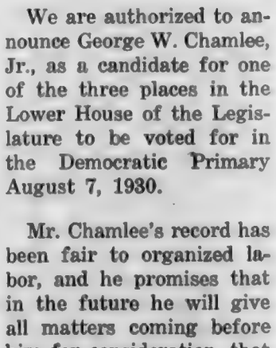
These workers are affiliated to the International Ladies' Garment Workers' union. A committee of 500 has been formed as a preliminary to the city-wide walkout if employers refuse to confer. More than 300 shops will be affected.

NEGRO LABOR UNITING IN SOUTHERN STATES

Birmingham, Ala.—Negro workers are joining federal unions by the hundreds since the A. F. of L. southern organizing committee has been in operation.

More than 4,000 negro longshoremen in New Orleans have affiliated, and the new membership of negro workers in the Birmingham district total 800.

Negro organizers are being employed by the A. F. of L. committee.



George W. Chamlee Jr.

Candidate for the Legislature

We are authorized to announce George W. Chamlee, Jr., as a candidate for one of the three places in the Lower House of the Legislature to be voted for in the Democratic Primary August 7, 1930.

Mr. Chamlee's record has been fair to organized labor, and he promises that in the future he will give all matters coming before him for consideration, that same careful consideration that he has done in the past. He says he has no friends to reward or enemies to punish, but will be guided by the best interest of the people and try to promote the welfare of Hamilton County in all his official acts. He says that he will seek the advice of the people on all matters and try to promote the best interest of the County in all matters of legislation coming up for his consideration.

He will appreciate the vote and influence of all voters in the primary election.

Back Quit Hurting

"I was in a very weak condition from a serious sickness," writes Mrs. I. Leonard, 571 Joseph St., New Orleans, La. "I was so weak, I wanted to sleep all the time. I did not have strength to do anything. My back ached nearly all the time. I was just in misery.

"My mother told me I must arouse myself from the sleepiness, and take something to help get my strength back. She had taken Cardui and had been helped, so I decided to take Cardui, too. After my first bottle, I could see that it was helping me. I took four bottles at this time. My strength came back and I gained weight. Pretty soon, I was my old self again.

NOTES FROM THE NEWS CHAPEL

By CLAY TIMMONS

Members of this chapel have a nomination for the meanest man. We don't know who he is. For many months there has been a salted peanut vending penny machine over here, which belongs to a bird who has more money than any of us ever expect to have. Pennies are sometimes scarce, and the boys all joined in the sport of making pennies out of spare leads and slugs. It was the greatest of indoor sports, and nobody raised a howl. But now:

Monday there came a blind man to Ed Kelly and got permission to put up a 5-cent candy bar vending machine. On it he placed a notice telling all and sundry that the machine belonged to a blind man, who depended upon it and others like it to make him a living and asking that the buyer play fair. Tuesday at noon the blind man and his helper came around to see what luck he had had. And I'll be doggone if there wasn't three slugs in that blind man's machine!

Harry Kennedy, the chairman, immediately posted on the wall near the vending machine the notice to the effect that members of the chapel did not care to be associated with a man who would go to all the trouble of making a slug to fit the machine just in order to rob a blind man of a nickel, and that if the perpetrator proved to be a News employe his discharge would immediately be demanded. My personal opinion of the bird who pulled that is unprintable, except to say that he is so low down he could fly a kite under a setting hen.

Moron's, by the way, has gone on a strictly cash-and-carry basis. I know how the other big business men in town feel who sell big bills on credit. Some run their bills up to as high as 15 cents with me, and others a nickel and a dime, and by the time the majority of them do that I have forgotten who did and who didn't, and am too timid to ask them if they did. So, with the turkey, I say "put!"

* * *

Looks like Roddy McGee's trip to Houston as an on-his-own delegate has gone blooey, especially since our Journal correspondent published the fact that he was paying his own way. Roddy says he don't want to go all the way out there and not be seated because the law in regard to local unions paying delegates' expenses was tracked.

You can always tell when some of the fellows over here have floated another dollar-down-and-dollar-when-I have-it loan. They manage to lay off three or four days and then come back to work and go over and hand their book to Pop Kemper and instructions to Wally of the Wailing Wall to give Pop so much a week for them. Pop leaves out of here Wednesday at noon loaded down with bank books of the wrong kind and enough jack to tempt a Chicago mob. And so it goes.

Victor Williams

FOR SHERIFF

A false impression as to my activities in the street car strikes of 1916 and 1917 has been going the rounds. In order to clear up any misapprehension I submit herewith the following statement from men who know the real facts:

Chattanooga, Tenn., July 23, 1930.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

Having heard reports that Victor Williams, candidate for sheriff of Hamilton county, was in some way, unsatisfactory to union labor, connected with the street car strike in Chattanooga in 1916 and 1917, we, the undersigned, wish to make the following statement:

Mr. Williams was employed by the Chattanooga Railway & Light Co., in the capacity of inspector from sometime in 1912 to sometime in 1921, when he entered the government service. His official connection with the company barred him from membership in the street car men's union and his personal conduct was such that we FIND NO REASON TO OBJECT TO HIS CANDIDACY NOW, based on anything that occurred in that strike.

(Signed) E. G. CHERRY,
Secy. Div. 750 Street Carmen.

R. M. WARD	H. V. KIMBRELL
S. P. SMITH	J. W. RAINS
H. G. PARKS	S. W. REYNOLDS
H. D. COX	C. H. FRANKLIN

All Members Div. 750 Street Carmen.

I was promoted to inspector in 1912, four years prior to the strike, and continued in that capacity until 1921, five years after the strike. There had been two previous unsuccessful attempts to organize the men and I was a member both times.

I am heartily in sympathy with organized labor and have always been. I will appreciate the vote and influence of all union men.

Unionists Start War On N. Y. Racketeers

New York. — The International Ladies' Garment Workers' union has started a war on labor racketeers. Employers have been mulcted out of $2,000,000 a year and trade union officials are assaulted when they combat the evil.

The unionists, headed by International President Schlesinger and Secretary-Treasurer Dubinsky, asked the district attorney's office to aid in the fight.

With the successful ending of the dress strike, last spring, gangsters represent to manufacturers that they can "protect" them against the union. Other racketeers, representing themselves as petty union officials, extract tribute on the pretense that they can make union conditions non-operative.

David Fruhling, a member of the union who has been active against the racketeers, was stabbed by five men while on his way to the union headquarters. The union offered a reward of $2,000 for the arrest and conviction of the assailants.

"All decent elements in the dress industry are united against racketeering," said President Schlesinger.

"Employers who are intimidated by gangsters into paying tribute or who believe they can evade union conditions by dealing with a lawless element, only contribute to a disorder which all legitimate factors are seeking to end."

Gompers High School To Open in New York

New York.—Plans for the new Samuel Gompers industrial high school for boys are being completed and construction is expected to begin in the fall.

The building will cost $1,660,000 and will seat 1,700 students.

The equipment will include a radio room, press, linotype and composing rooms, as well as shops of every description. It will have telephone, motor and dynamo, electric light and power, and auto transmission and chassis shops and architectural drawing rooms.

Shorter Work Day Best Idle Solution

St. Paul, Minn.—A shorter work day is the best solution of unemployment, said Gov. Christianson on his return from the governors' conference at Salt Lake City.

He said the general opinion among attending state executives was that shortening the work day is the most feasible plan offered so far.

"If employers do not solve the situation themselves, either by shortening the work day or by some other method, political pressure will, within a short time, force the adoption of unemployment pension laws," said the governor.

PROGRAM FOR PAINTERS' DAY IS COMPLETED

Picnic - Barbecue to Be Staged Next Wednesday.

ENTERTAINMENT FOR YOUNG AND OLD

Noonday Meal to Be Prepared by "Zeke" Witt, General Chairman.

Next Wednesday, July 30, will mark the eighth annual observance of "Painters' Day" in Chattanooga, and the committee in charge of this year's celebration promises that the all-day program to be staged at Lake Winnepesaukah will be "bigger and better than ever." All of which is some promise, for members of Local 226, Painters, and Local 229, Sign-writers, have in the past made quite a reputation for arranging entertaining programs, as well as for preparing a barbecue feast as it should be prepared.

Beginning promptly at 10 a.m., the athletic and stunts program, under direction of E. L. Blair and F. S. Thurston, will get under way, and "Bully" and "Frank" are all pepped up, loudly proclaiming that the games and contests will furnish amusement for all ages, from 8 to 80. That these contests will draw plenty of entrants is assured, not only by past experience, but by the fact that real, worthwhile prizes will be presented to the winners.

Since the idea was first born to hold an annual picnic and barbecue for local painters, its popularity has grown, and thousands of citizens each year have enjoyed the festivities with the trades unionists, their employers, families and friends. The day is declared a holiday, and all local paint stores and shops are closed.

The usual park attractions, including various amusement devices, swimming, boating, fishing, etc., will, of course, be operating full blast, giving a wide choice of entertainment for the workers and their guests. Charles Melford and T. A. Rosser will have charge of the soft-drink concession.

The athletic contest and games program will be as follows:

Old men's foot race (60 years and over), 50 yards.

Employers' and bosses' foot race, 100 yards.

100-yard dash for house painters.

100-yard dash for paperhangers.

100-yard dash for sign painters.

A prize for each race and a grand prize will be offered for winner in final.

100-yard dash for the three winners of the above races.

75-yard dash for boys under 15 years old.

100-yard dash for boys over 15 years.

50-yard dash for girls under 17 years.

Bear race for boys under 7 years.

Old-time rolling pin throwing contest for wives of house painters, sign painters, paperhangers and non-members. Four prizes; a grand prize for the winner of the contest between the winners of the four contests.

Baseball throwing for ladies, also for girls under 16 years.

Fat men's foot race, 250 pounds and over, 100 yards.

Potato race for married ladies.

Egg race for married ladies.

Horseshoe pitching contest.

Prize for largest family on the grounds at noon of member of Local 226.

Prize for largest family on the grounds at noon of member of Local 299.

Prize for ugliest member of each, Local 226 and 299.

Drawing and word contests for men and ladies.

W. A. Witt, general chairman of the committee, will have charge of the barbecue, and few people in Hamilton county do not know of "Zeke's" prowess when it comes to manipulating the barbecue pit.

The menu for the noonday meal, which will be served promptly at 12 noon, follows:

Dill Pickles — Olives
Barbecued Lamb, Pork and Beef
Potato and Pimento Salad
Cold Slaw — Relish — Devil Sauce
Sliced Tomatoes — Bermuda Onions
Bread — Lemonade

The following members of Local 226 will assist in the program: George Durham, Deemer Little, George Sivley, Dave Jones, A. T. Jones, H. R. Gray, R. L. Taylor, Erskine Mabee, J. G. Burkes, C. F. Weidner, P. P. Thurston, Roy Bowen, W. D. Canada, H. M. Ottman, Joe Farmer, J. F. Miller, E. K. Witt and Fred Falk.

Akron, O.—The city council approved a minimum wage of 50 cents an hour on municipal work. It was stated that rates as low as 25 cents are paid.

BROTHERHOOD AND FEDERATION REPRESENTATIVES WILL DISCUSS TENNESSEE POLITICAL SITUATION

Reid, Hanly and Aymon Accept Invitation to Review Conditions As They Affect Workers at Open Meeting for Railroad and Other Workers Tuesday Night—Central Body Session Postponed From Monday Until Tuesday at 7:15—Speaking at 8—"The Truth About Horton" to Be Told — All Union Members Invited.

Acting on instructions of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council at its last regular meeting, legislative committee of that body has arranged for an open mass meeting for trades unionists on next Tuesday night, at Central Labor hall, Cherry street, at which outstanding labor officials of the state will discuss political matters as they affect Tennessee workers.

After conferring with the executive board of Central Body, the committee announced that regular meeting of the parent organization would be postponed from Monday night until Tuesday night, beginning promptly at 7:15, and the open meeting will follow at 8, in the large hall.

Speakers will include H. V. Reid, chairman of the nonpartisan political campaign committee of the Tennessee Federation of Labor and the Railroad Brotherhoods; David Hanly, legislative chairman of the Tennessee Federation of Labor; Paul J. Aymon, president of the federation and representative of the American Federation of Labor, and possibly others. Perry E. Daly, of Knoxville, legislative representative of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, wired the committee Thursday that a previously-planned trip in the interest of Mr. Gwin would prevent his presence at the local meeting. W. A. Chrisman, legislative representative Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, also wired regrets.

Mr. Reid, whose home is in Memphis, besides having a long record of service as chairman of the joint state committee, is legislative representative of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen. His loyalty to the cause of labor, combined with his ability, have given him a keen insight into problems surrounding the battle for social legislation, and he is known throughout the state as a gentleman of unusual frankness. In his discussion of issues and candidates he may be expected to "hew to the line, and let the chips fall where they may." Mr. Reid's experiences at Nashville and elsewhere in the state make an interesting narrative, and those who attend Tuesday night's meeting will be well repaid for their time.

Paul J. Aymon, it is believed, will have an unusually interesting message for his fellow trades unionists. Mr. Aymon is a veteran of the "battle of Elizabethton," where Gov. Horton's army won its great (?)—if temporary — victory in alignment with a German autocracy against 100 per cent. native Tennesseans, most of whom were women and young girls. How the Tennessee National Guard was used as a strikebreaking agency has been told before by Mr. Aymon, but its repetition at this particular time will doubtless prove doubly interesting, even to those who have heard it on other occasions and in other ways.

Mr. Hanly is known to possibly every trades unionist in Tennessee as chairman of the federation's legislative committee. He is another who enjoys a reputation of calling a spade a spade, and his long years of experience with the workers' legislative program has given him an unusually keen insight into things political. What happened, and how, in the last general assembly with reference to social legislation, as well as prospects for the federation program in the next, will doubtless form the major part of Mr. Hanly's address Tuesday night.

Delegates to Central Body are urged to be present when the regular session is called to order at 7:15 sharp. This meeting will be held in the regular meeting hall, and it is believed that all necessary business can be taken care of in time to start the open meeting in the large hall at 8. In the event of an overflow crowd in the big hall, which will seat several hundred, it is planned to throw the two rooms together, and it is thought that with this arrangement all comers may be comfortably seated.

"Vacation" of Ford Workers Is Screen To Fire Thousands

By C. V. ULRICH

Detroit, Mich., July 24.—The Ford company announced July 11 that 110,000 employes would enter a two weeks' vacation.

The company gives as one of the principal reasons for its shutdown, to enable all employes to have their vacation at the same time. It does not make public the fact that it is engaged in laying off from 17 to 20 per cent horizontally, of all employes permanently. The men are simply told their money is ready and are deprived of their badge, which means complete severance of relations with the company.

It seems strange that the Ford Motor company takes into consideration the desire of its employes in the matter of the vacation period, when at no time in the history of the firm has it taken into consideration the desires of the employes. In fact, there is no channel by which any employe could make his wish known on any matter.

Perhaps the 17 per cent of the employes that are being discharged directly have made their wish known to the company that they want to retire from the business of making Ford cars, having reached a state of affluence in life as a result of working for the Ford Motor company whose wage scale, it has just been established, is a deficit wage scale.

Mr. Ford in the factory is a tyrant, outside he is the buyer of antiques and the savior of wayward bank clerks.

Are these 18,000 men being discharged outright, or to enable them to retire? That question is left for one of the retired to answer. The already large army of unemployed in the city of Detroit will by this action of the Ford Motor company receive an unexpected increase from a firm whose production figure is now at the highest peak in its history.

LOCAL GUEST

JAMES WILSON

President, Patternmakers' League of North America.

Local Patternmakers Friday were entertaining a distinguished guest in the person of their international president, who arrived in the forenoon and was immediately taken in charge by a committee headed by H. A. Burnett and shown the points of interest in and around Chattanooga.

The international official was scheduled to deliver an address at on open meeting for members of his craft Friday night at Odd Fellows' hall.

James Wilson—"Jimmy" to thousands—has just been re-elected without opposition as president of the Patternmakers' league. He is a vice-president of the American Federation of Labor and was a member of two wartime labor missions to Europe.

Congress Failed To Provide Funds For Labor Bill

(By International Labor News Service)

Washington, July 24. — Because congress failed to vote money to enable the bureau of labor statistics to obtain statistics as provided in one of the three Wagner unemployment bills, it will be impossible to carry out the provisions of the bill at present, Commissioner Ethelbert Stewart announces.

Trade unionists point out that the failure to provide money for the measure was the climax to the thoroughly bad record of congress on the Wagner bills. For this record the house must take the blame, as the bills were passed by the senate. The house held up one bill and emasculated another so that it is of little value. Then it forgot to provide money to make operative the third measure, for the collection of statistics.

Commissioner Stewart explained that the bureau of labor statistics has been forced recently to curtail its activities and cut down its staff because of a lack of money, and to carry out the provisions of the Wagner bill would manifestly be impossible under the circumstances. The bill, it was pointed out, carried no authorization for an appropriation. No money can be had, therefore, until congress makes an appropriation after it reconvenes in December.

Statistics are already being compiled, however, for the majority of the industries mentioned in the bill, Mr. Stewart said. The bureau had made plans to extend its work to include gathering of data on employment in the building trades, not now covered, and with the co-operation of the department of agriculture, it is hoped that figures on employment on farms may be received. The bureau, it was explained, could not hope to cover adequately the thousands of farms in the country, but it is believed that agents of the department of agriculture, located in nearly every county in the country, will be able to furnish a fairly accurate picture of the number of men working on farms and the wages they receive.

PRESENT WAGE STANDARDS TO BE MAINTAINED

Green Declares Workers Will Oppose Reductions.

SAYS UNEMPLOYMENT CAN BE PREVENTED

Destruction of Purchasing Power Dangerous for Whole People.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Montreal, July 24.—Declaring that labor challenged the idea that unemployment cannot be prevented, President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, told the International Brotherhood of Stationary Firemen and Oilers in convention here that if the nation is brought out of the present depression in a reasonable length of time purchasing power of the people must be maintained. He declared that labor will maintain present wage standards and that it is labor's purpose "to establish them on an unassailable basis."

After pointing out that both the United States and Canada are faced with unfavorable economic conditions, President Green said:

"We are in the midst of widespread industrial depression. Thousands of working men in every city of the land, in every town, in every village, in every community, are tramping the streets seeking employment. In the building trades organizations, in the printing, the metal, in the transportation, in the miscellaneous trades, they are grappling with this big problem.

Labor Deals with Problem.

"The American Federation of Labor is dealing with this problem, and so far as we are able, we are calling the attention of the people upon the American continent to the necessity of meeting it and dealing with it constructively, so that the men and women able and willing to work should be guaranteed an opportunity under all conditions that may exist at any time or any place.

"The Federation of Labor contends that the problem need not be a necessary evil. There are economists who argue that recurring periods of unemployment are necessary and inevitable.

"The American labor movement challenges that kind of economic philosophy. To admit that, is to admit that we are incapable of dealing with the economic problem of unemployment. Such an admission would present to coming generations the most gloomy picture we can possibly contemplate.

Can Be Prevented.

"We can grapple with it, we can deal with it, we can prevent unemployment. We can so systematize employment that in the operations of the economic law and the development of industry, men and women can be guaranteed an annual income, rather than a spasmodic daily wage. That is the condition we are striving for.

"Women must not be sacrificed on the altar of commercialism. Men must earn an income annually to protect their women folk and enable them to keep their families in comfort and to have the opportunity of enjoying a greater degree of leisure.

Will Preserve Standards.

"For the first time in the history of cyclical unemployment, our general wage structure has not been assaulted or assailed. We have preserved our standards during this distressing period, and it is our purpose to establish them on an unassailable basis.

"We maintain that any reduction in purchasing power which follows a reduction in wages would be injurious, not only to the great mass of the people, but to the whole of society. If we are to be brought out of the present industrial depression in a reasonable length of time, we must maintain the purchasing power of the people, because you cannot sell goods if people cannot buy and they cannot buy unless you pay them wages to buy with."

FIREWORKS PLANT SECURED NO LICENSE

Trenton, N. J.—Explosion of a fireworks plant at Neptune, in which four persons lost their lives, revealed that the plant operated seventeen years without a license.

The fireworks were manufactured in a "home" factory. Charles Weeks, deputy commissioner of labor, who investigated the case, reports "it is very unfortunate" that the owner of the plant did not acquaint state officials with his operation.

MILL WORKERS PIN HOPES ON TRADE UNION

See Relief From Oppression in Organization.

LAY FOUNDATION FOR IMPROVEMENTS

Depressed Industrial Conditions Fail to Check Southern Campaign.

(Special Correspondence.)

Birmingham, Ala., July 24.—While the unemployment situation in the southern industrial states is not showing any appreciable improvement, due to depressed business conditions, substantial progress in the trades union movement is reported to the Birmingham headquarters of the southern organization campaign by field workers, Paul J. Smith, organization committee chairman, said today.

Textile manufacturers in the south, employing in normal times some 300,000 workers, are adhering to a tacit understanding of curtailing cotton and knit goods production because of poor market conditions and surplus stocks. Despite the sizzling heat which has gripped the south for many days, the work of organizing by the American Federation of Labor has proceeded without interruption, Mr. Smith said.

In many districts in the textile states mills are operating part time or with sharply reduced forces. The Glantzstoff mills recently let out about 400 workers in addition to those already on the street. The determination of the Cotton Manufacturers association of North Carolina to abolish night work for all persons under 18 years of age has met with approbation among mill owners, but has gained little in actuality. Night work, however, in some of the mills has been discontinued temporarily at least due to slack business.

Improving the economic conditions of the mill workers is a paramount question throughout the south, and in view of the accomplishments of the American Federation of Labor, workers in many regions have lost some of their hopelessness and believe a new day is dawning for them through the Textile Workers of America.

In the Huntsville (Ala.) district, where the mills employ some 8,000 hands, the movement toward unionization has been unprecedented, field workers report. Local union No. 1690, recently organized at Huntsville, has approximately 4,000 members, and new members are coming in at the rate of 200 a week. The merchants of Huntsville have come out openly for the union. In public addresses at labor mass meetings, and through communications to the officers of the local unions, business men have assured the workers of their sympathetic attitude and declare they are tired of "low wage prosperity," although many of them subscribed to this theory in full page advertisements when this town went "open shop" a few years ago.

Textile unions in Danville, Va., Columbus, Ga., and other southern centers report substantial gains in membership, indicating the earnestness of the workers in building up a trade union organization. In some cases the mill management has brought about the discharge of local leaders, workers who had long been employed in the mills in many instances. In other cases the management has accepted the situation with feeble protest.

The same condition in reflected in other southern industries, Chairman Smith said. Opposition to organizing efforts flames in one place and in others is accepted as a part of the industrial development of the south. Colored workers have displayed eagerness to enlist under the union flag. In New Orleans hundreds of negro longshoremen have joined the union and chartered directly by the American Federation of Labor. Longshoremen at New Orleans now have a strong organization of approximately 4,000 members and nearly 100 per cent organized. Holt J. Ross, president of the Mississippi Federation of Labor, has been in the district under the direction of the American Federation of Labor. In the Birmingham and Gadsden fields some 800 colored workers have been chartered by the American Federation of Labor.

A series of labor mass meetings is being arranged in southern cities. The first to be held probably will be at Augusta, Ga.

LABOR QUERIES

Q.—Who said: "We believe the proper function of courts is to expound and administer law but not to make it?"

A.—This was a declaration made by the American Federation of Labor convention in 1896 in demanding amendments to the United States constitution depriving judges of the power to set aside laws enacted by congress.

Q.—Has organized labor declared for the establishment of free legal bureaus?

A.—The 1913 convention of the American Federation of Labor favored the establishment of free legal municipal bureaus from which the people may obtain advice on all questions affecting their affairs, the bureaus to be maintained at public cost and in connection with the courts. The object was declared to be to protect workers who are exposed to the machinations of shyster lawyers.

Q.—When did the American Federation of Labor first ask a census of the unemployed?

A.—In 1889, when the convention held that year declared it of vast importance to ascertain in the census the number of unemployed and the duration of such lack of employment, and instructed the executive council to urge congress to authorize collection of this data.

LABOR'S POLITICAL POLICY

When organized labor declares it "rewards its friends and punishes its enemies," it takes the same position in politics as other groups of citizens.

Labor's policy does not differ from business interests, wets, drys, or other elements. These elements may not voice our slogan, but they apply it. Citizens are not expected to vote for candidates who disagree with them.

Labor party advocates who oppose our non-partisanship cling to the European ideal—that government is apart from the people. This system is applicable where class stratification is clear-cut, but in this country the people are sovereign. The preamble of the American constitution declares: "We, the people of the United States."

Government in Europe is supreme. This makes these people politically minded. Americans do not have that faith in political parties and government. That they often fail to exercise their sovereignty does not affect the principle. Final power rests in them and they develop a public opinion to which their lawmaking representatives respond.

Labor's policy of "rewarding our friends" fits into the American ideal, which is not understood by those who talk of a labor party, and who constantly refer to Europe as a guide for conditions here that are wholly dissimilar.

Political partisanship in the United States is at its lowest ebb in 100 years. All semblance of party spirit is destroyed and various groups now openly favor labor's policy of voting for men who represent their views—of voting for their friends.

The National Association of Manufacturers presents its "bill of grievances" to the conventions of political parties. Both wets and drys take similar action and publicly declare they will work and vote against candidates who do not agree with them.

Opponents of the A. F. of L. non-partisan policy call this a "begging" policy—when applied to wage earners. They conveniently overlook that it is a national characteristic. The A. F. of L. non-partisan plan, when first advocated, was called "intimidation." Its practice is now country-wide.

Labor party advocates also overlook the important point that trade unionists claim there is no such thing as "labor legislation"—that is, that all legislation urged by labor has a direct bearing on the nation's welfare.

The labor injunction was formerly considered a "labor" issue, but equity's encroachment into business and control of the press has placed the injunction in its true light. The abolition of child labor, unemployment, dependent old age and other problems extend beyond the confines of labor. A solution of these problems depends upon a new social consciousness of all the people. Voters of all parties must be appealed to—if results, rather than the exaltation of a few individuals, is desired.

BILLION-DOLLAR BUSINESS

That big business is now measured in billions is shown by the fact that there are now twenty-three billion-dollar concerns doing business in the world.

Of these, nine are industrial organizations, seven are railroads, thirteen are banks and four are insurance companies. Several exceed two billions, and one insurance company is nearly four billions.

One of the railroads is Canadian; two of the banks are in London, one in Berlin and one in Canada. All the rest of these organizations are in the United States.

The big workman who insists upon doing all by himself, without a helper, is a good deal like the dodo bird. And there are plenty of newspapers ready to pat him on the back and tell him how wonderful he is. And so he is—wonderfully easy.

WORK PLACES CHANGING

Time was when these United States were predominantly agricultural in occupation. "Them days are gone forever." If you go back as far as 1820, those employed in all occupations numbered 2,281 thousand, of which number 2,082 thousand were engaged in agriculture. In 1870 the number engaged in agriculture was 6,961 thousands, and all other occupations included 6,965—almost exactly the same. At that time manufacturing and mechanical employments had 2,746; trade and transportation had 1,347; domestic and personal service had 1,818; professional service, 379; and mining had 176—all measured in thousands.

In 1910 the tide turned, and of the total of 37,454 thousands employed in all occupations, 11,946 thousands were in agriculture, 10,629 in manufacture and mechanical employment, with trade and transportation running a close third with 7,989 millions.

The year 1929 showed trade and transportation leading with 18,650 thousands, manufactures and mechanical with 13,000 thousands, and agriculture with 10,400—or 489 thousands less than in 1900.

From now on, the increasing industrialization of the nation, together with the constant mechanization of farming activities, will show a decided decrease in the number of those engaged in agriculture, not only relatively but in actual numbers. The high point was reached in 1910, since which time there has been a reduction in the actual number of those occupied in agricultural pursuits.

In spite of the great increases in city populations during the one hundred years, and the more marvelous changes in the standards of food and of living, we shall have need of a constantly decreasing number of people doing farm work. And one incidental fact is this: we are using almost three-quarters of a bushel less of wheat per capita than formerly, and about three bushels less per capita than the Canadian people do now.

Injunction Is Paramount

William Green, in American Federationist

The American Federation of Labor is much concerned for the enactment of injunction legislation by congress. Regulation of the use of the injunction writ and elimination of government by injunction is of paramount importance to American labor. The injunction is used to hamstring unions.

The chief tool that wage earners need to promote their best interests is organization. Organization makes them ready to deal with problems and opens the way to steady development and constantly greater ability to cope with larger problems.

Whenever the use of this tool is restricted or the tool itself is proscribed, wage earners find themselves handicapped by employers' fear of their most efficient tool. Employers' fear is based upon their inability to understand that management and union together can produce more efficiently than can management and individual workers who do not function as an organized group. The union is a tool for shaping economic progress which provides the foundation for social betterment.

The American Federation of Labor has made the injunction our paramount interest in the coming elections. We shall make the injunction one test issue upon which we shall ask all candidates to declare themselves.

Both democrat and republican parties included in their 1928 party platforms declarations for legislation to prevent abuses of the injunction. We expect all party representatives to carry out these pledges.

The Passing Show

Note and Comment on Things Doing in the March of Events

Fine progress already made with inadequate resources shows beyond a doubt that southern workers can be organized. They've had enough of low wages and excessive hours of labor and are ready to join a union and have something to say about the conditions under which they toil.

All the southern organization campaign needs for smashing success is stronger support. Workers reached with the message of unionism are responding but the field is large and hundreds of thousands of workers have not yet had the advantage of unionism presented to them. The southern organization committee is doing splendid work, loyally backed by southern trade unionists, but it has not the men or resources to reach the whole territory.

Adequate support of the southern campaign, financially and otherwise, is up to the labor movement. The employers are not going to back the campaign. That must be done by the organized wage earners. If they do their duty, the southern campaign is going over big.

Chicago has had a public school named after Samuel Gompers for some years and New York is soon to have one. The New York school is the "Samuel Gompers industrial high school for boys" and construction of the building will begin early in the fall. It will cost $1,666,000, will accommodate 1,700 students and will be of the most modern type.

In naming schools for Gompers, fitting tribute is paid to the great leader of labor, who fought steadfastly, all his life, for the education of the masses. He knew that education makes for enlightenment, the foe of child labor, poverty, disease and the exploitation of man by man.

New York and Chicago have done well to name schools for Gompers. What city will be the next to follow their good example?

Secretary of the Treasury Mellon and his hired men have turned loose a lot of money on the country at one time or another. But it refuses to stay loose. There is even less of it loose than there was a month ago—less by 29 cents per capita. The amount now supposed to be in actual circulation amounts to $37.30 per capita, which would be about $150 per person "usually gainfully employed." Have you got your hundred and fifty? Banks are complaining about having too much money on deposit in their vaults, on which they are paying interest, and for which there seems to be no appropriate use. One of the possible definitions of money is, "The principal lubricant of the machinery of good business." But when it is bottled in banks it does not lubricate anything or anybody.

Recently a member of the federal farm board remarked about the reduction in wholesale prices of beef not being followed by a corresponding drop in retail beefsteak. Shortly after the remark was made the retail price did drop. Maybe that farm board is of some use, after all.

Wheat Prices Sag; Federal Aid Fails

Washington.—The administration's farm relief plan has resulted in a loss of $15,000,000 to the government and the price of wheat is lower than at any time since the world war.

The federal farm board bought 60,000,000 bushels of wheat in a futile effort to check sagging prices. The administration rejected Senator Capper's suggestion that an additional 100,000,000 bushels be bought.

Government officials are calling on southwestern farmers to plant less wheat, as stocks now in storage will be increased by this larger output. Northwestern farmers heeded the warning to plant less, but the southwestern farmers ignored the call.

The government's activity in farm relief, and the spending of millions of dollars to hold prices, is a contrast to former pleas against all forms of paternalism by men who now urge the new policy.

JOIN UNION AND LOSE JOB IS RULE IN BIG HUNTSVILLE TEXTILE MILLS

That's Un-American Policy Followed by Bosses, Who Care Nothing for Constitutional Rights and Fire Union Members on One Pretext or Another.

By C. S. GARRISON.

Huntsville, Ala., July 24.—This is the anthology of textile mills workers in the Huntsville district. Of men and women who exercised a right guaranteed under the constitution—joined a trade union, and the price they paid:

Claude Segroves, for twenty years a weaver, a faithful and efficient employe. Claude had vision and joined the union with his fellow workers. "It's just too bad, Claude, but we don't need you," the boss told him.

Ada Lee Warren, 16 years old, and young in the mills. Youth serves best and Ada Lee Warren was efficient. She was only paid 60 cents a day for 12 hours' work, or 5 cents an hour. Living on 60 cents a day is an economic impossibility. Ada is a good girl. Her friends knew it and made up a donation and gave it to her. That same evening the boss curtly dismissed her from the job. He was good enough to explain that he didn't like the way she was getting her pay.

Marshall Derting was born and raised at Helen Mills and had worked in the mills all his life, a faithful employe. One day Marshall found he was jobless. "Why, you don't live in the village," the boss said.

J. M. Spearman, a No. 1 weaver, decided to join the union and did so. One day the boss waved him aside. Spearman is jobless.

Long Service Means Nothing.

Jim Baker is a good hand and for years had been employed by the Merrimack Manufacturing company. He inscribed his name on the union roll—and his long service to his boss didn't mean a thing. Jim is hunting for a job.

William Luttrell worked faithfully for years as an employe of the Lowe Manufacturing company. He joined the union—and zip went his job. He got work at the Helen Mills, but it only lasted three days, or until one management put William on the black list—and now he's "carrying the banner."

Richard McNeal is a section hand in the card room, and a good one. So good that when the management heard that Richard had gone union he brought him in on the carpet three times trying to show him the evil of his way. Richard refused to enter the Benedict Arnold class, so the boss put the skids under him.

J. B. Lewter thinks he had a tough break. At the time he was not a member of the union, but he lost his job anyhow. The foreman told him his work was O. K. but he didn't cherish the idea of Lewter's son being a union man, so Lewter senior had to go, a case of father paying for the "sins" of his son. It's a gay life.

Married Couple Lose Jobs.

J. R. Cope and wife worked side by side. They had been weaving for twenty years. They were good weavers, too, being first class trade unionists. The boss called them in and told them they were not making perfect cloth. It took the head man twenty years to find out these two weavers couldn't weave, but he found it out at last, so Mr. and Mrs. Cope are jobless. There are bright foremen in some of the mills.

Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Dudney had worked for the Lincoln Mills of Alabama for ten years, weaving. One day they joined the union and the boss discovered they made bad cloth just a day or two after Dudney made a talk at a union meeting. He got another job at the Lowe plant but as soon as the word was passed around about his union affiliations he was out. It only took ten years to find that Dudney was no weaver. But foremen are bright.

And there are others. None of these men and women regret joining the union. It is their American right guaranteed by the constitution, and they merely exercised it. There is nothing more contemptible than firing a worker for joining a trade union, says President Wililam Green, of the American Federation of Labor.

Anti-Unionists Fail To Terrify Workers

Huntsville, Ala.—Anti-unionists in this section overplayed their hand when they attempted to terrify textile workers from joining the union.

The workers and the public generally suddenly realized these employers were making their lurid anti-union claims to continue their "prosperous poverty," known as pauper wages.

The recent anti-union attack by a local newspaper has proven a boomerang and there has been a remarkable change in the public attitude toward organized labor.

Merchants have grown weary of hearing claims that Huntsville labor is "generally employed." This is true, but they receive no wages, and thus are poor customers.

Local business men have addressed mass meetings of the workers, or written to union officials, who were commended for their organizing efforts. It was only recently that these merchants were inveigled into signing full-page advertisements declaring for the anti-union shop.

There are 10,000 textile workers in the Huntsville district and they are joining the union at the rate of 200 a day. Other craftsmen have been affected by the trade union wave and several new locals, such as carpenters, painters, machinists and barbers, are functioning.

UNIONS ARE "SELFISH" SAYS PRISON LABOR MAN

Concord, N. H.—Levin J. Chase, secretary New Hampshire board of prison trustees, doesn't like the Hawes-Cooper act, which goes into effect 1934, and which provides that when prison-made goods are shipped into another state, these goods come under the law of that state.

Mr. Chase said the "selfishness and illogical reasoning of labor unions, women's clubs and a group of manufacturers" made the law possible.

"No matter what the legislation, it is not possible to end competition between prison and free labor and it is worse than foolish to attempt it," said Mr. Chase.

He is mad clear through at the "selfishness" of organized labor.

CHILD'S DRESS MAKERS PREPARING FOR STRIKE

New York.—Organized children's dress makers are arranging for a strike to destroy sweat shop conditions.

These workers are affiliated to the International Ladies' Garment Workers' union. A committee of 500 has been formed as a preliminary to the city-wide walkout if employers refuse to confer. More than 300 shops will be affected.

NEGRO LABOR UNITING IN SOUTHERN STATES

Birmingham, Ala.—Negro workers are joining federal unions by the hundreds since the A. F. of L. southern organizing committee has been in operation.

More than 4,000 negro longshoremen in New Orleans have affiliated, and the new membership of negro workers in the Birmingham district total 800.

Negro organizers are being employed by the A. F. of L. committee.

George W. Chamlee Jr.

Candidate for the Legislature

We are authorized to announce George W. Chamlee, Jr., as a candidate for one of the three places in the Lower House of the Legislature to be voted for in the Democratic Primary August 7, 1930.

Mr. Chamlee's record has been fair to organized labor, and he promises that in the future he will give all matters coming before him for consideration, that same careful consideration that he has done in the past. He says he has no friends to reward or enemies to punish, but will be guided by the best interest of the people and try to promote the welfare of Hamilton County in all his official acts. He says that he will seek the advice of the people on all matters and try to promote the best interest of the County in all matters of legislation coming up for his consideration.

He will appreciate the vote and influence of all voters in the primary election.

Back Quit Hurting

"I was in a very weak condition from a serious sickness," writes Mrs. I. Leonard, 571 Joseph St., New Orleans, La. "I was so weak, I wanted to sleep all the time. I did not have strength to do anything. My back ached nearly all the time. I was just in misery.

"My mother told me I must arouse myself from the sleepiness, and take something to help get my strength back. She had taken Cardui and had been helped, so I decided to take Cardui, too. After my first bottle, I could see that it was helping me. I took four bottles at this time. My strength came back and I gained weight. Pretty soon, I was my old self again.

NOTES FROM THE NEWS CHAPEL

By CLAY TIMMONS

Members of this chapel have a nomination for the meanest man. We don't know who he is. For many months there has been a salted peanut vending penny machine over here, which belongs to a bird who has more money than any of us ever expect to have. Pennies are sometimes scarce, and the boys all joined in the sport of making pennies out of spare leads and slugs. It was the greatest of indoor sports, and nobody raised a howl. But now:

Monday there came a blind man to Ed Kelly and got permission to put up a 5-cent candy bar vending machine. On it he placed a notice telling all and sundry that the machine belonged to a blind man, who depended upon it and others like it to make him a living and asking that the buyer play fair. Tuesday at noon the blind man and his helper came around to see what luck he had had. And I'll be doggone if there wasn't three slugs in that blind man's machine!

Harry Kennedy, the chairman, immediately posted on the wall near the vending machine the notice to the effect that members of the chapel did not care to be associated with a man who would go to all the trouble of making a slug to fit the machine just in order to rob a blind man of a nickel, and that if the perpetrator proved to be a News employe his discharge would immediately be demanded. My personal opinion of the bird who pulled that is unprintable, except to say that he is so low down he could fly a kite under a setting hen.

Moron's, by the way, has gone on a strictly cash-and-carry basis. I know how the other big business men in town feel who sell big bills on credit. Some run their bills up to as high as 15 cents with me, and others a nickel and a dime, and by the time the majority of them do that I have forgotten who did and who didn't, and am too timid to ask them if they did. So, with the turkey, I say "put!"

* * *

Looks like Roddy McGee's trip to Houston as an on-his-own delegate has gone blooey, especially since our Journal correspondent published the fact that he was paying his own way. Roddy says he don't want to go all the way out there and not be seated because the law in regard to local unions paying delegates' expenses was tracked.

You can always tell when some of the fellows over here have floated another dollar-down-and-dollar-when-I have-it loan. They manage to lay off three or four days and then come back to work and go over and hand their book to Pop Kemper and instructions to Wally of the Wailing Wall to give Pop so much a week for them. Pop leaves out of here Wednesday at noon loaded down with bank books of the wrong kind and enough jack to tempt a Chicago mob. And so it goes.

Victor Williams

FOR SHERIFF

A false impression as to my activities in the street car strikes of 1916 and 1917 has been going the rounds. In order to clear up any misapprehension I submit herewith the following statement from men who know the real facts:

Chattanooga, Tenn., July 23, 1930.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

Having heard reports that Victor Williams, candidate for sheriff of Hamilton county, was in some way, unsatisfactory to union labor, connected with the street car strike in Chattanooga in 1916 and 1917, we, the undersigned, wish to make the following statement:

Mr. Williams was employed by the Chattanooga Railway & Light Co., in the capacity of inspector from sometime in 1912 to sometime in 1921, when he entered the government service. His official connection with the company barred him from membership in the street car men's union and his personal conduct was such that we FIND NO REASON TO OBJECT TO HIS CANDIDACY NOW, based on anything that occurred in that strike.

(Signed) E. G. CHERRY,
Secy. Div. 750 Street Carmen.

S. P. SMITH	J. W. RAINS
H. G. PARKS	S. W. REYNOLDS

All Members Div. 750 Street Carmen.

I was promoted to inspector in 1912, four years prior to the strike, and continued in that capacity until 1921, five years after the strike. There had been two previous unsuccessful attempts to organize the men and I was a member both times.

I am heartily in sympathy with organized labor and have always been. I will appreciate the vote and influence of all union men.

Unionists Start War On N. Y. Racketeers

New York. — The International Ladies' Garment Workers' union has started a war on labor racketeers. Employers have been mulcted out of $2,000,000 a year and trade union officials are assaulted when they combat the evil.

The unionists, headed by International President Schlesinger and Secretary-Treasurer Dubinsky, asked the district attorney's office to aid in the fight.

With the successful ending of the dress strike, last spring, gangsters represent to manufacturers that they can "protect" them against the union. Other racketeers, representing themselves as petty union officials, extract tribute on the pretense that they can make union conditions non-operative.

David Fruhling, a member of the union who has been active against the racketeers, was stabbed by five men while on his way to the union headquarters. The union offered a reward of $2,000 for the arrest and conviction of the assailants.

"All decent elements in the dress industry are united against racketeering," said President Schlesinger.

"Employers who are intimidated by gangsters into paying tribute or who believe they can evade union conditions by dealing with a lawless element, only contribute to a disorder which all legitimate factors are seeking to end."

Gompers High School To Open in New York

New York. — Plans for the new Samuel Gompers industrial high school for boys are being completed and construction is expected to begin in the fall.

The building will cost $1,660,000 and will seat 1,700 students.

The equipment will include a radio room, press, linotype and composing rooms, as well as shops of every description. It will have telephone, motor and dynamo, electric light and power, and auto transmission and chassis shops and architectural drawing rooms.

Shorter Work Day Best Idle Solution

St. Paul, Minn.—A shorter work day is the best solution of unemployment, said Gov. Christianson on his return from the governors' conference at Salt Lake City.

He said the general opinion among attending state executives was that shortening the work day is the most feasible plan offered so far.

"If employers do not solve the situation themselves, either by shortening the work day or by some other method, political pressure will, within a short time, force the adoption of unemployment pension laws," said the governor.

REID, HANLY, AYMON DISCUSS HORTON, HULL

Recall Use of State Troops as Strike-breakers.

WINN DESCRIBED AS ABLE, HONEST

Delegates and Visitors to Central Body Meeting Hear "The Truth About Horton," Told by Men Who Know — Records of Cordell Hull and Andrew Todd Compared.

"I might have forgiven Horton for other things, but when he used armed force, in violation of law, to break up a strike of native people at Elizabethton, largely girls and women, I said that if no one else in Tennessee voted against him I would."

This ringing declaration of H. V. Winn, chairman of the joint non-partisan campaign committee of the Tennessee Federation of Labor and the railroad brotherhoods in the state, sums up in a few words the feeling against Horton so far as the laboring people of Tennessee are concerned.

Mr. Reid was one of three well-known officials of organized labor speaking at the mass meting held at the Rees and Labor Council hall Tuesday night, following a brief business session of the central body. Other speakers were Paul J. Aymon, president of the Tennesse Federation of Labor, and David Hanly, chairman of the state legislative committee of the state federation.

Mr. Reid did not mince matters in dealing with the Luke-warm governor, but delivered many telling blows as he dealt at some length with the record of the man who occupies the governor's chair in a physical sense only, taking his orders from the political machine that knows just what it wants and how to get it.

Mr. Reid, for many years legislative chairman of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers in this state, is thoroughly posted as to the records of men in state politics. Delving into Horton's history, his background, his attitude toward those who work for a living and his abominible record as a legislator and a governor, Mr. Reid said in part:

"Horton was elected senator in 1927 and came to Nashville practically unknown. Senator McKellar told me that in all the campaigns he had made in Tennessee he had never heard of Horton. I wish Tennessee never had. Horton became a candidate for the membership of the senate. Peay attempted to dictate the policy of both houses in choosing speakers and I thought that was wrong; but I respected Peay as a governor. By heaven, he was a real governor—there wasn't he sitting in a newspaper office trying him where to head in.

"The list of candidates for speaker was boiled down; Horton finally went as representative of the Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis railroad and the two senators it owned and he was "Horton's whole attitude as a senator was unfriendly. Apparently he would not talk with us. Peay died and Horton became governor. Things went on, with Luke Lea actually governor. One man in Chattanooga was writing one speech for Horton and one man in Nashville was writing another.

DIFFERENT PERSONS WROTE SPEECHES FOR HORTON.

"Horton came to Chattanooga and told the people that he was opposed to the proposed taxes on cosmetics and cigarettes. He said the poor little cigarette already was taxed to death. Then he went back to Nashville and got the cigarette tax passed. Apparently the man who wrote his Chattanooga speech for him was not the same as dictated his action when he returned to Nashville.

"I might have forgiven Horton for other things, but when he used armed force in violation of law, to break up a strike of native people at Elizabethton, largely girls and women, I said that if no one else in Tennessee voted against him I would.

"I could go on and discuss Horton's incompetence, but that is so

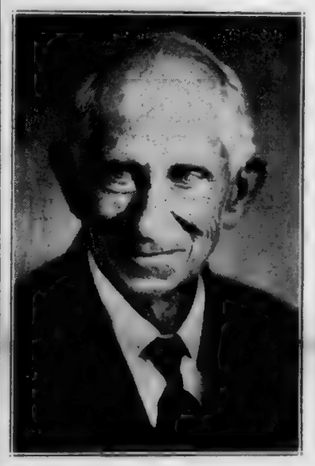
'MAJOR' MOORE ANSWERS CALL

Sudden Summons Comes to Beloved Member Chattanooga Typo Union.



W. L. MOORE.

Last Saturday morning at 8 o'clock W. L. Moore, aged 82, died at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. E. M. Condra, on Dayton pike.

In the passing of Mr. Moore Chattanooga Typographical union lost one of its veteran members. It is hard to describe "Major" Moore, as he was affectionately called by the men with whom he worked, for the reason that he was probably the most unusual character with whom the writer has ever come in contact.

Maj. Moore was a man of strong convictions—religious, political and in labor matters. Despite the tenacity with which he clung to his convictions, Mr. Moore had the most lovable disposition of any man it has been the privilege of the writer to know.

In following in the footsteps of the Master whom he delighted to serve, Mr. Moore scattered sunshine among his fellow workers and the joy of a simple, abiding faith in the immortality of the soul characterized his every action.

Mr. Moore had been active in union affairs since coming to Chattanooga in 1905. He served Typographical union in a highly capable manner as president, vice-president, and on various committees of the organization. But it will be as a lovable, Christian gentleman that his memory will linger in the hearts of his fellow men.

Besides his widow, Mrs. Laura D. Moore, he is survived by a son, Walter D. Moore, of Decatur, Ala.; three daughters, Mrs. I. M. Reiley, of Charleston, W. Va.; Mrs. E. M. Condra and Mrs. W. Z. Reynolds, of this city, and thirteen grandchildren.

Funeral services, conducted by the Rev. R. W. Selman, were held from the Chapman funeral home Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Interment was in Chattanooga Memorial park. Active pallbearers were R. M. Cooke, F. T. Carter, B. E. Palmer, Ona Elder, W. L. Gardner and I. J. Gardner, Sr. Honorary, E. L. Barringer, A. G. Linn, Phil Mandre, T. A. Rogers, E. R. Ames and John Tinker, all members of Chattanooga Typographical union.

The Labor World joins a host of sorrowing friends in extending sympathy to the bereaved family. Their loss is also our loss, for one of nature's noblemen has gone forth to a just reward.

JOHN H. SPRINGFIELD HEART ATTACK VICTIM

In the passing of John H. Springfield, aged 70, who died Sunday at his home in Brainerd, the community suffered the loss of an outstanding, upright citizen. Mr. Springfield was active in religious and fraternal circles, and also took an active part in political matters.

He is survived by a widow and several children, among whom is Claude Springfield, member of the Typographical union and well-known citizen.

The Labor World joins in extending sympathy to the bereaved family in the loss of a kind and loving husband and father.

LEGISLATIVE ASPIRANTS HAVE VARIED VIEWS ON PROPOSALS TO BE OFFERED IN NEXT SESSION

Thirteen candidates for the lower house and three who aspire to represent the people of Hamilton county in the state senate were recently presented with questionnaires regarding their attitude on social legislation covering, in the main, the program of the Tennessee Federation of Labor and the railroad brotherhoods.

The questionnaire, printed herewith, was prepared by the legislative committee of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council, and under further instructions this committee submits the results below.

Accompanying each questionnaire was the following letter:

During the course of each biennial session of the Tennessee general assembly the Tennessee Federation of Labor and the railroad brotherhoods cause to be presented a program for social legislation designed to protect the lives, health and well-being of men, women and children in industry. This program is based upon years of experience and study, and we believe it is wholly progressive, reasonable, sane and necessary. Furthermore, while it happens to be sponsored by a group, we believe that each proposal affects the well-being of the people of Tennessee as a whole.

As a candidate for the legislature, we would appreciate knowing your views on such matters, and are presenting to you the inclosed questionnaire for your consideration. While some of the queries are of necessity somewhat general, we would be glad to go into more detail at your convenience, if desired.

Attitude of the various candidates is summed up as follows:

FOR THE STATE SENATE.

John A. Chambliss.

In response to yours of the 21st enclosing questionnaire, I wish to say that while I have taken the position in campaigning that I prefer not to deal with the details of legislation I am going to undertake to give you a general outline as to my attitude toward the matters covered in the questionnaire which you submit.

My opinion is that I will look with favor on general progressive legislation as to industrial conditions, to cover the last inquiry in the questionnaire first, and I will take up the other questions in the order they are presented.

While I have had a good deal of litigation in connection with the compensation law, I am not at all familiar with the difference between its administration by a commission and that at present in force. As I understand, however, the Ohio law, to be specific, is administered by a commission, and I further understand that it is a more liberal law than the Tennessee law. As Ohio has somewhat the same industrial conditions we have I can say that so far as my investigation discloses I will favor amending the compensation law, certainly to make its terms favorably comparable with progressive states. As to the question of a commission it will be necessary for me to make a further investigation, but I shall certainly have an open mind on this question.

As to amending the Tennessee child labor laws to conform with the United States department of labor, I can only say that I do not know what the department of labor standards are and have not ascertained just now. I understand that our child labor laws in Tennessee compare favorably with those elsewhere, and as my observation is no one complains about increasing the standards, I see no reason for not making the standards those generally accepted by students of industrial conditions as proper.

As to free text books, I wish to say that I am personally inclined to believe that we are leading young people over the country to feel that the world, and particularly the state, owes them something. I see no reason, however, why we should not add to the many other free things text books.

As to a law reducing the maximum working week for women to 48 hours, I see no objection. I am inclined to believe it may prove to be a hardship on those affected—I mean the women—but if there is a reasonable basis for this reduction I shall not resist it.

With reference to a law abolishing night work for women, I am entirely uninformed. I would say offhand that there should be such a law, but it may prove a boomerang to those who need employment. I am willing to say that I think you and I can agree on this particular question.

As to a law prohibiting the operation of one-man street cars, I can only say that it seems to me the street car system is in its death agonies. It may be that the cost of operation incident to a second man can be properly absorbed. I am much inclined, however, to think that such a law would be unwise.

As to legislation regulating or limiting the issuance of injunctions in labor disputes, I wish to say that I think such legislation might very well be enacted. Just how great this regulation and limitation should be I am not prepared to state, but I personally believe that the judges who are called on to act in injunction suits would welcome relief from the great responsibility which is now theirs.

Responding to the question as to legislation in regard to the products of convict labor competing with manufacturers, I am entirely unadvised. I understand that our local manufacturers of stoves, for example, compete with convict-made stoves. Whether this is proper or not is subject to debate. I have no conclusions in this regard, but suggest that the problem might be solved by comparing the conditions in this state with those elsewhere.

The question as to the small loan law has interested me for some time. My first impression is that the law ought to be repealed, but I was recently advised, in fact received the advice the morning your questionnaire arrived, by the Russell Sage Foundation that the Tennessee law is operating satisfactorily. I am quite sure that you and I can agree on what ought to be done in this connection.

The remaining question is as to the exemption limit being raised to $75.00. I am heartily in favor of this, as I have personally observed conditions and feel that the exemptions should be raised.

W. French Grubb.

1. Yes. This law needs to be amended in several ways so as to protect the injured employes, and I will co-operate to the fullest extent with the representatives of labor to perfect this law along these lines.

2. I do not know what standard has been set by the children's bureau of the department of labor, but fully believing that their experience and interest in this work is such that I can afford to rely on any standard they have established, I fully agree and answer "Yes."

Questions 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9 and 11, "Yes."

10. I am thoroughly convinced that there ought to be a graduated scale for garnishments based on the condition of the debtor, but my limited experience with reference to this subject of the law would not warrant me in offering this definite scale. I do say, however, that I will be glad to co-operate whole-heartedly with the representatives of labor in working out a proper amendment to this law.

G. M. Tuck.

No reply.

FOR THE LOWER HOUSE.

M. R. Bernhardt.

Answered "Yes" to all questions.

Mrs. Evelyn Burton.

1. I am in favor of such changes as will promote the best interests of labor. 2, 3, 5 and 10, "Yes."

4. Yes, and with the same pay as received for 57 hours.

6. Yes, I regard it as very unsafe and a dangerous custom.

7. I regard this as very unfair to labor, and would welcome legislation regulating it.

8. I do, indeed; it ought never to be allowed.

9. Yes; it is an abomination.

G. W. Chamlee, Jr.

1. Yes; I have always favored amendments which would tend to raise the standards in Tennessee.

2. The Tennessee laws should be changed to conform to the standards set by the children's bureau, and I think this is one of the most important changes.

3. I have always favored a free text book law, and supported the local legislation which gave the county the present textbook law.

4. The maximum week should be reduced, and I believe this change would be very beneficial to the women concerned.

5. Yes.

6. In a previous session of the legislature I supported the bill which prohibited one-man cars, and I believe it is needed legislation.

7. Yes.

8. Yes; this competition should be removed where it competes with free labor and free manufacturers.

9. This law should be repealed.

10. I have heretofore supported a bill changing the amount of wages exempt from garnishment, and I will support this last suggested change.

11. While this is a general question, I do not believe that labor will ever ask for any legislation that is not fair to everyone, and my answer is "Yes."

Comment: On most of the above questions I am already on record as supporting these measures which have heretofore been before the lgieslature, and I will continue to be fair to labor legislation in the future.

D. M. Coleman.

Answered "Yes" to questions 1, 2, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 11.

3. I do, and I heartily supported a bill giving Chattanooga free textbooks for its grammar school pupils.

9. I believe this to be one of the most vicious laws now on our statute books.

10. I believe the garnishment laws should be modernized, and will, as on all other matters, work with your legislative representatives toward a just and proper solution of this problem.

Miss Sarah Ruth Frazier.

Answered "Yes" to questions 2, 4, 6, 8, 9 and 11.

1. Yes; I favor a material increase.

3. I think it would be beneficial to the state to have free textbooks.

5. Yes; except in cases of necessity, or where they particularly desire to work at night.

7. I think both sides should have a fair hearing in such cases.

10. As the cost of living has greatly increased, exemption should be correspondingly increased.

Stanton Graves.

1. Yes; and especially to provide that actual notice to employer of injury would dispense with the necessity of written notice.

2. Yes.

3. At least for children financially unable to procure them.

4. Yes; I will favor any law which will render the working conditions of women and children more tolerable.

5. Yes; same as above.

6. Yes; especially in cities and thickly populated districts.

7. Yes; provided courts are not

STATE COMMITTEE ISSUES FINAL APPEAL

Officials Urge Workers to Rally at Polls.

"CONSIGN HORTON TO POLITICAL OBLIVION"

Review Conditions Which Resulted in Indorsement of Gwinn and Hull as Friends of Masses—Warn Against Self-Appointed Advisors of Tennessee Labor.

A final appeal to "lovers of humanity and all who believe in honesty and decency in government" was issued Thursday by the nonpartisan political campaign committee of the Tennessee Federation of Labor and the railroad brotherhoods, and events leading up to the indorsement of Hon. L. E. Gwinn for governor and Hon. Cordell Hull for United States senator, long term, are reviewed in detail.

In recalling the shameful course of Gov. Horton's army at Elizabethton, the committee says:

"Workers of Tennessee, do not forget Elizabethton. Go to the polls on Aug. 7, vote for Hon. L. E. Gwinn and consign Gov. Horton to political oblivion."

Warning is also issued against accepting statements of individuals claiming to represent organized labor, and "who have consistently voted for and supported enemies of labor."

The statement follows:

Chattanooga, Tenn.
July 30, 1930.

At a meeting of the non-partisan campaign committee of the Tennessee Federation of Labor and the transportation brotherhoods, held in this city on Tuesday, July 29, it was decided to issue this appeal to lovers of humanity and all who believe in honesty and decency in government.

The above named committee representing all organized labor in Tennessee, at a meeting held in Nashville on June 9, 1930, indorsed Hon. L. E. Gwinn as the democratic nominee for governor, and Hon. Cordell Hull as the democratic nominee for United States senator. The report of this committee made to the convention of the Tennessee Federation of Labor at Chattanooga on May 14, 1930, condemning Gov. Horton was unanimously concurred in by that body.

At the convention of the Tennessee Federation of Labor, held at Knoxville May 13-15, 1929, President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, telegraphed the convention, saying among other things: "All assistance possible should be given our heroic fighting fellow workers at Elizabethton and elsewhere in their struggle for the right to organize. Let Gov. Horton understand in no uncertain terms how the workers of Tennessee feel over his action in sending troops to Elizabethton."

Gov. Horton has never shown any sympathy with the problems that are vital to the workers, organized and unorganized. On the other hand he has lent an attentive ear to the voice of the special interests.

During the strike of the rayon workers at Elizabethton, he ordered out the state militia in vio-

PAINTERS FEED HUNGRY CROWD

Eighth Annual Barbecue-Picnic Enjoyed by Thousands Wednesday.

ERNEST L. BLAIR.

Annual picnic and barbecue of the Painters, Paperhangers and Decorators' union, held Wednesday at Lake Winnepesaukah, was truly "bigger and better" than ever. Members of the Signwriters' union were special guests of the day.

About 2,000 people attended the affair, not counting the score or more candidates for state and county offices in the coming primaries and general elections.

Barbecue was served from 12 o'clock throughout the afternoon as long as the guests arrived. This barbecue was prepared by W. A. (Zeke) Witt, general chairman, and measured up to the usual high standard of "eats" set by "Zeke" on former occasions.

The "bread line," which formed at 12 o'clock, had not all passed before the serving tables at 2 o'clock, yet the food held out well, and "seconds" could be had for the asking. The menu consisted of several kinds of salads and relishes, as well as barbecue and soft drinks.

Hundreds of children wore their bathing suits throughout the day, and boating and rides on the coaster were popular sports. A number of athletic events were also held during the day, and dozens of prizes were distributed to the winners.

E. L. ("Bully") Blair, chairman of contests and games, handled his end of the program in the debonair manner for which he is justly famed. He also introduced the candidates for office while his voice held out. There were so many of these candidates present that those at the rear end of the line were simply allowed to file by while the crowd wondered why have officeholders anyway.

The committee on soft drinks, headed by Charles Milford and J. G. Burkes, saw to it that all drinking water was removed from the grounds. As a result, business was "fair to middlin'." Other members of the local who served on the general committee on arrangements and assisted in making the affair a complete success were: George Durham, Deemer Little, George Sivley, Dave Jones, A. T. Jones, H. R. Gray, R. L. Taylor, Erskine Mabee, J. G. Burkes, C. F. Weidner, P. P. Thurston, Roy Bowen, W. D. Canada, H. M. Ottman, Joe Farmer, J. F. Miller, E. K. Witt and Fred Falk.

The prize for the painter present with the largest family was a tie between George Tarpley and George Durham, each of them having seven members of their families present.

The horseshoe contest was won by C. H. Thurston and J. V. Roberts.

Sheriff Charlie Taylor was awarded the prize for being the ugliest painter on the grounds, the selection being made by a committee of three women.

Other contests resulted as follows:

One hundred yard race, Erskine Mabry; egg hunt, under which was secreted a $5 gold piece, Ed Green; foot race for girls under 17 years of age, Julia Snyder; 100-yard race for boys under 17, Ty Cobb Blair; ball throwing contest for girls, Dorothy Tarpley; Ball throwing contest for women, Mrs. Loggins; bear race for boys under 7 years of age, Glenn Tarpley; bear race for boys under 12 years of age, Herbert Thurston; rolling pin throwing contest for house painters' wives, Mrs. Rupert Burks; rolling pin throwing contest for paperhangers' wives, Mrs. F. S. Thurston; the same contest for nonmembers, Mrs. Loggins, with Mrs. Burks winning the grand prize when the three winners contested.

Prizes were donated by Sheriff Charlie Taylor, Cash-Melton Hardware company, Wassman Bros., L. Forrstner, florist, Angel Printing company, Sherwin & Williams Paint company, Gilman Paint & Varnish company, Smith-Gazzell, Haverty Furniture company, J. W. Johnston company, Effron's, Contor's, Eckerd's, Independent Paint and Glass company, R. H. Parrent Paint company.

LABOR QUERIES

Q.—What utility is planning to have a system of unemployment insurance provided for in its next national agreement with employers?

A.—The American Federation of Full Fashioned Hosiery Workers. The full fashioned manufacturers, in the negotiations for a new wage scale, have agreed to contribute a certain percentage of their weekly pay roll to a fund, which will be disbursed to employes when the mills are not operating.

Q.—What is the meaning of the term, "laissez faire?"

A.—This is French for "let us alone." It expresses the principle of allowing things to look after themselves, especially the policy of non-interference by the government in commerce and industry.

* * *

Q.—Who said: "The business that can not carry its normal working force in times of depression has no more right to exist than the one that can not pay a living wage in normal times."

A.—P. H. Callahan, head of the Louisville Varnish company, Louisville, Ky.

LABOR CO-OPERATES IN SALE OF PEQUOT MILL PRODUCTS

Salem, Mass., July 31.—"You will find labor throughout the country willing to co-operate with you," said John P. O'Connell, secretary and business agent of local 33, United Textile Workers of America, at the sales conference of Pequot Mills here.

"Organized labor," he continued, "appreciates the attitude of the management here to its employes. Pequot sheets are the only 100 per cent union-made sheets in the country and therefore your activities in the distribution of Pequot products is enhanced by the fact that the 3,000,000 members of organized labor will co-operate with you in your sales efforts.

"Seldom does a selling house or a mill have such an auxiliary force and this force further consists of a very widely read labor press."

"REMEMBER ELIZABETHTON."

There are so many reasons why Gov. Henry Horton should be retired to his Marshall county farm that it is impossible to list them all.

He has been unfriendly to the toilers in all his official acts.

He has never been governor in fact—he is merely the mouthpiece of certain powerful interests that have an iron grip on the state and would strengthen that grip by placing Horton back in the state capitol.

If Henry Horton were capable, courageous, a statesman—everything that a governor should be—there would still remain on his record a blot which only his overwhelming defeat could serve to avenge.

Organized labor could listen for ages to all the rot about his record for roads and schools, for which the people are paying out of all proportion to the benefits received, and its only answer should and would be:

"Remember Elizabethton!"

We will not rehash that story here. Any trades unionist who is not familiar with Horton's record at Elizabethton has neglected his or her duty in failing to keep posted on matters affecting the welfare of the toilers.

When the politicians try to talk Horton to you, remember Elizabethton.

As governor, Senator L. E. Gwinn would be governor in fact. He is courageous and able. He will not do the bidding of a political machine. He is better equipped mentally for the governorship than the "plain man" from Marshall county.

Column after column could be written as to why Gwinn should be elected and Horton defeated, but there is one reason sufficient in itself—

"Remember Elizabethton!"

LAW AND EQUITY NOT THE SAME.

Trade unionists should keep in mind the difference between equity and law when they agitate against the labor injunction. Unionists should not be trapped by judical jargon, that classes a court order as "the law of the land."

A law court is guided by statutes, by the constitution, by rules and precedents that must be adhered to or the court will be overruled on appeal. The same law court judge, when he announces that he is sitting as a court of equity, is not restricted by law or constitution. His conscience is his only guide.

The original purpose of equity was to protect property where the plaintiff has no remedy at law. By enlarging the definition of property, the equity court places no limit on his power.

If workers refuse to patronize an unfair employer, this is an attack on "property," because equity has ruled that patronage is "property." Free speech, free press and every other guarantee are sidetracked by this irresponsible court. No law court would dare attempt such violations. And to conceal the wrong, tricky legalists would convey the impression that "law" comes out of equity courts.

ANTHRACITE PEACE MEANS MUCH.

That five and one-half years' agreement between anthracite miners and operators will be nation-wide in its effect. First, it means long peace to an important unit of the United Mine Workers, and will permit that organization to devote its energies in the bituminous industry that is in a demoralized condition following the operators' repudiation of the Jacksonville agreement.

Every prophecy made by union officials regarding conditions in the bituminous fields has been verified. Operators, in their effort to cut costs, slashed wages below the subsistence point. Coal communities have been destroyed because of this low purchasing power. No additional coal has been sold. Operators acknowledge their mistake and government officials are discussing plans to them by unions to call a conference of the interested parties in the hope that new policies will replace cut throat competition that has brought destitution and war.

With peace assured in the anthracite region, President Lewis and his associates can devote every effort, without distraction, to developing a spirit of co-operation in the bituminous fields that is now so marked in anthracite.

The day of industrial war has passed. Coal operators should be guided by enlightened self-interest and join in conference with these unionists, just as has been done in the hard coal fields. If they do not voluntarily act thusly, they will be forced to by the logic of events.

BIG BUSINESS DOESN'T FEAR "REDS"

"Reds" are knowingly admitted to Ford plants and their propaganda is not feared by company officials, according to the general manager of the Ford Motor Company. The Ford system which, he said, is the system of many other large industries in the United States, "is barren ground for 'red' propaganda." Let a trade unionist start his propaganda in one of these plants and see what happens to him.

Employers do not fear the "reds" because they are useful. Private detectives and company spies, masking as "reds," keep the management informed of employes' sentiment. If unrest is manifest a wild-eyed strike is launched, as has been done in the textile industry and the coal sections. These communists' strikes always fail. The employers gain through the workers' discouragement and their failure to distinguish between trade union and "red" effort. The person who believes big business fears the "red" movement does not understand how big business checks unrest.

THE CHERRY TREE

Where with our Little Hatchet we tell the truth about many things, sometimes profoundly, sometimes flippantly, sometimes recklessly.

All across the country temperatures ranged high and wild this past week. Men and women died because they could find neither coolness nor rest. In spots relief came, but for most folks in most places—barring those delightful mountain and shore resorts where most folks don't live—it was just plain furnace heat.

Heat poured up off the pavements and out of the skies in Arizona and Texas, it blistered across Kansas and Missouri, it made Chicago a sweltering pool of struggle and treated New York almost as badly.

Over the southern states a blanket of heat and humidity was laid down through which humanity weltered and almost mired.

Through it all work went on—wage earners went to their places and did their daily work. Those who had no jobs would have been glad to have jobs—glad to stew and sweat and swear for the week's wage on a sticky Saturday afternoon.

* * *

One other thing went on as usual—the work of organizing the unorganized.

One of the marvels of the decade is the steam and speed and life of this great organizing campaign.

There are not as many organizers as there were on the job, but the stream of new members keeps coming. It's amazing. Not the least surprised are the employers.

The life force that is in trade unionism doesn't fluctuate with the thermometer. It grows stronger, day by day, week by week.

Recently—in the midst of the hottest weather—one state announced that its union membership had doubled.

South Carolina is the first state to meet the American Federation of Labor's "double membership" slogan. And in mid-summer!

As the south grows stronger the whole country grows stronger.

Not long ago bids for a government construction contract were opened. The seven lowest bidders were non-union contractors from the south. That hit workers and contractors in the north—the job was in a northern city.

Organization in the south will stop that kind of business. Soon it will not be possible to victimize workers that way.

There can be no such thing as a non-union contractor in any part of the country unless he can get non-union men to work for the miserable wage he usually offers.

As the great organizing campaign moves forward there are fewer non-union workers in America each day.

America is being made better for workers because of this great organizing campaign.

* * *

Testifying before the house committee investigating communist propoganda, John J. Leary, Jr., industrial editor of the New York World and a member of the executive board of the International Labor Press of America, made an apt and accurate statement, saying:

"The purpose of the communists is not to raise wages but to raise hell."

Deluded and beaten workers in Gastonia can testify to that. Out of earlier experiences the workers of Passaic can testify to the same thing.

The communists "raise hell" to break down democratic institutions and foment absolute revolution. Many American workers and ever so many preachers, professors and silly writers don't seem to understand that fact. It is a strange thing. Not unlike the man who, falling from the fifteenth floor, shouted as he passed the seventh, "Fine so far."

MANY IDLE IN BRITAIN

London, Eng.—Britain is alarmed over its growing army of unemployed that now numbers 1,890,600. This is an increase of 75,300 for the week. There is no improvement in the coal, iron and steel industries. Slight increases are noted in cotton goods.

FACTORY WORK DROPS.

Philadelphia.—Factory employment in this state dropped 2.3 per cent and wage payments 6 per cent between May and June, according to the federal reserve bank.

Compared with June, 1929, employment at reporting plants decreased 6.1 per cent and wages nearly 15 per cent.

If you think tomorrow never comes just make a note at the bank due then and see.

SEEING WHAT THEY LOOK FOR

But what we need is truth not distorted.

The Passing Show

Note and Comment on Things Doing in the March of Events

Calamity brings howling. Thus came the phrase, "calamity howling," it having turned out that some howl in prophecy, magnifying danger.

Just now we have a calamity of unemployment. Nobody knows just how much unemployment we have, but there are good figures on which to form estimates.

But if there are "calamity howlers" about present conditions, so there are pollyannas, or gladness howlers, seeking to paint roses where there are no roses.

Of these Secretary of Commerce Lamont is one of the best examples.

No sooner do partial census figures make their appearance than he shouts, "Aha, it isn't as bad as it was reported to be."

This is drivel, inasmuch as the figures show nothing at all, unless and until they are related to other figures which at present can be done only roughly and with nothing more than estimates resulting.

Secretary Lamont ought to keep quiet.

The trouble with rushing out with dogmatic assertions such as Mr. Lamont has made is that most folks feel they have to defend a position once taken. This is particularly true of politicians.

All census officials are subordinate to Mr. Lamont. It will not be unnatural if they take their cue from him and seek to help him substantiate his glad words.

Thus far those actually engaged with the figures have played a fair game.

It's a tough job, this unemployment census, complicated by politics which had a lot to do with formation of the questions. These, be it noted, lend themselves to confusion, as has been discovered.

We needn't expect any really valuable figures for months. Figures now being given out as representing unemployment show only one phase of it—perhaps not the most important phase.

This palpable fact is stated every time figures are given out, but the fact is usually forgotten, largely by virtue of the original too-happy statement made by Mr. Lamont.

It will be months before really valuable figures are known—too late for any worth-while results as far as this present depression is concerned. The most marvelous calculating and tabulating machinery in the world is at work on the immense job, but even this cannot turn the final facts out for use inside of several months.

As a help in this crisis this unemployment census is worth just about zero. Too bad, but too true.

Much confusion is due to those who answer questions; much is due to those who did the enumerating. Some of this is the result of an enumeration blank that is not fool proof. Perhaps no fool proof blank could have been devised. That remains to be seen.

This was our first census of unemployment. It was a starting point.

In the end we shall know what was the condition in early April of this year—if that is worth anything. And that is about all we shall know.

Only after a long time, when it becomes possible to make comparisons and to analyze conditions along the line, so that comparisons can be made and trends established will this census be really worth anything. Right now its greatest value is that it marks a beginning and affords some basis for making estimates.

But let there be no more hokum from political gentlemen who want to make the figures mean what they want them to mean.

What Next!

A new type of concrete, a product of burnt shale, may mean the building of towering skyscrapers, dwarfing even the soaring buildings of New York, some of whose towers are 1,000 feet high. Structures of 100 stories or more may result.

The new building material, which was discussed before the annual meeting of the American Society for Testing Materials in a paper by F. E. Richart and V. P. Jensen, research experts of the faculty of the University of Illinois, runs, it was said, from 25 to 35 per cent lighter than the older mixtures of concrete. Consequently, they pointed out, in a building of a given size the weight of concrete being less, the strength and dimensions of the steel structure designed to support it can be materially reduced, resulting in an enormous proportional saving of net weight and decrease in foundation load.

The lessening of dead weight and load imposed by such buildings admits of the possibility of greatly increased heights with acceptable safety factors and a decreased cost in the construction, the paper said.

SURPLUS OF WORKERS.

Wshington.—Although there was an increased demand for certain classes of labor during June, there was nationally a surplus of workers in practically every trade, according to the United States employment bureau.

IDLENESS IN ILLINOIS.

Chicago.—Industrial operations in this state during June brought Illinois employment to a point lower than at any time since the 1921 depression. As compared with June, last year, employment was 10.9 per cent lower and pay rolls 18.4 per cent lower.

JOS. C. BALHORN DEAD.

Detroit, Mich.—Joseph C. Balhorn, long-time member Brotherhood of Painters and Decorators, died in this city. He was 76.

He served as general president of the brotherhood from 1902 to 1910, when he relinquished that office. He served as general organizer from 1913 to 1924, when ill health compelled his resignation.

GREEN AT SYRACUSE.

Syracuse, N. Y.—President Green accepted an invitation of the local central body to deliver the Labor Day speech in this city.

The New York state fair will be held here during that week and Labor Day will be observed by the state fair association.

Mr. Green made this choice from a large number of invitations from every section of the country.

I am a candidate for the State Senate, and take this means of making a direct final appeal to the working men and women of Hamilton County.

I have not had and will not have an opportunity to see all of the voters. I am taking this opportunity to solicit your support, and to assure you that should I be nominated and elected I will be the representative of the whole people of the county; and that, too, without personal obligation to any person.

I shall, if nominated and elected, give a patient, courteous, and considerate hearing to all who want to be heard upon measures coming before the legislature; but I shall never pay a personal or political debt through special legislative action. I shall always act in accordance with what the majority of the people want and what I think is for the best interests of the general public.

The record I made in the Senate in 1929 is before you, and upon this record and this statement I ask your vote and your support, and will be profoundly grateful to you for it.

Cost of Industrial Accidents Exceeds Four Billion Annually

Washington, July 31.—Losses to this country through industrial accidents exceed $4,000,000,000, according to the United States Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Wage earners lose more than $1,000,000,000 a year and the loss to all interested parties is probably four times that amount.

No definite figures can be given, it is pointed out, because many states do not have compensation laws and do not require records of accidents, while others which do have such laws do not publish the number and type of injuries.

However, the total number of fatal injuries in industry, based on partial figures, is estimated at 16,606, and the number of non-fatal injuries at 2,604,637, the bureau says.

When workmen's compensation laws were first introduced, it is pointed out, it was believed that they would have the effect of materially decreasing the number of injuries. The lack of the desired progress in this direction is attributed chiefly by the lack of interest manifested by the smaller establishments. This lack of interest, in turn, is attributed to the reluctance of stock casualty insurance companies to insure these smaller firms. The number of accidents in plants considered too small to have accident problems is said to be wholly out of proportion to the number of workmen employed.

Inadequate state inspection and the increasing mechanization of industry, as well as negligence of employes and employers, are also contributing factors to the lack of progress.

Although some improvement in accident prevention was noted in the years immediately following the beginnings of workmen's compensation laws, the compensation system as it is now functioning is not able to keep the number of industrial injuries down to the desired minimum, it is said.

Anthracite Coal Peace Assured; Agreement Will Run Until 1936

New York, July 31.—Peace for five and one-half years is assured in the anthracite industry.

The United Mine Workers, headed by President John L. Lewis, negotiated an agreement with coal owners, following three weeks' conference in this city.

The agreement, which maintains present wges, affects nearly 200,000 workers and will run until April 1, 1936, superseding the present agreement that expires September 1 next.

The agreement must b approved by a convention of anthracite miners to be held at Scranton. President Lewis and his conferees are confident of overwhelming ratification.

The principal features of the new agreement, aside from no wage cuts, is the coal owners' concession to the miners of the check-off system of collecting dues. Arbitration is included.

The agreement provides for a permanent committee of twelve, six from each side, who may call in outside experts to aid in the solution of problems that develop.

President Lewis made this comment on the settlement: "We are gratified to confirm the negotiations of a new agreement that means industrial peace in the anthracite region for five and one-half years. This will be an unbroken era approximating ten years.

"The agreement is predicated upon a continuance of present wages and speaks for itself. It also provides for the working out of a concrete program of cooperation and for mutual accommodation to each other.

"The arrangement for collection of dues will reduce operating expenses of the union. In consideration for this accommodation, the agreement provides for practical cooperation by the miners in promoting efficiency in operating methods and economy, without decreasing the miner's earnings.

"We feel that not alone the miners and operators, but the citizens of anthracite communities and the nation are to be congratulated on the successful negotiations."

Industrial Disputes

As Reported for This Week By the United States Department of Labor

The Altschuler Bros. Silk Co. of Easton, Pa., and the Stewart Silk Co. of South Side Easton, Pa., reached a settlement with 3,000 strikers by granting a union agreement while the workers accepted a wage cut.

The L. A. W. Silk Co. of East Stroudeburg, Pa., settled a wage rate dispute involving seventy-five workers, when the workers accepted a 5 per cent cut.

There were thirty-three strikes before the department for settlement at the close of the week, and in addition twelve which had not reached the strike stage.

New and unsettled disputes reported are:

Carpenters and sheet metal workers, Middletown, N. Y., strike, involving twenty-four workers, failure to pay workers.

Teamsters, Butte, Mont., strike, number involved not reported, wages cut 25 to 50 cents per day.

Platers, St. Louis, Mo., controversy, number involved not reported, wages cut ten per cent.

Miners, Fairmont, W. Va., controversy, number involved not reported, working conditions.

Plumbers, Columbus, Ohio, strike, involving 150 workers, wages cut from $11 to $10 per day.

Stevedores, Philadelphia, Pa., strike, number involved not reported, working conditions.

Asphalt workers, Chicago, Ill., strike, involving 240 workers, jurisdiction of paving and asphalt work.

Building, Wilmington, Del., controversy, number involved not reported, working conditions.

Clothing workers, New York city, strike, number not involved and cause of dispute not reported.

Cooks, waiters and waitresses, Cleveland, Ohio, lockout, 800 workers involved, refusal to renew union contract.

Dress and coat makers, Baltimore, Md., strike, 60 workers involved, two workers discharged for alleged union activities.

MATT GERLACH

Makes Final Appeal for Re-Election of

HAYS CLARK

for

CRIMINAL COURT CLERK

To the Readers of The Labor World:

I want to thank all my friends who have so loyally supported Hays Clark in his campaign for re-election as Criminal Court Clerk, and to urge them to continue their good work until the polls are closed next Thursday night. My friends know that our office has received the indorsement of the County Auditor, his investigation showing that every penny was in its proper place, and the business of the office has been transacted with dispatch.

Mr. Clark is known as one of Labor's best friends, and his re-election will be of much gratification to hundreds of laboring people. My association with Mr. Clark has been pleasant at all times, and I know that he highly appreciates his many friends among the Organized Labor movement.

5-DAY WEEK CUTS UNEMPLOYMENT, ELECTRICAL WORKERS' UNION FINDS

Ten Per Cent. More of Men Kept Steadily at Work Since Inauguration of Shorter Week, Investigation of Conditions in Several Cities Reveals.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Washington, July 24.—A survey of cities where electrical workers have the five-day working week, made by the Electrical Workers' Journal, official organ of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, reveals that local unions which have kept a record of unemployed believe that the five-day week kept ten per cent more of their men steadily employed.

Results of the investigation emphasize that a continued increase in the number of jobless workers due to labor-displacing machinery makes shorter hours a pressing necessity.

Reporting on its survey, the Journal says:

"In all cases the Journal found the union struggling with unemployment. The situation is acute in many cities. The peak of unemployment was reached in March this year and has run as high as 43 per cent. The recovery is very slow. It is apparent that the three types of unemployment—

"(1) that, due to seasonal slack

"(2) that, due to business depression

"(3) that, due to displacement of men by mechanized methods of production have converged sharply upon the wage earners. It is also apparent that the local union officials are increasingly aware that unemployment is due to more than one cause, and that they foresee the necessity of keeping accurate records of the men at work and the men on enforced vacation.

Shorter Week's Advantages.

"The urgnet campaign for the five-day week conducted by organized labor during the last three years was given impetus by growing unemployment due to introduction of labor-saving machinery. The idea of the short work week was traditional with labor. But the necessity was not so dire until automatic machinery began to take the place of hand skill. Whether the introduction of the five-day week by electrical workers in a half hundred widely scattered cities has had the desired effect of lessening the blow wielded by mechanization is hard to determine, especially in a depression period. Yet where unions have kept a local record of employment, figures show that unemployment has been curtailed. Where the union has kept no accurate figures, the firm conviction prevails, founded on experience, in time of depression, that the five-day week has been a big factor in cutting unemployment. Other advantages cited by correspondents include:

"More leisure for study and home-building.

"Higher morale among the workmen."

Local Unions Report Benefits.

Commenting on the situation in their own, locals, representatives of locals in various cities expressed the opinion that the five-day week had helped to prevent unemployment. Extracts from typical replies were:

Cleveland, Ohio—Without a doubt, the five-day week has materially benefited our membership and improved employment generally.

Dallas, Tex.—There is no question but the five-day week has helped us with unemployment conditions.

New York City—Fewer men are idle due to the five-day week because it has relieved our unemployment to the extent of ten per cent.

Has "Worked Wonders"

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The five-day week has worked wonders with the unemployment situation in our local union since it has been in effect, September, 1928.

Seattle, Wash.—We know to a positive certainty that the five-day week is a partial remedy for idleness, possessing more merit than any other scheme so far suggested.

Salinas, Calif.—There are fewer idle men since we have had the five-day week.

Timothy Healy Dead; Well-Known Unionist

New York.—Timothy Healy, former president International Brotherhood Stationary Firemen and Oilers, died at a New Jersey summer resort.

He retired from the office of president several years ago after serving in that office for many years. He was active in the trade union movement for more than a generation. In 1920 he was elected fraternal delegate from the A. F. of L. to the British Trades Union congress. Four years later he was a delegate to the world power conference in London.

He was a well-known figure in A. F. of L. conventions and served on the committee on local and federated bodies. On his retirement as a union official he served as coroner of New York city four years. In his youth he worked on trans-Atlantic steamers as a coal stoker and cattle tender. At a dinner given in his honor in New York city three years ago, Secretary of Labor Davis said that no trade unionist had more friends than "Tim" Healy, and that he and the stationary fireman landed as immigrants in New York the same year.

June Records Another Decrease In New York Factory Employment

(By International Labor News Service.)

Albany, July 24.—The number of workers employed by the factories of New York state was nearly two per cent less in June than in May, according to a statement by Industrial Commissioner Frances Perkins. The index number of factory employment in New York dropped to 86.7, the lowest point ever recorded.

The total number of factory workers employed usually changes very little from May to June. The years 1921 and 1924 are the only other years when the decrease in employment from May to June has been as great as it was this year. In ten of the last fifteen years the change amounted to less than one per cent, and in seven of these to less than one-half of one per cent. Most firms are neither taking on nor laying off workers in large numbers at this time of the year, and decreases, where they do occur, are usually offset or nearly offset by increases in other industries.

This year the net decrease in employment was a little greater than usual, indicating another small increase in the number of workers who are either unemployed or employed outside of the manufacturing industries. The total number of workers employed by factories of the state has decreased steadily since last October. The net decrease during this period was 14 per cent. This decrease is more than twice as great as the decrease from October to June of any other years except 1920-1921 and 1923-1924.

These statements are based on reports from more than 1,800 factories which report regularly to the New York state department of labor.

FARM ACT OPPOSED.

Washington. — Administration officials who have returned from the west are quoted as privately admitting that there is much opposition to the farm relief act and that strong sentiment exists for the defeated debenture clause.

The government bought 60,000,000 bushels of wheat to hold the market but prices continue downward. It is the purpose to carefully dispose of this wheat, but possible wheat surpluses at the next harvest is a barrier to this plan. Alexander Legge, chairman federal farm board, makes vigorous defense of the farm act. He denounces politicians and chambers of commerce, and declared that "stabilization will work admirably on seasonal surpluses, but it cannot be made to work on permanent cumulative surpluses."

PUT BRUCE AND HIS BUSINESS ABILITY IN THE Governor's Chair!

We need Arthur Bruce for Governor of Tennessee. We need his business skill, his fine legal training. We need his energy, his sound judgment, his leadership, his willingness to serve.

He is the business executive type. His Company (hardwood flooring) is the largest in the world. He has been honored many times for civic, community, charity work. No man stands higher among the state's business leaders.

Tennessee's business is the greatest business in the state. It certainly needs a man like Arthur Bruce. He is not a politician. He has no axe to grind. He has no unsavory political ties. He is clean. Your influence and your vote will put Arthur Bruce and his business ability in the Governor's chair!

VOTE FOR BRUCE!

Cordell Hull

For the United States Senate

Report of the Nonpartisan Political Campaign Committee of the Tennessee Federation of Labor and the Railroad Brotherhoods, June 9, 1930:

UNITED STATES SENATOR—FULL TERM

CORDELL HULL

Honorable Cordell Hull is now and has been for many years a member of Congress, representing the Fourth Congressional District of Tennessee.

On the record he has made by his vote on labor legislation he has been indorsed by the National Legislative Representative of the Transportation Brotherhoods and the Legislative Representatives of the American Federation of Labor.

The Fourth Congressional District of Tennessee is predominantly agricultural in its population. It contains a small number of organized workers. Therefore, there was no political pressure to urge him to vote in favor of labor legislation.

We therefore indorse Honorable Cordell Hull as the Democratic nominee for United States Senator in the primary of that party, to be held on August 7, 1930. We call upon the organized workers and their friends to vote and work for his nomination.

"REWARD OUR FRIENDS!"

R. W. (Bob) KEMMER

Candidate for

State Legislature

To the Readers of The Labor World:

I have an earnest desire to represent the people of Hamilton County in the Legisalture of Tennessee in 1931.

I favor any legislation that will improve the working conditions in industry. I believe in Fair Play between Employe and Employer. I will seek advice and help from all people.

Many years of hardship and struggle has made me personally acquainted with Mr. Hard Times, who is at present knocking at thousands of homes throughout the land. The people are demanding some relief.

If nominated and elected, I promise my co-operation in every way possible for a business administration.

R. W. (Bob) KEMMER.

Union, Employers and Civic Bodies Avert Strike and Removal of Mills

(By International Labor News Service.)

Easton, Pa., July 24.—Working together, union silk workers belonging to the United Textile Workers of America, manufacturers and civic organizations have averted a general strike of 1,500 workers and secured the retention here and in Phillipsburg, N. J., of ten silk mills with a yearly payroll of $3,250,000.

The United Textile Workers and the mill owners were brought together by the efforts of representatives of the Pennsylvania and the United States department of labor, the board of trade and the Rotary and Kiwanis clubs.

Agreements about to become operative between the silk workers and their employers are the result of more than a month of negotiations and conferences between the interested parties. They are the first union agreements made in the silk industry in this section and represent the debut of collective bargaining by both employes and employers here.

Chief of the provisions in the new pacts is a 5 to 10 per cent downward revision of the piecework wages. This reduction is 5 per cent less than the cut agreed to by the workers before the union entered the situation with a demand for collective bargaining to supplant action on the reduction in the separate mills.

Get More Than Unorganized.

Even under the new rates, Easton silk workers are receiving more than the unorganized workers in the Allentown and Bethlehem mills, according to union officials and the mill owners. Notwithstanding the wage-differential remaining, the employers declared the reduction would grant them "temporary relief in the depression" and enable them to hold or regain their normal markets from their nearby competitors.

One mill had moved away, attracted by the prospect of cheaper labor. The remaining mills, seriously considered moving to the south and other localities where it is alleged industrial conditions are more favorable. The workers, approached by their employers in the individual factories, agreed to accept a wage reduction of 14 per cent. The union locals, however, recalled the agreement and stood fast against the cut, with the result that a general strike was imminent.

Civic organizations then took a hand in the situation, urging the necessity of preventing a strike and halting the plans of the manufacturers to shut down or move away. Conferences were held between employers and workers following the appointment of a citizens' committee.

Union Official on Hand.

William Kelly, international vice-president of the United Textile Workers of America, guided a committee of the knitters in the negotiations. The manufacturers in conference with the committee and the workers included John McGinley, president of the Nonpareil Silk company.

McGinley, who worked himself up from a machine in the Stewart plant to ownership of his own factory, said: "The union has proved itself possessed of a most constructive spirit. We would much rather deal with this American Federation of Labor unit than other organizations that have troubled the industry.

"Of course, the union does not like to accept wage cuts, but neither do we like the necessity of having one. There is no economic justification for lowering wages, but it was either that or shut down or move.

"What we would like to see happen is the entrance of the union into Allentown and Bethlehem. Once workers' standards in those cities are brought anywhere near the levels in Easton, our employes need never fear depressions or other trade disasters."

Hits Cut-Throat Competition.

Kelly saw in the co-operation of the board of trade and the Rotary and Kiwanis clubs a step against the "cut-throat competition waged by chambers of commerce for the presence of industries in their towns."

"This mad desire for business at any cost," Kelly declared, "leads to but one end. Eventual bankruptcy of the towns with the loudest chambers. To attract business, taxes are lifted from industry and placed on the home owners. Wages are kept attractive and purchasing power is driven down. "This does not make for prosperity if it does line the sky with smokestacks."

LESS COTTON OUTPUT

Washington.—Cotton output represents a reduction of from 6 to 8 per cent from the total that would be planted, if the recent acreage trend had continued, said Carl Williams, member federal farm board, representing cotton growers.

The farm board is insistent that the cotton growers curtail output.

LEGAL NOTICE

Sealed proposals made on prepared forms and addressed to the building and grounds commission, of Hamilton county, will be received at the office of County Judge Will Cummings, Hamilton county courthouse, Chattanooga, Aug. 5, for the erection of a high school building, to be located at Ooltewah, Tenn.

Separate sealed proposals will be received on the electric wiring and on the plumbing and heating at the same hour and addressed in the same manner.

Certified checks made payable to the building and grounds commission in the amounts called for in specification shall accompany each proposal as a guarantee that if awarded contract, satisfactory surety bond in the amounts called for in the specifications will be furnished within ten days after notice of such award.

The right is reserved to reject any or all bids.

Plans, specifications and proposal forms for the above mentioned work may be seen or obtained at the office of W. H. Sears, 1202 James building, Chattanooga, Tenn. A deposit of $5 will be required to secure plans and specifications, said $5 to be refunded on return of plans and specifications provided the contractor submits a bid.

JUDGE WILL CUMMINGS,
Chairman, Buildings and Grounds Commission.

Tom J. Rogers

For Re-election

CIRCUIT COURT CLERK

To the Working Men and Women of Hamilton County:

I am a candidate for re-election as Circuit Court Clerk, having received the nomination of my party in the Primary of March 4.

My appeal for support then, as it is now, was based upon my record as a servant of the people of this county. During my term in the office of Circuit Court Clerk, I have made an earnest and honest endeavor to conduct the affairs of the people entrusted to my care in a businesslike manner.

Courtesy to any and all having business to transact in this office has been an unalterable rule on the part of myself and the office force here.

On the above record I am making my appeal for your continued support, and I invite the closest inspection of the manner in which the office of Circuit Court Clerk has been conducted.

I desire at this time to thank the many loyal friends who have favored me with their vote and influence in the past, and ask them to continue the battle until the victory is won.

TOM J. ROGERS.

Strike Leader, Defying Injunction, Is Arrested But Is Soon Freed

(By International Labor News Service)

Nazareth, Pa., July 17.—It may be all right after all to tell the people of Nazareth that the yellow dog contract is unconstitutional, un-American and should be disregarded. At noon on July 14 Louis F. Budenz, who led the Kraemer hosiery strike on behalf of the American Federation of Full Fashioned Hosiery Workers, went onto the picket line carrying two big signs, "Away With the Yellow Dog Contract" and "Join the American Federation of Labor."

Budenz had previously written to Judge Russell C. Stewart announcing that he proposed to violate the injunction which prohibits anyone from denouncing the infamous yellow dog in Nazareth. Budenz appealed to the strikebrakers as they came out of the mill to join the union and disregard the yellow dog contracts they have been forced to sign.

Two burly assistant county detectives promptly bundled Budenz into an auto and hauled him off to Bethlehem to the office of the District Attorney Russell Mauen. The district attorney questioned the labor man at some length and finally decided that no offense had been committed and released him. It was stated, however, that the facts in the case will be submitted to Judge Stewart in case he wishes to act on the matter.

"This is most encouraging," said Budenz. "Apparently it is going to be permissible after all to tell workers how the trade union movement feels about the yellow dog document and that it should be ignored."

It is pointed out that the Nazareth hosiery workers were repeatedly arrested and thrown into jail for doing less than Budenz did. The pickets were arrested and fined so frequently that the union finally had to give up active picketing because of the heavy expense this involved. Budenz talked to the strikebreakers. The strikers did not even do that—they merely walked up and down with picket arm bands on their clothes.

Apparently the county authorities in Northampton county don't want to give the strike any more publicity if they can help it. The political fight in Pennsylvania is looming and the whole situation is so confused that no one just knows where he fits. Gifford Pinchot, who won the republican gubernatorial nomination, was most outspoken in denouncing injunctions and the conduct of the authorities toward the Kraemer hosiery strikers in Nazareth.

NEW YORK EMPLOYMENT DROPS TO LOWER LEVEL

New York.—The index number of factory employment in this state dropped in June to 86.7, the lowest point ever recorded, according to Miss Frances Perkins, state industrial commissioner.

The number of workers were nearly 2 per cent less in June than in May, the statement said, and the years 1921 and 1924 are the only other years when the decreases from May to June were as great as this year.

Then there was the wife who liked to have breakfast in bed, but her husband never got in in time to serve it.

For Progressive Legislation and Fair Play in Industry

To the Readers of The Labor World:

It is my earnest desire to be the next State Senator from this County. I solicit your support.

If elected I pledge my word to give all those interested in legislation a full hearing. I shall seek advice and help from all sources.

Further, I expect to vote for and advocate progressive measures. I have a liberal attitude toward laws which will better industrial conditions and make for fair play in industry.

These are my promises and I expect to fulfill them. I am free to do so, as I am under no obligation to any organization or other interest.

Richard Hassall, census supervisor at St. Louis, Mo., has announced that St. Louis has 27,669 unemployed, or 3½ per cent of the announced population of 818,252. This includes persons able to work and looking for a job, but does not include those temporarily laid off because of business depression. Trade unionists contend that these last should be included in any unemployment totals, as there is no assurance that they will get back their jobs.

Cheap Women Workers Resented by Editors

Birmingham. — Influential southern newspapers are not sympathetic to the advertising campaign of local business men that this city has 106,000 unemployed females 10 years of age and over who will work for low wages.

Business men declared that pay of $10 to $15 a week "would prove attractive to these women and girls, many of whom could be hired at even a lower rate."

The Houston (Tex.) Post calls this "undesirable advertising" and suggests that the quicker it is stopped the less trouble there will be in the future.

The Chattanooga News says that the term "reservoir" of cheap women in the south should be changed to "abatoir."

Trade unionists remind Birmingham business men of the experience of Elizabethton, Gadsden, Huntsville, and other cheap-labor towns which have had disastrous experiences with the anti-union shop.

BRITISS IDLE LIST UP.

London, England.—The number of British unemployed last week increased 49,925, to 1,933,500. This is the highest figure since June, 1921, when the total was 2,147,400.

Contract Breakers Refused Court Aid

New York.—Federal Judge Bondy ruled that Paul J. Morrin, president International Association of Structural Iron Workers, and other officials are not guilty of violating an injunction.

The complainants are members of Structural Steel Board of Trade, which reached an agreement with the union, and then violated the contract.

The injunction was issued several months ago and prohibits the union from even orally stating to any architect or prospective builder that these unionists will not work under non-union conditions.

In refusing to punish the unionists for alleged contempt, Judge Bondy said the unionists attempted to compel Starret Brothers to keep their promise to use union structural iron workers on the Empire State building and to keep their promise to compel Post & McCord to use union iron workers exclusively on the building or to relinquish their contract.

"This does not violate the order which enjoins the respondents from inducing or attempting to induce owners or contractors not to subcontract with the parties plaintiff in the injunction suit," said Judge Bondy.

"The coercive action has been taken by the respondents to compel compliance with a promise," said the court.

HUGE OIL PROFITS MAKE NEW RECORD

New York.—Profits of leading oil companies in the Standard Oil group, during the eight-year period from 1921 to 1929, stagger the imagination.

These concerns are now striving to unite and limit output that further profits may be assured.

Dividend payments to stockholders of these concerns in the eight years totaled $1,157,000,000, while surplus increased more than $20,000,000. Standard Oil company of New Jersey is leader in these remarkable profits. During the eight years this concern issued $22,000,000 in cash dividends and $393,000,000 in stock dividends.

Pearl H. Chivington

Candidate For County Register

Election Thursday, August 7th

Commend Honesty and Efficiency in Office

Official and authoritative sources have made record of the fact that Pearl Chivington has conducted the office of County Register with efficiency, and as the County Auditor has stated it:

"All her records are kept with consistent, scrupulous accuracy."

In view of this enviable record in public office, we, the undersigned, recommend to the voters of Hamilton County Mrs. Chivington's candidacy, and urge all who wish to commend honesty and efficiency in office to vote for her in the August election.

J. MITT PAYNE

FOR THE Lower House

Below are a few reasons why J. Mitt Payne should and will be one of the three Representatives in the Lower House at the next session of the Legislature:

He has spent his entire life in Chattanooga, and has builded an enviable reputation for honesty, integrity and ability.

His experience in the office of City Treasurer has given him an insight into the operation of the city government, and the needs of the citizenship in regard to governmental matters.

As a member of the County Highway Commission he has familiarized himself with county affairs, and the problems of the citizens of the district outside the city of Chattanooga.

His long association with and friendship for laboring men assures a sympathetic interest in their legislative program.

He is not going to the Legislature as a representative of any client or clique, nor is he going for the purpose of paying any political debt, but he merely desires to serve the people among whom he has spent his life.

You will never regret a vote for

J. Mitt Payne

Much Can Be Done to Stabilize Unemployment, Employers Show

(By International Labor News Service.)

Albany, N. Y., July 17.—That thoughtful and wise employers can, and do, modify the rigors of unemployment in their administration of industrial affairs is shown in the report on stabilization of employment in the June number of the Industrial Bulletin, issued by the industrial commissioner of the state of New York.

Gov. Roosevelt appointed a committee last March to consider plans for stabilizing employment. One of its first efforts was to determine what methods, if any, were being employed by New York employers to reduce fluctuations of employment. Through the co-operation of the state department of labor, form letters of inquiry were sent out in April to about 1,900 firms, to which 598 replies were received. Two hundred and ninety-two of these, or about half, reported efforts to stabilize employment. Two hundred and ten of these were using one plan only, 62 of them were working with three plans, and 12 of them were using three methods.

One method was that of readjusting the schedules, so that the work was divided evenly among the employes, either by cutting the time per day or per week, or by alternating shifts. This holds the organization of the concern intact, temporarily, until business becomes more favorable, and gives some income to each of them.

A second method is that of manufacturing for stock. This is especially feasible where the product is a standardized one, and the demand is more or less seasonal.

A third method is that of transferring employes from their regular positions, during slack times, to any positions which may be available about the plant.

Nine companies resorted to price cutting on their products in order to get business enough to maintain the regular force on the pay roll.

Surplus production, ahead of orders, if carried out on carefully made estimates of future trade, while it involved the securing of additional capital to carry the material and labor investment, was compensated to some extent by the maintaining of the trained force intact.

Another effort has been made by some concerns, in the way of research to discover what could be done to even up the process of seasonal production by adding some supplementary product to their line—a novelty of some kind.

One concern went so far as to find places in other industries for its employes, when compelled to lay them off.

The report emphasizes the "great development of the sense of social responsibility among employers."

Sarah Ruth Frazier

for Re-Election to the Legislature

TO THE READERS OF THE LABOR WORLD:

I am asking the voters of Hamilton County for another term in the State Legislature.

I have served one term, and respectfully call to your attention some of the measures which I favored and some of those I opposed, and state my intentions if I am re-elected:

As a member of the 1927 General Assembly I supported all Labor Legislation proposed in that body.

Introduced the first resolution for the protection of coal miners in the state. As a result of this resolution a new mining law was later enacted.

I was author of a Confederate pension bill in the Legislature of 1927. I approve of any measures or appropriations for the relief of our World War Veterans, to which World War Veterans, to whom we owe so much.

I voted for all welfare measures in the Legislature of 1927.

I introduced a bill to place one woman on every county school board in the state.

If re-elected, I will support all legislation for the relief or cure of tuberculosis.

The state institutions, manual training school, institute for the blind, deaf and dumb, should be kept up to the highest standards.

I voted for all measures in the interest of the people, and if re-elected will do the same again.

I am deeply sensible of the honor conferred upon me by the people of Hamilton County in electing me to the 1927 Legislature, and if returned I will do my best to merit their confidence.

In 1922 I was vice-chairman of Hamilton County Democratic Executive Committee, and rendered all service of which I was capable.

SARAH RUTH FRAZIER.

Labor Backs Campaign Against Arson in Boston

Over-Insurance Charged as One Cause of Undue Hazard—Millions Must Be Spent for Repairs.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Boston, July 31.—Boston, on the initiative of Mayor James M. Curley, has opened a campaign to eliminate arson hazards and to secure substantial reductions in fire insurance rates.

This campaign has the full support of the Boston Central Labor union, which is represented on the mayor's committee to eliminate arson hazards by Harry P. Grages, secretary and business representative.

Mayor Curley contends that many buildings create an arson hazard in that the chimneys are defective, the electric wiring is in great need of repair, and the basements are so built that once a fire starts the entire neighborhood is in great danger.

The principal arson hazards are the practice of the fire insurance companies of issuing fire insurance policies on these buildings for many times the present value of the building, thus insuring a substantial profit to the unscrupulous.

Mayor Curley contended that sprinklers should be installed, the buildings, whether they be factories or homes, should be placed in proper and habitable condition and the insurance companies forced to issue fire insurance policies for not more than the value of the buildings or contents.

To carry out this program it will be necessary, according to Michael J. O'Donnell, chairman of the Boston Central Labor union committee on fire insurance, to spend millions of dollars in repair work alone. In many cases buildings will have to be torn down altogether.

The success of this program is eagerly awaited by the officers of the building trades unions of Boston as it will provide employment for thousands of building trades workers who are unable to secure employment.

Mayor Curley estimates that he will be able to force a reduction in fire insurance rates within the next year of at least fifty per cent on all types of buildings and contents.

Chicago Protests Federal Wage Cut on Hospital

Veterans' Bureau Job Facts Laid Before Hoover—U. S. Employs Men at Cut Rates on Same Job Where Union Scale Men Work.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Chicago, July 31.—President Hoover's intercession has been asked to prevent wage cutting by contractors on the Edward Hines, Jr., memorial hospital, a veteran's bureau operation. Labor charges that rates 45 cents an hour lower than the union rate are being paid to workers directly employed by the government.

The situation faced here has been faced repeatedly on government work in the east. A bill to correct such situations, introduced in the congress just adjourned by Representative Sproul of this city, was never brought to a vote, though it received a unanimously favorable committee report.

E. M. Craig, executive secretary of the Building Construction Employers' association, made the appeal to President Hoover. Based on experiences in other sections, trade unionists expect no relief through executive action.

J. W. O'Leary, supervising the work for the veterans' bureau, is reported employing workers on one portion of the hospital, at cut rates. The workers under O'Leary, hired by federal agents, are paid at the following rates: Skilled mechanics, $1.25 per hour; common labor, 50 cents an hour. The union rate for the skilled mechanics involved is $1.70 an hour and for common labor 97½ cents an hour.

"Chicago building trades union representatives called my attention to the matter," said Mr. Craig.

On sections F and G of the same hospital union men are at work for Contractor J. McHugh & Son, and are working at the union rate under a union agreement.

Craig told the president the action of the veterans' bureau tended to upset the local economic structure. He said that when he attended the Hoover unemployment conference as head of the American Construction council the employers there agreed not to reduce wages.

He—I'm not surprised.

New Southern Record Made in Huntsville

Huntsville, Ala.—The A. F. of L. southern organizing campaign committee made another record when it staged the first labor mass meeting ever held in this city. More than 2,000 persons were present.

Trade union speakers presented the aims of the A. F. of L. and advocated the short work week as a major remedy for unemployment.

Organization work in this area has made remarkable progress during the last six weeks. A union of textile workers has 4,000 members and other crafts are making proportionate gains. A central labor union is being formed.

The anti-union policy of employers was long supported by business men, who are now favorable to trade unionism. Their pocketbooks have been affected and they declare they are "fed up on low-wage prosperity."

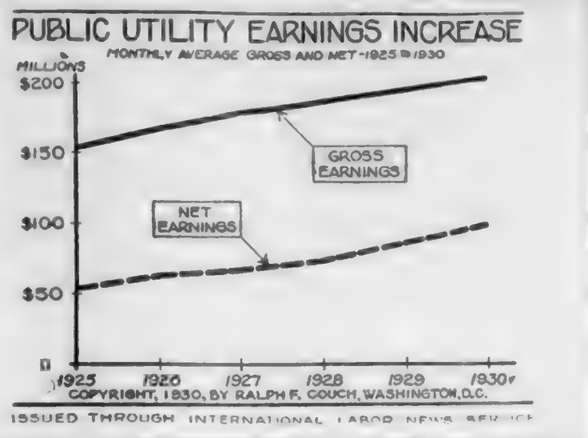
UTILITIES INCOME GROWS TO AMAZING TOTAL BUT RATE OF ANNUAL GAIN SLOWS FOR 1930

95 CONCERNS REPORT, SHOWING NET PROFIT

In 1929 Net Income Was 45 Per Cent. of Gross and Never Fell Below 30—Labor's Share Computed at 27 Per Cent.



Washington, July 31.—A statement from the department of commerce, giving the gross and net earnings of the ninety-five principal concerns operating public utilities in the United States, furnishes figures that are simply staggering in their indication of the extent of these earnings, especially during a period of depression. The figures are given so as to show the average monthly increase in income during the years 1925 to 1930, inclusive.

Perhaps the principal correlative fact to be kept in mind considering these returns is the fact that these concerns are not embarrassed by any accumulation of surplus product which has to be sold and used before the demand for more production is effective. Their product is all disposed of at the close of every twenty-four hours of operation. Their accounts are notoriously on a cash basis. And the end of each month is a real point of financial balancing with these companies, so far as their production and sale of product is concerned.

Bearing this in mind, and putting their monthly net income into the form of an annual total for each year, for more complete visualizing, we have the following table:

Year	Total Annual Net Income	Increase Over Previous Year
1925	$ 636,000,000	.....
1926	720,000,000	$84,000,000
1927	796,800,000	76,800,000
1928	870,000,000	83,200,000
1929	1,028,400,000	158,400,000
1930	1,069,200,000	40,800,000

Total net income during period, $5,120,400,000.

These figures cover the operations of the principal concerns operating gas, electric light, heat, power, traction and water services in all parts of the country.

When it is realized that in 1922 (the latest year for which figures are available) the total properties of such concerns amounted to a total of 9,468 millions, it is apparent that a considerable part of the expansion of the electric light and power business which has gone on during this period has been made possible by the earnings of the business.

Doubtless it is also a partial explanation of the fact that at least one of these concerns, Electric Bond & Share, has been reaching out to South America, and to Bombay, India, and adding these fields of operations to its territory.

Comparison of net earnings with gross earnings reveals the fact that the net earnings have not fallen below 30 per cent. of the gross, and in 1929 the net earnings were 45 per cent. of the gross earnings.

Labor's share of the realized income from private electric light and power plants in the past has been about 27 per cent. and there has recently developed a tendency to reduce this—doubtless due to some extent to the increasing mechanization of the industry.

These are the utilities, the use of which every day is an absolute essential to the maintenance of our present method of civilized living. That is why, even in the presence of an economic crisis, the net income of these industries in 1930 can exceed that of the previous year by almost 41 millions of dollars.

"DOES NOT WANT TO BE THE GARNISHEE MAN"

Why the Printers Indorsed FINNEY CARTER

A Plain Statement of Fact by Chattanooga Typographical Union, No. 89.

TO THE READERS OF THE LABOR WORLD:

Indorsement of candidates for political office has never been the policy of Chattanooga Typographical Union.

In the election to be held Aug. 7, however, Finney T. Carter, a member of this organization, will seek a position as member of the County Court, and we deem it proper to point out to our brother trades unionists some of the reasons why we believe he should receive the support of all good citizens.

By unanimous order of the members present at last Sunday's meeting, the following is submitted:

He is frank, fearless and capable;

He is unalterably opposed to the iniquitous practice known as "fee-g r a b b g i n g," and is pledged not to open an office;

He is independent, and his voice and vote in the County Court will be guided only by his conception of the taxpayers' desire;

He established and edited The Labor World;

He has given a quarter-century of competent, untiring service to this organization and the Labor Movement as a whole;

He served three terms as President of Chattanooga Trades and Labor Council;

He is now serving his eighth term as President of his local Union;

He has been a citizen of this community for more than 25 years.

For the above and other reasons, this union, at its regular monthly session Sunday, July 6, 1930, indorsed the candidacy of Finney T. Carter for a member of the County Court.

ONLY 1 HILL STORE CLOSED PAST WEEK

So far as could be learned, only one local Hill chain store was closed last week, report reaching The Labor World that the unit located on North Market street displays the now familiar placard, "Moved!"

The Labor World has been promised a check-up on the large number of branches closed by the Nashville chain concern since the "big boss" decreed from the capital that old and faithful Chattanooga employes were not wanted any longer, but to date this data has not been received.

Labor World readers will doubtless realize, however, that this check-up is no easy task, as the "Moved" signs are covering a wide territory locally.

CIRCLE CLUB OUTING POSTPONED 2 WEEKS

Annual picnic outing of Circle Club, scheduled to be held next Monday night, has been postponed until Aug. 18, according to announcement Thursday by President W. L. Gardner.

Mr. Gardner said that, owing to unusual interest being shown in the political campaigns, officers of the club had decided postponement would be advisable.

The outing will probably be held at Lake Winnepesaukah, he said.

These annual social get-togethers have become increasingly popular, and are enjoyed by practically all the club members and their families.

A well-known business man took his family and drove up through the east, got to New York and thought they would take the children to the Bronx zoo, asking direction some one put them on the wrong car. A lady aboard kindly told them that they were on the wrong car, and advised them to get off at the next stop, and take the following car. When the car stopped he grabbed the two boys and jumped off, while his wife stopped a moment to thank the lady and when she turned around the door was closed in her face and was carried on. Her husband and boys stood on the platform, paralyzed. A gentleman offered his services and after some hurried telephoning ahead the family was finally reunited. Such is life in a big city.

Green Says Wages Best Aid in Slump

Montreal.—"For the first time in cyclical unemployment our general wage structure has not been assailed," said Wm. Green, president of the A. F. of L., in an address before the convention International Brotherhood of Stationary Firemen and Oilers.

"We have preserved our standards during this distressing period," said Mr. Green. "Any reduction in purchasing power which follows a reduction in wages would be injurious not only to the great mass of the people but tothe whole of society. If we are to be brought out of the present industrial depression in a reasonable length of time, we must maintain the purchasing power of the people."

President Green challenged the theory of a certain school of economists that recurring periods of unemployment are necessary and inevitable.

"To admit that," he said, "is to admit that we are incapable of dealing with unemployment. Such an admission would present a most gloomy picture to coming generations."

The trade union executive declared that women must not be sacrificed on the altar of commercialism.

"Men must earn an income annually to protect their women folk and to keep their families in comfort," he said.

Franklin, Motor Chief, Vetoes All Wage Cuts

He Wires to Printers' Ink That Corporations Should Bear "Burden of Temporary Slowness"—"Concealed Cuts."

New York City, July 31.—"I have not reduced wages nor salaries and do not intend to." That was the terse answer of H. H. Franklin, of the Franklin Automobile Company, wired to Printers' Ink in response to a wire from Printers' Ink asking his position. "Corporations rather than employes should bear the burden of temporary slowness in business," said Franklin's wire. "Recovery will be quicker and net results much better."

Printers' Ink says that in addition to the Chrysler salary cut there have been many "concealed cuts" in the motor industry. "A common practice has been to pay only five days' salary for the short week," the magazine says editorially. "The ten-day shutdown at the Ford plant cost each employe almost $80 for his enforced vacation."

But the magazine, after careful checking up, adds, "Generally speaking, no general rush to cut salaries or wages has followed the Chrysler announcement."

George W. Chamlee Jr.

Candidate for the Legislature

We are authorized to announce George W. Chamlee, Jr., as a candidate for one of the three places in the Lower House of the Legislature to be voted for in the Democratic Primary August 7, 1930.

Mr. Chamlee's record has been fair to organized labor, and he promises that in the future he will give all matters coming before him for consideration, that same careful consideration that he has done in the past. He says he has no friends to reward or enemies to punish, but will be guided by the best interest of the people and try to promote the welfare of Hamilton County in all his official acts. He says that he will seek the advice of the people on all matters and try to promote the best interest of the County in all matters of legislation coming up for his consideration.

He will appreciate the vote and influence of all voters in the primary election.

lation of the constitution of Tennessee. The commander of the militia acted as a strike-breaking agent, and many forms of oppression were practiced by the soldiers to coerce and browbeat these workers who had rebelled against low wages and long hours. All this was done in the interest of foreign-owned corporations.

Since his incumbency of the office of governor he has been surrounded by a crowd of political buccaneers who know what they want.

Workers of Tennessee, do not forget Elizabethton. Go to the polls on August 7 and vote for Hon. L. E. Gwinn and consign Gov. Horton to political oblivion.

On the record that Cordell Hull made as a member of congress he received the endorsement of the sixteen standard railroad organizations, the national legislative representatives of the transportation brotherhoods and the legislative representatives of the American Federation of Labor.

Hon. Andrew L. Todd has served as a member of both the senate and the house of representatives in the general assembly of Tennessee. He has served as speaker of the senate and house. As a member of both the senate and the house, his record was for the most part favorable to the corporate interests and against labor legislation.

We call upon the organized workers and their friends to vote and work for Cordell Hull as the democratic nominee for United States senator.

Workers of Tennessee, do not be deceived by statements of individuals claiming to represent organized labor, who have consistently voted for and supported enemies of labor. The non-partisan political campaign committee of the Tennessee Federation of Labor and the railroad brotherhoods is alone authorized to speak in an official capacity for organized labor in Tennessee.

obvious it is ridiculous to talk about it. If that crew of buccaneers stays in power for another term there is no telling what will happen.

"If Caldwell took his $12,000,000 out of the bank he couldn't pay the debts of the highway commission. The overhead expense in connection with Horton's road-building program is tremendous. If the present road-building system is continued it will become necessary to pass some other kind of tax to pay for it."

Discussing the legislative record of Senator L. E. Gwinn whose brilliant fight against seemingly overwhelming obstacles in his race for governor has been the sensation of the decade in Tennessee politics, Mr. Reid said:

GWINN FOUGHT ACT FAVORING UTILITIES.

"In 1919 Mr. Gwinn almost alone on the floor of the legislature and for nearly a whole day fought the utility act.

"Gwinn is a man of intelligence, [illegible]. He has the reputation of winning his cases. There is not a better lawyer in West Tennes[illegible] Regardless of [illegible], I don't think [illegible] to the other [illegible] Henry [illegible].

[illegible] reasons for believing [illegible], Mr. Reid said.

[illegible] Horton a 25,000 majority in Shelby county, but he [illegible]. The people in Memphis are disgusted. Davidson county is going for Gwinn. Have you ever had a neighbor who kept a pig pen? If you have, you know how obnoxious a pig pen is. The people in Nashville, with the present administration under their noses, feel just the same way as a man whose neighbor keeps a pig pen."

In the race for the democratic nomination for the United States senate, long term, the non-partisan campaign committee has indorsed Cordell Hull, at present congressman from the fourth Tennesse district. Mr. Hull was indorsed, following strong recommendation from the A. F. of L. and railway brotherhood officials at the national capital.

Discussing his preference of Hull to Todd, Mr. Reid said that "Hull has a wonderful voting record for organized labor."

"I am sure Hull will be elected and then we will have a man we can depend on," he said.

Mr. Reid ridiculed claims of Andrew L. Todd, who is opposing Hull for the nomination for the long term in the senate, that he (Todd) had been friendly to the laboring people while serving in the senate legislature. Todd was described as being corporation controlled in his career as a member of the legislature. Concluding Mr. Reid said:

"Hull comes from a district where organized labor is not particularly strong, but in spite of that he did all he could for us."

Paul J. Aymon, president of the Tennessee Federation of Labor, who is well known to the trades unionists of this city, his home, denounced in scathing terms the action of Gov. Horton in illegally using the armed forces of the state as a strike-breaking agency at Elizabethton. Referring to the Elizabethton outrage, Mr. Aymon said:

"If the militia had only protected property that would have been not so bad. But it didn't only do that. The militiamen went out fifteen miles and brought people in. They were nothing more or less than strikebreakers."

Mr. Aymon declared that Gen. Caswell Boyd, commanding the militia, had been guilty of misconduct in handling the Elizabethton assignment.

GIRL RUN OVER BY MILITIA TRUCK.

"I heard a number of things about Gen. Boyd, but I am not going to tell about them for I did not see them. But I did see this:

"A little girl who did not weigh more than ninety pounds got in front of a militia truck to try to get it to stop. Gen. Boyd told the driver: 'Run over her.' The driver started the truck and the little girl was dragged about fifteen yards. Why couldn't he have reached down and picked that little girl up in his arms and put her on the side of the road? Or why couldn't he have ordered one of his men to do that? There were nearly twenty militiamen around him.

"Now the other day Gov. Horton presented Gen. Boyd with an automobile for service rendered. What are you going to say about that?"

David Hanly, legislative chairman of the Tennessee Federation of Labor for a number of years, denounced the official acts of Gov. Horton in no uncertain terms.

MILL WORKERS LOSE JOBS FOR JOINING UNION

Left—A mother and daughter, Proximity mill workers, evicted from their home with the furniture in the street, Greensboro, N. C., because they joined the union.

Right—A Proximity mill worker, his wife and two children, pay the penalty for exercising their inalienable right of joining an association of their fellow workers at Greensboro, N. C.

Birmingham, Ala., July 31.—For exercising their inalienable right of joining an association of their fellow workers, a number of employes of the Proximity mills of Greensboro, N. C., have not only been discharged from their jobs, but they have been evicted from their homes, their household effects being set out on the street. The action of the mill owners has aroused a storm of protest and the discrimination shown against those who exercised their constitutional perogative in joining an association of their fellow workers is being condemned on all sides.

J. Mitt Payne.

Answered "Yes" to 1, 2, 3, 4, 8, 9, 10 and 11.

Comment: You will notice that I have answered questions 1, 2, 3, 4, 8, 9, 10 and 11 with the word "Yes." As to questions 5, 6, and 7, I would not like to answer these questions without knowing something more definite in regard to them.

Question 5. I do not see how it would be practicable to include all women under this head, as we all know that nurses and many other vocations require that they work at night. With some exceptions I would be in favor of this law.

As to Question 6, I think in some cases, especially where the car line is not paying and the travel is very light, it is not right and proper or necessary to have more than one man on the street car. Of course, where the line is paying and passenger service is heavy, then I should think it is right and proper to the public that the street car company be required to give the public the very best service possible by having two men on the cars.

As to Question 7, I do not believe in the injunctions that have been issued in the past for the protection of manufacturers for the purpose of winning a strike. However, I do think it right and proper that any person is entitled to have his property protected from damages that sometimes take place where there is a strike on.

I want to make myself plain on these questions, as I am not in the habit of making any wild promises. If I am elected to the legislature I expect to carry out all the pledges I have made and I do not want it misunderstood after I get over there that I had promised a thing and not be able to stand by it. If I am a member of the next legislature I will be glad to co-operate with your legislative committee and assist them in any matter that I can.

George W. Poague.

Comment: I was a member of the Knights of Labor. I carry an American seaman's passport, and belong to the miners' union. It was through my hard work that the wash room bill was passed in 1921 in the senate.

S. B. Smith.

Answered "yes" to 2, 4, 5, 9 and 10.

1. In my opinion our compensation law is not up to the laws of other states. I have not studied the commission method of handling, but will give any amendment my best consideration. I shall study the methods of other states and give my support to any amendment which is progressive and just.

3. I will favor this act if in my opinion the state can afford it.

6. Yes: I think public safety requires it.

7. I do not pledge myself to favor any bill brought up along this line. I do think the law should be changed to give fair, impartial and quick hearings in matters of this nature.

8. Frankly, I do not know enough about this problem to give a fair answer. To me it is a big problem, and will say I will give my best thought to it and try and help any measure which seems to be fair.

11. This is a very broad question. In answering it, will state that many of my friends are of this class, and I will make every honest effort to give them a fair deal on any piece of legislation which may be brought before me.

W. A. Wilkerson.

1. The amendments that you suggest seem to be procedural only. If the ends and aims of the workmen's compensation law would be better served by these amendments, without too great an increase in the cost of administration, I see no reason why such amendments should not be adopted.

2. At the present time I am unfamiliar with the provisions of the local child labor laws, and also with the standard set by the children's bureau of the United States department of labor. I, therefore, cannot give you an intelligent answer to this question. I might say, however, that, in my opinion, the standard set by the United States department of labor has been arrived at after an exhaustive study and is no doubt beneficial.

3. On principles of economics I would generally favor any law which decreased the net cost to the consumer. If this law would have this effect, without being too burdensome, I see no reason why it would not be of benefit to the people of the state.

4. My immediate reaction to this question is that, as a general movement, I do not look with favor upon the employment of women in industry generally and would be inclined to favor any law whose end sought to reduce such employment. There, of course, might be special industries and special situations where the above general statement would not apply.

5. My answer to this question is the same as No. 4.

6. If such a law would have the effect of compelling the users of street cars to pay a higher price for transportation without receiving corresponding benefits in service I would not favor the one-man street car law.

7. Certainly the issuance of labor injunctions should not be left to the caprice of a single judge.

8. I do not know how serious this competition now is. I would favor a law restricting such competition in the event it reached any proportions.

9. If the risk incurred by the small loan companies does not justify the 42 per cent rate I would favor repealing this law. Without investigation, my immediate reaction is that 42 per cent seems pretty high.

10. In my opinion garnishment exemptions should be on a sliding scale, allowing higher exemptions in direct proportion to the number of dependents.

11. Yes.

Comment: I have stated to every one who has asked me, and will now state to you, that if my election depends upon pre-election promises I do not care to go. I am not promising any group, labor or otherwise, that I will favor any specific legislation. It would be very foolish for me to make definite promises when my entire platform is based upon my statement and my intention to pass upon legislation solely upon its merits. You must realize that I have not made a thorough investigation of any legislation at the present time. While, of course, I have given some thought to legislation which might be proposed, a more thorough investigation would disclose facts and considerations, which are not now presented to my mind. My final decision upon any proposed legislation will be reserved until the final vote is cast. When I say that facts and considerations may arise which I do not now have in mind, I mean facts and considerations relative to the merits of the legislation and not facts and considerations of political expediency.

The report will be discussed by the trade union convention in September and by the labor party meeting in October.

DIRECTOR

GEORGE FORBES

Organized labor was given signal recognition by the Chattanooga Chamber of Commerce Tuesday, when George Forbes, delegate in the chamber from Chattanooga Trades and Labor council, was named a member of the board of directors of the civic body.

Mr. Forbes has a long and active career in the local and state labor movement and in civic affairs, and as a booster for each has rendered valuable service.

His trade union activities include several terms as president of his own organization, the Postal Clerks, three terms as president of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council, and he has held many other important posts in various activities of the local labor movement. He recently completed a term as president of the state association of Postal Clerks, and had served as a vice-president of the Tennessee Federation of Labor.

As president of the Circle club and in other civic positions his worth has been demonstrated, and the Chattanooga Chamber of Commerce is to be congratulated upon his acceptance of the position as a director of that body.

Labor to Make Injunction Big Campaign Issue

A. F. of L. Head Tells Stereotypers Candidates Who Favored Parker Will Be Opposed With All Labor's Strength.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Indianapolis, Ind., July 31.—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, sounded the keynote of organized labor for the coming Indiana election campaign in an address before the twenty-ninth annual convention of the International Stereotypers and Electrotypers' union here.

"In this campaign the American Federation of Labor is coming into Indiana. We will confront the candidates with their stand for Judge Parker's confirmation for the supreme court. Those who favored him will be opposed with all the strength of organized labor."

In an hour's talk he answered the critics of his regime as head of the federation. His critics have assailed alleged failure of the federation to take definite action in the south and its attitude towards striking coal miners in the east.

"The report of the A. F. of L. to the next convention wil show a decided gain in membership, despite the depression and adverse conditions. It will show we have carried trade unionism into the south and that it has reared there as a mighty force."

President Green demanded that trade unionists rally to the movement and support candidates at the polls this year who will vote for labor's anti-injunction bill in congress and for relief measures designed to minimize unemployment and to combat changing economic conditions due to supplanting of workers with machinery.

"We have been enjoined from free speech, free press, and from free assemblage," President Green declared. "It has become unbearable. There can be no group in the United States deprived of these rights if this union is to undure.

"Labor is paying a terrific and terrible toll for efficiency and economy when machines supplant the trained workers. We can point to the glass blowers, deprived of work by the bottle blowing machine, to the old-time telegraphers, to the musicians, now being supplanted by sound pictures and mechanical music, and to many others.

"This economic movement will continue, so this nation must solve the problem if every man who is a consumer is to be kept an active consumer."

CALIFORNIA CARPENTERS FIGHT WAGE DECREASES

Bakersfield, Cal.—The Bellar Construction company, of Los Angeles, recently secured a contract from the Fox West Coast Theatre corporation to build a theater in Bakersfield. The construction company took advantage of the unemployment situation and engaged carpenters for from $5 to $8, the local scale being $9 for eight hours, and established other anti-union working conditions. The carpenters' local union and the Kern County Labor council have placed both concerns on the unfair list.

CUT WAGES? NO! SO SAY DOZEN BIG EMPLOYERS

Industrial Leaders Declare High Pay Best.

PURCHASING POWER IS MOST IMPORTANT

"Wages Will Buy More Shoes and Automobiles Than Dividends."

(By International Labor News Service.)

New York City, Aug. 7.—Twelve big industrial leaders declare against wage cuts in an article written by Roy Dickinson, assistant editor and member of the Harding unemployment conference.

Extracts from the statements of the twelve employers follow:

George F. Johnson, president, Endicott Johnson Corporation—Reducing income of labor is not a remedy for business depression; It is a direct and contributing cause.

R. S. Shainwald, president, Paraffine Companies, Inc.—The Paraffine Companies, Inc., believes such reduction can and should be avoided.

C. R. Palmer, president, Cluett, Peabody & Co.—In my opinion, a general reduction of wages and salaries at this time is entirely unwarranted.

W. A. Sheaffer, president W. A. Sheaffer Pen Company—Believe it would be serious mistake to reduce wages.

A. R. Erskine, president, Studebaker Company—Have not even considered reducing wages or salaries.

Charles R. Hook, president, American Rolling Mill Company—Wage reductions "would, in our opinion, retard and not stimulate business."

"Virtuous, Not Vicious, Circle."

A. C. Loring, president, Pillsbury Flour Mills Company—The new spirit in industry starts a virtuous, and not a vicious, circle in motion.

Herbert V. Kohler, executive vice-president, Kohler Company—Kohler company is maintaining its organization and its wage scale.

Howard Coonley, president, Walworth Company—The Walworth company has no thought of reducing salaries or wages.

Harold C. Keith, president, George E. Keith Company—While our company has made no reductions * * * and contemplates none yet * * * conditions * * * might force such changes at a later time.

Arthur Roeder, president, Colorado Fuel and Iron Company—You probably remember Bob Ingersoll's reply when asked how he would improve the world. He said * * * he would make health dangerous instead of disease.

"Ten years ago," Dickinson writes, summing up the replies in Printers' Ink, "when I was a member of President Harding's unemployment conference run by Herbert Hoover, I wrote a minority report against wage cuts. I could get only one of the fifty members to sign it—the late Samuel Gompers. Then it was almost an axiom that wage cuts would bring back normal times.

"Today a new point of view prevails. Maintaining purchasing power at the source is the most important job in the country today, for wages buy more shoes and automobiles than dividends."

Lockhart Heads Stage Employes

Emmett Lockhart was named president of Local 140, Stage Employes, at the regular monthly meeting of that local last Sunday morning, with the following forming the remainder of the "official family:" John Carpenter, vice-president; H. L. Stebbins, recording secretary; Eb Carpenter, financial secretary; Fred Gillespie, sergeant-at-arms, and Carter Gillespie, business agent.

The new officers of Local 140 are all experienced trades unionists, and the affairs of the organization will be in good hands for the ensuing term.

THEATER EMPLOYES REFUSE WAGE CUTS

Seattle, Wash.—The Follies Theater company insisted that the moving picture operators, musicians, stage employes and janitors in its employ take an average wage reduction of $20 a week. The unions refused the cuts and placed the theater on the unfair list.

WILL WASTE PEACHES TO UPHOLD PRICES

Fresno, Cal.—Peach canners and growers favor letting this fruit rot on the trees that prices may be upheld. The crop is estimated at 439,000 tons, against 179,000 tons last year. If growers throw the 1930 crop on the market, prices will fall below the cost of production, it is claimed.

NOTICE!

Chattanooga Trades and Labor Council will meet Monday night at 7:30 o'clock, in regular session. All delegates are requested and expected to be present, as matters affecting every local union will come before the meeting for discussion.

Gorman Blames Disease Spread On Low Wages

Vice-Chairman of Organizing Campaign on Tour of All Centers, Compliments Employers Who See Unions' Value—Co-operation Pledged Where Friendly Relations Are Established.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Columbus, Ga., July 31.—Francis J. Gorman, vice-president of the United Textile Workers of America, and a member of the southern organization committee, addressed meetings in Union, S. C., and Augusta, Ga., on July 17 and 18, explaining the purposes and policies of the United Textile Workers of America and the American Federation of Labor in this campaign, and describing the progress being made in all parts of the south.

Vice-President Gorman explained the various methods being used by employers in different localities to stop the organization movement and complimented those employers who are not opposing the right of the workers to organize. He said there are a number of employers in the southern states who realize that the unionization of the workers is inevitable and necessary; that others are fighting it by firing the workers who join the union, while the Cone mills in Greensboro are not only firing the workers, but throwing their furniture out into the street.

Disease Increasing.

The speaker called attention to the fact that in a recent report published in North Carolina a large increase in pellegra and typhoid was recorded. Mr. Gorman charged hostile, anti-union employers with being responsible for the spread of disease. "While they profess great concern for the workers' health, their actions expose their hypocrisy," he said.

Mr. Gorman called upon all textile workers in the south to stay away from Danville, Va., and Greensboro, N. C., and to pay no attention to advertisements for help. "There are hundreds of unemployed textile workers in both of these places, and it is only another attempt of the unfair employer to use one worker against the other," he declared.

Gorman is making a survey of all textile unions in the south, from Virginia to Alabama. He addressed meetings here, at Huntsville, and other centers of Alabama. He will go to the Birmingham office of the American Federation of Labor, and report the conditions throughout the whole territory. He said that new members are joining the union in every state, local unions are being formed regularly and there is no doubt about the success of the campaign, "and this in face of a severe unemployment problem and curtailed operations."

Ready With Definite Plan.

Replying to a communication from a prominent employer in the south as to what the union was prepared to do if the employers should recognize the union. Mr. Gorman stated that the United Textile Workers of America was prepared to submit a definite proposition calling for a policy of co-operation with a concrete plan for cost reduction and waste elimination beneficial to employers and employes alike.

On the question of the hours of labor, he said that many employers now recognize, and have publicly expressed the opinion, that shorter hours are essential for the future success of the industry, and the preservation of the workers' health. In answer to an attack made on the labor movement by an anti-union magazine in North Carolina, advising employers not to concede the closed shop, Mr. Gorman said the organization was not seeking the closed shop, as there are many workers in the mills which the union could not accept on account of their known connection as spies for the company.

Jobless Increase; Unions Hold Wages

Edmonton, Alberta. — Unemployment in all trades and among laborers is very severe in the northwestern states and in western Canada, according to Carl E. Berg, organizer of the International Union of Hod Carriers, Building and Common Laborers, in commenting on information gained from an organizing tour through Montana, Odaho and Utah. No state effort is being put forward to cope with unemployment.

In some of the cities he visited Mr. Berg found that the closely-knit building trades organizations are able to retain high wages and good working conditions despite the unprecedented business depression.

UNEMPLOYMENT FAILS TO CHECK ORGANIZATION

Southern Drive Continues Fine Progress.

WAVE OF UNIONISM INCREASES ROLLS

Rayon Barons Pry Into Private Affairs of New and Old Employes.

By C. S. GARRISON

Birmingham, Ala., Aug. 7.—Despite the spectre of unemployment, which has been hovering over the textile industry of the south for many months, the wave of organization enthusiasm which has rolled over Dixie shows no abatement. In fact, it seems to be gathering impetus as the aims and policies of the American Federation of Labor are unfolded to the workers of the southland. Such is the observation of federation workers in their reports to the southern headquarters of the campaign.

Francis J. Gorman, international vice-president of the United Textile Workers of America, who has been making a tour of the southern textile fields, said local unions of textile workers recently established in various southern communities were making a steady gain in membership. Local unions in Danville, Va.; Columbus, Ga.; Augusta, Ga.; Huntsville, Ala.; Anniston and other centers are growing rapidly.

Mr. Gorman said the southern organization committee had opened up a new district for organization work. A special organizer will be established in some central point, perhaps at Anniston, Ala., who will have active charge of the work. The district will include territory in Alabama and down through Georgia to Augusta.

To House Evicted Workers.

The situation in Greensboro, N. C., where workers were discharged from their jobs and evicted from their homes because of their union affiliations, shows no improvement. The United Textile Workers of America is preparing to house the evicted workers in tents in Greensboro and give what assistance it can in the way of food.

Mr. Gorman said the United Textile Workers of America is preparing for a national convention to be held in New York in September. He said the convention would be of vast importance to the textile workers of the United States and Canada, and that the officials were making a special effort to secure adequate representation from the southern textile states.

The Bemberg and Glanzstoff mills at Elizabethton, Tenn., are now seeking to keep even a closer tab on their employes and those who wish employment in these mills. Workers employed and applicants for a job must fill out a questionnaire that delves into their most intimate personal actions.

Long String of Questions.

The questionnaire wants to know whether the worker or the applicant for a job owns his own home or whether he rents a company house or an "independent." How much rent he pays, or whether the applicant boards and how much board he pays. How far he has to come to work; how much it costs him; whether the applicant is married, single or separated; what church he attends; the size of his family; number of dependent members and number of working members; how many work in the plant and their names and the wages they earn. Also whether worker or applicant has group life insurance or health and accident insurance. The worker was informed that these questions must be fully answered and within five days so "our records would be complete and up to date."

Many of the workers resented the prying into their personal affairs, but apparently they must answer the questionnaire if they wish to hold their jobs.

President Approves Private Shoals Plan

Washington.—The president has committed himself to the private operation of Muscle Shoals plan, and declares he will veto the senate plan of government operation.

The president made this announcement in a letter to Congressman Reece, of Tennessee, who is seeking renomination. His opponent attacked him because of his opposition in the house to the Norris plan of government operation of Muscle Shoals, which has been approved by the senate.

The president wrote to Reece: "I am assured the senate plan cannot be passed in the house. Nor would I approve the plan, because it is not in the interests of Tennessee or the rest of the nation."

POSTMEN WALK 12 MILES.

Washington.—Letter carriers in fifteen of the largest cities walk 12 miles a day, reports the postoffice department. This 12 miles may be covered in one trip, or several, depending upon the length of the route, it was explained.

AILIN'

ANDREW G. LINN

A. G. Linn, secretary-treasurer of Chattanooga Typographical union, No. 89, since the memory of the present generation runneth not to the contrary, and who, with T. J. Davie and "Spike" Hennessey, organized the Typos some forty-five or fifty years ago, has been "under the weather" for the past few weeks, the illness confining him to his home at 505 Wyatt street.

Mr. Linn was able to attend the monthly meeting of No. 89 last Sunday afternoon, however, and reported for himself that he was feeling some better and expected to be in his usual good health and spirits shortly.

Speakers Emphasize Solid Success of the Southern Campaign

All Organized Trades Benefit to Some Extent by Big Union Drive, Conference at Bryn Mawr Hears.

By JOHN W. EDELMAN.

Bryn Mawr, Pa., July 31.—Even though many of those attending the conference held here on Sunday on "labor's drive in the south" lay prostrate in the shade of the beautiful trees on the college campus during the speeches, the record-breaking heat failed to mar one of the most successful meetings of its kind ever held in this state. The Philadelphia branch of the hosiery workers' union lent its amplifiers for the occasion, which enabled all those attending to pick the most shady spot available and yet hear every word spoken with the greatest ease.

Over 300 persons, including the students at the summer school, were present at this conference and listened attentively to a program which covered the entire subject in a most complete and comprehensive manner.

The fact was driven home by Thomas F. McMahon, president of the United Textile Workers of America; Miss Matilda Lindsay, southern organizer for the National Women's Trade Union League, and by Edward F. McGrady, speaking for the American Federation of Labor, that the union campaign in the south has been a success and that the labor movement is in this campaign to stay.

All Unions Benefit.

It was pointed out that probably never before in the history of American labor movement has so much interest been displayed in an organization drive during a period of acute economic depression as is the case in most of the southern states today. All trades have benefitted to some extent through this drive, McGrady said, and almost every union affiliated with the A. F. of L. will be able to show increased membership in the south as a result of the campaign. Miss Lindsay declared that if the textile mills should resume normal operation that there will be a veritable landslide toward unionism. At the present time many thousands of mill workers in the villages literally do not have enough money to join anything, Miss Lindsay declared. Southerners are more surprised and enthused at the results of the unionization campaign than anyone else, and public opinion is bound to veer from a hostile to a more intelligent attitude, she said.

President McMahon declared that the United Textile Workers now has dues-paying local unions in every textile area in the south and said the results of the drive far exceeded his expectations.

Consultation with Labor Urged.

In discussing the situation of the textile industry President McMahon stated that the union approved in a general way the program of the Cotton Textile Institute, but insisted that much better results could be obtained if the employes were consulted in the installation of any policy of curtailment. He said that he had proposed an alternative plan to the industry which would eliminate overproduction effectively. Complete scrapping of inefficient mills to an extent of 10 per cent of the local productive equipment of the industry is needed, he urged. The mill owners as a whole should pay the cost of this equipment to the present owners over a 10-year period.

The speeches of the five southern factory workers attending the summer school were vivid and forceful in their simple presentation of the facts of exploitation in these mills. The girls told of unsanitary working conditions, of wages ranging from a dollar a week to eight, ten and twelve dollars a week of 54 to 60 hours. The girls told of victimization because of union activities and of the narrowness of their lives in the smaller mill centers in the south. The earnest appeal for education and organization ran through all their talks and each registered deeply in the large audience.

Discusses Hosiery Trade Problems.

Edward F. Callaghan, organizer for the hosiery workers in the United Textile Workers, discussed the connection between the southern situation and the problem of the textile industry in the north. In outlining the recent economic policy of the full fashioned industry Callaghan pointed out how these newer textile manufacturers had made exactly the same mistakes that the cotton mill owners had made, unwise expansion and unrestricted and ruinous competition being the rule of the day in hosiery.

John W. Edelman and President John A. Phillips of the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor spoke briefly.

In outlining the legislative campaign of the federation, President Phillips stated that the wise measures of social legislation were absolutely necessary today to enable industry itself to face the drastic readjustments which are now a constant and almost every day feature of present-day economic life.

PRESIDENT TO ADDRESS MEET OF FEDERATION

Mr. Hoover Promises to Be Guest of Labor.

GREEN TALKS WITH CHIEF EXECUTIVE

Says Recent Conference Stabilized Wages and Working Conditions.

(Special Correspondence)

Washington, Aug. 6.—President Green, of the American Federation of Labor, called upon President Hoover at the White House today and extended him an invitation to attend and address the opening session of the fiftieth convention of the American Federation of Labor, which convenes in Boston on Oct. 6. President Hoover gave his assurance that he would accept the invitation and address the convention if it was possible for him to do so. He plans to attend and address the convention of the American Legion, which meets in Boston at the same time.

It was also explained to the president that the stabilizing effect of the conference of representatives of employers and employes which he convened at the White House, Nov. 21, is becoming more and more apparent. With some exceptions, the action taken at this conference has served to steady and maintain the wage and working standards which prevailed in industry prior to the period which marked the beginning of the unemployment situation.

President Hoover rendered a great service when he called this conference. Employers of labor who have maintained wage standards and working conditions during this long continued period of unemployment and depression have shown their faith in the value of high wages as an essential requirement to the maintenance of prosperity. Employers of labor who have maintained wage levels and have refused to reduce wages and who are striving to the utmost to bring about a return to normal conditions in prosperity through the payment and maintenance of high wages deserve to be commended. In like manner labor organizations and the representatives of labor are to be commended for the service they have rendered in maintaining co-operation and in preventing interruption and strife. Through this kind of co-operation and service we will ultimately bring about a return to normal conditions and overcome the evil of unemployment.

Sympathy With Bereaved Unionists

Widespread sympathy is expressed for the bereaved relatives of W. S. C. Rice, aged 78, who passed away at Erlanger hospital Monday night. Among the surviving relatives of Mr. Rice are two sons, "Harvey" and "Ed," the former an employe of the T. A. G. railroad and the latter of the Southern, and both active members of Lodge 1450, Machinists.

Six daughters survive Mr. Rice—Miss Kate Rice, Mrs. Ida Rice Ringland, Mrs. Polly Rice Martines, Mrs. Frank S. Shipp, Misses Julianne and Jack Rice. One brother and five grandchildren also survive.

Mr. Rice was a civil engineer, and a few years ago retired and spent some time at Cohutta, Ga. He returned to Chattanooga last summer, and was stricken some two weeks ago with a fatal illness.

Funeral services were held Thursday morning from the home, 747 Vine street, and the deceased gentleman was laid to rest in the family burial plot at Flint Springs, Tenn.

The Labor World joins with hundreds of friends in extending sincerest condolences to the bereaved relatives.

LABOR QUERIES

Q.—What is labor's slogan for the coming political campaign?

A.—"We will not vote for a candidate for congress who is opposed to a law prohibiting the issuance of injunctions in labor disputes."

* * *

Q.—When and where will the next convention of the Illinois Federation of Labor be held?

A.—At Springfield, beginning Monday, Sept. 15.

Q.—What is "idle money?"

A.—That is an expression sometimes used for out-of-work benefits paid by trade unions or public authorities to workers temporarily unemployed.

* * *

Q.—Is there a state federation of labor in every state?

A.—Yes.

Q.—How does labor regard the yellow dog contract, by which a worker promises not to join a trade union?

A.—The American Federation of Labor holds that such contracts are void as against public policy, that they are signed under duress and coercion, and that they have no place in this nation's democratic institutions.

What Next!

The latest development in the manufacture of leather from sea creatures is the utilization of skins of sea lions and hair seals and the intestines and mouth linings of whales. Leather made of the intestines of whale is very soft, resembles chamois or kid. The intestines of a 60-foot whale are about 75 feet long and when opened and laid out are about 18 inches wide.

Employers Cut Pay of Workers In New Orleans

Big Retail Stores Slash Salaries of Lower Paid Employes, as Manufacturers Operate on Part Time.

(By International Labor News Service.)

New Orleans, July 31.—Business continues its downward trend, unusual at this time of the year for this city. Reductions in salaries are a rule. The Maison Blanche company, one of the largest department stores in the south, has reduced salaries of all employes receiving $20 and over, 20 per cent; this was followed by the D. H. Holmes company, second largest establishment in the city, which cut 10 per cent salaries of all white collar workers who were lucky enough to receive $15 a week.

The Marks Isaacs company, not to be outdone, handed its underpaid help a 15 per cent cut.

Fully one-half of the wage earners of the city are now either working on a part-time basis or have suffered a reduction in wages. The Celotex company is operating with half of its peak of 1,200 men. The force of the company had been enlarged to 1,200 when the plant expanded. Accumulation of a surplus stock resulted when building activities throughout the country declined.

The mechanical force of Penick & Ford is working four days a week. The Asbestos Wood and Shingle company is employing sixty-two persons instead of the normal seventy-four. The Southern Cotton Oil company is employing 280 persons out of a normal 350.

The United States Industrial Alcohol company closed down early in July. The Maginnis Cotton Mills, whose highest pay envelope is $12 for a 64-hour week, has been closed for some time.

THE STATE PRIMARY

Hopes of thousands of citizens of Tennessee that the voters would repudiate Hortonism in the state were dashed Thursday when the results of the state primary became known. Returns at this writing were by no means complete, but reports from the country districts, supplemented by Crump county, assured the renomination of the governor by a large majority.

Local Gwinn supporters, however, will have much consolation in the fact that the West Tennessean piled up a splendid majority in Hamilton, and particularly in the city wards, where the labor vote is strongest, were the efforts of the machine unavailing. It will be cheering to these, also, to recall that Davidson and Knox came through with good margins in favor of Mr. Gwinn.

Mr. Arthur Bruce, Memphis business man, is apparently the nominee of the republican party, but whether he can command the support of the rank and file of his party in the November elections is, of course, a question which can only be answered by developments.

Impressive majority given the Hon. Cordell Hull is gratifying. Mr. Hull had the indorsement of national and state labor officials, his record in the national lawmaking body having been declared uniformly fair.

Brief service of Senator W. E. Brock also was approved by officials of the A. F. of L. and the transportation brotherhoods. His defeat of Senator John R. Neal was generally conceded early in the campaign.

The county legislative ticket, we believe, is good. Mr. John Chambliss, named state senator, is a newcomer in the political field, but his attitude toward legislation sought by the masses appears to be sympathetic, and the entire background of his campaign was builded upon promises to represent the people as a whole.

The lower house delegation, it appears at this time, will be composed of Mr. J. Mitt Payne, Mr. George W. Chamlee, Jr., and Mr. D. M. Coleman. The latter two have heretofore shown their fairness to the masses, and the former, although a newcomer in the field of legislators, has in other lines of endeavor indicated a sympathetic interest in the problems which confront the toilers of the state.

Organized labor, as a body, took no formal part in the county races, which resulted, without exception, in clean-cut victories for the democratic nominees.

TAKING CARE OF "THE BOYS."

The president of the Bethlehem Steel company, last year, received a bonus of $1,623,532.

This information was pried from officers of the company in a court suit that is intended to check merging this company with Youngstown Sheet and Tube company. It was shown that three vice-presidents, last year, received in excess of $375,000 apiece in bonuses. A group of Bethlehem executives received a total of $36,493,668 in bonuses from 1911 to 1929, inclusive. Stockholders of the company were unaware of these tremendous salaries until the information was forced from the company. The stockholders believed their president was paid $12,000 annually.

Even hard-boiled Wall street financiers question if any man is worth such a wage that would average $5,416 a day if the president worked 300 days in the year and took no holiday, nor winter trips to Palm Beach or summer trip to northern Europe. These financiers are plainly worried at the exposure that may cause stockholders to ask if this is the only thing that boards of directors do with their property.

The ease with which Bethlehem directors concealed this vast sum should open the eyes of workers who imagine that they are partners in the company plant when they buy a few shares of stock on the installment plan. Boards of directors are agents of the owners, stockholders—and yet we find more than $36,000,000 has been secretly handed out to a few insiders between 1911 and 1929.

This sort of bookkeeping could easily make a 100 per cent profit look like a streak of red on the wrong side of the ledger. This would be useful if wages were to be cut or a tax reduction campaign launched. If the Bethlehem directors can hand out $36,000,000 to a few insiders and pay their president a secret bonus of more than $1,600,000 without their stockholders' knowledge, isn't it fair to assume that additional "pay dirt" would be struck if the investigation were continued?

And isn't it fair to assume that Bethlehem is not the only concern that has perfected plans to hide profits?

HIGHER WAGES WILL BUY BREAD.

The American Bakers' association has launched a "buy-more-bread" movement. Wheat consumption will be increased 100,000,000 bushels a year, and the farmer and other groups will benefit, it is stated.

This is sound reasoning, but these bakers ignore the fact that consumption depends on income and that a low-wage worker is a poor customer. Many of these bread manufacturers oppose the Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International union and have forced wages to their lowest point. These employers could set a good example by recognizing the one force that battles for wages in this industry.

If workers have a decent wage it will not be necessary to launch advertising campaigns to increase business.

THE CHERRY TREE

Where with our Little Hatchet we tell the truth about many things, sometimes profoundly, sometimes flippantly, sometimes recklessly.

Which has the governmental system best fitted to carry out the will of the people, as expressed at the elections, Canada or the United States? Let's see:

Canada had an election July 28 and the new parliament and government takes office two weeks from the election. The United States will have an election next November but the new congress will not meet until a year from next December, unless called in special session. In other words, more than a year will intervene between the election of the new congress and its first meeting. In the meantime, the old congress, perhaps thoroughly discredited by the results of the election, will be making the nation's laws.

In the United States, defeated representatives and senators ("lame ducks") hold office for a considerable time—often long enough to do a lot of damage. In Canada, defeated members of parliament step out at once. There's no provision for "lame ducks." No wonder it is commonly said: "They do those things better across the border."

Under the photograph of a falling chimney in a Sunday newspaper appears the caption: "The 150-foot chimney of the old Erie county, N. Y., penitentiary crumbles under a charge of dynamite to make way for a playground."

Lack of playgrounds is a cause of crime. Children with no place to play but the streets in congested sections haven't a fair chance to grow up as honest and upright citizens. If a lot of penitentiaries were dynamited, as was the old Erie county institution, to make way for playgrounds, there very likely wouldn't be much need for places of punishment.

A dispatch in a Detroit newspaper recently told of a strike at the Fisher Body works, Flint, Mich. The strikers charged that they were not earning enough to live decently.

In an adjoining column of the same newspaper appeared a story saying that Frederick Fisher, of Fisher Body works, had just spent $1,500,000 for his new steam yacht, the Nakhoda, a ship 236 feet long and marvelously decorated; described as the last word in modern luxury and as Mr. Fisher's "pleasure boat."

Mr. Fisher can sail away from the scene of his triumph and his conflict, or the conflict of the workers who seek living wages and decent working conditions.

If this gentleman, sitting in the cool shade of awnings on deck, surrounded by his happy party, has even seen the interior of the dwellings of the workers who have made this wealth possible for him; if he has seen and looked with understanding eyes, then, to "if" again, if he is human, a flicker of doubt will pass through his mind. If he is human.

Many things have been claimed for prayer, but it remained for John E. Edgerton, head of the anti-union National Association of Manufacturers, to claim that prayer increases profits. Hear him:

"I am proud to say that the morning prayer exercises in my factory have had the finest economic effects. Workers are producing far more goods than before the prayer system was started some years ago. We have made it almost impossible for anyone but a Christian to get a job. We examine applicants for work to see if they have any dangerous ideas. We have been able by that process to keep our plant free from trouble."

That's making religion pay, with a vengeance. But what do the churches think of prayer to boost dividends? They have a fine opportunity to say something pretty searing about Mr. Edgerton's plan. Up to date they haven't taken advantage of the opportunity.

Working Girls, Save and Scrimp, And You'll Never Need Good Pay

This Seems to Be "Lesson" Taught by "Budgets" of Y. W. C. A. in New Orleans and Other Cities, Showing Young Women Can Exist Even When Receiving Near-Starvation Wages.

How little can a working girl live on? That is the way the question is still put by Y. W. C. A. workers and social service agencies.

From the many cities come reports of "budgets" fixing the amount a working girl must earn to provide the necessities of life.

Promulgation of a budget by the New Orleans Y. W. C. A. prompted inquiry in other cities, with the result that responses indicate clearly a general effort to cater to and thus encourage rock-bottom wages. The survey indicates that unorganized working girls have to live on incomes ranging from about $10 a week to a top figure of about $20 a week.

(By International Labor News Service.)

New Orleans, Aug. 7.—The Young Women's Christian association, sponsored by many of the good women of the city, whose husbands are members of Manufacturers' association, has made a survey in which it is learned that high wages are a "detriment" to the average working girl and that she can be content on a stipend. Figures are quoted to "prove" the statement.

If she does her own washing, wears 50-cent stockings and eats 25-cent lunches, a New Orleans working girl can live on $9.86 a week. The estimated budget is based on board and room prices at the Y. W. C. A., since the Y. W. C. A. home and the Louise home are the only places of their sort that are entirely self-supporting.

In itemized form it includes the following necessary expenditures: Room and two meals at the "Y" (four or five girls to a room), $5.25 a week. Lunch, 25 cents per day; $1.50 a week. Clothing (estimated on an absolute necessity basis), $1.27 a week. Car fare, 84 cents a week. Incidentals (tooth paste, medicine, cosmetics), $1 a week. Total, $9.96 a week. A typical 25-cent lunch consists of pork chops and rice, bread and butter and a drink.

How Budget Works Out.

The $1.27 for clothing is taken from a yearly clothing budget compiled by a prominent social service agency of the city, and includes:

One winter coat at $12.95 (can be used two years), cost per year	$6.48
Coat sweater (for warmer days)	1.75
One wool dress	5.00
One silk dress	6.00
Three summer dresses at $3 each, $9 (use two years)	4.50
Three aprons or smocks	2.64
Two hats at $1.95 each	3.90
Two pairs of gloves at 79 cents each	1.58
Twelve pairs of stockings at 59 cents each	7.08
Two pairs of shoes at $3.45 each	6.90
One pair of dress shoes	4.95
One pair of rubbers or galoshes	.85
Three knit unions, 39 cents each (will last two years)	.59
Seven pairs of bloomers or combinations at 59 cents each (will last two years)	2.07
Two slips at 79 cents each (two years)	.79
Four nightgowns at 59 cents each, $2.34 (two years' wear)	1.18
Four brassieres at 25 cents each	1.00
Two girdles or garter belts	2.00
One kimono, $1.50 (wear three years)	.75
Twelve handkerchiefs, 10 cents each	1.20
One bag	1.50
Two umbrellas at $1 each	2.00
Incidentals	2.00
Total	$66.18

Dividing the $66.18 by 52, the average weekly clothing allowance of $1.27 is arrived at. The weekly expenditures vary, depending on the nature of the girl, how shrewd a purchaser she is, and where she chooses to live. At the Catholic Woman's club a room with two meals can be had for $4.10, the extra ten cents being for the use of the electric iron. Lunch at this club costs only 15 cents a day, and since the club house is within walking distance of the business district, no car fare is needed. A girl can live here and buy her clothes for about $7.17 a week. But only a few girls can be accommodated at this price.

$4 Rooms for Low-Pay Girls.

"We keep the $4 rooms for low-salaried girls," Miss Katherine Mulane, secretary of the club, explained. "Our higher priced rooms are $7 a week, but when a girl is making only $7, and we have one such case, it is obvious she cannot pay it all out for a room and two meals.

"Most of my girls do their own washing," Miss Mulane added, "during both summer and winter. Many of them also do their own sewing. This helps save money, particularly in the summertime, when you can buy up a few yards of cotton material and make a dress very cheaply.

"What little clothing they do have," said the Catholic secretary, "they put on the outside, where it will show. They have very little in the way of underwear, some of them washing out the same set night after night. Another way they make both ends meet," she explained, "is by dealing in weekly payments. It's 50 cents here and 50 cents there."

For girls making $6 and $7 a week the Catherine club makes a special rate of from $2 to $3.50 for a room and two meals. If the girl earns $10 she pays $4.50; if she earns $15 she pays $6.

Girls Never Turned Away.

"We never turn a girl away from the home," declared Mrs. George de Roussey, treasurer; "if she is out of a job or has to help her family on her $4 or $5 salary, we take her for nothing." "When girls write me they are coming to the city to look for work," said Miss Claudia Lide, employment secretary of the Y. W. C. A., "and ask what it will take to make both ends meet, I generally tell them that they can pull through on $50 a month or $12.50 a week, if they already have clothes."

"The trouble with salaries in New Orleans," Miss Lide declared, "is that they are based on what a girl can barely exist on rather than what she is worth. The result is that the salary is generally supplemented from home or some charitable organization." Comparing the expense budget of a New Orleans girl with the business girl's budget in other cities, we find the working girl in New Orleans is living much more cheaply than her sisters of the north, due to the fact that the wage scale is lower here.

Budget Higher in Other Cities.

In Philadelphia it takes $21 a week for a girl to be decent on. Budgets compiled and distributed by the Y. W. C. A. of that city give give the following figures:

Room	$3.50
Food	10.00
Clothing	3.85
Car fare, telephone, postage	1.25
Medicine, vacation, cosmetics, dentists	2.40

According to the industrial welfare commission of California, Los Angeles girls live on $16 a week.

In Atlanta a girl must earn a minimum of $80 a month to keep the wolf from the door.

In Kansas City the figure is also set at $16. Compiled by Miss Bernice Frederick, who for twenty years has worked with the "Y" girls arranging budgets and living expenditures, the following itemized statement was formulated:

Board and room	$7.00
Transportation	1.00
Recreation	.50
Education	1.00
Health	.50
Clothing	4.00
Savings	1.00

A minimum of $20 a week is required by a working girl of Chicago living at one of the co-operative homes, and girls in Chicago are each year instructed how to budget.

Boston Figure Is $15.

In Boston, where settlement workers are constantly on the lookout for proper homes in which girls may board cheaply, a minimum figure of $15 a week is set, although various organizations have been fighting for years against this figure, declaring that it is ridiculously low.

New Orleans social workers declare that the entire problem of what a girl can live on or what she should earn is inextricably bound up with the employment question, wage scale and factors influencing them. With one accord these social workers voice the opinion that working girls' wages in New Orleans are too low, and that something should be done to remedy the situation.

"The trouble with most employers," one of them remarked, "is that they expect the girl to receive assistance from her family, or a friend, and her salary is graded accordingly."

Thrifty, Energetic Employes Compose this Big Company

Telephone men and women, wherever they live and serve, are known as public spirited, home loving people. Their loyalty to the service and to the public is a tradition which proves itself a living fact whenever the emergency arises.

Naturally their Company is proud of such a personnel and encourages the industry and energy which enables them to get the most out of life now, and to prepare for their personal and family needs in the future.

These thrifty folks are taking advantage of these opportunities. Last year their aggregate savings were at the annual rate of $2,459,000, made possible by the stock purchase plan, the employes' saving plan and the life insurance plan.

The habits of thrift which they practice in their personal affairs are applied to their administration of the Company's business in their effort to give you the best possible service at the lowest possible cost.

RETURN OF PERUCHI PLAYERS FOR INDEFINITE ENGAGEMENT PLEASING NEWS TO PLAYGOERS

LEADING MEMBERS OF PERUCHI STOCK COMPANY

Chattanooga will be lifted one notch above the "hick-town" class in the matter of amusements Monday, when the Peruchi Players, with one of the best stock companies on the boards, open the long-dark Bijou theater for a six-day run of the romantic comedy success, "This Thing Called Love." New plays following for weekly runs will include the latest Broadway dramatic and comedy hits, interspersed occasionally with a musical comedy.

The Bijou has been completely renovated, and a cooling system installed. The company which C. D. Peruchi, known to theatergoers throughout the south, has assembled is declared to be one of the best ever presented by this veteran promoter of dramatic stock, and a finished performance is assured when the curtain rises on the first production Monday night. D. C. Ashton is production manager.

Of particular interest to Chattanooga trades unionists is the fact that a large number of local workers will be given employment. A nine-piece orchestra—real musicians, in the flesh—will be a permanent feature of the company's engagement.

The entire organization of the Peruchi company is made up of members of organized labor, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor—actors, orchestra, stage employes, scenic artists, etc. Union printers, it is announced, will execute all printed matter distributed by the management, and any other employment which comes under the head of skilled labor will be supplied by the various unions.

Another announcement of interest is the low scale of admission prices which will prevail, running from 20 to 60 cents for night performances, with "bargain matinees" Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday at an even lower scale.

Ed Booth, well known to Chattanoogans and throughout the south, will be associated with the Peruchi players as house manager. Mr. Booth said Thursday that the advance sale of tickets for opening week already assures Chattanooga's appreciation of a local revival of the spoken drama.

LABOR COMMISSIONER DEFENDS TEXTILE BARONS; CONDEMNS TRADE UNIONS

(Special Correspondence.)

Birmingham, Ala., July 31.—Frank D. Grist, commissioner of labor and printing of North Carolina, who holds a job made possible by labor, is quoted in a press dispatch from Raleigh, N. C., as stepping forth, cudgel in hand, to defend the textile operators in Greensboro, N. C., and criticising labor organizers who "agitate strikes to hold their soft jobs."

Greensboro is the city where the Cone textile mills are situated, and where a number of mill workers were unceremoniously thrown out of their jobs and out of their houses because they had the temerity to exercise their constitutional right as citizens to join an association of their fellow workers, Paul J. Smith, chairman of the southern organization committee observed in commenting on the Grist statement.

"Those so-called agitators Grist refers to," said Chairman Smith, "created his job in the hope that his services would be beneficial to labor as well as to employers, but after a perusal of the article in which he is so liberally quoted, one is reminded of the old saying: Don't bite the hand that feeds you. It comes with poor grace for a man who is actually holding a 'soft job' to say anything about anybody else's job being 'soft.'

"In respect to the workers of Greensboro jeopardizing their jobs and creating ill will against the mill owners," Mr. Smith said, "it is not the workers but the mill owners themselves who are responsible for that situation by discharging efficient workers for no other reason than they joined a labor union. And for the same reason those workers have been evicted from their homes.

"Commissioner Grist says the organizers at Greensboro are trying to bring about a strike of the mill hands. Of course he is all wrong. Organized labor wants no strikes or industrial strife. On the other hand all we want is industrial peace, contentment, happy homes, good wages and decent hours for all workers. I wonder if Mr. Grist would object to such conditions?

"However, if there should be a strike, it would be wholly created by the mill operators, who should have the blame, due to the fact that they are discharging workers from their jobs and evicting them from their homes because they wish to join an association of their fellow workers. Such action by the mill owners would raise the ire of any red-blooded American citizen."

Chairman Smith said that Grist's comment on the unemployment was easily enough answered. "Unless the workers are paid a sufficient wage to help consume the products made in this country there will be still more unemployment," the chairman said.

The president and six vice-presidents of the Bethlehem Steel corporation, according to press reports, are paid a yearly bonus of better than $8,000,000 above their salaries making millionaires and exploiting the workers. "Some of that bonus in the pay envelopes of the workers would help in dissipating the spectre of unemployment in this country," Mr. Smith declared.

In commenting on the statement by Commissioner Grist that he had not made an investigation of the situation in Greensboro, N. C., where workers have been evicted from their homes and their household goods set out in the street, because they joined a labor union, Chairman Smith said, "It is high time the commissioner of labor of North Carolina made an inquiry into the situation at Greensboro. It is his duty to do so, and to do so impartially. Yet we have him breaking into the public prints in defense of the mill owner who, he says, is running his mills for altruistic purposes rather than profits, and advising the workers not to protest vicious discriminations, low wages and long hours, but to submit to any conditions imposed.

"In other words, Commissioner Grist thinks the workers might as well starve to death working for the company as to starve to death in idleness, and he advises them not to listen to 'organizers and agitators.' Who is the agitator in this case?

"I would remind Commissioner Grist that it is not labor 'organizers and agitators' who 'foment strikes,' but low wages and long hours that turn the steps of the workers, sometimes to devious ways, for their industrial ills. The well paid worker, the contented worker, does not strike. It is the workers whose burdens are too heavy to carry that strike and risk their all on the hope of bettering their condition.

"The mill owner who denies his help the right to belong to an association of their fellow workers is denying the workers something the owner takes for himself. It is an autocratic position absolutely indefensible from every viewpoint."

Chairman Smith said Commissioner Grist should make an unbiased investigation into conditions at Greensboro, where mill workers are walking the streets, jobless and homeless, because they had enough of the sense of justice and fairness to associate themselves in a trade union for mutual help and benefit.

"American Federation of Labor organizers are not 'agitators' or radicals, and they are not in Greensboro or any other part of the south to create trouble, but on the other hand they are here on a mission of mutual helpfulness and peace. They know, as we all know, that industry must be profitable if labor is to profit in wages and working conditions. Mr. Grist will have to revise his estimate of the American Federation of Labor if he is to be of any help in bettering the industrial conditions of his state."

Chairman Smith expressed the hope that the commissioner of labor of North Carolina would attend the state federation convention at Salisbury, N. C., which opens August 11.

Wage Cuts Handed Strike Breakers

Philadelphia.—The Quaker and Rodgers nonunion full-fashioned hosiery mills started some of its machines with piece price rates for its strikebreaker employes cut from 10 to 25 per cent. The wage cut is the "reward" which the strikebreakers are given from "scabbing" on their fellow workers.

The union hosiery workers claim that since the Quaker and Rodgers mills started the wage cuts their business has slumped so much that the strikers drawing strike benefits are better off than most of the strikebreakers.

Middle Life Suffering

"Texas years ago, I was in bad health," says Mrs. J. B. Bean, of Kirbyville, Texas. "I was going through a critical time, and I suffered a lot.

"My back hurt almost all the time, and my legs and ankles ached. My head hurt me until sometimes I would be almost past going.

"As I had used Cardui before, and knew how much I had improved after taking it, I got a bottle and started taking it. I continued to use it for several months. After awhile I regained my health, and I feel that I could never have gotten through that awful time without Cardui."

New York Labor Code for Women Boosts Output and Betters Industry

Laws of Empire State Prove Shortened Hours and Improved Working Conditions Benefit Community and Family, Is Assertion of U. S. Women's Bureau.

Washington, July 31.—New York state's code of laws regulating the employment of women workers has resulted in increased production and sounder industrial conditions, the women's bureau, United States department of labor, asserts in a statement summarizing the code. The statement gives credit to organized labor for the passing of the code, which is described as a model and stimulus for less advanced states.

The women's bureau statement says:

"Like the building of Rome, the complete labor code for women existing in New York state today was not easily achieved. The passage of the 1927 eight-hour day law was the result of the New York state industrial survey commission appointed in 1926.

"Without the strength of organized labor behind them, however, whether measures so recommended would have passed the state legislature is doubtful. In New York this indirect influence of organized labor has been more of a factor in securing legislation than has been its direct legislative effort.

Governor's Support Decisive.

"A governor's active support has been in some cases the decisive factor in the enactment of such laws. New York governors helped to pass the 60 and 48-hour week laws as well as minor measures.

"Although leaders and organizations have left their stamp upon specific pieces of legislation, behind these leaders and organizations are always discernible the social forces pushing on toward a better economic order and the spirit of the time reaching toward social justice.

"The combined result of these forces and endeavors, starting with the 60-hour week in 1886, which applied to women under 21 and minors in manufacturing, has been the building of a labor code for women which truly blazes the path of progress. New York is one of the ten banner states which have enacted eight-hour laws and its legislation is comparatively inclusive, covering all manufacturing and mercantile establishments and laundries. This legislation has been supplemented by laws requiring one day of rest in seven, and an hour for the noonday meal. New York is one of sixteen states to have passed night work laws and has prohibited night work for women in manufacturing and mercantile establishments, in restaurants, as messengers, as conductors and guards on any street railway, and as elevator operators.

Work Conditions Regulated.

"New York has exercised outstanding care in regulating the conditions of women's employment. Employment of women within four weeks after childbirth is prohibited, New York being one of only six states forbidding employment of women at this time. Other regulatory or prohibitory laws refer to the cleaning of machinery while in motion; the use of any emery or corundum, stone or buffing wheel; the employment in or connection with any mine; core-making; employment in mercantile basements; and the employment of girls under 21 as messengers or conductors and guards on street railways.

"For much that is vital in the life of the nation New York has been responsible. Ranking high among its contributions, the bureau feels, should be listed a labor code for women, which is a model and stimulus to less advanced states, and a continual proof of the fact that shortened hours and improved working conditions result not only in an increased production and sounder industrial condition, but also in the heightened well-being of the community and state based on a healthful family life."

Trade Union Unemployment Gained In July, A. F. of L. Reports Show

Customary Summer Improvement in Building Trades Has Not Occurred and More Than Twice as Many Men Are Idle as Year Ago, William Green Says.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Washington, Aug. 7.—Unemployment in trade unions increased in July, according to reports received by the American Federation of Labor. Summarizing the reports, President William Green said:

"The summer dull season has brought an increase in unemployment. Reports from trade unions in twenty-four cities show 21 per cent out of work as compared with 20 per cent in June.

"An increase in unemployment in July is not unusual. Our figures for 1928 showed more out of work in July than June, but this year the increase is particularly unfortunate, for wage earners already have a long period of lowered income and privation behind them.

"In building trades the low level of activity this year has meant less work than usual, and the customary summer improvement in employment has not occurred. Unemployment is still at the high May level, with 37 per cent out of work. This is over twice the number unemployed in July last year.

"In metal trades, special dullness this year has raised unemployment to 21 per cent of the membership in July. Unemployment has increased almost continuously since January, when 15 per cent were out of work, and now over three times as many are unemployed as in July last year. In printing, unemployment has also increased since January, and 7 per cent are now out of work as compared to 5 per cent at the first of the year.

Per Cent of Union Members Unemployed.

	July* 1930	June 1930	July 1929
Building trades	37	37	16
Metal trades	21	19	6
Printing trades	7	6	4
All union members	21	20	9

*Preliminary.

"Reports for the other trades show a large increase in clothing and textile industries, and also on railroads. There are small increases in manufacturing and in theater and moving picture operation, and among professionals. A substantial improvement in the seafaring and shipping trade on the other hand is encouraging."

Work Begins on New Headquarters Of Barbers' International Union

Indianapolis, Ind., July 31.—Plans have been made and the general contract let for a new $100,000 home for the Journeymen Barbers' International union, to be located at Twelfth and Delaware streets, Indianapolis, according to an announcement from Acting President W. E. Birthright.

Work has started on the two-story brick structure and is expected to be completed by December 30. The architect for the building is George F. Schreiber, Indianapolis, and William P. Jumgclaus is the general contractor.

The building is in gothil design and has two stories and a basement. The home will be 50 feet by 73 feet on a lot that measures 80 feet by 195 feet. It will be fireproof, with reinforced concrete and a stone exterior.

The first floor will contain offices of the president, secretary and treasurer, as well as work rooms and a publication room. The international officers' rooms will be finished in wood wainscote, as will be the directors' room on the second floor. They will also have an ornamental plaster ceiling.

The lobby will have a marble floor while the rest of the offices will have composition tile floor. An oil burner will be installed in the basement.

Several novel features of the building are contained in the basement. There are to be six individual vaults that are to open onto one workroom. There is also a large space provided in the rear of the basement for parking cars. Ten cars can be taken care of in this space. Two other rooms in the basement, as yet unassigned, will probably be designed as recreation rooms for employes of the offices.

No date has been set as yet for the cornerstone laying, or for the dedication of the new international offices. These may be deferred until the return of President James Shanessy, who has been in the east for his health.

Cotton Industry Must Junk Spindles

Philadelphia.—The junking of cotton spindles must continue for four or five years if the industry's equipment is brought down to the point at which output will equal demand, said Prof. George S. Mitchell of Columbia University in an address at Bryn Mawr college before a conference on the A. F. of L. southern organization drive.

Prof. Mitchell said government action is less effective than co-operation between the various factors in an industry. He classed as "unsuccessful" and "perhaps dangerous" the federal farm board's attempt to stabilize prices by buying crop surpluses.

"It may be dangerous because the board will not be in a position to hold the surplus, but finally will have to dump it, perhaps with disastrous results," he said.

"The world demand for American cotton is diminishing," declared the speaker. The federal authorities will have to provide a well-planned system of public works to care for those who will be thrown out of employment when the cotton plantations are turned to other uses."

Thomas F. McMahon, president United Textile Workers, said labor's activity in the south the past six months has demonstrated that this organizing movement is not sporadic.

"The union," he said, "agrees on the need for a curtailment of production, but the best way to achieve this is through conference with employes."

Edward F. McGrady, legislative representative A. F. of L., insisted that the first need in the south is not curtailment of production but an increase in the purchasing power of southern workers and an abandonment of pauper wage standards.

"An increase in wages in the south will have a greater influence upon national prosperity than anything else," he said.

UNION "UNFAIR LIST."

Everett, Wash.—The Everett Central Labor council and Building Trades council carry over sixty individuals and firms on their "we don't patronize list." The building trades contributes the largest number to the unfair list.

Bully, Paid Thug, Strike-Breaker, Jimmy Biscardi Writes Confession

Ex-Small Time Box Fighter, Lover of Flashy Cars and High Strutter, Admits He's Just a Cheap Criminal Who Tried Strike-Breaking for Pay—Says Violence Ordered by Bosses.

Kenosha, Wis., July 31.—Jimmy Biscardi, scab in the Allen-A mills, scab in the Ipsmich mills in Gloucester, Mass., paid bully and bravo, has finally been laid by the heels.

Jimmy has signed a confession that he is a gangster, and that his job is to beat hold-up victims on the head with a blackjack while other members of his gang do the actual robbing.

Biscardi, at one time a small-time pugilist, likes flashy cars, diamonds, and fur coats for his wife. And Jimmy doesn't like to work.

The Allen-A company, seeking scabs in its plant here, came across Biscardi. Though he knew nothing of knitting, Biscardi was hired and taught some of the rudiments of the trade. His job, however, was to make foul attacks on strikers and to engineer the beating up of union men. Efforts made by the Kenosha strikers to have Biscardi rounded up for some of his prior offenses were unavailing at that time.

Biscardi shipped to Gloucester, Mass., for the MacDonald agency and then engaged in a campaign of rowdyism and attempted terrorism.

From Gloucester, Biscardi shipped to Philadelphia to scab at the Aberle mills. But he found Philadelphia too unhealthy and shipped back here, where shortly after his arrival he told the leaders of the strike, Maceo Kueny and Erick Tillman, executives of the Allen-A had personally ordered him to assault union officers and outstanding strikers.

Now Biscardi has been picked up for gangsterism and hold-ups and has signed a confession that he took part in a series of crimes that have recently terrorized Kenosha citizens.

Kenosha, Wis., Aug. 7.—Allen-A company executives are expected to help Jimmy Biscardi to get out of his expected sentence for participating in a series of hold-ups. This is the story generally accepted in Kenosha following the visit of Biscardi to the Allen-A plant immediately after he was released from jail on bond.

Biscardi was an Allen-A scab whose job, he confessed, was to beat up and maim strikers and strike leaders. Jimmy's signed confession stated that after the strikebreaking business became slack, he went in for highway robbery.

Observers in Kenosha declare that it is more than a coincidence that another one of the group of young men rounded up for the hold-up jobs in which Biscardi was a leader should have been taken out of the Allen-A mill.

Curtis Schulling, age 18 years, worked in the shipping department of the plant and though not classed as a strikebreaker is typical of the sort of help that the mill was forced to hire when it locked out its union workers two and a half years ago. Schulling was identified as being a participant in the hold-up when detectives fitted a hub cap to his car that had been found at the scene of one of the robberies.

It is also predicted in Kenosha that Biscardi will try to "shake down" union leaders here for a fat sum for a "confession" implicating the Allen-A executives. This has actually happened in the past. Biscardi came to strike leaders and the district attorney a few months ago with the story that Roger Kimball, of the Allen-A, had personally ordered him to attack Louis F. Budenz and others prominent on the union side.

When the unionists would not pay Biscardi for this statement, he refused to sign it and squirmed so freely that the authorities felt unable to proceed in the matter.

N. CAROLINA LABOR COMMISSIONER SCORED FOR DEFENSE MILL OWNERS

Head of Southern Organization Committee Demands Official Who Attacked "Agitators" Make Impartial Investigation of Situation in Greensboro, Where Workers Are Being Discharged and Evicted

(By International Labor News Service.)

Birmingham, Ala., Aug. 14.—Frank D. Grist, commissioner of labor and printing of North Carolina, who holds a job made possible by labor, is quoted in a press dispatch from Raleigh, N. C., as stepping forth, cudgel in hand, to defend the textile operators in Greensboro, N. C., and criticizing labor organizers who "agitate strikes to hold their soft jobs."

Greensboro is the city where the textile mills owned by Bernard M. Cone are situated, and where a number of mill workers were unceremoniously thrown out of their jobs and out of their houses, because they had the temerity to exercise their constitutional right as citizens to join an association of their fellow workers, Paul J. Smith, chairman of the southern organization committee, observed in commenting on the Grist statement.

"These so-called agitators Grist refers to," said Chairman Smith, "created his job in the hope that his services would be beneficial to labor as well as to employers, but after a perusal of the article in which he is so liberally quoted, one is reminded of the old saying: 'Don't bite the hand that feeds you.' It comes with poor grace for a man who is actually holding a 'soft job' to say anything about anybody else's job being 'soft.'"

In respect to the workers of Greensboro jeopardizing their jobs and creating ill will against the mill owners, Mr. Smith said, "It is not the workers but the mill owners themselves who are responsible for that situation by discharging efficient workers for no other reason than they joined a labor union. And for the same reason these workers have been evicted from their homes.

"Commissioner Grist says the organizers at Greensboro are trying to bring about a strike of the mill hands. Of course he is all wrong. Organized labor wants no strikes or industrial strife. On the other hand all we want is industrial peace, contentment, happy homes, good wages and decent hours for all workers. I wonder if Mr. Grist would object to such conditions?

"However, if there should be a strike, it would be wholly created by the mill operators, who should have the blame, due to the fact that they are discharging workers from their jobs and evicting them from their homes because they wish to join an association of their fellow workers. Such action by the mill owners would raise the ire of any red-blooded American citizen."

Chairman Smith said that Grist's comment on the unemployment situation was easily enough answered. "Unless the workers are paid a sufficient wage to help consume the products made in this country there will be still more unemployment," the chairman said.

Time Grist Made Inquiry.

In commenting on the statement by Commissioner Grist that he had not made an investigation of the situation in Greensboro, N. C., where workers have been evicted from their homes and their household goods set out on the street, because they joined a labor union, Chairman Smith said: "It is high time the commissioner of labor of North Carolina made an inquiry into the situation at Greensboro. It is his duty to do so, and to do so impartially. Yet we have him breaking into the public prints in defense of the mill owner, who, he says, is running his mills for altruistic purposes rather than profits, and advising the workers not to protest vicious discriminations, low wages and long hours, but to submit to any conditions imposed.

"In other words, Commissioner Grist thinks the workers might as well starve to death working for the company as to starve to death in idleness, and he advises them not to listen to 'organizers and agitators.'

"I would remind Commissioner Grist that it is not labor 'organizers and agitators' who 'foment strikes,' but low wages and long hours that cause strikes. The well paid worker, the contented worker, does not strike. It is the workers whose burdens are too heavy to carry that strike and risk their all on the hope of bettering their condition.

"The mill owner who denies his help the right to belong to an association of their fellow workers is denying the workers something the owner takes for himself. It is an autocratic position absolutely indefensible from every viewpoint."

"American Federation of Labor organizers are not 'agitators' or radicals, and they are not in Greensboro or any other part of the south to create trouble, but on the other hand they are here on a mission of mutual helpfulness and peace," Mr. Smith added. "They know, as we all know, that industry must be profitable if labor is to profit in wages and working conditions. Mr. Grist will have to revise his estimate of the American Federation of Labor if he is to be of any help in bettering the industrial conditions of his state."

CIRCLE CLUB IN ANNUAL OUTING

Members and Ladies Union Labor Civic Club to Enjoy Picnic at Warner Park.

Annual picnic outing of Circle club will be held Monday evening, at 6 o'clock, at Warner park, and a large number of members and their families have expressed their intention of enjoying this yearly event of union labor's civic club.

The picnic-outing was postponed two weeks because of the fact that interest in the elections was unusually keen, and it was felt that a larger attendance might be had if no "counter attractions" were on the boards.

The matter of a place for this year's outing was left up to officers of the club, and while it was at first thought the event would be held at Winnepesaukah, opinion prevailed that Warner park would be the logical place, and announcement was made this week that the festivities would take place there.

After partaking of the basket lunch prepared by the ladies, the park concessions will be enjoyed and a general social hour spent.

Federal Road Building Relieves Unemployment

Washington.—An extra appropriation of $50,000,000 by congress in April for highway construction in the federal-aid system has contributed materially to the relief of unemployment, according to figures made public by the roads bureau.

In April, 1930, there were 20,200 employed on federal-aid projects, which was 4,000 more than the number reported for April, 1929. In May, 31,400 workers were employed as against 26,600 in May, 1929, an increase of 4,800. In June 35,800 were at work compared with 34,500 in June, 1929, an increase of 1,300.

These figures represent the workers employed by contractors in road construction, but do not include the workers employed in the manufacture of road materials.

ASSISTANT CHIEF

GEORGE W. CLINTON.

Capt. Clinton was this week named assistant chief of the fire department, succeeding Robt. Jones, who became chief. George was one of the first presidents of the local Firefighters' union, and his promotion was given official recognition by Central Body Monday night.

STATE TEXTILE COUNCIL.

Greenville, S. C.—Through the efforts of delegates representing a number of local unions of textile workers in South Carolina, a state textile council has been organized in the state and a general movement of organizing the entire textile regions of South Carolina is now under way, Francis J. Gorman, a member of the southern organizing committee, said. At the recent state convention at Greenville the thirty-five textile delegates decided to form a state council which was authorized by the convention.

PUBLIC OWNERSHIP ISSUE.

New York.—The state committee of the socialist party will make the public ownership of electric light and power facilities the major issue in the New York state election this fall.

The committee made provisions for the inclusion of non-party members on special committees for the mobilization of independent voters for the socialist ticket.

CRUSADER

GEORGE W. NORRIS.

Senator Norris administered a splendid "trimming" to the forces of reaction in the Nebraska state primaries this week. His outstanding work as a representative of the people and his battles for honesty and decency in public affairs stood as an impregnable wall against the contemptible efforts of the power trust and other vested interests to retire him to private life.

LABOR PUTS O.K. ON NEW CHIEFS

Central Body Appreciates Promotions of Jones and Clinton.

Chattanooga Trades and Labor council Monday night went on record as approving two promotions made by Commissioner Bryan as a result of the sudden passing of Fire Chief William Toomey.

The commissioner this week announced the elevation of Robert W. Jones from assistant chief to chief of the department, and of Capt. George W. Clinton to be assistant chief.

Chief Jones and Assistant Chief Clinton have in the past been actively identified with the labor movement, and each has a splendid record for service to his fellow-worker, as well as a commendable record as a city employe.

The position of Central Body is expressed in the following two letters sent Commissioner Bryan by Secretary Matt Gerlach Tuesday:

At the meeting of the Chattanooga Trades and Labor council held Monday night, August 11th, I was instructed to extend to you our thanks and appreciation for your appointment of our good friend and brother, Robert W. Jones, as chief of the Chattanooga fire department, and we feel that the promotion of Robert W. Jones meets the hearty approval of organized labor in this community, and we know you have the right man in the right place.

At the meeting of the Chattanooga Trades and Labor council, held Monday night, August 11th, Brother George W. Clinton was recommended as assistant chief of the Chattanooga fire department, and a committee composed of George Forbes, R. M. Cooke and Matt Gerlach were appointed to call on you and ask that George W. Clinton be promoted from captain to assistant chief, and when we saw Tuesday's morning paper we found you had made the appointment, and the Chattanooga Trades and Labor council wants to extend to you our thanks and appreciation and say that the promotion of George W. Clinton was a good one, as George is faithful, true and loyal. And organized labor again wants to thank you.

RESOLUTIONS REFLECT ESTEEM FOR TOOMEY

The esteem in which the late Chief William Toomey was held generally is reflected in resolutions adopted by Central Body Monday night. Prepared by a committee consisting of W. L. Gardner, J. C. Clinton, R. B. Lane, Z. B. Bender and F. S. Thurston, the resolutions follow:

Whereas, it has pleased Almighty God, in His infinite wisdom, to take from our midst our most esteemed and faithful fire chief, William Toomey;

Whereas, we feel the loss of his good fellowship in our midst and his loyalty and efficiency in the fire department; therefore, be it

Resolved, by the officers and members of the Chattanooga Trades and Labor council, That we extend our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved family, relatives and friends, and be it remembered by all that God's will must be done; be it further

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of this organization and a copy be sent to the bereaved family, and to the Labor World for publication.

U. S. STEEL CORPORATION JOINS LIST PLEDGED TO MAINTAIN WAGES

Head of Big Company Declared He Told Fellow Executives Pay in Steel Industry Was Not Coming Down. Wage Cutting Cause of Trade Depression, Shoe Man Says.

(By International Labor News Service.)

New York City, Aug. 14.—To the list of employers who last week pledged themselves in letters and telegrams to Printers' Ink not to cut wages, the United States Steel corporation has been added.

Responding to the inquiry sent out by Roy Dickinson, associate editor of Printers' Ink, J. A. Farrell, president of the United States Steel corporation, said there is going to be no reduction of wages in the steel industry.

In addition to Farrell's letter, there is available the complete text of the telegram to Dickinson from George F. Johnson, of the Endicott-Johnson Shoe company, in which Johnson said:

"Wage cutting or reducing income of labor is not a remedy for business depression. It is a direct and contributing cause. The best place to start necessary reductions of income is from the over-paid and over-privileged, not the under-paid and under-privileged. When business needs more income follow the income. Secure it from those who have it."

Farrell Quotes Remarks.

President Farrell wrote Dickinson saying:

"Referring to your telegram of July 21, I think I can best answer you by quoting from my remarks at the May 9, 1930, meeting of the members of the American Iron and Steel institute, which was held at the Hotel Commodore, New York City, as follows:

"'I heard a steel man say the other day, in fact more than one recently, that wages should come down. I said, "Oh, no, wages in the steel industry are not coming down; you can make your mind up to that fact." I said, "If you are going out to sell your goods and eliminate your profit and expect to get it out of the men in the mills you are greatly mistaken." Then I said, "Make up your mind to one thing, use better judgment in your selling prices for your material and get rid of the idea that wages are going down." Because, Mr. Schwab, wages are not coming down in the steel industry. That would be just begging the question. We all know that just as soon as they go down, if they should, Mr. Customer gets it. It is like some ship owners who complain about the Panama canal tolls; if the Panama canal tolls were reduced or abolished the merchant abroad would get the benefit of the reduction and the taxpayers here would pay for it; certainly ship owners could not retain the saving.'"

"Under American condition- of production the American workman produces more in a given unit of time than anywhere else in the world," wired Carleton H. Palmer, president of E. R. Squibb & Son. "He is, therefore, entitled to higher compensation judged from any standard.

"Solution of the problem lies in an adjustment of production to present consumption requirements, which should be accomplished without a reduction in the wage scale but rather by the adoption of a five-day week at the present weekly wage scale as a national business policy.

"When production requirements again assume normal proportions the six-day week can be reinstated by the adoption of a staggered holiday, with an actual gain in efficiency by working each crew on a five-day week schedule."

Extracts from other replies received by Printers' Ink follow:

Howard Heinz, president H. J. Heinz Company—In this enlightened age, when it is recognized that production is dependent upon consuming power, it is my judgment that large manufacturers and producers will maintain wages and salaries as being the far-sighted and in the end the constructive thing to do.

William Wrigley, Jr., chairman of the William Wrigley, Jr., Company—The Wrigley company will not reduce the present wage scale. Our business is better than last year, but would not reduce wages if it were not.

Charles C. Small, president American Ice Company—Referring to your message of Aug. 1, our company has no intention of reducing wages or salaries. There is no reason for doing so, and believe in good wages to aid purchasing power.

A. Weiland, vice-president in charge of production, the R. C. A.-Victor Company, Inc.—This company has made no wage or salary cuts, and in our large production program for the balance of this year we propose paying rates equal to those paid last year. We do not believe that this is the time to attempt to reduce the income of wage earners.

COURT OFFICER

LEM THOMAS.

Mr. Thomas, who lives at No. 3 Shallowford road, was named court officer this week by Judge L. L. Miller. He is a member of the local plasterers' union, and a son-in-law of the late George B. Pyle, who was active in that organization and in Central Body for many years.

Russian Communism Menace to America

Boston, Mass.—"The attempt of communistic Russia to infiltrate the free governments of the world with its propaganda and doctrine has been an open and brazen attempt to undermine the American government," declares Gov. Frank G. Allen of Massachusetts.

"The brazen and open manner in which Russia's dictator has attempted to dominate the field of American economics should be sufficient to alert all patriotic organizations to the gravity of the situation," the governor says. "It should inspire with a determination to combat vigorously in every corner of our land the vicious attempt to impose upon America a system of government foreign to ours, and which has been branded as a complete failure."

CALL IS ISSUED FOR CONVENTION

Half-Century of Progress to Be Reviewed by Federation Delegates at Boston.

Call for the fiftieth annual convention of the American Federation of Labor was received in Chattanooga this week. The meeting will be held in Boston, beginning October 6, and ending when the business has been completed, usually two weeks.

The call, signed by all members of the executive council, says:

"For half a century the organized workers have been aggressively carrying on the campaign of organization. Our great movement has been builded slowly but in a most substantial and enduring way. The struggles which have attended the growth and expansion of the American Federation of Labor have been keen and intense, and the sacrifices have been very great. Our half-century of service and progress, and the fact that we are holding the fiftieth annual convention and substantial progress which reports will show has been made in the past year, should inspire the hosts of labor and strengthen their purpose to carry on the industrial fight for better living standards and improved social and economic conditions of employment."

The Tennessee Federation of Labor will be represented in the convention, which is expected to be unusually interesting because of the great southern organizing campaign, which has been successful beyond the most optimistic hope of organized labor.

URGED FOR BRITISH LABOR

London, Eng.—Great Britain's obsolete parliamentary system can shackle to the point of death any progressive party, declared George Bernard Shaw in discussing the slow progress made by the British trade unions and the labor party in making labor's social program the law of the land.

Shaw especially urged the labor party to nationalize the banking system as soon as the party's position is thoroughly strong. The management of the banking system, he said, could be left in the hands of the present managers, working for the state instead of for private financiers."

BOSSES' UNION EXCITED OVER NEW ACTIVITIES

Issue Warning to Employers Against "Agitators."

LETTER READS LIKE EDGERTON WROTE IT

Federation's Organization Campaign Brings Fire of Louisiana Labor Haters.

An International Labor News Service story which comes out of Birmingham headquarters this week has a familiar ring for local trades unionists, in that it describes a letter sent out by the Louisiana Manufacturers' association, warning members to beware of the "agitator," etc., etc. Members of organized labor in Tennessee have become accustomed to such tirades issued from Nashville by C. C. Gilbert, manfriday of John E. Edgerton, who uses spiritual advice in place of wages to keep his Lebanon sock-mill employes "happy." Reading the "warning" broadcast by the Louisiana bosses, one might think that Edgerton himself had dictated the letter, which is a pretty sure indication that the southern drive is proving successful in that state.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Birmingham, Ala., Aug. 14.—The organization of longshoremen in Louisiana, as well as other laborers and craftsmen, has shaken the complacency of the Louisiana Manufacturers' association to such an extent that a special warning bulletin on the encroachment of organized labor in that state has been issued and sent to all members. The longshoremen have 5,050 members paid up and are virtually 100 per cent organized. This is the ghost which has scared the manufacturers' association.

"This is not 'just another bulletin,'" says the bulletin just sent out, "but is of extraordinary interest to every manufacturer of Louisiana.

Put Foremen "on Guard."

"A very intensive campaign is now being conducted by a special committee of the New Orleans central trades council, of which Edwin Peyroux, of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes, is chairman. They are holding mass meetings which are well attended. Mr. William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, has very graciously loaned the services of Mr. Holt E. J. Ross, president of the Mississippi Federation of Labor, who has already organized the longshoremen, who were unorganized due to strikes and lockouts. Do not put this information aside, but your foremen and superintendents should be advised of the union activities. Keep agitators out of your plants, many of whom gain entrance in the guise of employes. It eventually means trouble for you. I suggest you exercise great care in replacing employes to prevent trouble for yourself."

Mr. Ross recently made a survey of economic conditions in Louisiana and Arkansas and found the thousands of workers anxious for the message of trade unionism.

Resort to Injunction.

A few days ago a firm of attorneys for certain shipping interests in New Orleans invoked the authority of a federal injunction issued against longshoremen and others in 1925 to prevent "interference" with their workers. The decree was made operative against Mr. Ross and a number of other organizers and officers of the Louisiana Federation of Labor. However, the decree was without significance in view of the fact that most of the longshoremen already had joined the union.

McQuade Ordered Back to Chattanooga

Ed McQuade, formerly manager of a local jewelry store, and well known particularly among the railroad crafts, will return to Chattanooga this week for an indefinite stay following several years' residence on the Mexican border.

Ed's friends report his return is upon doctor's orders, explaining that a price war is raging among the operators of beer saloons along the border, several having cut the price to five cents for a large schooner. It is said the M. D.'s have ordered Mr. McQuade to stay in Chattanooga for the duration of the war.

SIX-HOUR WORK DAY

New York—The six-hour work day is a certainty, declared Senator Copeland in an address to business men in this city.

"Nothing is so dangerous as to indulge in prophecy, but, whether we like it or not, I believe we are coming to the five-day week and the six-hour day," said Senator Copeland.

"Improvement of labor-saving machinery is the reason for this. What are we going to do with the men thrown out of work by this economic change? We can't chloroform them. As for over-production, we can't push the surplus off the docks."

Seasonal Idleness Even in Good Times

Washington.—The seriousness of seasonal unemployment even in good business years is indicated by a study of employment fluctuations in automobile and related industries in Ohio, published in the July issue Monthly Labor Review of the United States bureau of labor statistics.

The study, covering the years 1923 to 1928, showed that in every one of these six years the number of employes in the month of maximum employment was over 11,000 more than in the month of minimum employment, and in one year this number was almost 24,000.

In the manufacture of autos and auto parts the variation from the maximum ranged from 17.0 to 41.3 per cent in the different years; in the manufacture of rubber tires and tubes this fluctuation varied from 8.7 to 23.4 per cent, and in garages and auto repair shops from 9.9 to 21.8 per cent.

The manufacture of autos and auto parts and rubber tires and tubes employ approximately one-sixth of the persons engaged in manufactures in Ohio.

MR. DICKINSON'S POLL.

Roy Dickinson, associate editor of Printers' Ink, has gone the Literary Digest one better and has conducted a poll of employers on maintaining wage rates. Dickinson reports finding a cross section of 75 per cent of American employers in basic industries opposed to wage reductions. Quotations from employers responding to his inquiry were published in The Labor World last week and additional comments are published in this issue. They made an illuminating exhibit.

Roy Dickinson has observed industry a long time. He began to get a good look at it during the war when, as an army captain, later a major, he helped management to understand labor. As an editor he is, in association with other progressive men, engaged in making the relation between [illegible] and [illegible] better. He finds [illegible] declared that [illegible] is better [illegible] that the [illegible] income is [illegible] and that [illegible] wages [illegible] better. Dickinson [illegible] in New [illegible] may be [illegible] that [illegible] the people [illegible] state [illegible] They have [illegible] way of [illegible] in that state.

Meanwhile a team of vision and energy was put on record a group of men who employ thousands.

THE INJUNCTION EVIL.

Each month sees a better understanding of the injunction evil. Each month recruits join the army of those fighting the menace to liberty. Each month more trade unionists are aroused. President Green, of the American Federation of Labor, declares the injunction is labor's paramount issue. He does not overstate the case.

The injunction destroys human freedom and whatever destroys human freedom in any degree will broaden its field of destruction unless it is itself destroyed. Every reactionary power is aligned against labor in this fight. But labor is on the side of progress. Labor stands on the ground hallowed by the Minute Men. Candidates for congress may not like this issue—but there it is, made not by labor but by tyrannical judges. Freedom must triumph!

MR. FORD'S SYSTEM.

Comes queer news from Detroit, escaping most papers. Charles E. Sorensen, representing the Ford company, testified before the Fish congressional committee that Ford maintains his own police force which checks up on its workers. That is important news, especially for Ford workers.

Mr. Sorensen made the curious statement that if American industries are as secret as Ford and America has nothing to fear from the reds. He said Ford was accused of his [illegible] and the [illegible] engine.

State Aid to Curb Child Labor Evil

Washington.—State aid to widows' dependent children sufficient to permit the children to be kept in school up to the age of 16 is urged by the U. S. Children's bureau as a means to prevent employers from hiring children. To curb the activities of child labor exploiters the bureau also recommends that employers pay fathers wages high enough to enable them to buy a decent standard of living for their families, more effective child labor and school attendance laws, and improvements in our educational system to give children the training that will fit them for the business requirements of employers.

Most of the states have laws fixing minimum ages at which employers are permitted to employ children in factories. Few states have statutes prohibiting employers from employing children below certain ages in the broad occupational field called agriculture.

The bureau points out that the enforcement of minimum-age-for-work laws is very difficult. The enforcement is largely in the hands of employers and farmers who profit directly by the exploitation of children and who control the state governments. The difficulty stressed by the bureau is the reluctance employers experience in enforcing child labor laws which will decrease their profits.

A federal child labor law enforced by federal officials would mean something more than the paper on which the law is written. That is one reason why child labor exploiters in every state have so belligerently opposed federal child labor legislation.

The Passing Show

Note and Comment on Things Doing in the March of Events

German government contracts in the future will not be awarded to companies which "show an unsocial attitude in their relations with their employes or which, by indulgence in unjustified lockouts or in the wholesale release of workmen not warranted by the concerns' individual economic situations, hinder the government's attempts to stimulate employment," Dr. Stegerwald, the minister of labor, recently announced.

Announcement of the new policy represents a move to check the increasing unemployment and is aimed at the Berlin metal industry's efforts to reduce the clerical staffs by discharging 10 per cent of their office workers.

Adoption of a similar policy by the United States government would be most salutary. Southern low wage building contractors who do government work in the north and west would be walloped hard if Uncle Sam refused to award them contracts on the ground that they showed an "unsocial attitude," as most surely they do. Instead of paying wages below those prevailing in localities where they worked, these contractors would be forced to pay prevailing wages or give up seeking government contracts. And that would be a big victory for American standards of living.

The idea that a man may not be guilty of a particular crime of which he stands accused, but that he's a "bad egg" and ought to be put up on general principles, is one all too common.

This attitude of mind crops up in discussions of the Mooney-Billings case. "Well, maybe Tom Mooney didn't throw the preparedness parade bomb, but he ought to be in jail anyway." is a remark frequently heard, often from persons who should know better. The same attitude was shown in connection with the Sacco-Vanzetti case, Moyer, Haywood and Pettibone case and many others.

What a perversion of justice is this attitude, which amounts to saying that a man should be punished because of his supposed record of opinions. It opens the way to all sorts of abuses and outrages and if it finds general acceptance will mean the end of justice.

American prisons are crowded to a point of disgrace. Legislatures pass more and more laws making misdemeanors crimes and establishing more drastic punishments.

Since the World war conditions in this country have grown steadily worse and violations of the law are at the highest record point.

In seeking the cause for these conditions there are many who are prone to attribute these conditions to influences of the war. There may be a measure of truth in this, but one may immediately point to England where an exact reversal holds good. Great Britain suffered infinitely more than this country and was in the midst of the great conflict, yet there is no such condition there.

The first step toward a solution of this problem will be to find the causes and report them fearlessly.

It is an American habit to flinch off from the truth. A commission of scientists reporting on causes might bring to light information about certain conditions contributory to our terrible crime record that would be highly unacceptable to some of our "best people." In that event there would be a backfire of denials and recriminations.

What is needed is a determined policy of fact finding and then a strong, firm hand that shall start a movement toward righting evil conditions that are the primal causes of the saturnalia of crime prevalent in this country.

SPOKEN DRAMA IS WELCOMED

Peruchi Players Given Fine Reception—Greeted By Crowded Houses.

Revival of the spoken drama in Chattanooga this week was greeted by crowded houses, and the Peruchi Players, a splendid company of artists, have made a distinct hit with a smart comedy, "This Thing Called Love." Enthusiastic audiences during the week have indicated their approval of flesh-and-blood theatricals by liberal applause at the suggestion that the stock company plans to present plays throughout the coming winter.

A nine-piece concert orchestra, under direction of Lester Cohn, has received its share of the applause, and the hearty welcome given this return of real music to the local theatrical boards indicated appreciation of the promoters' efforts to entertain.

The company will present "The Nut Farm" all next week, with matinees Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday. This second production is described as a screaming farce-comedy, which will guarantee a continuation of the packed houses throughout its run.

Unusually low admission prices will be continued, it is announced, and Manager Booth advises early reservations for patrons who desire choicest seats for the evening performances. Matinees are not reserved.

LADIES' GARMENT WORKERS ORGANIZING IN LOS ANGELES

Los Angeles, Cal.—"Long hours, small, pitiful wages, unbearable working conditions, discrimination and the speed-up system to the point where it is dangerous to the health of those who are employed and spells unemployment for many others is still the rule rather than the exception in Los Angeles," declares Joseph Breslaw, vice-president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' union, who is here to organize this branch of the garment industry.

Mr. Breslaw explained that his union does not hold the individual manufacturer responsible for low wages in the garment industry. "We believe," he says, "that the manufacturers as well as our people are caught in a huge competitive wheel in which both are ground down together. The trade union today understands that in order to establish sound working conditions we have to place the industry on a sound footing. In that we have been successful in all of the major garment centers of the United States."

Durham Workers on Short Rations As Mills Operate on Part Time

(By International Labor News Service.)

Durham, N. C., Aug. 14.—Continued depression affects the full fashioned mills of this city. The Durham hosiery mills, which last year were operating under a system of three eight-hour shifts, now has one shift at work. One group of workers gets three days per week, the next group receive two and one-half days of work. All employes in the full fashioned departments have received a cut in wages. Having already received a cut some months ago which amounted to ten per cent, the workers were unprepared for a second slash, which amounts to eight to twelve per cent on the various operations.

Sheriff's sale notices on over 1,700 lots of property are being put up for auction by the sheriff of Durham county. These lots represent about 4,500 individual lots or buildings, being offered for non-payment of taxes.

The Golden Belt Hosiery company, which has been on a schedule of two and three days per week, shut down entirely for two weeks. The Ruth Hosiery company here, manufacturers of full fashioned hosiery, is operating on a full schedule, but have announced a production standard for knitters, and any knitter not able to give this standard of production will be penalized. The production standard itself is so high that the introduction of this efficiency measure is really a two cents per dozen wage cut.

Seamless hosiery mills and cotton mills are virtually all shut down or operating only a few hours per week. Actual cases of starvation among the people living in the mill sections is reported by merchants in those sections.

The city of Durham itself is practically dead, the Saturday afternoon shopping crowds are missing from the main streets of the town, and even the Sunday promenaders are missing from Main street—inability to buy new clothing, it seems, is the cause that is halting the innocent pastime of the Sunday walkers.

The seeming essentials to a bride's hope chest these days are a gun and can opener.

Go to your Union Meetings

Don't say you are too tired; the weather is bad; or there is too much quibbling and "hot air" to interest me.

Every time you miss a meeting and leave it to the other fellow to look out for your interest, you are doing an injustice both to yourself and your organization.

Your views on especially vital subjects should be represented in discussion and by vote, and the only way for this to be done is for you to be at your union meeting.

You are responsible for the good and welfare of your organization, and non-attendance of union meetings on your part is not excuse enough for you to voice your opinion after a measure has been passed. It is then time for you to concur in what has been done and work in harmony with the officers and other members of your union.

Go to your union meetings regularly and induce others to do the same, because one important thing to remember is the meaning of the slogan:

"United we stand, Divided we fall."

COURT LASHES YELLOW DOG PRINCIPLE IN BONDING CASE

Applicant for Job Is Under Coercion, Intent Upon Getting First Pay Check, and Is Not Free to Exercise Will, Says Kansas Supreme Tribunal.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Washington, Aug. 14.—Another blow at the yellow dog contract has just been delivered by the Kansas supreme court in a decision filed with the legal information bureau of the American Federation of Labor. The decision is being studied by President Green.

The decree of the court is not yet available, but the language used by the court in leading up to the decree appears to leave no doubt as to the general character of the decision. The case before the court was not a yellow dog contract case, but was a surety bond case. The issue, however, was practically identical with the issue in yellow dog cases, and the court's language made that clear. The issue involves the public policy of such contracts.

The court dealt with the issue in terse, vigorous language, laying down postulates that are, it is believed here, bound to enter into future court decisions dealing with the yellow dog issue.

The court holds that, in signing a document as a condition precedent to obtaining a job, the employe does not have a free chance to exercise his will, but is under a form of coercion.

The case was the Fidelity and Deposit company vs. Davis, 284, Pac. 430, decided in February, 1930. The agreement required by the surety company bound the employe to any settlement made by the surety company.

"Employes who are required to give fidelity bonds before entering upon their duties," says the court, "are not in position to bargain or quibble with surety companies upon the form of an indemnity contract required before a bond will be issued. They need the job. It is their means of livelihood. They will sign such contracts as a matter of expediency without regard to whether they are freely and willingly entering into the contract. . . He does not have full understanding of the rights which he is waiving. He signs the contract merely as a means to an end, namely, to get on the job and get his pay check started. It probably cannot be said that under such conditions, strictly speaking, the employe is compelled to sign the contract under coercion, such as would be recognized in the law as a ground for subsequently avoiding the contract.

"The learned Professor Wigmore argues that such a contract can always be avoided, if any fraud or coercion is used in its inception, but that the courts are, therefore, not ousted from their jurisdiction by such contracts because the question of whether or not there has been a meeting of the minds, and a consent freely given, can always be litigated in the court. The trouble with that argument is that from a practical standpoint the employe really does not have any chance to exercise his free will in the matter, and while the law would not recognize it as coercion, yet he is forced to sign such a contract in order to qualify for his job by giving the requisite bond."

Davis Advocates Shorter Workday To Help Jobless

Adoption of 8-Hour Shifts by Industries Operating on 12-Hour Schedules Would Provide Many Jobs, Secretary Says.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Washington, Aug. 14.—Adoption of the shorter work day to relieve unemployment conditions was strongly urged by Secretary of Labor James J. Davis in a statement here.

"If those industries operating on a 12-hour day schedule would adopt the eight-hour day, there would be employment for one-third more men," Secretary Davis pointed out. A shorter week for those industries operating on a seven-day basis would have a like result, he said.

Davis, commenting on a recent survey of the iron and steel industry in the Birmingham, Ala., district, said: "The pay rolls of sixteen iron and steel plants show that only about 28 per cent of the employes are on an eight-hour day, nearly 42 per cent on a 10-hour day, 27 per cent on a 12-hour day, 45 per cent on a six-day week, 32 per cent alternate, having a six-day week one week and then two seven-day weeks. In other words, each third week is a six-day week, while 22 per cent have a straight seven-day week, and most of these have the 12-hour day.

"In the plants covered there were 4,434 employes. A straight eight-hour day, even with six days a week, would considerably more than double the employment, and if that district with one industry would go on an eight-hour day and five-day week it could regularly employ three men where it now employs one, which would make a very appreciable dent, if not entirely absorb, Birmingham's unemployed."

Secretary Davis added that the United States Steel corporattion and the Republic Steel corporation, which operate plants in the Birmingham district, have decreased working hours, but smaller mills have not followed their example. Other industries are also turning toward the shorter working day and week, he stated.

Textile Workers Crowd Halls for Union Message

Danville District Raises Vital Issues—Move Spreads for Labor Day Observation—Textile Bosses Say It Means Work Harder.

Huntsville, Ala., Aug. 7.—Despite extreme heat the textile workers in the south are turning out to meetings by the thousands. On Saturday, July 26, about 2,500 textile workers crowded into a hall here to listen to addresses by Organizers Livingstone and Emins and Vice-President Francis J. Gorman, of the United Textile Workers of America.

The speakers urged the workers to continue organizing activities and to keep the question of strike out of their minds.

Vice-President Gorman announced that Organizer Livingstone, of the United Textile Workers of America, would be placed in charge of the district from Columbus, Ga., to Huntsville. After a conference with Paul J. Smith, chairman of the southern organizing committee, Vice-President Gorman left for meetings in North Carolina and Virginia.

Two thousand members of Union No. 1685, Danville, met on Tuesday, July 29, to consider a report of the executive committee of the union in regard to the policy on the discrimination against the union's members and the stretch-out system. The organization has voted to endeavor to settle the grievance, and failing in this effort the whole situation will be placed before the convention of the United Textile Workers of America to be held in New York next month. A delegation from Danville will attend the convention, as well as delegations from Greensboro, N. C., and other textile centers of the south.

The movement is now spreading throughout the southern territory for the proper observance of Labor day. The mills work on Labor day and in their eagerness to further exploit the workers many employers have taken the opposite interpretation of the holiday, declaring it a day when the workers must labor. One case was brought to light where an overseer told his workers that it meant they must work harder on that day.

Unemployed Starve; Investors Prosper

Cleveland, Ohio.—"Prevailing absence of protection against unemployment, either through systematic measures of prevention or unemployment insurance, reflects discredit on all those responsible for the operation of large-scale enterprises," declares the Railway Labor Executives' association, composed of the chief executives of all the standard railroad labor organizations.

"It is time to say bluntly that there is something fundamentally wrong with an industrial system whereby workers are deprived of their subsistence in order that security holders may continue to draw unearned income," the statement continues. "The proposition that idle men must starve in order that idle property may earn returns is indefensible. Underfed children produce a greater social loss than underpriced stocks and bonds."

The association insists that if business executives refuse to voluntarily remedy the unemployment evil organized labor will demand that responsibility for protecting the livelihood of workers be imposed upon employers by law.

Appreciation

To the Readers of The Labor World:

During the campaign for County Offices, just closed, I appealed to Organized Labor in behalf of Mr. Hays Clark, Criminal Court Clerk, in whose office I am Chief Deputy, and the response was so generous I desire to express my sincerest appreciation to the friends who stood so loyally behind Mr. Clark and assured his re-election.

MATT GERLACH.

It has always been my privilege to claim the loyal friendship of the organized workers of Chattanooga, and the splendid majority given me for re-election as Criminal Court Clerk again proves that my claims were correct. During my entire career in public life it has been my purpose to so conduct the affairs entrusted to my care as to reflect credit upon those who have so generously supported me. I acknowledge a debt of gratitude to my many organized labor friends, and again sincerely thank you, one and all.

HAYS CLARK.

Our idea of a man truly going down in defeat is one with falling arches.

Dives probably had hay fever and just mistook it for Hell.

OUR PLATFORM

1. We stand for the best interest of the working people.
2. We are emphatically opposed to violence and intimidation at all times.
3. We are opposed to the Industrial Workers of the World and their methods.
4. We are opposed to Socialism as impractical and Bolshevism as un-American, and not being in accord with the policy of the American Federation of Labor.
5. We believe in the settlement of labor disputes by peaceable and conciliatory methods.
6. We believe in the mutuality of interest of all persons in industry and are opposed to those destructive forces that would decrease production at the expense of labor.
7. We believe that permanent prosperity for the wage-earner will be secured only when workers become home owners and we pledge our support to every sound movement to attain this end.
8. We believe in a wage system based on the skill and energy of the workman, insuring the advancement of the competent and stimulating the less skillful to greater efforts. We include in this a minimum scale for workmen.
9. We favor strict sanitary conditions and the adoption of modern methods for checking contagious disease, and for the protection of the lives of working people.
10. We favor the safeguarding of the lives of workmen in mills, mines and factories, and laws that will require such safety devices as may be necessary to bring this about and enforce fair conditions of employment for labor.

Thin, Pale, Weak

"I HAD been through a bad spell of sickness which left me very weak," says Mrs. Virginia Spruce, of Stapleton, Va. "I was pale and felt lifeless, and my strength did not return.

"I spent most of my time on the bed. I was very nervous, and the least thing upset me. I did not have strength enough to lift a broom. At times I would have bad headaches, which would hurt me until I could hardly see.

"Someone asked me why I did not try Cardui. I had read of it, so I thought I would see what it would do for me. It was really remarkable how I came out. My strength returned, and my health was better than it had been in years. I gained in weight about ten pounds. My color was good, and I ceased to suffer from headaches. I have told my friends about Cardui because I was benefited after taking it."

Here's a City That's Gone On 5-Day Week, But Hold All Cheers

New Orleans, Having Spent Like a Profligate to Lick the Street Car Men, Takes It Out on Clerks, Steno Girls and Uniformed Services After Wall Street Closes Doors.

New Orleans, Aug. 14.—All city employees, from Mayor Walmsley down to the humblest scrub woman in the city hall, are now enjoying a five-day week.

There's a reason.

The city is broke, having exceeded its budget by a half million dollars due to extraordinary expenses in breaking the street car strike in favor of the New Orleans Public Service, Inc.

And the white collar workers, as well as the boys who wear the blue overalls, and the dainty stenog, are paying the bill.

At the first of each and every year the honorable commission council, in grave and solemn debate, decides on exactly how much the city can spend gracefully without embarrassing the taxpayers, and the banks that lend the money—for be it known that the city dads are financially in a hole several miles below sea level with no hopes of reaching the top.

At the beginning of this year they made their budget—even as you and I—so much for this, so much for that, and all down the line.

Last year the street car strike bobbed up and it took all the ready cash in hand and what could be borrowed to assist the Public Service in licking the men who only wanted recognition of their union.

Uncle Sam also lost a few dollars, for deputy United States marshals, who in the main were more familiar with the inside of various jails than with the outside.

But that is neither here nor there.

The city council borrowed on next year's budget and blew it on gas bombs, special cops, private dicks and "fixings" to make the town safe for the Public Service.

Came then the glad 1930 and the hard-shell bankers wanted their money or security. As the city is practically mortgaged up to its ears to the various banks no money for expenses was forthcoming.

It did look bad for the grocer, the baker and the loan sharks who grow fat on the working men in this city, especially city employees. Two weeks passed without the ghost walking or even creeping.

The honorable commission council met, thought, adjourned.

Still the mazuma failed to materialize. Like a bombshell a brilliant thought struck the city dads.

Let's go to the big town near Hoboken, N. J., and borrow some jack.

They went and came back with a roll big enough to choke a horse—for the Chase National bank came across.

Why shouldn't they? Were they not interested in the street car strike, as witness various injunctions alleged to have been fathered by them?

But the roll faded away—and they couldn't get any more.

Taxes are coming in mighty slow, and in order to save their scalps the five-day rule was adopted by the commission council.

The city will save half a million in three months or less—and the merchants will be out just that much in the way of trade.

But there is another angle to the five-day week with five days' pay. It is said on reliable authority they are going to work the cops and several other departments six days on five days' pay—in cases of emergency, of course.

Injunction Evil Must Be Cured Says Olander

Legislative Remedy Must Be Applied, Institute of Public Affairs Is Told — Delay Is Grave Menace.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 14.—Serious consequences will follow continued misuse of the injunction in industrial disputes — misuse of judicial power is destroying liberty.

So declared Victor A. Olander, addressing the fourth annual Institute of Public Affairs at University of Virginia. Mr. Olander, who is secretary-treasurer of the Illinois State Federation of Labor, spoke as the designated representative of the American Federation of Labor by appointment of President Green.

Mr. Olander declared unions must be as free to organize and function as business. Turning aside from the strictly legal question, the speaker told his hearers that "the prosperity of business depends upon the purchasing power of the consumer. Yet business opposes increased wage standards that result in greater ability to purchase."

Employer Always Complainant.

The subject of Mr. Olander's discussion was the "Inequity of Injunctions" and he held to that theme, showing that the employer occupies the complainant's chair in equity proceedings against unions.

"It is the injunction system, as improperly used in labor disputes," he said, "that holds the unorganized workers to the so-called 'yellow dog' contracts—which are not enforceable under law—under which they are prevented from joining a trade union or from participating in any concerted action to obtain improved wages and working conditions.

"Though issued in the name of equity, the injunction is usually a denial of equity to the workers. As used in labor disputes, it has become a class weapon for use by one class of citizens, the employers, against another class, the workers.

Remedy Is Legislative.

"The injunction evil is a growing evil. Having been found effective to deny the rights of the poor and humble, it is being extended and unless checked it will, in time, engulf the entire citizenship. Even newspapers are being subjected to its jurisdiction.

"The remedy must be obtained through legislation. The supremacy of law over court orders must be asserted by the legislative branch of the government. The discretionary powers of the judiciary 'sitting in equity' must be subordinated to the basic principles of liberty as set forth in the constitution. Government by law must supersede government by judicial edict.

"The American Federattion of Labor and its various branches are urging congress and the state legislatures to enact laws needed to attain this end. In its efforts to secure the passage of anti-injunction legislation, the American Federation of Labor is not only seeking to restore the rights of the working people but to restore and perpetuate liberty in the interest of all citizens."

POOR VENTILATION LOWERS LABOR OUTPUT

Washington.—Employers who refuse to install proper devices to regulate temperature, humidity, air movement, and other atmospheric conditions are financially short-sighted, according to Dr. R. R. Sayers, chief surgeon of the United States bureau of mines.

From an investigation of the conditions at Butte, Mont., Dr. Sayers concludes that defective mine ventilation alone causes a loss of 30 per cent on the miner's output.

Factory and office temperature above 85 degrees Fahrenheit, Dr. Sayers declares, reduces output, although the reduction is less if the air circulates. High temperature also tends to increase accidents and has a debilitating effect on the general health of the workers.

Convict Labor Workers' Target In Mississippi

State Federation Head Protests Vigorously Against Employment of Prisoners on Hospital and in Making Auto Tags.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Jackson, Miss., Aug. 14.—Use of convict labor on the $5,000,000 hospital for the insane in competition with free labor and the purchase of automobile tags made by Louisiana penitentiary convicts was denounced by Holt E. J. Ross, of Laurel, president of the Mississippi State Federation of Labor. Those responsible will be held to accountability by organized labor, President Ross declared, and unless the practice is stopped voluntarily, then other means of stopping it will be undertaken by the federation, he warned.

Automobile tags for 1931 were purchased by the state from the Louisiana penitentiary through an agency. The Mississippi convicts, fifty in number, were ordered to the new hospital for the insane by the Bilbo building commission headed by Gov. Theodore G. Bilbo.

"The building trades group are the employes most vitally affected by this period of unemployment and depression, and why any state commission or official would want to rob these poor men of chances to earn a livelihood is beyond my comprehension," declared President Ross. "We were surprised and almost disgraced when a few days ago it was announced that contracts had been let for prison-made automobile tags. Of course all kinds of excuses were offered for this unwarranted and disgraceful act on the part of some of our state officials, but I predict that the workers will go to the polls and repudiate these parties at the next election.

"Now, we are further confronted with another equally obnoxious situation. There is absolutely no excuse whatsoever for using state prisoners on these state jobs that are financed by the taxpayers of the state when thousands of these taxpayers are walking the streets and begging for work so that they might earn an honest dollar to buy food and clothing.

"The State Federation of Labor is going to do everything in our power to see that this unfair competition is stopped, and unless it is voluntarily stopped immediately we are going to resort to other means of stopping it."

Gorman Charges Dan Mill Bosses With Duplicity

Shows Union Correctly Analyzed Situation When Wage Cut Was Made — Calls on Management to Co-operate.

Danville, Va., Aug. 14.—Three thousand members of the United Textile Workers' local union here heard Vice-President Francis J. Gorman, of the United Textile Workers of America, declare that union prophecy had come true with the announcement by the Dan and Riverside Mills that mills Nos. 3 and 4 would be closed to stop accumulation of surplus. The same company announcement declared curtailment would be effected in other mills.

Speaking for the executive board of the union Gorman outlined its policies and declared that the mill announcement confirmed the statement made by the union at the outset of the campaign when the union leaders declared the 10 per cent wage cut would make conditions worse. He said the inducement of more and steadier work held forth by the company had proved false and misleading.

Mr. Gorman said the officers of the company knew the exact state of affairs in the textile industry from the start, but desired by trying to force the workers into a strike, to make it appear to the stockholders and the general public that the union was responsible. He declared it is now admitted that the first half of 1930 had been more productive and profitable than the two previous years, demonstrating that the union has materially helped the situation, regardless of the opposition of the company officials.

"Now that several mills are closing down," Gorman told the meeting, "the people brought here from other states to take the places of local workers realize they have been fooled. The union wants to know why the management does not carry out the promises made to the stockholders to change over and produce marketable goods. The equipment is there, and with a co-operative agreement everyone concerned in the industry would benefit. There is a market at this time for white goods." The speaker reiterated the union's proposals to assist in the securing and maintenance of this market.

Another mass meeting will be held Saturday evening.

Mooney-Billings Work Described by Nockels

San Francisco.—Edward N. Nockels, secretary of the Chicago Federation of Labor, told the California supreme court of his thirteen years' work in behalf of Mooney and Billings now serving life sentences for their alleged participation in the bomb explosions on Preparedness day in 1916. Nockels explained how he located John MacDonald, confessed perjurer in the trials of the two men, and did other work in their behalf.

He said he knew of no money received by MacDonald except the expenses of his trip to the coast in 1921, which Nockels paid on behalf of the Chicago federation.

Last week Mrs. Echols wanted to go to the home of W. A. Myers, so Brother Echols drove her down on Pine street and left her and drove off. Myers had moved out on Clark street a year ago, so Mrs. Echols had to walk back. On the way back she stopped and bought a rolling pin. I don't know if she used it on him or not, but he came to work the next morning without any collar or tie. It looked suspicious to say the least.

BOARD IS ESTABLISHED TO SETTLE JURISDICTIONAL BUILDING DISPUTES

(By International Labor News Service.)

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 14.—A big step toward the elimination of jurisdictional disputes in the building trades was taken here when the executive committee of the National Association of Building Trades Employers and Building Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor meeting in joint session agreed on establishment of a national board of claims to pass on jurisdictional disputes. President M. J. McDonough headed the delegation from the building trades department.

Officials of the builders' association approved the agreement and it is to be submitted to the annual convention of the building trades department to be held in Boston in October, when the length of time the agreement is to run will be decided.

The board of claims is to hear petitions of only international unions. Local and sectional fights are to be decided by the international unions, although they may turn them over to the board of claims.

In a dispute between two or more international unions the board may decide the matter or refer it to arbitrators. In the latter case each union is to appoint an arbitrator and they are to agree upon an umpire. If an umpire cannot be agreed upon, one is to be appointed by the president of the building trades department from three names submitted by the unions.

In the case of arbitration the findings will be turned over to the board of claims, which will make effective the decision.

If a union fails to comply with the board's decision the building trades department is to decide upon a penalty. Where the failure to comply involves an employer the penalty is to be decided upon by the National Association of Building Trade Employers.

The agreement was hailed as a wonderful event for the public, labor and employers by Oscar W. Rosenthal, president of the Builders' Association of Chicago, who presided at the meeting.

M'GRADY HOLDS OLIVE BRANCH TO EMPLOYERS

Co-operation and Peace Is Labor's Goal.

A. F. OF L. OFFICIAL PLEADS FOR UNITY

Calls on Capital to "Sheathe Weapons of Force and Autocratic Control."

(By International Labor News Service.)

Salisbury, N. C., Aug. 21.—"The American Federation of Labor offers its fullest co-operation to the industrial leaders of North Carolina in constructively and peaceably solving the complex problems that confront industrial management and their workers, and we are prepared to give scientific, logical and invaluable aid in the problems of the standards of output, elimination and wasted duplication of processes, efficiency and co-operation."

That was the heart of the message delivered by Edward F. McGrady, representing the A. F. of L., at the banquet given in connection with the convention of the North Carolina State Federation of Labor here.

The speaker further said: "In the peaceful solution of these problems capital must make a substantial contribution. It must yield in its hostility to trade unions and it must sheathe its weapons of force and autocratic control. It must take the workers into its confidence and must welcome the stabilizing influence which collective bargaining brings to industry. It must avail itself of the services which the organization of the workers is prepared to give.

"The present trend of human thought and human endeavor," said Mr. McGrady, "is toward the promotion and establishment of harmonious relations between nations.

"Internal strife and external peace are so contradictory as to inspire the inquiry, 'Can a nation have war within and peace without?'

"Our modern civilization rests upon industry. Human life is so dependent upon the service of industry that we become appalled when we contemplate the direful results which would follow if, for any reason, the industrial life of the nation became paralyzed."

"Industrial corporations and trade unions represent a developed phase of industry. It is significant that the formation and development of industrial corporations and trade unions parallel each other.

"But notwithstanding the favorable attitude of labor toward the organization of corporations and employers' associations, many corporations have refused to recognize the right of working men and women to organize into trade unions.

"The wage theory advanced by organized labor is based upon the workers' economic power of production. Under the operation of such a plan the worker would receive a wage in proportion to his productive ability. Through this method he would automatically share in the benefits derived from the economies in industry, in the individual and collective efficiency that would be developed within the industry and in the just reward of his own individual efforts.

"The American Federation of Labor wants to be understood; we want to approach every industrial situation in a painstaking and co-operative spirit, hoping that our efforts will lead to better understandings and better industrial relations. Between capital and labor there is an interdependence so fixed and irrevocable as to make complete success attainable only from understanding and co-operation. We recognize that all economic readjustments require painstaking study. It is to these problems of industrial co-operation and understanding that modern trade unionism addresses itself. We always prefer the conference table to the strike field; we invite the closest scrutiny of our affairs; our books are open to all. We are dedicated to uplift the lowly, uproot ignorance, decrease dependence, develop manhood and womanhood and destroy tyranny.

"Finally, let me impress upon you that the American Federation of Labor is American to its heart's core."

Edgerton Hoists Old Scare Crow

Charlottesville, Va.—The old scare crow of "individual effort" and trade union restriction of output was raised by John E. Edgerton, president National Association of Manufacturers, at the Institute of Public Affairs.

Edgerton rehashed the yarn of thirty years ago that was used by the defunct Citizens' Alliance.

Without a trace of humor this anti-unionist insisted organized labor restricts output. He failed to state that even were this true trade unionists would be following the example of their employers who frankly announce that they favor this program, which they call "stabilization."

Disease Walks With Starvation As Southern Workers Struggle To Hold Jobs and Living Wage

Ravages of Dread Pellagra Add to Miseries of Sorely-Stricken Workers in Low-Wage Cotton Mill and Tobacco Communities—National Red Cross Plans House-to-House Canvass in Efforts to Check Ravages of Plague Which Rides Hand in Hand With Poverty.

Breaking ten-year records, pellagra—a poverty disease—is trapping hundreds of wage earners and farmers in a ravine of misery, with heat and drought sweeping and blistering down one slope, while unemployment, wage reductions and concentration of imported labor bear down the other. The affected region follows "the new industrialism" belt through those southern states affected by low-wage cotton mill and tobacco factory policies, hitting Virginia and the Carolinas hardest, veering across Alabama, northern Mississippi and Arkansas and taking its toll in the tenant farm regions of Texas.

International Labor News Service last week reported from Raleigh, N. C., that in the first six months of 1930 there were 468 deaths reported in that state and 1,442 new cases. Further inquiries have revealed a situation which is rapidly becoming more acute, aggravated by the drought, the unemployment, and the acute labor conditions which are arising out of the effort of the southern industrial workers to form their own labor organizations.

South Carolina Is Worst Sufferer.

Comparison of returns with those of 1928 show what South Carolina, now as then, is the greatest sufferer, both as to the number of cases and as to the number of deaths per unit of population. In 1928 there were 927 deaths in that state, or five deaths per 10,000 of population. North Carolina came next with 847 deaths, or 2.9 per 10,000 population. Third was Georgia with 846 deaths, and 2.6 cases per 10,000 population. Mississippi with 747 deaths and a smaller population showed a rate of 4.2 per population of 10,000. Alabama had 698 deaths, with 2.7 per unit of population, while Arkansas had 619 deaths, or 3.2 per unit. Texas had 848 deaths, but with its much greater population showed a rate of only 1.5 per unit.

2,587 Cases in First Five Months.

Returns for this year are not complete beyond the month of May, and the population figures are not available. However, it is perfectly clear that South Carolina still leads the pellagra procession this year, with 2,587 cases reported for the first five months of 1930 as against 1,470 in the same period of 1928. North Carolina shows 826 new cases, against 234 in the same period of 1928. Virginia has 227 new cases as against 149 in the same five months of 1928. Alabama has 226, the same as in 1928; while Arkansas has 251, as against 531 in 1928 first five months, showing a decided gain.

First inquiries at headquarters of the National Red Cross brought the statement that the pellagra conditions were most serious in Arkansas. Nothing was said of the situation in the Carolinas; the Mississippi situation was referred to as being especially serious in the delta region. Mississippi reports seem to be on a different basis, but indicate 4,147 cases for the first five months of 1928, and a reduction to 3,947 in this year. This is probably somewhat of a hangover from the flood condition of two years ago.

Georgia Registers Severe Increase.

Georgia also shows an increase to 268 cases this year as against 144 in 1928. So that the entire region known as the Piedmont section, from the name of the hills lying in the west of all these states, is decidedly worse off in the pellagra count in 1930 than it has been for some time.

The 1927 public health report has the following to say about pellagra: "The disease may occur anywhere and in anyone, but it is the poor man who is the chief sufferer from it. This explains why hard times, especially when accompanied by rising food prices, are likely to be followed by an increase in the disease. This is well illustrated by the great increase that took place in 1915 following the hard times brought on by the outbreak of the war in Europe in the summer of 1914, and by the great decrease in 1916 following the improvement of conditions that developed during 1915. Unfortunately, the upward trend of living cost in the fall and winter of 1916 brought about an increase of pellagra in 1917 in many localities. Similarly, the post-war deflation of 1920 was followed by an increase of pellagra in many localities in 1921."

Disease Walks With Starvation.

And now, with unemployment prevalent throughout the land, and in the last few months the drought added to that, the pinch of poverty is spreading abroad the plague of pellagra again—the disease that walks with starvation.

One peculiarity of the situation is that the National Red Cross seemed, when inquiry was first made, to be out of touch with the southern situation, depending, as it does, upon reports from its local chapters for its information. Although the North Carolina state board of health had appealed to the United States public health service for assistance in handling its situation, on account of the poverty of resources in that state, the Red Cross office seemed to think that the worst need was in Arkansas.

After inquiry had been made by International Labor News Service and The Labor World and after an ILNS representative offered figures on the number of cases current in the Carolinas it was stated that the Red Cross office had more information on the southern emergency than had at first appeared, and that it was planning to carry on a more or less intensive campaign against the pellagra in the Carolinas, operating through the local chapters of the organization.

House-to-House Canvass Is Planned.

The national office of the Red Cross, it was announced to ILNS, is now arranging for a house-to-house canvass of the pellagra-infested districts in the Carolinas and other southern states, to be made by local residents in cases where it is not too severe, and where no other assistance is available. In districts where the disease is more widespread the national Red Cross is asking for a canvass by trained observers, trained nurses where possible, and is offering to match with funds from the national organization all monies raised locally for this purpose.

The plan of the Red Cross is to distribute the antidote most commonly used, which is powdered yeast, where the cases seem to demand it; but especially to follow this up by detailed instructions as to the necessity of using milk and lean meats, and the planting of family garden patches and the use of the vegetables.

United States public health service doctors said that experiments made by various specialists with animals seem to show that when these are fed on a diet consisting of the rations ordinarily and habitually used by the people in the pellagra districts, a disease is developed which is similar in the animals to pellagra in human beings. And the same sort of experiments show that when the diet is changed, the disease disappears. A change of diet among persons in asylums and children in orphanages, where pellagra had been common, resulted in the wiping out of the disease.

June, July and August are usually the worst months for pellagra, both as to the number of cases and as to the number of deaths. But it seems that the Red Cross organization is only now becoming aware of the seriousness of the situation. Many lives can be saved by prompt work, but the underlying conditions of food scarcity and poverty will still remain.

PINKERTON SPY WANTS PAROLE; THREE UNIONISTS DODGE TRAP

(By A. F. of L. Direct News Service.)

Washington, Aug. 21.—The reported parole application of Harry Orchard, Pinkerton spy, who is serving a life sentence in an Idaho penitentiary for the assassination of former Gov. Steuenberg, of that state, Dec. 30, 1905, is of especial interest because of the agitation for the release of Mooney and Billings, who were convicted on perjured testimony.

Steuenberg was killed by a bomb placed at his home. This was one of the many outrages connected with the Coeur d'Alene and other strikes in those turbulent times.

Officers of the Western Federation of Miners—Charles H. Moyer, president; William D. Haywood, secretary, and George Pettibone, member of the union's general executive board—were secretly arrested in Denver, placed on a special train and rushed to Idaho, where they were charged with being implicated in the death of Steuenberg. The Western Federation was not affiliated with the A. F. of L., but the kidnapping aroused trade unionists, and protest meetings were held throughout the country.

The three unionists were imprisoned fifteen months. Haywood was tried first. The case opened May 9, 1907. He was acquitted July 28. The defense forced Harry Orchard, leading state witness, to confess that he threw the bomb. Orchard acknowledged he was a gambler, murderer and all-round criminal. The defense also claimed that James McFarland, Pinkerton detective, "coached" Orchard, and that the mine owners employed the Pinkertons to destroy the union.

Orchard's attempt to involve the three defendants was not supported, and the state relied, as in the Mooney-Billings cases, to create a public opinion hostile to the defendants by claiming they were radicals.

With the acquittal of Haywood, the other men were not tried and were finally released.

Haywood and Pettibone are dead. Moyer is living in the west since his retirement as president of the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, affiliated to A. F. of L., and successors of Western Federation of Miners.

The charges against the three men and methods employed to convict them, are similar to those used against Mooney and Billings. In both cases the leading witnesses for the prosecution were Harry Orchards.

MASS PRODUCTION IS COSTLY WHEN OUTPUT CAN'T BE SOLD

New York, Aug. 21.—The mass production system, in times of depression, is an added cost to manufacturers because of idle machinery, says Arno H. Johnson, writing in the Annalist, financial journal published in this city.

Mr. Johnson points out that workers can be laid off in times of depressions, but overhead charges and interest on costly machinery continues.

"The labor cost," he says, "has come to represent a smaller share of the cost of production, while fixed charges, such as interest on investment, machinery and plant facilities, have become a relatively larger item.

"The important point is the fact that in a period of decreasing volume, mass production has a more serious effect, because when labor costs represented a large share of the cost of production laborers could be laid off and the cost of production could be decreased proportionately with the decrease of volume.

"Now, when machines represent a large proportion of the cost, we have idle machine time which is charged into the cost of those units produced, increasing the cost per unit during the period when volume drops."

Under the old system the laborer could be given a vacation, but under mass production the idle machine eats up interest and other overhead charges. "This," said Mr. Johnson, "makes a drop in volume a serious thing to a manufacturer," who is confronted with the "great problems of maintaining high volume of production and the actual and real shrinkage in the ability of the consumer to buy at the same rate that he has purchased in the past."

FACTORY JOBS DROP.

Albany, N. Y.—A 4 per cent decrease in factory employment in this state between the middle of June and the middle of July is reported by Industrial Commissioner Frances Perkins.

Seasonal dullness and general depression occasioned this decline, said Miss Perkins. The only other year since 1914 when the decline for the corresponding period was as great was 1924, it was stated.

PEOPLE AWAKE TO CONDITIONS IN SOUTHLAND

Public Conscience Is Roused, Says Smith.

THIS FACT ALONE IS WORTH COST OF DRIVE

Child Labor and Illiteracy Immediate Objects of Attack by Progressives.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Birmingham, Ala., Aug. 21.—Taking stock of accomplishments as the first real Labor day in the south rolls around, the southern organization campaign of the American Federation of Labor begins to see results, Paul J. Smith, chairman, said.

Chairman Smith has just returned from a convention of the State Federation of Labor of North Carolina, held in Salisbury, where he addressed the delegates on the progress of the southern campaign. He said if the campaign disclosed no other accomplishments than the awakened public conscience to industrial and social-economic conditions in the south it would be worth all it cost in money and individual sacrifice.

Women Join Forces.

All the southern group of industrial states embraced in the organization campaign have awakened to the economic situation they are facing, Chairman Smith said. North Carolina is taking vigorous steps toward the safeguarding of children and combatting illiteracy. Officers of the Women Voters' League of North Carolina, interested exclusively in the welfare of children, appeared before the North Carolina Federation of Labor and urged support of legislation designed to take the children out of the textile mills and factories and keep them in school. The league is sponsoring a bill which would arbitrarily limit the labor of children under 16 years of age, in all industrial occupations, to eight hours a day and would, under a compulsory educational law, compel all children to finish at least the sixth grade in school, thus automatically taking them out of the mills and factories until they obtained at least a rudimentary education.

Green Urges Great Reform.

The American Federation of Labor, through its spokesman, President William Green, has urged this social reform in season and out. In his swings through Dixie President Green utterly condemned the situation where mill and factory profits and stockholders' dividends were wrung from the tiny bodies of children as reprehensible in the extreme.

The North Carolina federation proposes to get behind legislation looking toward the elimination of child labor in the state, President T. W. Wilson said.

Edward F. McGrady, legislative representative of the American Federation of Labor, and Paul J. Aymon, president of the Tennessee Federation of Labor, expressed the opinion that the taking of immature children out of the mills and factories in the south would go far in reducing adult unemployment. In speaking to the North Carolina convention both labor officials declared the shorter work week, if adopted in industry over the United States, would solve the unemployment situation for all time; the situation as it now exists cannot be cleared up in any other way.

Textile Owners Opposed.

It was emphasized that the National Manufacturers' association was in complete accord with the proposed reform in child labor. It was significantly pointed out, however, that the Cotton Textile Manufacturers' association was not a member of the manufacturers' association and was the only group of manufacturers opposing child labor reform, especially in the south. The reason for this opposition, it was said, is due entirely to the economic side. Cotton mill owners find it easy to exploit children. Delegates were shown figures whereby mill owners could actually double the wages of the mill workers without causing a ripple in the costs sheets.

Reports to the convention from textile delegates showed the workers were not impressed with the threats of mill owners to discharge workers joining the union. In Greensboro new members averaging 300 to 400 a week are being received into the local. The Cone mills continue to discharge key workers who join. It is reported that pellagra is devastating certain mill localities, due to insufficient nutrition food, workers being unable to exist on the wages paid, especially with the mills running on short time.

In commenting on the general progress made in the southern organization campaign, Chairman Smith said it exceeded the expectations of the committee and that he was immensely pleased with results thus far. A local union of longshoremen at New Orleans has been instituted with 5,060 members. Big gains among textile locals were reported in a number of mill sections of the south. Other crafts, Chairman Smith said, had made similar progress, not only in revamping old locals but in organizing new ones, including city central bodies.

PAUL J. SMITH IS HONORED BY LOYAL LEGION

Awarded Medal of Merit for Conspicuous Service.

PATRIOTIC BODY APPRECIATES WORK

Mine Worker Impresses National Organization With Activities in South.

(Special Correspondence)

Birmingham, Ala., Aug. 21.—Paul J. Smith, chairman of the southern organization campaign committee of the American Federation of Labor, has been informed that he has been awarded a medal of merit for the most meritorious and conspicuous service to labor during the last year, by the Loyal Labor Legion, a national organization which was organized at the beginning of the World war to aid in prosecuting the war and in keeping up the morale of the workers. Paul A. Vaccarelli, New York, is president of the legion.

The medal will be presented Labor day in New York at a special exercise which is being arranged.

Last year the medal was given to Edward F. McGrady, of Boston, legislative representative of the A. F. of L., for his valiant fight against the spread of communism and his other services to labor.

Mr. Smith is a member of the United Mine Workers of America and has been connected with organized labor for more than twenty-five years. He was chosen to carry out the American Federation of Labor plans in the southern organizing drive and has been in Birmingham since the first of the year.

In informing Chairman Smith of the choice of the executive council of the Loyal Legion, President Caccarelli said that the action of the council was unanimous and was taken after a careful canvass and with the unqualified approval of President William Green.

The Loyal Labor Legion performed distinguished service for the nation during the world war, not only in upholding the morale of the workers but in helping to maintain their right to organize into trade unions, and to strike when in their judgment it was necessary in maintaining the American standards of work and living. Since the war the organization has continued its work of helping workers generally.

Labor officials over the nation are congratulating Mr. Smith on the eward. The southern organizing campaign has gathered momentum since its inception and is now in full swing, with employers beginning to realize that the principles of trade unionism are in the south to stay.

Ford's Maimed Workers Ask for State Support

Detroit, Mich.—Maimed workers at the Ford plant who have been discharged are applying for state workmen's compensation. The Detroit Labor News says:

"Once again the keen and penetrating rays of fact have punctured the humanitarian claims of the motor mogul."

"During the past few weeks," the labor paper continues, "many of these workers have been fired because their days of usefulness were passing. Unable to secure employment elsewhere, the men, suffering from hernia, crippled hands, feet, legs and numerous other ailments resulting from their labor at Ford's, made application for state workmen's compensation."

Ford officials profess ignorance of this situation, but said they will "check up" any claim presented.

"What the Ford company will do is conjecture," said the Labor News, "but a firm that throws its derelicts upon the state for sustenance, after they have been rendered industrially useless while in its employ, should hardly lay claim to philanthropy and humanitarianism."

Men's Ideals Fade When They Are 50

New York.—"The cares of the world pull men down and cause them to lose their ideals," said Rev. Dr. Francis J. McConnell, bishop Methodist Episcopal church, in a sermon in this city.

"We are forever making adjustments and compromises," said the clergyman. "Without cynicism it can be said that today idealism seldom survives 50 years of age. Indeed, it has been observed that if a man's idealism does survive this age his associates think him erratic.

"It is impossible to say at just what time of life these ideals slip from the grasp, so imperceptible is their receding. That is all the more reason why we should be doubly on guard against these circumstantial forces of life that cause us to fall short of our mark."

LABOR QUERIES

Q.—Who said: "If productivity determines wages, as we are sometimes told, then American wages ought to be increased and not reduced."

A.—Thomas Thornton Read, professor of mining, Columbia university, New York City.

Q.—What was the "Statute of Laborers?"

A.—An attempt made in 1349 to fix the rate of wages at which laborers in England should be compelled to work. It followed the scourge of the "Black Death" and decreed that the men must work for their former employers and at the old wages.

Q.—How did the International Brotherhood of Papermakers originate?

A.—It had its beginning in a social club of papermachine tenders formed in Holyoke, Mass., in 1884. It developed into a national union and in 1893 was chartered by the American Federation of Labor as the United Brotherhood of Papermakers of America, with jurisdiction over the paper-making industry.

LABOR'S PLAN COMMON RULE.

At a meeting of the executive board Anti-Saloon League of America, Dr. F. Scott McBride, general superintendent, said:

"Within the rights of citizenship and democracy we will use every endeavor to elect a dry congress in both branches, and keep an avowed dry in the White House."

No one can object to any group of citizens voting for their friends. The American Federation of Labor was the first to publicly champion the nonpartisan policy and to call on trade unionists and sympathizers to vote for friends of remedial legislation and defeat opponents. Interests that have always secretly been nonpartisan professed to be shocked. In an attempt to frighten workers back into partisan camps, they were charged with attempting to "coerce lawmakers." This is un-American, we were told.

Citizens generally, however, have copied labor's plan that is now applied by wets, drys, business men, farmers, the professions and other groups. Increased non-partisanship has weakened party lines and party discipline that is now only advocated by privilege seekers.

The frank boast of Dr. McBride no longer attracts attention. It has become a national characteristic. Its success is shown in such important changes as popular election of senators, primary election laws, women's suffrage and the prohibition amendment. If trade unionists expect relief from the labor injunction they should boldly reaffirm their faith in non-partisanship. They should spiritually declare they will oppose any candidate who will not pledge to vote against government by injunction. They should vigorously apply this theory and keep in mind that those who oppose their election program use the same system. It is the old scheme of employers opposing trade unionism while they, themselves, are united in strong organizations. They picture to workers the beauties of individual effort, but these advisors fail to practice what they preach. The workers should be just as zealous and as determined as other voters in seeing that only justice-loving lawmakers are elected and that weasel agents of reaction are retired to private life. Campaigns to elect friends of labor also have an educational value, in that they mold the public mind to the need for legislative changes. Intelligent public opinion is the foundation for law-making.

Legislators rarely abandon old ideals unless there is a driving force "back home."

A SHOCKING SPECTACLE.

The Mooney case is a shocking spectacle to every citizen who has faith in our courts. Mooney was sentenced to be hung, but was imprisoned for life when agitation against the trial methods began. After the trial ended it was proven that Oxman, Oregon cattleman and star witness for the state, committed perjury when he testified that he saw Mooney and four other persons drive in an automobile to the scene of the bombing. Oxman said Mooney and Billings carried suitcases.

It is now known that Oxman was at Woodland, Cal., 90 miles from San Francisco, at the time he said he saw that automobile. The perjury was not proven until after the trial ended. Under California law appeals in such cases must be based on the record of the trial. This makes it impossible to secure a new trial and Mooney's release depends upon the governor.

Regardless of the bitterness, hate and confusion that has entered this case, Oxman's perjury is an indictment against men who juggle a court of justice for base ends, and who finally hang a human being. The infamy of this frame-up was emphasized when former Assistant District Attorney Brennan, who prosecuted the two men, told members of the state supreme court that the defendants had been tried on their general reputations "and outside circumstances."

High Court Decision Worries Pullman Co.

Chicago.—The United States supreme court's decision against the company "union" in the case of the Texas & New Orleans Railroad versus Brotherhood of Railway Clerks is worrying the Pullman company.

This monopolistic corporation has set up a company "union" into which it drives colored porters and maids, and is now alarmed lest the court's decision wrecks their scheme.

The company "explains" the decision in a statement to employes, who are assured that the court's rule "does not in any way affect or change the existing relations between the company and its employes."

A. Philip Randolph, general organizer of the Pullman porters affiliated to A. F. of L., answers the company's claim. He shows that these workers are denied the right to select representatives, just as did the Texas & New Orleans railroad. Intimidation and coercion maintain the Pullman "union," and the company pays all expenses of this fake institution.

The manager of the company "union" is paid by the company, and company-picked employes who serve as representatives of their fellow employes at so-called "wage" conferences are paid $2.50 a day by the company.

The Passing Show

Note and Comment on Things Doing in the March of Events

Before lack of rainfall began to concentrate attention again on the farm situation The Labor World published International Labor News Service dispatches describing the spread of pellagra, a poverty disease, in southern communities.

Underpaid and unemployed mill workers were reported falling victims of the dread malady.

It was not noticed that the country rose up and offered of its bounty.

Came the terrible piling up of evidence as to the suffering of agriculture. Came stories, as a consequence of drought, of the spread of pellagra among farmers whose crops were burning up and blowing away on dust-laden winds.

The country stirred and offered of its bounty.

May we not ask that all who are stricken be given help?

* * *

In a grocery store visited by this writer this week a clerk complained of his long day's work. "Well, why not get into the union?" he was asked.

He seemed amazed at the idea. He countered by asking:

"Why doesn't Hoover do something; then I could get a better job and get out of this."

"Yes, and if you got something better what about the next man in your job here?" he was asked. "How would that help him and all the other clerks?"

"Well, I'd be out of it," was the response.

Passing the buck is a poor way to betterment of conditions and it's what makes possible the continuance of bad conditions for a great many. Too many are always waiting for some one else to fix things for them.

Henry Ford declares that the automobile industry must come to a working year of ten months. It would seem as though that time already has arrived. Henry's prediction has a hollow sound, like the noise of a man beating upon the front page.

The Ford plant has just reopened after one of those lapses in operations variously accounted for as necessitated by installation of new machinery or reorganizing the paint shop for new colors, or something else that doesn't mean anything to the outsiders.

During the recent shut-down which took some 125,000 Ford and other employes of automobildom out of the assembly line routine for a rest, each man paid for his own "vacation."

An automobile year of ten months will sock the worker just as hard, whether he gets his two months off all by himself, or whether it is shared by several thousands of fellow "vacationers."

As a matter of fact this ten months business is one of the best Ford jokes in a long while.

* * *

Unquestionably American farmers have had their misfortunes, but out of these misfortunes we are getting new lights on what can be achieved by political pressure when that pressure is hooked up to an economic need.

First, out of the general farm situation, came the federal farm board, called the agency of farm relief.

Backed by large funds, the farm board demanded organization of farmers as a condition precedent to relief.

The farmers were required to organize, while trade unionists were and are being penalized for doing the same thing.

Now we find the government, through the interstate commerce commission, ordering freight rates cut in half on hay so that farmers impoverished by the drought may stand a chance of getting shipped food for hungry stock.

Meanwhile unemployed wage earners are being told that if they are patient and hang around long work will be available. The government has taken steps to start much work and a good deal has been started, but no such direct and speedy methods were invoked to feed hungry men, women and children as were invoked to get feed to hungry farm stock.

Henry Ford Says:

"Too Many Are Looking for Santa Claus"; But Henry's No Santa, Either

By FRANKLYN E. WOLFE

Depressions pass, adversity is followed in this country by prosperity, men recover from their difficulties, women will resume their regular work on a better basis of handling household problems and the country resumes a more normal aspect of affluence and plenty.

This is the historical sequence but during the depression it is difficult for the unemployed to see light through the dark woods of adversity. Preaching contentment to the hungry is of little avail.

Mr. Ford has given his workers a long "vacation" without pay, or in plain and truthful words, has laid off his entire force and left his workers to shift for themselves, live or die, until he was ready to reopen his factories. Even then he gave them a bitter dose in postponing the day when they might go back into his factory and resume earning wages to keep their families alive.

Automobile workers in the Detroit region are notoriously overworked and underpaid. In many instances machinery is run at times when it is dangerous to the safety of workers and many mechanics have been maimed because of the inordinate greed of factory owners who, as we have shown, wax enormously rich and spend millions on useless luxuries.

Mr. Ford has delivered himself of another utterance that will not help greatly, nor will it bring cheer to the pitiful middle-aged mechanic with graying hair who "walks the weary" looking for work and is told that young men only need apply. Mr. Ford says too many are "looking for Santa Claus" instead of "getting to work."

Mr. Ford kept tens of thousands of his men—men who have made his vast fortune—out of work. They weren't looking for Santa Claus. Many of them have written us pitiful letters—they want work, wages and a chance to live.

Courts Aid Utilities; New Theory Harmful

Charlottesville, Va.—Courts ignore the public when they rule that utility rates should be based on present replacement values, rather than on capital invested, said Julius T. Muench, city counselor of St. Louis, in an address to the Institute of Public Affairs.

Mr. Muench declared that the long line of decisions ending with the United States supreme court's ruling in the O'Fallon railroad case establishing the theory of rates based on present replacement values, runs contrary to public interest.

"The watchfulness and extravagance of a renewed valuation every time an application for a change in rates is made is one of the worst features of present-day utilities regulation," he said. "If the capital invested were used as the basis for the return, as Justice Brandeis proposes, then it is evident we would be dealing with facts rather than with estimates and guesswork.

"What the public needs is utilities that will render the most efficient service at the lowest possible charges. What the public actually gets, in many cases, is a utility operated primarily with a view to its financial exploitation. What the utilities are entitled to is a fair return on the capital fairly invested.

"The tremendous concentration of capital through the medium of holding companies, with all the opportunity this affords for the employment of high-powered valuation engineers, accountants and expert testifiers, has placed the public, with its traditional penuriousness, at a decided disadvantage," said Mr. Muench. He declared that a change in public sentiment is the only remedy for this condition.

POLISHERS ARE WINNING.

St. Louis, Mo.—Organized metal polishers are winning their strike against wage reductions. Six large shops cut rates 10 cents an hour. Five of them changed their minds.

UPHOLSTERERS URGE FIVE-DAY WORK WEEK

New York.—Upholsterers throughout the country are preparing for the fall season by including the five-day work week in new wage agreements, according to William Kohn, president of that international.

The general executive board is considering several of these proposals. President Kohn is stimulating the various locals to greater activity, and as a result substantial wage increases are recorded in every section.

Go to your Union Meetings

Don't say you are too tired; the weather is bad; or there is too much quibbling and "hot air" to interest me.

Every time you miss a meeting and leave it to the other fellow to look out for your interest, you are doing an injustice both to yourself and your organization.

Your views on especially vital subjects should be represented in discussion and by vote, and the only way for this to be done is for you to be at your union meeting.

You are responsible for the good and welfare of your organization, and non-attendance of union meetings on your part is not excuse enough for you to voice your opinion after a measure has been passed. It is then time for you to concur in what has been done and work in harmony with the officers and other members of your union.

Go to your union meetings regularly and induce others to do the same, because one important thing to remember is the meaning of the slogan:

"United we stand, Divided we fall."

LIMIT OUTPUT TO BOOST PROFITS

New York.—Employer economists have yelped themselves hoarse in condemnation of the alleged "restriction of output" by trade unionists to maintain a reasonable price for the use of their labor power.

It is remarkable what a change comes over the spirit of the economists when output restriction is adopted by employers for the exclusive benefit of investors who "earn" their living by clipping coupons and endorsing dividend checks.

The advantages of restriction of output for the benefit of employers and investors is described by Alfred J. Williams in an article in the Analist, the "journal of finance, commerce and banking" published by the New York Times company, on the "co-operative control of crude petroleum output."

Owners of the petroleum industry, Mr. Williams declares, have been struggling for years to gain control of the supply of the raw material in the oil industry—crude petroleum. Why have they sought this control? To pay higher wages and shorten the hours of labor of the men who do the work? Not at all. According to Mr. Williams the prospect of adequate restriction of output is bright and "will work for greater stabilization of earnings and security values."

The owners of some of the oil wells have reduced the output 50 per cent. Present work centers around bringing the recalcitrant operators, usually small ones, into the voluntary agreements. "Success for the movement will tend to stabilize prices and earnings," concludes Mr. Williams, "and should be a welcome factor in the situation from the point of view of the investor in oil securities."

It Seems That There Are But Few Bootleggers; Anyway, Few in Jail

Jails are undoubtedly overcrowded in this country, and the conditions in them are such as lead to revolt within and disgust without. But, according to figures prepared by Congressman Carl G. Bachmann, of West Virginia, it is not bootleggers who are crowding the jails.

There were 116,670 prisoners in state prisons on January 1, 1930, and of these only 4,037, or 3½ per cent, were violators of the prohibition laws. And of the 11,270 prisoners in federal penitentiaries, only 3,121, or 27½ per cent, had been convicted on liquor charges.

The increase of prison population is shown, by the statement quoted, to be due to convictions for theft, burglary, larceny, forgery, assault and hold-ups. The states of New York, Nevada, Montana and Arizona had at the time of this report (June) not one violator of anti-liquor laws in their state prisons. New Jersey had only one at that time, Wisconsin had two, and Utah had three. Is it so hard to break into these jails on liquor chages? At any rate, if there is crowding, it is on some other count or counts.

In nine states—California, Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Missouri, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Texas and Virginia—there were overcrowded conditions, as there were about 10,000 more prisoners than the jails were built to hold. But of that total, prohibition offenders amounted to only 1,619.

Speeding Up With Fewer Workers Has Effect of Pay Cut, Unionist Says

(By International Labor News Service.)

New York, Aug. 21.—Increase of production with fewer and fewer and fewer workers has the effect of a direct wage reduction, John P. Burke, president-secretary of the International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers, points out in a letter to the New York World. Mr. Burke writes:

"The editorial in the World August 1 under the heading 'High Wages With Falling Prices' fails to mention one phase of this question that, in my opinion, should be given more serious consideration by all who are interested in keeping the wheels of industry turning. It is true that a great many employers of labor now express themselves as being opposed to wage reductions because they fear the effects of a wage-slashing campaign upon general business conditions. However, I find that most employers of labor are not consistent in their professions against wage reductions. While, on the one hand, they are giving lip service to the benefits of high wages they are, on the other hand, doing everything within their power to reduce labor costs in their plants.

"They may not be reducing the wages of individual workers, but it should be noted that the trend of present-day industry is constantly to increase production with fewer and fewer workers employed. This policy has an effect upon the consuming power of the workers quite similar to a direct wage reduction. During recent years industry after industry has put into effect the most heartless speed-up system.

"In case after case one man today is doing the work formerly done by two or three men. A wholesale campaign of job elimination is now being conducted in industry after industry. How can employers say that wages are not being reduced when a much larger production is being turned out for a much smaller total labor cost?

"There will be no return of prosperity in America until employers recognize the fact that not only must high wages be paid to the workers who are employed but that jobs must be found for the workers who are being constantly eliminated by machine methods and speed-up devices."

Proposed Uniform Law Would Curb Child Labor

Text of Document Formulated by Commissioners Available—Punishment Is Provided for Parents and Employers.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Chicago, Ill., Aug. 21.—A uniform child labor law has been formulated and proposed by the national conference of commissioners on uniform state laws, meeting at Chicago, Aug. 13, and the text is now available. The proposed law would prohibit employment of children under 14 years of age in any gainful employment, excepting agriculture, domestic service and athletic games, and street trades, and regulates the hours and periods of labor in any one day or week.

Persons between 14 and 18 years of age are limited to eight hours per day and 48 hours per week and to the daylight period between 7 o'clock a.m. and 6 p.m.; must have not less than 30 minutes exclusive of work hours for meal time, and shall not spend more than 10 hours per day in work and school together.

Employers must procure and keep on file a permit for every such person so employed, which shall only be issued on proper showing of age, physical condition and educational qualifications, and prospective employment. Careful prescription of condftions for issuance of permits protect against their being had under wrong circumstances, and on the termination of employment the permit must be returned to the issuing officer and the child returned to school. Revocation of the permit is made the duty of the issuing officer upon proper showing, and periodical inspections of places of employment of minors are required to be made by officers issuing permits.

Employment of persons under 21 years of age is prohibited in cities of specified size before 6 o'clock a.m. or after 8 o'clock p.m. in any messenger or delivery service; while those under 18 years and those under 16 years are forbidden to be employed in occupations of hazardous and extra-hazardous character, which are listed for each class.

Females under 21 years of age are prohibited employment in any capacity requiring standing constantly, or in or about any mine or quarry, or in oiling or cleaning any machinery while in motion.

The street trades are carefully defined, for boys under 16 years of age, and permits and badges are provided for, with conditions for revocation thereof. Persons of corporations employing minors are held responsible for the possession of permit and badge by minors. Penalties are provided for employers as well as for parents or others who may attempt to secure permits by false representations as to age, physical condition or educational qualifications of minors.

PEOPLE LEAVING FARMS.

New York.—The new federal census shows a pronounced drift to cities and an abandonment of farm life, according to Dr. Walter Laidlaw, of the cities census committee.

Agriculturo, he points out, was abandoned in New York state five times faster during the past five years than during the five which preceded.

Back Quit Hurting

"I was in a very weak condition from a serious sickness," writes Mrs. I. Leonard, 571 Joseph St., New Orleans, La. "I was so weak, I wanted to sleep all the time. I did not have strength to do anything. My back ached nearly all the time. I was just in misery.

"My mother told me I must arouse myself from the sleepiness, and take something to help get my strength back. She had taken Cardui and had been helped, so I decided to take Cardui, too. After my first bottle, I could see that it was helping me. I took four bottles at this time. My strength came back and I gained weight. Pretty soon, I was my old self again.

"My back quit hurting, and I haven't had any more trouble since I took Cardui."

FOOD PRICES DROP 4.4 PER CENT AT RETAIL IN JUNE-TO-JUNE YEAR

Wholesale Prices Plunge Farther and Faster, Hitting Mainly Food and Farm Commodities, United States Bureau Report Discloses—Packer to Dealer Meat Prices Tumble Almost 24 Per Cent.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Washington, Aug. 21.—Retail food prices, according to the United States bureau of labor statistics, range from 40 to 133 per cent higher than in 1913, but have dropped in the year ending June 15 an average of 4.4 per cent.

Seven out of forty-two articles showed an increase during the year past, including oranges, raisins, prunes, tea, cabbage, potatoes and canned red salmon. Wheat cereal and corn meal remained the same, and all other prices dropped somewhat. Sirloin steak dropped from 51.2 cents to 47.9 cents, while other cuts of beef showed a little more drop. Pork prices did not drop so much, being only about 3 per cent. Leg of lamb is 11 per cent, and hens 14 per cent cheaper than a year ago. Butter at 43.3 cents is about 10 cents a pound less than a year before, or 20 per cent; while lard dropped about 9 per cent.

Meanwhile, wholesale prices are dropping at a much more rapid rate for the year period, and are showing still further reductions for July.

On the basis of the 1926 prices as an index of 100, all commodities have dropped in wholesale price from 98 in July, 1929, to 86.8 in June, 1930, and to 84 in July, 1930. All foods have shown a drop from 102.8 in July, 1929, to 90.5 in June, 1930, and further decline to 86.3 in July, 1930. Meats have declined in wholesale prices from 116.7 in July, 1929, to 99.9 in June, 1930, and further to 91.8 in July, 1930. This is a decline of 24.9 points, which can hardly be said to be reflected measureably in the retail decline.

There is a consistent decline along the whole line of commodities, but in none of them is it so marked as in food and farm products, excepting in the non-ferrous metals, which dropped in the year from 105.1 to 73.5; cattle feed, dropping from 120.5 to 94.8; and rubber, which declined from 43.9 to 23.6.

Power Inquiry Completed, Trade Commission Turns on Store Chains

Employes Released From Other Tasks Will Hasten Inquiry Into Vast Merchandising Field, With New Tabulating Machinery to Help Speed Task—Inquiry Covers 1,663 Systems and 65,367 Stores.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Washington, Aug. 21.—Investigation of chain store systems throughout the country by the federal trade commission will now be speeded up, the commission announces, as the number of workers has been increased owing to completion of other tasks, notably the public utilities inquiry.

Investigation of chain stores was began in 1928 and now is shown to be concerned with 1,663 separate systems, involving 65,367 stores.

Much of the preliminary work has been accomplished, in the preparation and sending out of questionnaires. Completion of this work now calls for the follow-up and review of reports now in, and the securing of reports where not yet made. This means the following up of several thousand chain store, co-operative chain, wholesale and independent retail schedules for supplementary information and for correction of obviously incomplete or erroneous returns.

Tabulating machines have been brought into use in handling the mass of documents and figures involved. Study of prices in various cities is also going forward.

Pledges Against Wage Reductions Keep Piling Up

"Nothing Would Make Situation Worse," Declares Steel Head; Far-Sighted Policy in This Enlightened Age," Says Heinz.

(By International Labor News Service.)

New York, Aug. 21.—Along with commendatory editorial comment from many quarters, telegraphed pledges not to reduce wages are reaching Printers' Ink in response to the question addressed to executives by Associate Editor Roy Dickinson. In this week's issue the magazine quotes the following:

J. L. Block, vice president, the Inland Steel company:

"Nothing would make the business situation worse than a reduction in wages. We are not contemplating any wage cuts."

C. W. Burgess, superintendent of public relations, Western Electric company:

"No wage reductions are contemplated at the Hawthorne Works of the Western Electric company."

Howard Heinz, president, H. J. Heinz company:

"It is the underpaid man when it is recognized that production is dependent upon purchasing power it is my judgment that large manufacturers will maintain wages being the far-sighted and the most constructive thing to do."

W. [illegible] Wrigley, Jr., chairman, and [illegible] Wrigley, Jr., company:

"The Wrigley company will not reduce present wage scale. Our business is better than last year but would not reduce wages if it were not."

Mr. Wrigley's wire, pertinent and to the point, adds another to the list of executives who believe wages mean purchasing power.

Charles G. Small, president, American Ice company:

"Referring to your message August 1st, our company has no intention of reducing wages or salaries. No reason for doing so and believe in good wages to aid purchasing power."

LABOR GIVEN CREDIT FOR HOLDING WAGES

Williamstown, Mass.—Organized labor was given credit for holding wage standards by Dr. Edwin F. Gay, of Harvard university, at the Institute of Politics here.

Past depressions in this country have been met by wage reductions, according to the speaker, but the protests of organized labor have resulted in the establishment of "the economy of high wages."

This policy, if continued, "is likely to be adopted more widely in other countries," said Dr. Gay. As a result, he added, labor has a better chance to throw up a defensive mechanism than ever before and to benefit by the lower cost of living.

TRADE UNION REVIVAL HELD BY NEGRO CLERIC

Birmingham, Ala.—An 11-day trade union revival is being conducted here among negro workers under the direction of Rev. George Reed, a negro minister. He is assisted by the A. F. of L. southern organizing committee.

The meetings are held in a public park and are attended each night by from 1,000 to 1,500 negro men and women. The clergyman declares that the Scriptures authorize the association of workers, and uses a Bible text each evening to defend the trade union movement.

U. M. W. Officials Refuse Comment On Mine Bombing

Hold Union Not Involved in Outrage at Providence, Ky., Where Strike Sanction Had Been Refused After Wage Cuts.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 21.—Officials of the United Mine Workers of America refuse to make any statement on the mine bombing situation at Providence, Ky., on the grounds that they believe the union is not involved in the case.

This was a partly organized field several months ago, when the men went out on a protest strike against low wages and wage cutting.

Wages were cut as low as $1.50 a day and only two and three days a week work at many of the mines in the district.

The international organization advised against this move as detrimental to the cause, but the strike was called anyway, without the sanction of the union headquarters.

Officials say that whether the bombing was a result of the strike or not cannot be determined as yet. However, they feel the union is in no way responsible for the conduct of their members.

The bombing at Providence was by airplane. Several bombs were dropped from a plane which is reported as having been definitely identified. One arrest has been made and a confession is alleged to have been made by the aviator, implicating two unidentified persons. Some of the bombs exploded, some did not and no great damage was done, though had the bombs fallen differently large numbers of persons might have lost their lives.

Indianapolis Acts To Forestall Wage-Cuts

Board of Works Adopts Provision for Minimum Rate, Even Though No Complaints Have Yet Been Registered.

Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 21.—The board of works of Indianapolis ordered clauses inserted in all contracts prohibiting payment of less than 35 cents hourly to workers engaged on city contract projects.

No reports having been received of payment less than this hourly wage on city projects, the action of the board of works was voluntary. It was to prevent the cutting of wages by contractors to "starvation figures" that the board ordered the clause inserted in all present and future contracts with the city.

City Attorney James E. Deery held the procedure lawful.

One great handicap to the progress of the labor movement is failure to demand the union label, shop card and working button.

A stitch in time saves nine and a consistent demand for union-made goods or service often prevents a strike or lockout.

The trade union movement was not built because of, but in spite of, our fellows who fail to demand union goods and union service.

NAVY WAGE RATES TO REMAIN; BOARD WILL NOT BE CONVENED

Decision of Officials in Harmony With Policy of Continuing Present Rates—No Protests Against Announcement of Continuance of Present Scales of Civilians—45,000 Wage Earners Affected by Department's Decision.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Washington, Aug. 25.—Next year will see no change in wage rates for civilian employes of the United States navy. The navy has announced that the navy wage board will not be reconvened this year.

Action of the navy is in harmony with the understanding reached in the White House unemployment conferences of November that changes in wage rates, up or down, was unadvisable pending more nearly normal conditions in industry.

It is understood that all parties to the navy wage situation regard the decision of the navy as being acceptable. It is understood also that the navy announcement followed intimations from President Hoover to Secretary Adams to the effect that national policy would be best served by an absence of any change in navy wage rates. The action affects the wages of about 45,000 workers in various parts of the United States.

Wage Cutting to Delay Recovery From Slump, Labor Points Out

A. F. of L. Warns of Big Danger in Pay Slashes, Citing Low Level of Buying and Wall Street Journal's Declaration That "Every Source of Purchasing Power Needs to Be Nursed and Developed" at Present Time.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Washington, Aug. 26.—Warning that there is danger that wage cuts will delay recovery from the present depression is given by the American Federation of Labor in its August monthly survey of business.

"With the summer dull season adding to depression during July, arguments for wage cuts are beginning to creep into trade journals," the survey says. "These arguments come largely from economists and arise from theories based on a static school of thought, quite at variance with principles laid down by business men in the conferences last fall. They argue as follows: Producers are receiving lower prices for their products; and therefore they must reduce by cutting wages. Wage reductions, they say, are part of the process of deflation; retail prices have also dropped so that the wage earners' dollar will buy more.

"Unless the danger of wage reductions is clear," the survey continues, "manufacturers are likely to seize upon these theories as an excuse to reduce their pay rolls. Already the number of wage cuts is growing."

Pay Cuts Delay Recovery.

The survey then points out irrefutable arguments against wage cutting. First, if wages are cut, buying power is reduced and recovery is further delayed, it says, adding: "Business reviews stress particularly the low level of buying power. 'Every source of purchasing power needs to be nursed and developed,' says the Wall Street Journal. Secondly, wage reductions mean lower living standards, a step backawrd in social development."

The survey goes on to show that unemployment has already cut wage earners' incomes and that costs can be reduced in other ways.

"If the manufacturer receives lower prices, he also pays lower prices for raw materials. Compared to last year, the cotton manufacturer pays 21 per cent less for his raw cotton; the price of iron and steel has fallen 7 per cent, leather 7 per cent, livestock 13 per cent, building materials 7 per cent, and the list might be continued indefinitely. In addition to these savings, forward-looking employers are cutting costs by improving efficiency.

Now Time to Look Ahead.

"Now, before business recovery begins, is the time to look ahead and plan for further progress. Past experience has taught this. Wage reductions lower living standards and reduce the buying power on which we must depend to increase production and keep the economic balance. If wages are cut, we will emerge from the present depression less able to maintain high production and prosperity."

The survey says that organized labor maintains that costs should be cut by improving efficiency, not by cutting wages. "Trade unions," it says, "can help to avoid wage cuts by actively participating in programs to reduce expense, and by demanding efficient management. Every wage cut reduces the future market and delays prosperity; every plant improvement hastens prosperity."

STOCK COMPANY AGAIN SCORES

Peruchi Players Delight Large Audiences — "The Ghost Train" Next Week.

Chattanooga continued to demonstrate its appreciation of a real theatrical attraction this week, when large audiences who filled the Bijou theater at every performance were rewarded with an excellent presentation of a side-splitting comedy by the Peruchi Players, who have instantly won their way into the hearts of a play-hungry public, and indicating a long and successful engagement locally. Lester Cohn and his nine-piece orchestra have also received their share of applause.

"The Ghost Train," next week's offering, is declared to top the list of the season's shivery mystery plays, and is recommended by Manager Ed Booth for those who enjoy a thriller, with plenty of good comedy mixed in to lighten the "heavy" spots. The company—every one of whom is a member of the Actors' Equity—is just hitting its stride, and a smooth-running presentation is certain, regardless of the requirements of any production offered.

Matinees will be given, as usual, on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday, with the unusually low admission prices of 25 and 35 cents.

Hopeful Note Declares Employment Gain Near

Widespread Wage-Cutting Taboo Among Big Employers—Some Reductions, Though, Are Seen as Due to Come.

(By International Labor News Service.)

New York City, Aug. 21.—Declarations of big employers that they are not cutting or going to cut wages were followed this week by announcement of findings by the Standard Statistics company, which finds that there will be some wage cuts, but no large-scale slashing.

This organization says most employers are opposed to wage cutting because of its reduction of purchasing power and retarding of general recovery.

"Although other wage cuts will probably be made," says the report, "it is at present questionable that a widespread slashing of rates will be witnessed."

WORKERS VICTIMIZED ON STATE ROADS JOBS

Denver.—Organized labor's demand that state roads' contractors observe the eight-hour law has unearthed other scandals.

The state industrial commission has found that employes are often forced to board at company houses and wait several weeks for their pay after they quit or were discharged.

PLAN A QUIET OBSERVANCE OF LABOR DAY

Usual Local Program Is Abandoned.

HELD TOO COSTLY BURDEN FOR SOME

Neighboring Cities for Most Part Will Have Modest Celebrations — Other Localities Plan Elaborate Ceremonies — Green at Syracuse.

Proclamation!

Whereas, in the upbuilding and maintenance of our American institutions Labor has played an important part, contributing much to the Great Democracy of which we are all so proud and which we love so well; and,

Whereas, national and state lawmaking bodies, in recognition of the contribution of this large group of our citizenship, have set apart a day of rest and recreation, designated as Labor Day;

Now, therefore, I, E. D. Bass, Mayor of the City of Chattanooga, do hereby proclaim Monday, September 1, 1930, Labor Day, and call upon all our people to unite in observance thereof.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the City of Chattanooga to be affixed, at Chattanooga, Tennessee, this the 26th day of August, 1930.

E. D. BASS,
Mayor.

Departing temporarily from a policy of a quarter-century or more, organized labor in Chattanooga will stage no formal celebration Monday in observance of the workers' national holiday.

Demonstrations, it is held, are expensive, and it is believed that many hundreds who are possibly not able financially to share the burden of an elaborate celebration would be put to an unnecessary strain in order to comply with what they would consider their duty to the cause should the usual program be carried out.

Accordingly, it was early decided to abandon completely a formal observance and allow each worker to spend the day with his family in such manner as desired. Inquiries generally developed the fact that quite a few will spend the week-end and the holiday in nearby cities and mountain resorts. Local amusements will offer a large variety to choose from. The various parks and amusement centers will be running full blast, with swimming included barring a sudden change in the weather. Motor boat races on the Tennessee river will doubtless draw good crowds, baseball will furnish the thrills for lovers of that sport, the Peruchi Players will undoubtedly play to capacity houses, and the various picture houses will be open during the usual hours.

The Policemen and Firemen's outing club has planned an all-day barbecue and picnic at Pan Gap.

In some cities and towns in the south elaborate ceremonies have been arranged, notably Columbia, S. C.; Mobile, Ala.; Columbus, Ga., Shreveport and New Orleans, La.

Memphis, Nashville and Jackson will stage the usual park programs, with speechmaking as a feature, while at Knoxville a more pretentious program has been prepared featuring the dedication of a labor temple recently purchased by the trades unionists of that city.

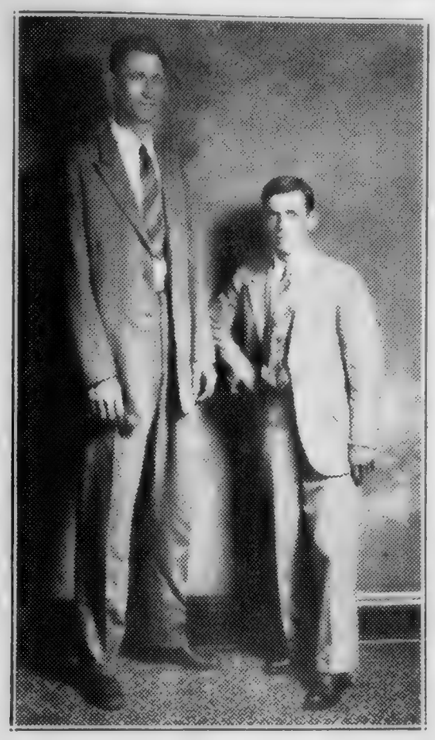
Chicago is planning the greatest celebration in its history, and it is hoped to have Tom Mooney as the speaker of the occasion. The Windy City committee has stirred the victim of possibly the greatest miscarriage of justice ever perpetrated in America, inducing him to become the orator of the day in the event the long-expected pardon is given Mooney in time for him to reach that city Monday.

President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, will deliver an address at Syracuse, N. Y., and Secretary Morrison will head the program at Baltimore.

MORE INDUSTRIAL DEATHS.

Albany, N. Y.—A "substantial increase" in the number of deaths caused by industrial accidents was recorded in June, as compared with May, according to Miss Frances Perkins, state industrial commissioner. The department of labor, in June, received 195 preliminary reports of deaths. The increases over May were blamed mainly to construction work, which reported fifty-four fatalities.

LIVE WIRE BUDDIES



Above, ladies and gentlemen, we present two "live-wires" of Local 175, Electrical Workers. Reading from left to right, they are Luther D. Vaughn and C. A. Frost.

Mr. Frost has been a member of the local union eighteen years, and has served in various official capacities, including delegate to Chattanooga Trades and Labor Council. He is now financial secretary of No. 175.

Mr. Vaughn has had a card in the local union for six years. He is a veteran of the World war.

Mr. Frost stands 5 feet 2¼ in his sock feet, while Mr. Vaughn is declared to measure 6 feet 4 even without any socks on.

They both are employed by the Terrell Electric company, and are frequently sent out on the same "job." It is said that on these occasions "Shorty" carries a stepladder which puts him into closer touch with his buddie whenever there are wires to be twisted.

2,508,151 HOPELESSLY JOBLESS FINAL CENSUS COUNT REVEALS

Two Per Cent. of Population in Single Classification. Bureau Working Out Relation to Total Gainfully Employed and Tabulating Other Out of Works.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Washington, Aug. 28.—The total number of persons usually working at gainful occupations reported in the census on April as "without a job, able to work and looking for a job," was 2,508,151, according to the preliminary returns now totaled by the census bureau.

This equals 2 per cent of the population of the country as enumerated at the same time. This is a very slight decimal increase over the advance report of some weeks ago, which was based upon about one-fourth of the territory of the nation, selected as representative.

The census bureau is now working on the various details of the tabulation, and at a later date will show the percentage of unemployed to the total number of gainful workers, as well as the other classifications of persons unemployed but not coming within the first classification. The tabulations will show a classification by sex, age, color, nativity, marital condition and family relationships; the occupation and industry in which these persons usually work; reasons given for being out of work or losing last job; and number of weeks unemployed.

It is estimated that on the basis of these figures the percentage of unemployed to those usually employed at gainful occupations is approximately 8 per cent.

The percentages now reported range from 0.5 per cent of the total population in South Dakota and Mississippi, to 3.3 per cent in Michigan. The states showing 3 per cent or over are: Rhode Island, 3.2; New Jersey, 3.2; Illinois, 3.1; Michigan, 3.3; Nevada, 3.1, and California, 3.0.

EVERY BUILDING TRADE UNION IN ROCHESTER ON 5-DAY WEEK

Roster Completed When Agreement Is Signed by Plumbers and Steamfitters—Wage Increases, Instead of Reductions, Also Agreed Upon.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Rochester, N. Y., Aug. 28.—The Building Trades Council of Rochester, affiliated with the Central Trades and Labor council and the state and American Federation of Labor, today is 100 per cent on the five-day week. All crafts of the building trades have now signed new agreements and in all cases the five-day week was granted by the employing groups with no reduction in wages and instead an increase.

The last of the building trades crafts to sign a new agreement was the Plumbers and Steamfitters' union, Local 13, of which Frank J. Hartnett is business agent. The new agreement was signed last week as of Aug. 1 by the conference board of the Plumbers and Steamfitters' union and representatives of the Association of Master Plumbers.

The new scale calls for $11.50 per day, an increase of 50 cents. On Jan. 1, 1931, this will be increased by 50 cents or to $12 per day. The five-day week at present, therefore, will allow the plumbers to earn $57.50 per week, while after the first of next year the weekly wage will be $60.

The signing of the agreement brings to a close efforts of officers of the various crafts within the building trades to obtain the five-day week. The shorter week has been spreading rapidly throughout the United States but Rochester bided its time until this year when old agreements expired.

Following are the rates for building trades crafts in Rochester:

Plumbers	$11.00
Electricians	11.00
Bricklayers	12.00
Carpenters	9.60
Sheet metal workers	10.16
Painters	9.60
Asbestos workers	11.00

The Engineers and laborers have no agreements but their scale is $1.25 and 70 cents per hour, respectively. The Asbestos Workers made a new agreement several months ago and were the first to sign up.

WAGE-EARNING MOTHERS FORCED INTO INDUSTRY

Washington.—The United States women's bureau again proves that wage-earning mothers are forced into industry.

The bureau has repeatedly refuted the claim that these women work for wages to secure pin-money.

The latest denial of this claim is the result of a study of 550 Cleveland mothers who are engaged in wage-earning occupations.

Most of the 550 women were doing full-time work away from home.

AYMON HOLDS COMMUNISM NOT A MENACE

Says Reds Have No Chance in South.

WORKERS ARE READY FOR UNITED ACTION

Widespread Plea for Protection of A. F. of L.—Poverty and Illiteracy Hand Maidens of Radicalism, Says Federation President.

From all sections of the south urgent appeals are constantly pouring in to the office of the southern organizing committee of the American Federation of Labor, said Paul J. Aymon, a guest of Central Body Monday night. "Please send representatives, so we can take advantage of the protection afforded by the American Federation of Labor against starvation wages and impossible working conditions," is the burden of the widespread plea, Mr. Aymon declared.

Although the southern campaign committee established headquarters but a few months ago, he said, with the intention of moving slowly and building a solid foundation for organization of poorly-paid workers in this territory, enthusiasm was immediately evident, and the committee, as well as executive officers of the American Federation of Labor, have been overwhelmed with the appeals for assistance coming from almost every state in the section.

"There is no problem so far as getting members is concerned," Mr. Aymon continued. "The great question which confronts us now is our ability to cope with the demands of these workers. To give such aid and relief as should be granted in the south would require the services of an army of representatives, and much money. Having a limited supply of each, we are doing our level best to extend such assistance as is possible, and organized labor in the south is growing by leaps and bounds. Principally in Alabama, Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina and Louisiana, scores of new locals have been instituted; existing organizations have been vastly strengthened, and at least ten new Central Bodies have been chartered in these states. In New Orleans a union of longshoremen was formed with 5,000 members to start."

Unemployment provides the greatest stumbling block in the progress of southern labor, the speaker declared. The only solution to this situation, he declared, is a reduction of hours and increases in wage scales. "There is no overproduction," Mr. Aymon declared, "but an under consumption. Production must be regulated by the ability of the consumer to buy, and surely a man without employment is marked off the list of consumers."

Mr. Aymon paid his respects to the "reds," declaring it is impossible for them to secure a foothold in the south because of the fact that southern workers are intensely patriotic. "We are proud of our great country," he said. "We realize that many things in our government are not right, but we believe in setting them right by legitimate means and through methods provided by the founders of this great democracy.

"Whatever growth the communist movement may attain in the south, however, is, as is true in other sections, to be laid at the door of the selfish, autocratic employer. Illiteracy and poverty are the hand maidens of radicalism, and an honest, law-abiding American citizen, driven to desperation by denial of the right to earn his daily bread, is sometimes fertile ground for sowing the seed of communism or any of the various other isms advanced by misguided people.

"We are continuing our progress, peaceably and with a purpose only to better conditions for all who live in our southland, and already we are assured that no power can prevent the complete and thorough organization, eventually, of southern workers."

Mr. Aymon was, as usual, given a hearty welcome by his "homefolks." He came up from Birmingham this week, addressed the state retail grocers Wednesday, as well as several local unions during the week. He will deliver a Labor day address at Shreveport, La., Monday, and Tuesday will speak at the annual convention of the Arkansas Federation of Labor at Pine Bluff.

KEEP HIM OUT!

HIGH PAY HELD NECESSARY STEP TO MAKING OF GREATER PROFITS

High Wage System One of Principal Pillars of American Prosperity, Declares Boston Department Store Man, Arguing for $25 Minimum Store Payments.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Washington, Aug. 28.—Declaring that it is no longer necessary to argue that high wages based on high production are good for business, Edward A. Filene, well known Boston department store owner, says in the Nation's Business for September that $25 a week is a perfectly reasonable minimum wage for retail store employes. This is well above the existing average wage and most retail store employes would consider themselves very fortunate to receive it.

Defending his suggestion, Mr. Filene writes:

"Higher wages, instead of being the bugbear which employers have traditionally imagined them to be, are one of the profitable necessities of efficiently managed business. A mere bonus system, even at its best, can not be so dependable a source of profits. A bonus may induce employes to work harder and it may from time to time inspire them to think of some improvement in method. Fatigue, however, is not conducive to thought; and the employer who depends too much on mere speeding up is not likely to develop a maximum of initiative among his employes.

"Scientific management does release this initiative. That is one of its prime specialties. It studies every employe, not merely to discover how he may be spurted to greater effort, but to discover his hidden potentialities.

Wealth of Talent Hidden.

"There is a wealth of talent in every organization, often unknown not only to the employer but to the individuals possessing it. Any properly managed organization will be equipped to explore and to utilize this hidden talent, stimulating it not only with financial but with non-financial incentives.

"An organization, either in production or distribution, which solves the wage problem in the scientific way is in a position to meet and beat all competition. It is particularly in a position to reduce prices, and, because it is guided by fact-finding, will reduce prices whenever possible.

"Other advantages of the high minimum wage will immediately occur to readers. I have purposely not mentioned them, because they are so obvious that any reference to them at the start might have drawn attention away from the greater advantages. It is obvious, for instance, that a $25 minimum wage would attract to any store which installed it, the highest grade salespeople.

"The employment office would have a better educated, more intelligent lot of applicants to draw from; and the public knowledge that the store is manned by such a select personnel would be the most desirable sort of advertisement.

High Wages Not Tax.

"The problem, however, cannot be approached successfully from that angle, for the moment one does it, he thinks of high wages in terms of a tax on the business which, with good luck, may be wholly or partially offset by proper publicity, just as he imagines a donation to some popular charity may prove in the end to be good business. But high wages are not a tax—not even a fair tax. They are part of the process of scientific management and one of the most necessary steps to greater profits."

Discussing the general effect of high wages, Mr. Filene says:

"It is no longer necessary to argue that high wages based on high production are good for business. In the United States, at least, industrial leaders are almost universally agreed that our high wage system is one of the principal pillars of American prosperity. High wages mean more buying power. More buying power means more sales. More sales force more production, more employment, still more buying power, still more sales, and still more production.

"The action of this beneficient cycle is now quite as well understood as is its opposite—the vicious circle beginning with the closing down of some industry, the consequent creation of unemployment, the resulting restriction of buying power, leading to fewer sales, still less production, more shutdowns, more unemployment, collapse, hard times."

Eckenrod Returns From Eastern Trip

W. E. Eckenrod, his son and daughter, returned this week from a two-weeks motor trip to eastern points, which included Washington, D. C. Mr. Eckenrod reports a fine vacation, with, however, a rather expensive auto accident while on the return journey. It was after nightfall, he said, when a "road hog" very neatly and decisively removed one side of the Eckenrod family bus, including fenders and running board. "And of course," Eck adds, plaintively, "the dumbbell didn't have any insurance."

Tough luck. Seventy bones.

Ed Weller Again Heads for Springs

Ed Weller, of Lodge 1450, Machinists, has decided that another "boiling out" at Hot Springs will make him fit and fiddle for the winter, and accordingly Mr. Weller left this week for the health resort for a couple of weeks' stay.

A. G. Linn Remains Confined to Home

A. G. Linn, secretary-treasurer of Chattanooga Typographical union, whose illness has been noted in these columns, remains in bed at his home, 505 Wyatt street. Mr. Linn is having an extended siege of the malady which attacked him several weeks ago, but is somewhat improved and it is hoped that the worst part is finished.

TYPOS SHOW GREAT RECORD OF PROGRESS

Convention Reports Recount Major Gains.

FACTS AND FIGURES PROVE INTERESTING

City of Chattanooga Bonds Are Included in Assets. Twenty-three Millions Spent for Defense—T. R. Cuthbert Delegate to Houston.

By JOHN H. CRUMP.

On Monday, Sept. 8, 1930, printers from all over the United States and Canada will convene in the seventy-fifth annual convention of the International Typographical union, at Houston, Tex.

Delegates from most of the 784 local unions will be there, representing 77,000 members. Besides the delegates who will attend to the business of the convention, there will be hundreds of visiting printers in the metropolis of Texas.

Chattanooga will be represented in Houston by T. R. Cuthbert, one of the younger members of No. 89. Mr. Cuthbert is employed by the Intertype Composing company.

Many interesting things are to be found in the reports of the officers of the International Typographical union, which were published in the August issue of the official paper, the Typographical Journal. A few of the facts contained in the reports which might be of interest to others than members of the typographical union are published herewith:

(When the year 1930 is mentioned, the fiscal year ending June 20, 1930, is meant unless otherwise stated.)

Cities of Tennessee bonds held by funds in the treasury of the union are as follows:

Mortuary fund:
Knoxville	$ 25,000.00
Memphis	25,150.00
Nashville	26,200.00
Pension fund:
Chattanooga	37,200.00
Total	$113,550.00

The union has spent a total of $22,878,081.34 for defense purposes, which includes strike benefits, reorganization work, special financial assistance to local unions and other defensive work since 1891.

Defense fund expenditures during 1930 were $126,179.84, which includes $43,203.58 spent in the Nashville Banner lockout.

Total receipts during the year from local typographical unions were $2,426,613.49, while the total benefits paid to the same unions were $1,641,896.84. The total receipts from all sources, being typographical locals, German-American locals, mailers, newspaper writers and miscellaneous, were $2,884,580.43, while the total benefits paid to all locals were $1,730,767.86.

Total receipts from Canadian locals were $137,379.54, while benefits paid to Canadian locals were $103,302.00.

The average payment per member to the pension fund during the year was $17.79, and the average payment per member to the mortuary fund was $5.93.

Of the 2,998 members of the union drawing pensions, there are six in Chattanooga.

During the twenty-two years pensions have been paid, $15,001,058.74 has been collected by the fund, while $12,170,787.00 has been paid out in pensions.

The average continuous membership of the 1,056 members who died during the year was 27.48, while the average age at death was 59.22.

Since 1892 death benefits have been paid to 25,542 members.

During 1930 a total of $372,022.40 was paid by members of the union for the maintenance of the Printers' Home at Colorado Springs, Colo. In 1891 only $21,548.36 was paid into the home fund; since that time the fund has received a total of $5,170,015.20.

In 1901 the average gross cost per resident of the home was $45.11, with a gross expenditure of $48,719.75. In 1930 the average gross cost per resident member was $124.54, with a gross expenditure of $457,892.38.

In 1892 the average age at death was 41 years. This has steadily increased until it has reached the present average of 59.22 years.

There are a total of 784 local unions

FRIDAY, AUGUST 30, 1930.

LABOR DAY EDITION.

Today's Labor World consists of fourteen pages—ninety-eight columns of news and feature stories and advertisements of local business houses. Included in the features are specially written articles by quite a number of the outstanding officials of the American labor movement. It is worthy of note that, although industrial and economic conditions have unquestionably been in a turmoil for many months, and major problems have vexed economists throughout the country, almost without exception these writers give voice to a spirit of optimism. In any event, their various opinions, based upon knowledge and experience, should be read and studied by every trades unionist who desires to maintain a position of intelligent thought and action in our movement.

In this issue are 187 separate advertisements of local business houses. This, at a time when business conditions are certainly far below normal, we consider an outstanding tribute to the organized labor movement of Chattanooga, for surely a firm which spends its money for space in organized labor's official publication is at least not antagonistic to our cause beyond redemption.

We take this occasion, therefore, to again and publicly express our appreciation for the uniform courtesy extended by local business houses, and hope our readers will give every advertisement closest attention and consideration.

With decidedly limited facilities, the publication of a paper even the size of this issue is quite a task, and —we hope you like it.

"MOVIES" PROSPER.

Fox Film corporation and its subsidiaries report increased profits of 40 per cent. during the past six months; the Loew corporation reports earnings for the past year equal to $10 per share, and other of the great combines, producers and exhibitors, report profits steadily mounting skyward.

The great movie concerns are to be congratulated upon their ability to show enormous increases in earnings at a time when many other industries are "in the red."

Another indication of prosperity in the theatrical world is the fact that legitimate stage attractions are "coming back." News stories to this effect are borne out locally in the announcement by Manager Addis, of the Memorial auditorium, that a large number of outstanding road shows have been booked to show at that house during the coming fall and winter. That Chattanooga will welcome the return of flesh-and-blood attractions, incidentally, is indicated in the packed houses which have greeted the Peruchi Players, a splendid stock company which has held the boards at the Bijou theater for the past three weeks, presenting "big-time" successes and featuring a nine-piece concert orchestra.

All these facts tend to indicate that the show world is "coming back" and the great prosperity of the movie producers and exhibitors is bound in the near future to be shared by the "legitimate" interests.

OPTIMISM COMES UP TO LOOK!

The mystery still deepens as to what force or forces are to be held responsible for the recent series of financial catastrophes which have engulfed the United States of North America and the world. But it is not difficult to understand the atmosphere of continued optimism that hovers about the centers from which the dividend checks issue.

In the melange of farm crop fatalities, southern pellegra plagues, falling stock prices, gang butcheries, factory shut downs, and bankruptcies, we ought, undoubtedly, to give thanks that the wheel we call civilization is not a total wreck.

In a table prepared by the Alexander Hamilton institute, showing the comparative net earnings of 158 companies in 28 groups for the first half years of 1928, 1929 and 1930, there is proof that "business as usual"—or even a little better—is the rule in some quarters. In 16 of the 28 groups the earnings are more than they were in the year 1928; with public utilities leading, and food and electrical equipment following in that order as second and third, respectively.

Automobiles earned less by over 70 million dollars, and automobile accessories less by over two million, than in 1928. Shoes and leather earned less by over three million dollars.

The increase of over three and one-half million in the net profits of machine manufacturing industries probably reflects the preparation in process for the next wave of industrial activity, as well as the enormous exports of machinery to Russia and other countries. This is about one and one-half million less of profits than the same group showed in 1929, which was the "peak" year all along the line.

Steel manufacture is usually taken as a barometer of industry generally, and the deliberate statement of the finance committee of the United States Steel corporation is generally accepted as more than a straw in the wind. This group of men have issued the following statement: "Indications in the industry point to an increase in the operations during the balance of this quarter (the third), with an improvement in volume during the last quarter of the year."

Computations of the National City bank's expert are based upon a study of comparative "net worth"—perhaps a more conservative method of indicating the profit-taking. He says: "For the companies in our tabulation, the net worth at the beginning of 1929 and 1930 is shown, the aggregate of $11,743,000,000 on the latter date being $1,212,000,000 or 11 per cent larger than a year previous and $1,870,000,000 or 19 per cent larger than two years previous."

Continuing, he states: "Current earnings of many companies are far from satisfactory, if considered in relation to market quotations of their stock at several times its book value, but, in relation to net assets, as shown on their audited balance sheets, the results so far this year hardly justify the loose talk so frequently heard that American business is 'flat on its back.'"

On the basis of the above showing of fundamental strength and current operations, the following statement, quoted from the Wall street correspondent of the Consolidated Press, is perhaps not too optomistic:

"From September on, comparisons of earnings will be vastly more favorable than those of the previous eight months. Consequently, sentiment, as well as fact, ought to produce a brighter picture during the remainder of the year."

* * *

We do know that in the last ten years there has not been the hit-or-miss production and merchandising that formerly prevailed. It is logical to expect a depletion of stocks of manufactured goods much sooner in the cycle than was the rule in previous depressions. People have not stopped eating or wearing clothes, and while economies have cut the loaf in thinner slices, the great bulk of the population have had some loaves to slice.

* * *

Whatever the reason for the falling retail and wholesale prices—whether gold shipments, production above consumer ability to buy, or clearing sales to get cash—these have a tendency to stimulate the further expenditure of cash. And it helps to get the wheel turning over again at a speed returning toward the normal.

* * *

Those who can remember back to the 1890's know that we have had worse times, with more of panic, and a population having had a lower level both of wages and of standards of living previous to the crisis. And it would be small credit to the great efforts of organized labor—as well as to what we believe to be a really more enlightened employing class—to have to say that the nation met this crisis with less available resources of financial and moral reserve, than in previous times.

IDLE STATISTICS MAY CONFUSE.

Citizens may be confused when they read preliminary census bureau figures that certain areas have but 2 and 3 per cent of their population unemployed. These figures are based on the number of persons who have no jobs and are seeking employment. They do not include workers who have been laid off. When a plant closes down and notifies employes that they are temporarily released, these are not included in the present census list of unemployed.

Last June, the census bureau used this system in seven industrial states, and Secretary of Commerce Lamont declared that if the theory were applied to the whole country it "would indicate much less unemployment than was generally estimated."

This reasoning is similar to the figures do not include industrial areas, where unemployment is more general than in agricultural sections. Since then Dr. Charles E. Persons, a statistician of standing, and a former member of Hoover's Northwestern unemployment committee, is reported as having withdrawn from the bureau of the census as a protest against policies that appear to minimize the number of unemployed.

STAND BY YOUR UNION.

Trade unionism is doubly necessary when crafty employers talk of no wage reductions while they silently attempt to undermine work standards. The unions are also necessary because of their power to mold public opinion in favor of injunction relief, old age pensions and other social legislation. Unions are not attacked in times of prosperity. Workers must be especially vigilant in times of depression.

Anti-union employers, to a large extent, have abandoned open opposition. Stealth and a destruction of the workers' morale are being used. The union hall is the forum where present conditions can be discussed and new plans agreed to on how to hold the lines.

"Stand by your union" should be the slogan of every worker who appreciates the value of organization. To become discouraged is to play into the hands of opponents of every form and guise.

THE CURIOUS WAYS OF CRIME.

It will shock a great many good people to find that forgery is on the increase, that embezzlement is decreasing and that very few bootleggers are in jail. For example, in all New Jersey there is only one incarcerated.

Crime is closely related to the type of society. The American Indian knew nothing of forgery, illicit distilling or automobile stealing.

Following the relation of crime to its civilization, we find the expected—stealing of food is increasing enormously in those districts worst hit by destruction of crops by drought.

An intelligent social effort along right lines would cure a great deal of our crime. But of course we shall probably continue to go the longest way around the problem.

LABOR QUERIES

Q.—Is it the law now that convict-made goods cannot be imported?

A.—It is the law that goods manufactured by convict labor cannot be imported, but a new law, effective January 1, 1932, will shut out goods that are in any manner produced by convict, forced, indentured or any kind of involuntary labor.

Q.—Will the American Legion and A. F. of L. exchange speakers this year?

A.—Yes. A Legion representative will address the A. F. of L. convention and vice versa. Both organizations will be in session at the same time in Boston.

What Next!

A new way of distinguishing different germs from each other by the speed with which each kind climbs up the fibres of a strip of wet blotting paper like firemen scaling a wall was reported by Dr. Cruickshank, of Aberdeen, Scotland, at a recent meeting of the Pathological Society of Great Britain and Ireland in Manchester, England.

If a strip of ordinary white blotting paper is dipped in water, Dr. Cruickshank recalled, the water rises a few inches in the paper by what is called capillarity. Using watery cultures containing living germs of well known varieties, Dr. Cruickshank tested the ability of these germs to climb into the blotting paper together with the watery part of the culture. To his surprise, he found these climbing abilities very different.

234,854 IDLE IN NEW YORK.

Washington. — There are 234,854 unemployed persons in New York City, according to preliminary figures issued by the bureau of the census. This is 3.4 per cent of the total population of 6,595,195. If the employed percentage were based on the number of employable persons the percentage would reach an alarming figure.

The Passing Show

Note and Comment on Things Doing in the March of Events

No job today. Nothing doing. And harsher words than that came to the ears of Prince M. Carlisle, a young man who went to New York to get a job, in these piping days of unemployment—and who found out how it goes with millions of others who look and find not. He tells a vivid story in the Churchman. He begins:

"Before I came here, I was a mediocre newspaper reporter in New England—just where doesn't matter. Nearly two months ago I came here with less than twenty dollars in my pockets, and no clothing other than what I wore.

"I knew no one in New York.

"The story of my search for work in my own line is the oft-repeated round of city editors, who frankly told me I had but slim chance of finding a place on a newspaper. Soon, completely broke, I gave up this vain hunt for reportorial work, and sought —still seek—any kind of work that will keep me from starvation.

"The hope inspired by long lines of employment agencies, in Sixth avenue, soon faded when I learned that fees must be paid in advance, and that frequently men are deliberately sent to positions for which they are obviously unfitted so that the same jobs can be sold and resold.

"Want ad pages carry only openings for highly specialized workers. One chain of theaters, for instance, demands that all ushers and doormen must not only be experienced, but they must be six feet tall, and between 20 and 25 years of age. An employer in any line can demand any specifications he wishes, and be sure of filling them, because the field from which he chooses is so large."

And then he tells how he lived: "At first, I slept in subways and lived on cigarets and coffee. But even this expense was too great after the first few weeks.

"The subways gave place to the parks, for the very simple reason that I had not the nickel for fare. The parks, however, are patrolled by police officers grown brutal with long experience with 'bums.' Sleepers on benches are frequently wakened by the whack of a night-stick against the soles of their blistered feet.

"My own experience of this kind had a twofold effect. First, it sent an electric pain through every vein of my hunger-racked body. And, second, it engendered in me a very real hatred for policemen, whose place in my esteem had already been quite low."

And then, pounded around and thrown into a great human company in which desperation had bitten hard, he found out about others:

"I have learned that many are on the verge of criminal careers. No doubt, many others have already embarked upon such careers.

"Not to condone (I sometimes wonder why) but rather to explain, let us think for a moment of the psychology of a jobless youth who turns to crime.

"In the first place, he is a skilled craftsman, capable of earning a very comfortable living. He is young. He is accustomed to such pleasures as a young worker enjoys—dancing, motion pictures, trips to amusement parks, and clean association with young women.

he is lured to New York. For weeks he walks the streets, answers want ads, haunts employment offices, always hearing the same old story—'Nothing open today.'

"At night he is drawn to Broadway. He must walk the streets, for he has no home. And he chooses to walk in the crowds—rather than in back alleys. He sees in Times Square the throbbing mass of pleasure-bent humans — bankers, bootleggers, shopgirls, show-girls, millionaires, clerks —every one seeking pleasure (most of them in vain, incidentally) and every one spending — spending on luxuries—spending in the mad hunt for happiness—spending money that would buy him coffee and a night's 'flop.' His head reels dizzily as he recalls three or four sleepless nights of 'carrying the banner.'"

It isn't a very nice picture, but it is what one man found. Armies of others have shared this blind search for a chance to live and be decent. And a great many very nice people have said, "My, my, isn't it too bad?"

It's Going to Be Great - - - Selling Goodyears in Chattanooga!

By W. R. FENN

FRANK P. LIDE, popular President of the Lookmont Tire Company, has recently engaged upon new and promising business activities elsewhere. His future should be rich in opportunities for service and success.

It has been my good fortune to acquire an interest in the Lookmont Tire Company and to take his place at the head of a sales and service organization worthy of the great tire they represent.

This opportunity fills me with enthusiasm, for as a Southerner, born and bred, I have had life-long knowledge of the advantages of Chattanooga both from a business point of view and as a city in which to make one's home.

And, of course, I have known that in Chattanooga, as in other cities and towns all over the country, Goodyear is unmistakably the leading tire.

My whole experience has been in the tire business. For several years I have had the pleasure of heading up a fast-stepping organization that put plenty of enthusiasm and successful effort into the selling of Goodyear tires.

The prospect before me of serving, with my associates, the great army of Goodyear users in Chattanooga has the strongest possible appeal.

I sell Goodyear tires because I believe that Goodyear superiority is real. I know that Goodyear tires do give you more for every dollar you put into them and that that is the only reason Goodyears outsell all others.

I know that, in the future, as in the past, more people will ride, in Chattanooga, on Goodyear tires than on any other kind.

I promise you that I shall devote all of my energies and abilities, in co-operation with the other members of the organization, to the end that the high type of service which Chattanooga expects from the Lookmont Tire Company is maintained and advanced in every possible way.

And — please call me "Bill."

You Help Me and I'll Help You

As far back as we can trace history—we find that each human is dependent to a certain extent on another human; that each race is dependent upon another—the great World War proved that no nation could live unto itself. It follows that your work helps us and that ours helps you, if we are successful then you are successful.

TAKE THIS LIVING ROOM SUITE FOR INSTANCE

We can best illustrate our statement with an item from our stock, so we take the above living room suite—the actual work in this suite contributes a living to the man who cut the wood, and the men who raise, sell and improve the steel, cotton, wool, dyes, etc. We will venture the statement that no less than one hundred men receive benefit from the sale of this one suite, who in turn spend their money in such a manner that it also helps you. We know that if we will all start to buying, times will begin to improve and unemployment will wane. What is true of the furniture industry is true of other lines. Let's all help the other fellow and likewise help ourselves by buying. Figure it out—it's been true all through the ages.

...Representative of Central Body and Member Board of Directors, Chamber of Commerce

...e I have been elected to the ...d of directors of the Chattanooga ...ber of Commerce several of my ...friends, and others who are not ...miliar with the work of the ...ber as I am, have asked me to ...em what the Chamber of Com... is and to explain why that or...ation is interested in our tax ...ms, our school system and other ... important civic matters. It ...curred to me that these same ...ons are probably in the minds ...reat many other friends and ...intances who would like to have ...answered, and for that reason ... prompted to write this article ...e Labor Day Edition of The ... World.

... object of the Chattanooga ...ber of Commerce, as defined in ...-laws, reads as follows:

...e object for which this organi... is formed is to promote the ...ic, industrial, civic and social ...e of Chattanooga and vicinity."

...bership in the Chamber of ...erce is not confined to any par... trade, profession or business, ... is open to every citizen of ...nooga—both men and women—...sire to contribute of their time, ... or money in the development ...attanooga. It is only natural ... an organization having several ...d members every member can... placed on an important active ...ttee, but last year there were ...than 500 of the members who ...erform some service for the ...nity by serving on one or more ... chamber's committees. Other ...rs who were not called upon ...e in such capacity performed ...ce nevertheless by the payment ...r membership fees to assist in ...g on the work of the organiza...

... Chamber of Commerce does not represent any trade group, professional group or business group, but it is representative of the entire city. There are many persons who have an idea that the Chamber of Commerce and the Chattanooga Manufacturers' association are the same organization, but that is not true. The manufacturers' association represents a group of our manufacturers, and the work of that organization, as I understand it, consists chiefly in the handling of freight traffic matters and other problems that are personal or individual to their members and naturally would be of a more or less selfish nature.

The Chamber of Commerce is a civic organization and its primary function is to interest itself in all matters that affect the entire citizenship and the taxpayers. The Chamber of Commerce is not an administrative organization. It is an organization whose purpose is to originate worthwhile projects. The citizens of every city determine by their aggressiveness what progress shall be made in the development of their city. The citizens of Chattanooga can be said to be one of the most aggressive people to be found in any city in the United States, and it is through the Chamber of Commerce that this aggressiveness and determination to develop our city is given expression and results attained.

In the membership of the Chamber of Commerce will be found men of widely divergent views on the subjects of religion, politics, economic and social matters, but it is indeed a pleasure to attend the meetings of their directors and witness how those feelings are submerged for the discussion of matters of vital interest to Chattanooga.

For the past two years it has been my pleasure as a representative of the Chattanooga Trades and Labor Council to attend practically every meeting of the directors of the Chamber of Commerce, and in that time there has never been any action taken, or even discussed, that would be inimical to the best interests of every citizen in Chattanooga and Hamilton county. On the other hand, every action taken has been in the best interest of our citizens.

All my former prejudice (and I admit that I was prejudiced) has been removed and I find in its place a great admiration for a group of men who can lay aside selfish interests to give of their time and talents to promote the interests of their home town.

I wish it were possible for every citizen of Chattanooga to attend these meetings for one year and come with an open mind.

Then, with a solid backing from all of us, complete co-operation and confidence in our Chamber of Commerce we would make of Chattanooga not only the largest city in the south, but the best city in the world in which to live and pass on to posterity.

I am firmly convinced that the Chattanooga Chamber of Commerce is operating in the best interest of the citizens of Chattanooga and I am sure that every one will agree with me if he will take the time and the effort to acquaint himself with the work of this organization.

No labor man should think that the Chamber of Commerce looks with disfavor on organized labor when they are spending much time in an effort to help the farmers of this territory to organize and propose to help them pass legislation for their protection. They realize this is an age of organization.

Immigration Ban Applied in Canada

Ottawa, Ontario.—The Dominion of Canada has prohibited immigration from continental Europe as the first move to solve Canada's unemployment problem. The only exception to the order will be admission of experienced farmers of suitable type, said W. A. Gordon, minister of colonization and immigration.

"The purpose of the order," he said, "is to prevent persons from coming to this country who will not be able to find work upon arrival and to protect the people of Canada from the burden of such unemployment. We regard the present situation as temporary but we propose to apply an effective remedy until unemployment conditions improve."

High Wage Called Depression Cure

Washington.—High wages will "snap us out" of the business depression, Eldridge R. Johnson, New Jersey capitalist, told President Hoover on a visit to the White House.

Johnson, former president Victor Graphophone company, said it will be "far easier to resume on a high-wage basis than on a low-wage basis."

"On a high-wage base," he said, "everything begins where it left off right away, whereas on a low-wage basis it will take years to build up again to the old standard."

The one thing that is worse than an occasional demand for the union label or union service, is never to demand them.

Unemployment Pay Proposed in East

Boston.—Unemployment insurance, creation of an unemployment insurance commission and an employers' mutual insurance company, are proposed by Representative Thomas Smith, Jr., of Fall River.

The commission would be composed of three state officials, and five private citizens, of whom at least two shall be members in good standing of a recognized trade union.

Claims for compensation, based on the length of unemployment and the causes thereof, would be filed with the proposed company by the employe. Overhead charges will be paid by the state.

Every employer member of the company shall pay 3 per cent of his pay roll.

Leadership--- a worthy ambition!

The desire to be "in front"---to lead the parade ---is inherent in every red-blooded American.

To excel in his particular line is a commendable goal sought by every good citizen.

In the business world, as in our personal affairs, Leadership may be attained only by displaying an ability to serve; to gain friends and to hold them by fair and honorable dealing.

On such a foundation has Miller Bros. Co. been built, and our reward has come in the thousands of citizens of this territory who have come to regard this store as their Department Store Home.

This business, since the day of its establishment, has striven for the good will and the friendship of the people and has constantly broadened its policies and expanded its facilities to meet the demands of its trade.

To merit your confidence, to impress you with our desire to serve you in a thoroughly acceptable manner, has been our constant aim and desire. And being deeply appreciative of the loyalty of our friends and patrons in the past, we come with this Labor Day message.

This store has long been the shopping center of the most discriminating patronage---it has been, and still is noted for its quality progressiveness and value aggressiveness. Every new customer who joins the legion of loyal supporters is a booster for us. Our buyers scan the markets many times each season for values---the best obtainable in style, service and intrinsic worth at each relative price.

OUR GREATEST ASSET IS THE CONFIDENCE OF OUR PATRONS---which we enjoy to an unusual extent, and it is our earnest intent that the same confidence will always be merited.

We earnestly wish for you a Most Successful and Happy Labor Day.

FORTY-NINTH ANNUAL PROGRAM WILL BE GREATEST IN HISTORY

Windy City Unionists Plan Pretentious Celebration of Workers' Progress — Labor's Radio Station to Broadcast Main Events.

Written for The Labor World
By HENRY FRANCIS PARKS
Program Director for Radio Station WCFL

The forty-ninth annual Labor day celebration given by the Chicago Federation of Labor contemplates one of the most pretentious as well as most interesting programs ever presented in its history.

Perhaps, from the economical standpoint, the most important portion of this program will be a forum of discussion about the unemployment situation. The principal speaker of the day is the Rev. John W. R. Maguire, of St. Viator's college, which is located at Bourbonnais, Ill. Father Maguire is recognized as an authority on sociological matters and brings to his discussions not only erudition, scholarly knowledge and vast experience, but a great wealth of sympathy. He is noted for his lack of prejudice or bias and also for the logical way in which he sensibly treats his subject. Always an eagerly looked for feature, he will but add to previous laurels when he appears on Labor day.

Another speaker of prime importance is the Chicago Federation of Labor's beloved leader and president, John Fitzpatrick. Modest, unostentatious and unassuming, John Fitzpatrick is possessed of an eloquence which carries his audience. Coupled with vast knowledge and extensive experience in the labor movement, his talks carry conviction.

The morning program, which commences at 9 o'clock, is mainly devoted to the children. It will be their annual field day. Children from Chicago's sixty-four school playgrounds will participate. This entire period will be a frolic for the children, who always have a major place in the affections of the labor movement. Labor's great radio station WCFL will have ample representation of its Junior Federation club. Many of its members will be present and take part in the frolics. "Uncle Henry," known to the labor world as Henry Francis Parks, director of programs and publicity of WCFL; "Cousin Bill" Leidig, president of the Barbers' union; "Cousin Jean" Sandac, the Junior Federation club officers, will be there in person.

One o'clock in the afternoon ushers in a monster parade by members of all the unions of organized labor. It is conservatively estimated that it will require at least one hour to review this event. Bands, famous personages and floats will also take part. This will be in the nature of a massive demonstration of the solidarity and unity of labor.

Immediately following the parade will be the program of speakers. It is expected that the speech of William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, which comes through WCFL, via the National Broadcasting company network, will be relayed to the grounds and there amplified through the loud speakers of the public address system.

The celebration of Labor day always means a day of pleasure and entertainment, in addition to the more serious parts of its observance. In that respect, nothing has been overlooked. Contracts with Charles M. Marsh have been closed which will bring the biggest series of spectacles ever presented on such an occasion. The "World Congress of Thrillers" will be a two-hour program of daring stunts and thrilling events. This entertainment will include motorcycle, auto and motorcycle polo, auto push ball and freak auto races.

The principal features of the entire program will be picked up by labor's famous radio station, WCFL, and broadcast on both this channel and also through its sister transmitter, on short wave, WXAA. This will bring the program to those unable to attend because of illness, absence from the city, etc.

Without exaggeration, the Labor day celebration on Sept. 1 will go down in labor's history as the most successful it has ever attempted.

Lower Birth Rate Due to New Times

Washington.—Continued decline in the nation's birth rate is traceable to changed living and other economic conditions, according to Dr. T. F. Murphy, chief of the bureau of vital statistics.

Many large apartment houses do not allow families with children to lease the apartments, and this is not an inducement for child rearing, he said.

Another potent factor is the increasing number of marriages where both husband and wife work, Dr. Murphy pointed out, and since the standard of living of the wage earner of today has been raised to such an extent that a family cannot live on the salary earned by the husband, the necessity for the wife to go out to work has arisen.

Just what effect this continued decline in birth rate will have is uncertain, Dr. Murphy said, but it will surely have a bearing on the economic future of this country. Whether or not there will be a time when the population ceases to increase and when production of commodities will have to be curtailed, is too far in the future to make a prediction with any degree of accuracy, he said.

Unionists in South Will Stick to Job

Greensboro, N. C.—"The A. F. of L. has come into the south until the workers are organized," said Francis J. Gorman, vice-president United Textile Workers, in an address at a mass meeting in this city.

The unionist described conditions in local textile mills as "disgraceful," and called on the workers to improve their situation by organizing.

Many workers have been victimized by mill managements, and Gorman declared it may be necessary to erect a tent city to care for evicted families.

"If we are forced to this action it will stand as an example of industrial brutality and exemplify the policy of rule or ruin," he said.

SALARY LEGISLATION PASSED BY CONGRESS

Washington.—The recent congress passed corrective salary legislation affecting lower-paid groups of government employes, many of them in the custodian service.

The Welch act of 1928 was intended to benefit these workers but its purpose was annulled by official interpretation and in favor of higher ups. The present legislation is applicable only to those who were cut off under the act of May 28, 1928

Congress failed to pass the 44-hour bill for postal workers. House leaders are charged with blocking the bill.

LABOR DAY ENTHUSES, INSPIRES EVERY LOYAL TRADES UNIONIST

Reminds Members of Organized Labor That They Are Brothers in True Sense of the Word, Says Secretary-Treasurer of Union Label Trades Department.

Written for The Labor World
By JOHN J. MANNING
Secretary-Treasurer Union Label Trades Department, A. F. of L.

Labor day! The very mention of it enthuses and inspires every loyal trade unionist.

It is the day on which all members of organized labor proudly take part in any demonstration staged in the verious cities. Young and old, men and women, apprentice and journeyman vie with each other to fittingly celebrate the day.

Trade unionists have every right to their enthusiasm and veneration for Labor day because labor contributes more than its share in making the wheels of society run smooth.

Our undaunted predecessors, realizing how much depended on labor, and being irked by long hours and small wages, banded themselves together to make conditions more bearable and recompense more adequate.

To their intelligence and courage, we owe our strong and mighty and unconquerable labor organizations of today. These craft organizations must be maintained and strengthened all the time because opposing forces would quickly take advantage of any laxity on our part to destroy the American labor movement.

Only by the strength of our unity can we maintain our working and living conditions secured by organization.

Labor day reminds the members of organized labor that they are brothers in the true sense of the word. Labor day stresses the fact that all union members must help each other by spending union-earned money for union-labeled products and union services of all kinds.

Without patronizing the union label, shop card and working button throughout the year, celebrating on Labor day becomes a mockery and a sham.

Make every day in the year label day and then Labor day will be truly and gloriously celebrated.

Soviet Convict Camp of 16,000 Is Pictured as Horror by Sea Captain

Piece of Cold Suet Offered Brings Galley Full Clamoring—Loading Pulp Wood, Prisoners Riot for Soap and Scraps of Food Near Archangel—Clothing Described as Rags.

(By International Labor News Service.)

New York City, Aug. 25.—Conditions in soviet convict camps are described by a British correspondent, G. D. Whitfield, who shipped as steward of a freighter to the White sea, and who spent three weeks in one of the camps near Archangel.

According to this writer, the camp contains 16,000 criminals and political prisoners, men, women and children, indiscriminately intermingled, except that the women are lodged in a separate "hut," which shelters over 3,000 persons. He says that men with their wives and children are in these camps, some of them claiming that they do not know the nature of the offenses for which they have been sent up. He describes their clothing as "consisting of such rags as they can pick up, and crawling with vermin;" and the living conditions as utterly lacking in sanitary arrangements and even without a chance to wash properly.

With reference to their food, he says: "On one occasion I offered one of them a piece of soap, and he almost went down on his knees to me in gratitude. Another time I tried to give one of a gang, who were loading wood pulp onto the ship, a piece of cold suet that we happened to have left over. Within 30 seconds I had the galley full of men clamoring for it. Once I managed to slip one of the poor devils a handful of beans. A guard saw him take it and marched him away.

A sinister light is thrown on the scene, in the remark of the writer, that "Convicts reported to have stolen anything from a ship disappear."

In this connection, it is significant that Captain Cyril Hellyer, of the British freighter Portfield, which recently unloaded a cargo of pulp wood from Archangel at Baltimore, refused to discuss the conditions in Russia.

Cigarmakers Honor George W. Perkins

Warm Tributes Paid to Veteran Labor Man Upon Fiftieth Anniversary of His Joining International Union.

GEORGE W. PERKINS

(By International Labor News Service.)

Chicago, Aug. 26.—An engrossed resolution was presented to George W. Perkins at a meeting of the Chicago Trades Union Label league upon the fiftieth anniversary of his becoming a member of the Cigarmakers' International union, of which he was the head for thirty-five years.

The resolution was presented by Cigarmakers' Local Union No. 14, of Chicago. John Fitzpatrick, president of the Chicago Federation of Labor, made the presentation address. Robert Van Horn, vice-president of the Cigarmakers' International union, brought the felicitations of the cigarmakers of the entire country to the happy occasion. Harry E. Scheck, president of the Chicago Trades Union Label league, gave expression to the sentiments of the affiliates of the league.

In accepting the engrossed resolution, Mr. Perkins, who is the president of the Union Label Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor, said in part:

"Thirty-eight years ago, after serving six years as president of the Albany Trades and Labor council, I was presented with an engrossed set of resolutions, and in accepting them I said that I would never do anything that would cause them to regret the act, and I repeat that pledge now.

"Thirty-four years ago, as editor of the Cigarmakers' Journal, I wrote that the prosperity of the people depends entirely on the wages they receive. The same thing applies today and nothing else will solve this problem of unemployment.

"The labor movement was born of necessity and will remain as long as this necessity remains. The men and women of industry must be organized into trade unions and made to see the importance of the union label to the success of the movement. The unionist who does not patronize the union label is false to his union, false to himself and false to his family."

LABOR DAY FINDS FEDERATION MAINTAINING ECONOMIC POSITION

Organized Labor Stands as Bulwark Against Lowering of Workers' Standards in Distressing Period of Unemployment.

Written for The Labor World
By WILLIAM GREEN
President, American Federation of Labor

WILLIAM GREEN

The celebration of Labor day this year will take place at a period when the unemployment situation is very serious indeed. About one year ago when we celebrated Labor day in 1929 it was clearly evident that a decided reaction had set in and the country was approaching a most unfavorable industrial condition. Each month the situation has grown steadily worse until now we find that there are more people unemployed on Labor day, 1930, than at any similar period since the World war. Naturally this problem of unemployment overshadows all other problems.

Fortunately, the American Federation of Labor has functioned in a most serviceable way all during the distressing period through which we have passed and are now passing. The economic facts and philosophy which the American Federation of Labor expounded regarding the establishment and maintenance of high wages have had a tremendous moral and restraining effect. The theory of high wages has made a tremendous appeal to the judgment and opinion of all classes of people associated with industry and industrial enterprises. In addition, the organized movement is recognized as a strong force in opposition to any reduction in wage standards and conditions of employment. It has exercised a powerful influence in the maintenance of wages, hours and conditions of employment. This fact has increased the confidence, faith and loyalty of the members of organized labor in the efficiency of the American Federation of Labor.

While the gravity of the unemployment problem holds a dominating position in the thoughts and minds of men and women there are many other problems of social and economic importance which are being given close attention and careful thought by the hosts of labor.

Labor is deeply interested in the development of strength and influence in the organized labor movement. We wish to enhance and enlarge the influence and service of the organized labor movement. Labor knows, from experience, that it is through organization, co-operation and collective bargaining that industry can be made more profitable and the wages and living standards of the masses of the people can be raised to a level commensurate with the requirements of American citizenship.

All the gains which labor has made came through organization and organized effort. No one can adequately measure the value of the service which organized labor has rendered to its own membership, directly, and, in an indirect way, to those who are not associated with it.

We are engaged in extending the organization among the non-union workers in every industrial section of the country. An intensive campaign of organization has been carried on in the south during the past year. In many cities and towns throughout the country the organization has inaugurated organization campaigns with marked degrees of success. Both the numerical and economic strength of the American Federation of Labor have been extended and increased.

In the legislative field we have pressed our claims for remedial legislation. Our activities have been directed along constructive lines. We have secured the passage of the old age pension legislation for the state of New York and elsewhere. We have secured the enactment of convict legislation and we have succeeded in bringing to the attention of the public the injustice and the evil of "yellow dog" contracts.

Substantial improvement has been secured in the enactment of workmen's compensation legislation and in legislation designed to better protect the employment of women in industry. We are pressing for favorable consideration of amendments to the immigration statutes. We shall continue our efforts in this line until we succeed in making the immigration restriction laws more nearly conform to the social and economic requirements of our nation. Substantial progress has been made in the improvement of retirement legislation for large groups of government employes. We shall continue our efforts in this direction until adequate and satisfactory retirement legislation is secured for government workers in this field. We have also specialized in our efforts to secure a reduction in the number of hours worked and in the number of days worked per week by government employes. The economic and social interests of these workers shall always be very close to the heart and mind of the American Federation of Labor.

The injunction relief legislation which was approved by the Toronto convention of the American Federation of Labor is of supreme importance. This bill is pending in the congress of the United States and its enactment must be regarded as of supreme legislative importance. The object and purpose of this legislation is to make labor free economically. Labor must not be singled out as a class to be made the class victims of injunction procedure. We wish to be governed by law and not by judicial decree. The entire influence of the organized labor movement must be mobilized in support of this legislation.

As labor enters into the spirit of Labor day and participates in its celebration this year it will keep in mind the lessons of the past and the problems of the future. It will vigorously contend for a practical and humane solution of the problem of unemployment and will reiterate its demand that this blight upon our civilization be permanently removed. To say that unemployment is a necessary evil is to admit the superiority of uncontrolled forces over intelligence, education and efficiency.

We hold that unemployment occurs because of the failure of industry and society to deal with it and to apply a remedy. The definite demand of labor, upon the celebration of labor's national holiday, is that industry and society immediately seek and secure a practical solution for the problem of unemployment.

Business in Control; Mighty Changes Due

Washington.—A gloomy picture of the economic situation in this country was presented by Congressman McFadden, chairman house banking and currency committee. We are only beginning to feel the effects of a gigantic readjustment, he said.

Mr. McFadden declared that big business, historically known as the "third estate," is in control of world affairs, and that the readjustment now on is directed by a group of "geniuses in the management of credit" who realize that optimism can not forever serve as the basis for constantly expanding credit.

"In 1928," he said, "these men decided that a readjustment was imperative, that the world's economic, industrial and financial procedure should undergo a complete change, or evolution. We must realize that we are going to a new price level much lower than that which has prevailed during the past decade. We must also realize that before this change is fully accomplished to the entire satisfaction of those who are directing it, much suffering and hardship will prevail.

"The war resulted in bringing our industrial and financial leaders into contact with the financial and industrial leaders of the rest of the world. One of the consequences of this contact was the assumption by our industrial and financial leaders of control of such affairs throughout the world."

The trade unionist who fails to demand the union label, shop card and working button can not claim any credit for advancing the cause of the workers.

The advances of the labor movement have always been up grade. A constant demand for union-made goods and service will remove some of the grade.

HISTORY OF LABOR DAY IS SIGNIFICANT OF PROGRESS

Monday, September 1, 1930, Marks Thirty-sixth Annual Celebration as Legal National Holiday Honoring Workers.

Labor Day, 1930, is the thirty-sixth annual celebration of Labor Day as a legal holiday.

The history of Labor Day is significant of the increasing strength and progress of organized labor.

Labor Day evolved from the aspiration of the labor movement; it was not handed down as a present. Its recognition as a legal holiday was won by labor; it was not given to labor.

The united voluntary efforts of the workers themselves established Labor Day as a national holiday long before any state legislature or the national legislature enacted the custom into statute law.

But the history of the statute law is in itself significant; it indicates the ever-increasing influence of the economic organizations of labor over the deliberations of law makers.

The Labor Day idea was originated by P. J. McGuire, for many years first vice-president of the American Federation of Labor.

At a meeting of the New York City Central Labor union, held on May 8, 1882, McGuire urged the propriety of setting aside one day in the year as a general holiday for the laboring people. He suggested that it be called "Labor Day."

The idea was adopted by the Central Labor Union and it staged a Labor Day parade and festival on the first Monday in September, 1882.

The A. F. of L. endorsed the national Labor Day holiday at its 1884 convention, held at Chicago. The convention unanimously adopted the following resolutions, introduced by A. C. Cameron, delegate from the Chicago Trades and Labor Alliance:

"Resolved, That the first Monday in September of each year be set apart as a laborers' national holiday, and that we recommend its observance by all wage workers irrespective of sex, calling or nationality."

Through the activity of the State Federation of Labor and the central bodies the Labor Day demand spread from city to city, and state to state.

Many municipal councils and state legislatures made it a legal holiday.

Oregon was the first state to accede to labor's demand that Labor Day be made a state holiday. The Oregon Labor Day law was signed by the governor on February 1, 1887. The legislatures of Colorado, Massachusetts, New Jersey and New York also made Labor Day a state holiday in 1887. Connecticut, Nebraska and Pennsylvania followed in 1889; Iowa and Ohio in 1890; Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Maine, Montana, New Hampshire, South Carolina, Tennessee and Washington in 1891; Alabama, Louisiana, Utah and Virginia in 1892, and California, Delaware, Florida, Minnesota, Rhode Island, Texas and Wisconsin in 1893.

In the meantime, A. F. of L. officials sought congressional legislation to make Labor Day a legal holiday, in conformity with the resolution of the 1884 convention. The bill became a law ten years later. It passed congress on June 28, 1894.

On June 29, 1894, President Cleveland signed the Labor Day law in the presence of Amos J. Cummings, Representative in congress from New York City. Mr. Cummings presented the pen and penholder used by President Cleveland to President Gompers.

In his annual report to the 1894 A. F. of L. convention, President Gompers said:

"National Labor Day—It affords me pleasure to be able to report that the demand by the A. F. of L. for making the first Monday in September of each year a legal holiday passed congress and was made a law on June 29, 1894."

In 1912, Labor Day had become universally recognized in this country and Porto Rico. It had proved of incalculable value to union members and fixed the attention of those indifferent or unfamiliar with the objects of organized labor. Such demonstrations of loyalty and devotion stimulate the spirit of brotherhood and unity in the common life.

TYPOS TO AID IDLE.

Chicago.—The local Typographical union voted to assess members 1 per cent on earnings for thirteen weeks to pay out-of-work benefits.

Out-of-Work Payment Favored by Educator

Iowa City, Ia.—Continued unemployment seems certain and out-of-work insurance is necessary, said Prof. Paul H. Douglas, of the University of Chicago, at an educators' conference here.

Prof. Douglas said there are 5,000,000 unemployed in this country, and there is no evidence that this figure is diminishing.

"Since it is inevitable for a long time to come, the American people ultimately will be driven to provide against this risk as they now provide against losses by fire, namely, by insurance," he said.

"It is sometimes said," continued Prof. Douglas, "that we should prevent unemployment rather than insure against it, but by alternating rates which an employer would have to pay for his insurance, according to the relative amount of unemployment in his plant, a stimulus toward regulation of production and employment will be instituted."

Injunction Violated; Judge Takes No Action

Nazareth, Pa.—Judge Stewart is conveniently overlooking repeated violations of his injunction by Representative Budenz, of the American Federation of Full Fashioned Hosiery Workers.

Budenz notified the judge he intended to violate the order. He picketts the Kramaer hosiery plant and calls on these workers to tear up their "yellow dog" agreement.

The trade union movement, like all great armies, has camp followers. They are the ones who fail to demand union-made goods and service.

One good turn deserves another. Your demand for the union label or union service will usually cause the other fellow to do the same for you.

INDUSTRIAL EMPLOYMENT SHOWS DECLINE; BELOW JUNE LEVEL

Shipbuilding Registers Only Gain, While Agricultural Implement Occupations Record Heaviest Loss—Seasonal Occupations Register Employment Gains.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Washington, Aug. 28.—The unemployment index report of the United States department of labor, based on 100 for the monthly average of 1926, shows a drop from last year's figures for July of 98.2, to 85.5 for June, 1930, and a further drop to 81.6 for July. The total pay roll index drop is even greater, being 98.2 for July of 1929, and 84.1 for June, 1930, to 75.9 for July.

Shipbuilding shows the only gain of this year over last, July of last year being at 107.5, while June, 1930, was 117.3, falling to 112.7 in July; with payroll index at 109.8 for last year, a showing of 119.0 in June, 1930, dropping to 113.3 for July.

Other gains over June of this year were in chemical fertilizers which gained to 65.6 in July over 62.8 in June, 1930; book and job printing, 100.3 for July over 99.2 for June; boots and shoes at 86.0 for July over 83.3 for June; sugar refining at 99.8 for July over 93.5 for June; flour at 97.7 for July over 95.5 for June, and ice cream at 102.8 over 99.2 for June. These are all seasonal gains.

The most decided drop in the year was in agricultural machinery, which stood at 122.2 in June, 1929, but fell to 91.5 in June, 1930, an dagain to 79.4 in July, while the pay roll drop was even worse, from 121.9 in June, 1929; to 81.3 in June, 1930, and 63.8 in July. Automobiles slumped from 120.5 in June, 1929, to 91.5 in June, 1930, and again to 82.9 in July, with a more than corresponding drop in pay roll from 107.2 last year to 86.6 in June, 1930, and 70.4 in July.

Other seasonal drops were in cotton goods, hosiery and knit goods, silk goods, carpets and rugs, millinery and lace goods, and glass.

Radio, a relatively new factor industrially, which has not been included in the reports of the department of labor, showed an increase in employment of 25.7 for July.

Outdoor employments, such as highway construction and installation of gas-pipe lines, [illegible] in the monthly summary of [illegible] to have afforded employment to many men, to which the demand for men in telegraph and other public utility construction also added [illegible].

Business Recovery Not Yet Visible

New York.—There [illegible] in prevailing business facts to indicate the end of the business depression, declares the Annalist, an authoritative journal of commerce and finance.

Ballyho pipers for prosperity by proclamation claim that business conditions cannot be worse than they are now and that therefore improvement is the next inevitable step.

"It would be a welcome discovery to find in the current records of business the evidence that the 'traditional darkest hour just before the dawn had arrived, and was even now passing into new brightness," says the Annalist. "That evidence is not visible, however; the records suggest, on the contrary, that some further general decline in business must be endured. Building contracts, the commodity price level, freight loadings, steel and electric power production, and automobiles, all clearly fail to point upward."

BRITISH IDLE INCREASE.

London, England.—The government's unemployment report as of July 28 gave a total of 2,011,467. Slightly more than a year ago the number was 857,338.

Cold Storage Stocks Show Plenty of Food

Washington.—Reports by the department of agriculture on stocks of frozen meats and other food in cold storage on Aug. 1 show that the drouth has not endangered the nation's food supply.

Case eggs in storage totaled 11,202,000 cases, compared with 8,962,000 one year ago. Frozen eggs increased to 116,358,000 pounds from 91,488,000 last year.

There were 810,974,000 pounds of various kinds of meat in cold storage; creamery butter, 145,297,000 pounds, and more than 100,000,000 pounds of cheese. Frozen poultry totaled 46,890,000 pounds.

Indiana Officials Stop Road Gouging

Indianapolis.—The board of public works announces it will provide in every contract for public work in this city that labor shall be paid a fair wage.

Contractors have been estimating a labor charge of 50 cents an hour and when they secure the contract beat down the wage to 25 and even 20 cents an hour.

The gyping contractors are squirming under the publicity given their unfair practices.

MACHINE-MADE WEALTH CREATES A NEW PROBLEM FOR SOCIETY

Labor Day Message of Federal Council of Churches Declares Modes of Thought and Ethical Ideas Have Not Kept Pace With Industrial Civilization.

(Special Correspondence)

New York, Aug. 27.—"Belief that mere increase in wealth would benefit equitably all persons of society has proved to be mistaken," says the commission on the church and social service, Federal Council of the Churches of Christ, in its "Labor Sunday Message, 1930."

The churchmen declare that our modes of thought and our ethical ideas have not kept pace with our industrial civilization.

"To express our religious principles in terms of contemporary society is, therefore, particularly difficult and especially urgent," it is stated.

"The high productive capacity of modern industry has created wealth. But it has given us no answer to the problem of the distribution of wealth in accordance with the religious principles of religion and love. The wealth it has created has flowed in undue proportion into the hands of those who own the machines.

"The high productivity of the machine has confronted America with the problem of technological unemployment. It has made the competitive struggle more intense and has tempted many manufacturers, in the fever of competition, to disregard ordinary prudence in production. It has thus multiplied the evils of so-called overproduction and consequent unemployment. Furthermore, machine production by transferring skill from the worker to the instrument has placed a premium upon youthful stamina rather than the experience of age. The result is that middle-aged men find it increasingly difficult to secure employment and men over 55 find it equally difficult to hold positions.

"No more serious charge can be made against our generation than that it has been socially so blind and morally so callous that it has been unwilling to divert sufficient profits of modern industry to store up reserves for the protection of the unemployed and the security of the aged. It has insisted on the right of property to dividends but has concerned itself too little with the right of workers to security or employment and to protection in old age.

"As a result millions who have a just claim upon industry have been forced to accept the bread of charity and multitudes have been thrown as public charges upon the resources of municipalities and states. Moreover, a constant army of unemployed workers imperil the living standards of those who have employment by increasing the competition of workers for jobs."

The churchmen say it may not be the business of the church to define the principle of unemployment insurance and old age pensions, "but every dictate of religious imagination and common sense forces us to accept this social obligation and to urge those in positions of responsibility to work out its practical application."

Higher Wages Lure Immigrants; Ideal Not Reached, Probe Shows

By MARY V. ROBINSON
United States Women's Bureau.

In a survey of 2,146 wage-earning women who were born overseas and are living in certain sections of Philadelphia and the Lehigh valley, "better living" was frequently the reason given for coming to America.

A mere glance around homes visited discloses that in many instances these immigrants have fallen far short of their goal.

The bureau of municipal research, in Philadelphia, recommended as a standard for the housing of the wage-earners' family in health and decency a six-room house facing a street and containing a bathroom, laundry tubs, furnace and facilities for cooking and lighting with gas.

An analysis of the data collected in the women's bureau study shows that for the Lehigh valley, even when several families living co-operatively in a house of six rooms or more are considered as one household, that one-half of the dwellings visited fell below this standard.

In Philadelphia more than three-fifths failed to measure up to the requirement. Eleven houses were encountered with 12, 13 or 15 people occupying six rooms.

Too often the women interviewed were living in a crowded house devoid of all modern conveniences, located perhaps in a blind alley, and bearing the earmarks of distressing poverty. The kitchen in a number of instances answered also for dining room, living room and bedroom.

In the Lehigh valley, it was not uncommon to find two, three, or more families occupying a house built for a single family, the one kitchen serving as a community room where each woman cooked her family's meals on the common stove and where everybody congregated.

The trade unionist who fails to demand union goods and union service is blind to his own best interests.

Equity and Agents Celebrate Peace

FRANK GILMORE
President Actors' Equity Association.

New York.—A group of theatrical casting agents gave a dinner to officials of Actors' Equity association in celebration of the end of a long fight which at one time was carried to the United States supreme court.

Casting agents are employment agencies for actors. Charges have often been so excessive, and other conditions so objectionable, that the unionized actors agreed they would only patronize agents who were licensed by them.

The agents who were not licensed appealed to the courts on the ground that their "business" was injured.

As a result of protracted negotiations an agreement was signed. Frank Gilmore, president of Equity, described the agreement as "another of Equity's dreams come true." He said it marked the first settlement of its kind in the theater world, as everywhere else actors and agents are at swords' points.

"WE ARE NOT ILLEGAL," SAYS RADIO MONOPOLY

Washington.—Units of the radio trust filed their answer to the government's plea that they be dissolved.

The corporations acknowledge that their stock ownership is interlocked and they admit interlicensing of patents, but they assure the court that conspiracy in restraint of trade is the very last thing they have in mind.

Defendants include the Radio Corportion of America, General Electric, American Telephone and Telegraph and Westinghouse Electric.

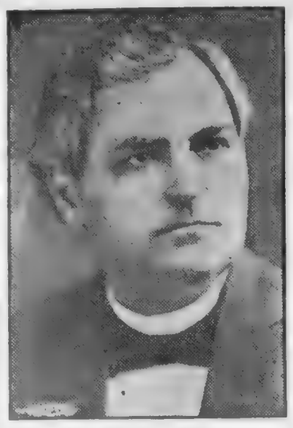
NATION STANDS AT THRESHOLD OF ANOTHER ERA, SAYS MORRISON

Organized Labor Faces Changed Conditions With Better Understanding, Increased Membership and Greater Faith in Possibilities.

Written for The Labor World
By FRANK MORRISON
Secretary, American Federation of Labor



FRANK MORRISON

This Labor day is marked by a pronounced trend toward new economic outlooks and a realization that our nation is at the threshold of another era.

These viewpoints have been developing since the World war. During the past year, however, more thought has been given to the revolutionary effect of automatic machinery and its displacement of workers, mass production, mergers and the encroachment of equity courts in the field of law enforcement.

These sweeping changes, yet in their infancy, have overturned former concepts. The new cycle has brought adherents to policies that would be considered, a few years ago, inconsistent with American principles.

The last thing that man will abandon is his social viewpoint. He readily accepts physical changes, as these are self-evident. He clings to the intangibles, however, until new ideas fit into his economic life. He then yields to the inexorable power.

It is because of our changing economic life that the nation is discussing new ideals. Old age pensions, long advocated by organized labor, was considered, a few years ago, unfitted for our American system. The automatic machine, with its army of unemployed, together with displacement of workers who have reached the age of 40 and 45, make old age pensions a problem of major importance.

The same is true of unemployment insurance which, an eastern governor recently declared, the people will accept as certain as they accepted workmen's compensation.

The changed outlook is again illustrated by an increasing popular disapproval of our poorhouse system, with its excessive overhead and humiliating failures. The poorhouse is looked upon by thinking men and women as a symbol of human despair.

The new viewpoint on old-age pensions again sustains our claim that trade unionists are the pickets of progress and that economic facts and social necessity eventually make certain the principles these unionists are the first to urge.

This has been true of other problems, such as abolition of child labor, establishment of workmen's compensation, higher wages, shorter hours, free education and other issues now accepted by the general public.

The past year has been marked by a clearer understanding of the misuse of the injunction. This process is no longer called a "labor" problem. Equity is rapidly encroaching on the rights of the public press and business. Labor will continue its agitation against this wrong. We are certain that as it is understood the law-making branch of government will yield to an enlightened public opinion. This change will come when the public understands the differences between government by law and government by the conscience of one man who sits as an equity judge and who sets aside every constitutional guarantee that his irresponsible edicts may be enforced.

The universal five-day week is a certainty in the near future. It is a necessity because of changing economic conditions, and it is now being enforced in many sections.

Organized labor faces the new collective age with a better understanding, with increased membership and a greater faith in their possibilities through unified action. We will extend our usefulness just in proportion as we develop intelligence and a will to do.

Employers Responsible for Jobless; Soup Lines Predicted in Oklahoma

Oklahoma City, Okla., Aug. 26.—"Unless some action is taken before winter, thousands of unemployed workers in Oklahoma will have to be fed in soup lines," declares State Labor Commissioner W. A. Murphy in a statement on the unemployment situation.

Commissioner Murphy visualizes the situation as one in which the responsibility is on the employers. He sees that under our present system of production the employers are the ones who buy the ability of the workers to produce commodities and perform service. It is also the employers who refuse to buy this labor power and thus throw the workers into the streets without jobs. He therefore looks to business men assisted by state officials as the ones who must be relied upon to provide the remedy for the nation-wide mismanagement of business executives.

But in the same breath the commissioner suggests the weakness of relying on business men to adequately meet the unemployment problem. "Most business men seem to have the idea that the situation will work itself out," he says. "The machine age and the age of mergers have brought about a condition different from that heretofore experienced. Classes of skilled labor have been released that never before sought aid of employment agencies."

STATE UNIONS TO MEET.

Salt Lake City.—The annual convention Utah Federation of Labor will convene in this city on Monday, Sept. 8.

Shorter hours, compulsory education, free text books, abolition of the contract system on public work and the labor injunction will be major issues.

An Appreciation

A great many of the readers of this paper voted for me in the Primary. I expect to hear their spokesmen, carefully consider the things they speak for, and act with real earnestness. In these ways I will show my gratitude.

I have done work with my hands. I did it at the time merely to save money, but it taught me respect for the integrity, brain, eye and hand of the Workman. I earn my living with books, but I know that what Kipling says is true:

From forge and farm and mine and bench,
Deck, altar, outpost lone—
Mill, school, battalion, counter, trench,
Rail, senate, sheepfold, throne—
Creation's cry goes up on high
From age to cheated age:
"Send us the men who do the work
For which they draw the wage!"

John A. Chambliss

AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR URGES SUPPORT OF LABOR PRESS

Service of Trade Union Papers Recognized and Movement Is Pledged to Assist in Every Way Possible. Gompers and Green Quoted.

The labor press—the publications of the union organizations—are doing their part toward the stabilization of conditions for the working people of our country. Are you doing your part?

Samuel Gompers, the veteran leader of the American labor movement for more than forty years, had this to say about the labor press:

> Were it not for the labor press, the labor movement would not be what it is today, and any person who tries to injure a labor paper is a traitor to the union cause. Any labor paper which pursues a clean, conservative and constructive policy is a valuable asset to labor and the entire community.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, said at Detroit:

> Many of our members do not realize the importance of the labor press and are not giving it the support it has a right to expect. Were it not for the influence of the labor press, labor's views would not be presented to the general public, and many of the important and progressive labor laws that now grace the statute books in this city and other states would not have been enacted. I therefore recommend and stress the importance of every community supporting its local labor paper.

The following resolution was unanimously adopted by the last convention of the American Federation of Labor:

> Whereas, the labor press during the past year has rendered splendid service to the American trade union movement and its constituent international, state and central bodies; and,
>
> Whereas, the bona fide publications of the international organizations and the local labor newspapers have devoted many columns of space in each of their issues toward the development of the great labor movement; therefore, be it
>
> Resolved, That this forty-ninth annual convention of the American Federation of Labor expresses its deepfelt gratitude to the publishers of the bona fide labor publications; recommending that these very valuable publications receive the full and unstinted support of the members of organized labor, because by and through this support can the labor press of America be extended in education, in power and influence; and, be it further
> Resolved, That every effort be made in the year ahead to fully utilize the valuable service rendered by the bona fide labor press in the education and the upbuilding of the American labor movement.

People Defrauded By Various Methods

New York.—The American people are annually defrauded to the extent of $7,500,000,000, said B. F. Batten, vice-president of a local bank, in an address to business men.

Forgery was classed as "the fastest growing crime." Bankruptcy on a large scale is also increasing.

The public, said Mr. Batten, lose $700,000,000 each year through purchase of falsely advertised goods. A Buffalo instance was cited where a ring, advertised to be of platinum, was sold at retail for $46.60, it later developing that the ring contained exactly 13 cents worth of platinum.

The trade unionist who fails to demand the union label, shop card and working button can not claim any credit for advancing the cause of the workers.

The advances of the labor movement have always been up grade. A constant demand for union-made goods and service will remove some of the grade.

If you have done an injury to a fellfailing to demand union goods or service, there is no better time than the present to atone for the damage done.

UNITY NECESSARY TO REACH LABOR'S GOAL, SAYS JOHN L. LEWIS

Much Has Been Accomplished, But Much Is Yet to Be Done—Should Profit by Mistakes of the Past and Avoid Dangers of Future.

Written for The Labor World
By JOHN L. LEWIS
President, United Mine Workers of America

Labor day is the one day in the year on which we place ourselves face to face with the problems that confront those who toil. It is the one day in the year when we arouse our enthusiasm and encourage ourselves to pledge greater activity in the year to come in the effort to gain those things to which labor is justly entitled.

It is well for us to do this. But we should not lose sight of the fact that there are three hundred and sixty-four other days in the year over which we must spread our enthusiasm if we are to win the battle.

It is not enough that we take stock on Labor day and make firm resolutions of loyalty to labor's cause. In this respect, every day in the year should be Labor day for us, and we should carry our zeal into the remote days of the year just the same as on Labor day.

Only through continued and unceasing effort and struggle can we of labor reach the goal that we have set for ourselves.

Much has been accomplished, but there remains much more to be done, and we dare not falter if we would succeed in lifting the toiling masses to a better place in life.

On this Labor day of 1930, let us survey the events of the past year. Let us appraise the gains and losses, the successes and failures. Let us profit by what has gone before and the experience that has come to all of us, for it is by experience that we learn.

By viewing in retrospect the events of the past year we may learn how to avoid the dangers of the future and how to profit in full measure from the gains that have been made.

Great problems await solution in the future. If we profit from what we learn from the past year we better equip ourselves for the task of finding proper solutions for the problems that lie ahead.

HERE'S AN INTERESTING STUDY FOR LABOR DAY READING—THE WHY AND WHERE OF FOOD PRICES

By THE SENATOR

Washington, Aug. 28.—Family buyers, who can remember back to "before the war," may well ponder where food prices have been during the past seventeen years, and why. Many a wise paragraph from the pen of expert economists, telling no more about the secret than can be told in three words, is being printed in these days to explain that question.

Taking the 1913 retail prices as the base—or 100—there is the case of lard, which under food control dropped a little to 93.4 in 1915, then jumped to 111.0 in 1916, leaped to 174.9 in 1917; and then in 1919, when the war was over and profits were being taken from the war-hungry, it went to 233.5. Lard dropped gradually to 107.6 in 1922, but in 1925 was up again to 147.5. Since then it has been coming down gradually, year by year, until in July, 1930, it is almost back to the 1913 level, at 103.2.

Ups and Downs of Eggs.

Then there are eggs, which, starting at 100 level in 1913, went to 102.3 in 1914, dropped to 98.7 in 1915, jumped to 108.8 in 1916, then took the leap to 139.4 in 1917, kept on going up until after the war in 1920 they reached the high point of 197.4. Then eggs started back down, and in April, 1929, had reached 106.4, but got excited in last December and jumped back to 182.0. Since then they have gone back home to 97.4 in June, 1930; and now the seasonal scarcity has lifted them a little again to 101.7. They were at 160.0 in January; and there must be a lot of high priced eggs in cold storage now that will never see that price again.

Rice, which was up to 200.0 in 1920 and is now back to 109.2; and sugar, which went to 352.7 in 1920 and is now back to 110.9, are the only other staple foods that have regained approximately their pre-war level.

Beef cuts, starting with 100 in 1913, had jumped 25 to 30 points by 1917, and in 1920 were ranging from 151 to 177. They dropped back a little after that, but took another leap in 1929, and in July of that year were ranging from 177 to 206. In July of this year they still showed sirloin steak at 182.3, and plate beef at 149.6.

Ham Going at 200.4.

Why ham, which jumped to 142.2 in 1917, 178.1 in 1918, 198.5 in 1919, and 206.3 in 1920, and then went to 211.2 in July, 1929, should now remain at 200.4, is something for the sandwich artists to explain—perhaps. That is almost as hard to understand as the "price" of gold.

Bacon behaved after a similar pattern, except that it only reached 165.6 in 1929, and is now 156.7. Pork chops, however, reached a high point of 201.4 in 1920, climbed again to 193.8 in 1929, and is now down to 173.8. Lard is a pork product, and it is back to 103.2; but you can substitute for lard, whereas no chemist ever got anywhere trying to imitate ham or pork chops. The farmers who "manufactured" their excess corn into pork chops and ham, evidently did not need much relief, unless it was from the packing houses.

The cereals offer more puzzles. It must have been all right for bread, starting at 100 in 1913, to go frankly to 112.5 in 1914, then to 125 in 1915, then to 164.9 in 1917, and finally to 205.4 in 1920. In 1922 it dropped to 155.4, then climbed to 167.9 in 1925; in 1929 did not drop below 160.7, and is now only down to 157.1. And all this while the farmers were howling for a relief from the burden of their own wheat over-production. But the city bread-eaters took their medicine along with their bread and said little or nothing about it. It has not been shown that there is not that much difference between the labor cost of bread in 1913 and in 1930. Somebody has been having "an awful crust."

Flour went even higher than wheat or bread in 1920, reaching the high point of 245.5, then rose again to 184.8 in 1925, and after fluctuating some was back to 139.4 in July, 1930. But cornmeal, which went to a high point of 226.7 in 1918, dropped to 130.0 in 1922, climbed again to 180.0 in 1925, and is now at the end of a very gradual decline only down to 139.4.

Potatoes take the prize for the high jump, having gone to 370.0 in 1920, dropped to 182.4 in 1921, reached a low of 158.8 in 1924, but went back up to 211.8 in 1925; 288.2 in 1926; fluctuated around until in 1929 they jumped from 182.4 in June to 235.3 in August of that year. They hung on around 223 to 229, climbing to 152 in May, 1930, declining to 247 in June, and then dropping 53 points to 194.1 in July, 1930. It looks as though the public just wanted potatoes, and paid any price that was asked, instead of taking it out in rice as they did during the war period.

Sugar was only second to potatoes in the high point reached after the war. In 1920 sugar went to 352.7, but it dropped the next year to 145.5, and barring a slight rise in 1929 has been continually dropping until in July, 1930, it stood at 110.9.

Tea and coffee, the only products on the standard list not produced in this country, behaved very decently, going to 134.7 and 157.7, respectively, in 1920. Tea came up to 143.4 in January, 1930, and coffee rose to 172.8 in 1925. But tea is now down to 142.6 and coffee to 135.6 for July, 1930.

To those who ask, "Why?" the wise men talk about "supply and demand," "the price of gold," "world markets," "over-production."

When you get them in a corner, the wise men finally raise their eyebrows, hump their shoulders and wave their hands, and say, "You don't understand!" That's the truth.

Pencil Industry Shows Low Wages

Washington.—Pencils made last year in this country had a value of more than $23,000,000, according to the bureau of census.

An average of 5,666 workers were employed throughout the year and wages totaled $6,280,684, or approximately $1,100 per year per employe.

Manufacturers' profits cannot be calculated from the census figures because no data are collected for expense items, such as interest on investment, rent, depreciation insurance and advertising.

NOTES FROM THE NEWS CHAPEL

By CLAY TIMMONS

The fellows who were working overtime Thursday night, reported Friday morning that they didn't sleep a wink after seeing the poor lad who was caught in the elevator shaft and killed. It was a terrible tragedy, and should prove to be an equally terrible lesson to the rest of the news boys who have a habit of prowling around over the building at all hours.

Many efforts have been made to keep them outside where they belong, but in spite of all that could be done they would get in. I for one am glad that I wasn't one of those working overtime on Friday's ads, for the ads wouldn't have been a bid of good in my case for a week.

See by the Journal that Basil Palmer is in the race for delegate next year, too. Probably by the time the convention city is announced there will be several more to hop in the race.

* * *

Brother Medlock has a sideline all his own. And some of the aging printers, myself included, have fallen for it. It's his hair grower. And boy, I need it, and got some. So did Arch Underwood. They tell me that Bamforth, on the Times, bought a jar of it and began using it, and the hair promptly began to grow. Bam is rather hoary headed, and the new hair came out red. Imagine that!

* * *

Milton Cooke is ill abed, so Brother Joe reports. Fred Ford is taking his usual summer-end tour of the middle west, and the genial fat boy is always sending someone a card with one of his usual wise-cracks appended.

* * *

For the first time in many years the employes over here didn't receive their regular "boards" to Sparks' circus, or any other circus that plays this town. Fred Schneider got about thirty tickets, but somebody seemed to have hogged the whole bunch. I wasn't here the last time it occurred, but certain of the old-timers have told me about it. But that makes another story.

* * *

It has been reported that a certain hand in the ad alley was heard in the following soliloquy (an't that spelled right?): "36-point Caslon bold. Who in h— ever heard of any such type?"

* * *

Hank Barnes is either a pauper or a millionaire. He only works two or three days a week during these days of depression. Dame Rumor has it—but who was it that said "Dame Rumor is a —— liar?"

* * *

Labor day approaches. Labor day, 1930. A dinner-dance will be given at the Lookout Mountain club-hotel. Labor day, 1910. A fish fry will be held on the river bank. Plenty of lager for everybody to rush the growler. The war did it.

MILL OWNERS SEEK TO MUZZLE PAPERS FOR PRINTING TRUTH

Discharge Made Penalty for All Disobeying Order. Raleigh News and Observer Made Taboo by Cone Interests While Greensboro Papers Are Praised.

(By International Labor News Service)

Raleigh, N. C., Aug. 28.—The Raleigh (N. C.) News and Observer, published by Josephus Daniels, former member of the cabinet in President Wilson's administration, is taboo in Greensboro, N. C., where the Cone textile mills operate.

The News and Observer has been publishing unbiased and uncolored news of the textile workers' situation and the organization efforts of the American Federation of Labor in Greensboro, something the Greensboro newspapers have not been doing. As a result the News and Observer has become quite a popular newspaper in Greensboro, so much so that the management of the Cone mills has issued an edict that any worker subscribing for or reading the News and Observer will be discharged from his job.

The News and Observer published this startling restriction.

Veiled Warning Issued.

However, this newspaper continues to print the news as usual and the workers employed by the Cone interests at the Proximity and Revolution mills continue to read it avidly.

Bernard Cone has vehemently denied that any threat was made or implied, but union leaders point to the fact, among others, that eighteen workers discharged were readers of the News and Observer.

Josephus Daniels, asked by International Labor News for a statement, said he had been out of town and was "not posted."

The "Textorian," a house organ published as a weekly newspaper by the Cone mill management, in its last issue, carried a veiled warning to the Greensboro newspapers in the form of a "'congratulatory" editorial concerning the attitude of the local papers in not printing "free advertising for the union."

The Textorian said: "The hostile attitude of organizers and agitators toward the dailies of Greensboro is a result of an endeavor on the part of the papers to publish newspapers and not organs or mediums for free advertising for the union. * * * The position taken by the Greensboro papers is a fair one, and they are to be commended for refusing to allow the denunciation of agitators to worry them."

After this praise of the local press the Cone interests are trying to squelch out-of-town newspapers which print news of the Greensboro situation, with what success to be seen later.

The bosses of the mills are trying many devious ways to block union activities, warning the workers on pain of losing their jobs to stay away from labor mass meetings.

One of the schemes is bribing the workers with the promise of a smoked ham at Christmas time if they do not join the union. However, it is the "ham what ain't" 364 days out of the year, rather than the "ham what am" once a year that is intriguing the pauper-paid workers just at this time, and they are joining the union in droves.

But muzzling free speech and a free press in North Carolina where the Mecklenberg declaration of independence was written is going some even for the textile lords of the old tar-heel state.

THRONGS SEE "GHOST TRAIN"

Peruchi Players Again Show to Packed Houses—Next Offering a Comedy.

"Standing room only" was the rule for late comers at the Bijou theater this week, and on some occasions those who failed to make reservations were unable to gain admittance.

Continuing the evidences of popularity which Chattanooga's stock players attained immediately upon their opening here, the mystery thriller, "The Ghost Train," was greeted with approval and each member of the fine cast was given a share of applause throughout the performance.

Beginning with a special Labor day matinee Monday at 2:30, the Peruchi Players will offer what Manager Booth declares is a screaming farce comedy, following a run of an entire year in New York City. The title, "Mary's Other Husband," suggests a foundation for some ludicrous complications. In this case, it is explained, Mary had both a lamb and an imagination. Mary's husband was the lamb; at least he might have been prior to the arrival of Mary's uncle. New York audiences, it is said, watched and howled with joy over the complications of this trio, and with a company of proven ability local theatergoers are sure to get keen enjoyment out of its presentation here.

The Labor day matinee will be reserved, night prices prevailing, it is announced.

UNIFORM LAW PROPOSED TO CONTROL CHILD LABOR

Chicago.—A uniform law prohibiting the employment of children under 14 years of age in any gainful employment was approved by the national conference of commissioners on uniform state laws.

The proposed law would regulate employment of minors between 14 and 18 years and prescribe certain occupations in which persons of 21 years and under may not be engaged.

Thirty-five states were represented and the proposal was approved with one dissenting state and one state not voting.

The draft of the act has been considered for four years. The states are urged to adopt the plan, which has been submitted to the American Bar association for approval.

Grand Jury System Handled by One Man

New York.—The refusal of a county grand jury to present charges of corruption against public officials recalls the ease with which prosecuting attorneys evade or secure grand jury indictments. This system has been referred to as "a relic of the dark ages."

Raymond Moley, professor of public law at Columbia university, says in his book "Politics and Criminal Prosecution:"

"It is well known that except in unusual instances the grand jury is a rubber stamp for the prosecuting attorney. The common parlance of a prosecutor's office is not 'presenting a case to the grand jury' but 'getting an indictment' or 'indicting some one.' Anyone who has experienced service on a grand jury knows how inevitably this domination comes about. The order of cases considered is usually subject to the prosecutor's determination. Almost always he is the only lawyer in the room, and the laymen present are stricken with the reverential silence usually accorded supposed learning and experience. The prosecutor conducts the examination of the witnesses and asks 90 per cent of the questions. He draws the indictment himself and submits it to the uncritical and unquestioning approval of the foreman."

Those who desire better living and working conditions must do their share to secure them. Demand union-made goods and service.

Nurse Tells How CARDUI Helped Her

Mrs. W. A. Cox, a well-known professional nurse, of Burnside, Ky., writes:

"I was in very bad health, and only weighed 110 pounds. I read in the papers about Cardui, and thought I would give it a try-out. After I had taken one bottle, I could see that I was improving. After I had taken it a month or two, I began to gain, and I weigh at present 168, and have weighed that for some time. I am now 55 years old, and can do as much work as the average middle-aged woman can.

"I would advise any woman, who is weakly and in a run-down condition, to try Cardui, but not to expect one bottle to make her well. I take two or three bottles a year, now, and I feel fine."

BARBER SHOP BLUES

By Golly

NOTICE, BARBERS!

Regular monthly meeting of Local 415, Journeymen Barbers, will be held on Tuesday night, instead of Monday, at Central Labor hall. This change, of course, is due to the fact that Monday is Labor day.

E. D. STEVENSON, Secretary.

A round of a few of the downtown barber shops this week, in search for legitimate news items, brought the following:

At the Horton shop, Cherry street, it was said nobody in there knew anything. Thought so before we went in, but was afraid to say so.

* * *

At the Chattanooga Bank Building shop, found Harper, Thomas and Hill in a hot argument about the baseball team. Didn't care to get shot, so beat it.

* * *

Then over to the Climax. Joe Burton wanted mention made of the new barber pole, put up in honor of E. C. Holland, who recently joined the force there. The line-up now is Holland, Burton, Massey, E. C. English and P. D. Booth. Old-timers. Massey and John Brown enjoyed a hunting trip last Wednesday night at Wildwood, Ga.

* * *

Si Helms, at the Read House shop, was bubbling over with alleged news. He said: Jess Turner has recovered from "jakewalk," and will be glad to see his old friends at the same old stand. Si said: A. J. White took a motor trip last Sunday, and "mooched" 12 roasting ears, 2 watermelons and 2 sacks of grapes. He only had a small car. He said: W. M. Phelps has recovered from a severe illness and is back on the job. Clyde Garrett's injured wrist has completely healed. John Brown said: Si Helms moved from the country to town, and is appealing to all his old friends to call on the "missus" and try to convince her of the advantages of city dwelling.

They also reported Massey has removed the top from his "car," and bought a straw hat. Louis parks his limousine on Cameron Hill in order to insure that "instant start and quick get-away." One morning last week a passing patrolman viewed the wreckage and made out a report something like this: "Found bad smashup on Cameron Hill. Located parts of six cars, but couldn't find the drivers."

* * *

Mr. Mitchell, at the Big Four over on Seventh street, said he almost had a news item, but was unable to complete his information. Said Hamby called his "missus" the other day, told her to meet him at the Market street bridge with the pup, put on his hunting coat, grabbed his gun and started out the door shouting, "Look out, squirrels." Didn't know whether he got any or not. Fred Kelley and Hartman, he said, also went fox hunting the other night, but came back spitting watermelon seeds. No foxes

* * *

Big Four on East Eighth had plenty of news, but none that would do to print. Dugger said he knew some stuff on John Turner and Van Hooser, but wasn't quite ready to release it. Customer in Dugger's chair told me Frank cut his hair so often he got bald, and then sold him a hair tonic. System. Bright boy. Was raised with 'im.

* * *

Went around to the Broadway, all in good faith and everything. Proprietor Hester said, "If you can't print anything good about this shop, don't print anything." So won't mention Broadway shop.

* * *

Getting sleepy. Good night. Silly, ain't it?

Postoffice Squibs

By R. B. LANE

I see by the daily press that bids for sites for the new postoffice were opened by the department this week. I also learn that Atlanta is going to get a $3,000,000 one. Why such a discrimination?

* * *

No deliveries of mail on Labor day, but you bet there will be plenty the next day.

* * *

The new route has been established in North Chattanooga. It was badly needed.

* * *

Frank Brooks arrived safely in Cincinnati, and according to post card received is having a great time.

* * *

W. A. Myers was off attending the convention of the American Legion first of the week.

* * *

Bill Jones is back on the job after an absence of a couple of weeks.

* * *

Massey wants to know whether Reneau had Henry's glasses repaired or not.

I was mistaken last week when I said that Supt. John S. Walker was spending his vacation running the rabbits out of his garden; it was yellow jackets. They do say that when he found that nest, he started for the house and did not stop till he reached the postoffice.

* * *

The other morning I went to get my mail out of the cases and a gang of the boys were trying to do the same thing. I remarked, Lead me to the mail; brother Dailey says, well, I've led lots of cows.

* * *

By next meeting we will have a hall—maybe!

* * *

Lost, one telegram. H. B. Massey.

* * *

A. W. Lauter, superintendent of the registry division, is back after a month's vacation looking very much better.

* * *

Mr. George, manager; Roscoe Talley and H. H. Brown have returned from a fishing trip. (You notice I didn't say a successful fishing trip.)

WITH THE ELECTRICAL WORKERS

By E. E. CROSBY

Log-rolls at the next regular meeting, Tuesday, Sept. 2. What's it all about? Well, listen:

Now the old saying is there's better fish in the water than have been caught, and W. P. Howard has ordered that all the best ones be brought out so he can fry them. L. Patton, winning the long distance potato-peeling championship, has been booked up for a display of his talents along this line. E. E. McDaniels is to see that there is plenty of bread to put the fish in, and I'm betting he orders it sliced. Yours truly has to do something, and I guess it will be carry water for the red lemonade, so I'm going to get me a can with about six handles. Bill Williams is a natural inspector, so we have given him a job seeing that everything is in proper shape. C. E. Cofer has the longest arms, and he has been selected to squeeze the lemons. Now, of course there will be other good things to eat and some of the brothers have promised to bring their fiddles and give us a tune or some kind of soothing noise.

Now all this is to take place in the short space of one Saturday afternoon and evening, and we are not going to be selfish; we are going to have the ladies with us as a special treat.

Every member should be present at the next regular meeting, Tuesday night, and help prepare for the above "blowout." There are also some other matters to be taken care of.

Grady McArthur says the only way to keep the ball rolling is not to let it stop.

* * *

Beetle and Lofty want to know when they will hold another examination.

* * *

Vance Tallent, after receiving a number of cards from his friends on vacation, all having the usual message, "Having a fine time, wish you were here," said he did agree with the one from Canada.

* * *

Fred Simons said he had spent his last week-end in Atlanta. Sounds like he might have had a falling out down there.

Frank M. Johnston Improving Slowly

Frank M. Johnston, for many years an employe of the Times composing room and active member of Chattanooga Typographical union, is slowly improving from a severe and extended illness at his home near Graysville, Ga. Mr. Johnston is still confined to his bed, but many local friends are hoping for a speedy recovery once the old-timer gets started on the right road back to his normal self physically.

MICHIGAN GOVERNOR FAVORS LOW WAGES

Lansing, Mich.—Trade unionists of this state lost their plea to Gov. Green that he live up to his fair wage pledge.

The unionists asked him to reject the bid of a non-union concern for a $200,000 public work contract. A firm that paid the prevailing wage was but $351.90 higher. The governor sided with the low-wage concern.

The practical trade unionist always demands the union label, shop card or button.

6,000 Unemployed Force Bureau Doors to Close

New York Free Agency in Week Lists 7,000 Applicants for Work and Sends 335 of Them to Jobs, Mostly Temporary.

New York City, Aug. 28.—Six thousand unemployed swamped the municipal free employment bureau here one day this week, forced the officials to close the doors and resulted in injuries to several in line.

That day's registration numbered 2,500, with 2,000 still in line and 135 jobs secured.

Three hundred women were registered one day, twenty-five of them getting work.

The bureau opened last week and by the middle of this week 7,000 had been registered, with a total of 335 jobs filled. Most jobs are temporary. The first man in line gets the job if he can fill the bill at all.

No, Gwendolyne, men who pet dears are not necessarily animal trainers.

FORTY YEARS!

J. F. ANDERSON

Consider the old-timer. Here's a gentleman whose service to organized labor in Chattanooga covers a continuous period of forty years. Mr. Anderson was the first president of Local 14, and the completion of his four decades of activities finds him again in that position, and with his zeal for the cause deep-rooted and unshaken by the passing of time.

When the old Local No. 8, Boilermakers, was organized, Mr. Anderson's name was on the charter, and he served in every office within the gift of that membership, including the presidency. The same is true of his activities in No. 14. He claims the distinction of being the oldest member of his craft in Chattanooga, in point of service, but is only 64 years of age. His labor record in Chattanooga also includes several years as a delegate to Central Body.

Mr. Anderson is affectionately known to scores of his fellow trades unionists as "Shorty." He is an employe of the Southern railway.

in the International Typographical union.

The average earnings per member in 1909 was $897.00, with a total earning for all members of $40,293,738.00.

In 1930 the average earnings per member were $2,372.36, with a total earning for all members of $183,874,801.00.

A total of 445,125 meals were served at the home during the past year, at an average cost of 25 cents.

Fifty-two milch cows at the home furnish an average of 300 gallons of milk per day.

During the year butter and milk valued at $30,184.03 was produced by the home dairy at a cost of $19,990.02, and was consumed by the home.

$8,651.54 was spent during the year by the home for drugs for residents of the home.

Groceries, meats, fresh fruits and vegetables valued at $73,097.98 were purchased by the home during 1930.

There are 8,500 books in the home library with an average exchange of fifty books daily.

During the past year Chattanooga was represented at the home with a resident younger in membership than any other resident there, that being David M. Jones with eighteen months' membership. Two residents had two years membership, four had three years, five had four years, three had five years and the rest of the 174 admitted during the year had membership records running from six years to 57 years.

The youngest resident admitted during the year was David M. Jones, of Chattanooga, being 21; while the oldest was Albert D. Westcott, 81, of Tacoma.

Phil Angel Back From Vacation Trip

Phil I. Angel, of the Angel Printing company, returned this week from a two-weeks vacation trip through the east, having motored with his family to New York City, Washington and other points. Mr. Angel declined to talk for publication, but it is understood that the drouth and unemployment problems were discussed with President Hoover, and local friends are expecting an immediate adjustment of these bothersome conditions.

Electricians Plan Unique Outing for Members and Families Saturday.

By E. E. CROSBY

An unique outing is planned by Local 175, Electrical Workers, to be staged Saturday afternoon at the country home of Emmett Terrell. Members of the organization, their families and local electrical contractors and their families will meet at the Georgia avenue entrance to the courthouse at 2 o'clock in the afternoon and proceed to the Terrell home, where arrangements have been made to stage an old-fashioned fish-fry, with all the trimmings, and enjoy a social get-together for the balance of the afternoon and evening. Committees from Local 175 have been busy for several days perfecting the details, and everything is in readiness for an enjoyable picnic. Those who come late should go through the Mission ridge tunnel, out Brainerd road, and turn left on Jenkins road.

"I do," said William Stilwell. And that put him definitely in married men's row last Saturday. After he had passed around the cigars at the meeting he was let down easy. Vance Tallent had a two-by-four, but it wasn't used. All the brothers extend congratulations.

Idle a Challenge, Says N. Y. Cleric

New York.—"Idleness and its long train of evils is a challenge to churches," said Dr. John McDowell, secretary Presbyterian board of foreign missions, in his annual Labor Sunday message.

"Churches should never forget," he said, "that living on the verge of poverty, with regularity and uncertainty of employment, is not conducive to the best of physical, mental or moral life.

"Grinding anxiety about the mere means of existence shuts out concern for spiritual life. For their own sakes, therefore, as well as for the sake of the unemployed and their families, the churches ought to take a deep and practical interest in solving the problem of greater security and satisfaction in work."

FRUIT YIELD ABOVE THAT OF LAST YEAR

Washington.—This year's yield of all fruits, on the basis of Aug. 1 reports, will be 13 per cent above the 1929 crop, according to the department of agriculture.

HEADS RED CROSS DRIVE TO WIPE OUT PELLAGRA

DR. WILLIAM DeKLEINE

Before joining the Red Cross Dr. DeKleine directed the Michigan tuberculosis survey, conducted child health demonstrations at Mansfield, Ohio; Fargo, N. D., and Salem, Ore. He represented the Red Cross in Mississippi valley flood relief work in 1917, where pellagra was a serious problem.

Unionist "Framed" By Dixie Employers

Philadelphia.—"It is an open secret in Marion and throughout North Carolina that cotton mill owners issued orders to judicial and other authorities that Hoffman must be convicted and jailed on some charge," said Wm. Smith, secretary-treasurer American Federation of Full Fashioned Hosiery Workers.

Alfred Hoffman is organizer United Textile Workers. He and three other workers were accused of rioting, although they were not at the scene of the disturbance. They were found guilty and Hoffman was sentenced to two months on the road chain gang. The state supreme court has upheld that sentence.

"I was in Marion when the four men were being tried," said Secretary Smith. "I was frankly told that this (conviction order) was the situation. Other trade unionists who were also watching the trial were given the same information by men who are in a position to speak with knowledge of facts. We were told that we had better accept the inevitable.

"The North Carolina supreme court, by its decision in these cases, has ranged itself with manufacturers who are determined to maintain semi-slavery in Marion and other southern villages.

"The supreme court has declared in effect, that it will help to make the inevitable unionization of southern mill workers as difficult and as bitter a process as possible.

"Speaking for our union, I wish to state that the United Textile Workers and its affiliate, Full Fashioned Hosiery Workers' union, are more determined than ever to aid North Carolina workers to win a decent living standard."

Only by the strength of our unity can we maintain our working and living conditions secured by organization.

GREEN RILED AT CHARGE OF FARM EXPERT

Resents Statement by Federal Board Chairman.

LEGGE HOLDS LABOR INJURING RURALITE

Makes Bold Accusation and Is Quickly Challenged by President A. F. of L.

(Special Correspondence)

Washington, Sept. 4.—President Green, of the American Federation of Labor, has taken sharp issue with the statement issued by Mr. Alexander Legge, chairman of the federal farm board, in an address which he delivered at the New York State fair at Syracuse, charging that a part of the burdens imposed upon the farmers is due to the advance in labor rates. Mr. Green states that such a charge is neither justifiable nor accurate. He calls upon Mr. Legge as a matter of fairness and justice to the working people—men and women—to correct this statement. Mr. Green telegraphed Mr. Legge as follows:

"I observe in copy of the address you will deliver at the New York State grange meeting given to the press in advance for publication statement that much of the ills from which agriculture is suffering is largely due to the advance in labor rates. This statement is neither justifiable nor accurate. For that reason I trust as a matter of fairness and justice to the wage earning class and the farmers of our country you will correct your statement. Since 1914 the cost of wages to employers has changed 5/10 of 1 per cent only. In 1914 employers in the United States paid 16.8 per cent of the wholesale price of their products to workers in wages. In 1927 they paid 17.3 per cent. Obviously your statement that 80 per cent of the wholesale price of many manufactured articles can be directly traced to somebody's pay envelope is incorrect. Since 1919 wages paid workers employed in manufacture have increased 11.4 per cent only while output has increased 46.5 per cent. As 2.9 per cent fewer workers were employed productivity has increased 53.5 per cent. It is apparent wage earners are not responsible for farmers' troubles. Their wages have not increased in proportion to what they produce. Eighty per cent of the customers of this country are composed of wage earners and their families. They spend 55 per cent of the nation's income. They make up very largely the customers to whom farmers look for consumers of their products. It would be a calamity if this portion of the consuming market was destroyed through the establishment of low wage rates."

A continuous demand for the union label, shop cord and working button will bring joy and sunshine into the lives of thousands of trade unionists.

I. F. T. U. PRESIDENT IS VISITOR TO A. F. OF L.

Walter M. Citrine.

Calling upon President William Green and other trade union leaders in Washington, Walter A. Citrine, distinguished British trade union leader, posed for this picture for ILNS and its affiliated American trade union publications. Citrine is general secretary of the British Trade Union congress and president of the International Federation of Trade Unions. He is a firm believer in international conferences, believes Americans overrate Britain's unemployment and says there is no ready-made cure, Marxian or otherwise, for industrial maladjustments of the day.

Strike Is Ordered To Stop Wage Cut

New York.—Raincoat makers declared a strike in this city to prevent wage cuts of 20 per cent. These workers are affiliated to International Ladies' Garment Workers' union.

"It is either a strike or a wage reduction, and we will resist the latter with every power at our command," said Benjamin Schlesinger, president of the international.

Workers in the children's dress department of this industry also suspended work to establish a minimum wage scale and abolish sweatshop conditions.

"Responsibility for these strikes can be placed on employers," said President Schlesinger. "We exhausted efforts to mediate differences, but low wages and sweatshop conditions is the goal of these employers. They will not join with employers in their branches of our industry to remedy these evils, and they have arranged with private detective agencies to 'protect their property.' This means that the thugs are hired to assault our pickets, as is usual in these cases."

APPEAL OF RULING ON FULL-CREW ACT

Columbus, O.—The Brotherhoods of Locomotive Firemen and Railroad Trainmen jointly appealed to the Ohio supreme court against a ruling by the public utilities commission that the state full-crew law does not apply to gas-propelled motor trains.

The commission first held that the railroad in question must operate the trains with a full crew, but reversed its decision on a rehearing.

DEATH CALLS GOOD CITIZEN

Pioneer Resident, Father of Leo C. Batey, Receives Sudden Summons.

C. S. Batey, pioneer resident and father of Leo C. Batey, secretary-treasurer of Local 175, Operative Plasterers, passed away last Sunday night at his home, 2620 Kirby avenue, following a short illness. Mr. Batey had for twenty years been manager of the Ridgedale branch of Hibbler-Barnes company, and was active in business and church circles. He was highly respected in the community where he had spent many years of a useful life. Funeral services were held at 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon at the Highland Park M. E. church, south, of which Mr. Batey was a faithful member, the Rev. N. M. Watson, pastor, officiating. The large number of friends present, and beautiful floral offerings, attested the esteem in which deceased was held.

The Labor World speaks for the entire trades union movement in extending heartfelt sympathy to Brother Batey and other surviving relatives in the loss of their loved one.

Plumbers Honor Two Slain Union Officers

Thousands Attend Funeral Services of Chicago Men Killed When Attempting to Call Strike.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Chicago, Sept. 4.—Some 3,000 members of the Plumbers' union paid honor to Charles M. Mulcahy, business agent of the union, and Bernard Ruberry, his assistant, who were slain when they attempted to call a strike on a construction job here.

The union members gathered at Mulcahy's home, 743 Constance avenue, and then followed his body to the Church of Our Lady of Peace a few blocks away, where a solemn requiem mass was celebrated. Later many of the plumbers went to Holy Sepulchre cemetery, where the body was interred.

The funeral for Ruberry was not held until two days later, but a period of special honor in his memory was begun on the day of Mulcahy's funeral. Out of respect for both the slain men, none of the union members went to work during the period of mourning.

Before the Mulcahy funeral cars were lined up for two blocks in each direction from his home. The front lawn was literally covered with flowers for which there had not been room in the house. The floral offerings, filling four automobiles, were taken to the grave after the funeral.

In the church approximately 2,000 were seated, several hundred more found standing room in the rear, and many more waited outside while the service was being held.

The Rev. Francis Quinn was the celebrant, and the Rev. Edward Rice preached the funeral sermon. He spoke of Mr. Mulcahy's "noble character," his "big heart," his high ideals, the benefit he had been to the parish.

"He was rough hewn," said the priest, "but hewn to nobility."

Distinguished leaders of the international union were in attendance. From Washington, D. C., had come John Coefield, the general president, and Francis J. Kennedy, assistant international secretary. Cook County Commissioner Joseph Fitzgerald attended the services.

Services for Ruberry were held from his home at 7737 Essex avenue to St. Bride's Roman Catholic Church, where the Rev. Matthew Canning of St. Lucy's parish celebrated a solemn high mass. Burial was in Calvary cemetery.

Boston.—Idleness and poverty were classed as national evils by Mayor Curley in an address to the Knights of Columbus annual convention.

"It is time that the intellect of America, the richest nation in the world, applied a solution for these evils," said the mayor.

ORATOR

JOHN T. O'CONNOR
Delivered Principal Address at Dedication Knoxville Labor Temple.

(Special Correspondence)

Knoxville, Sept. 3.—Monday was a red-letter day for Knoxville trades unionists, not only because it was Labor day but because it was the day the new labor temple was dedicated. The reception hall was filled to overflowing and a great number of people were unable to get in the hall and overflowed the main hallway and even out in the yard. The holiday spirit was evident over the entire crowd, and long before the hour set for the service the people came.

From the beginning to the final good-by the service was impressive. The meeting was opened with prayer by Rev. F. D. Cross, pastor of the First United Brethren church of the city, after which J. C. Broadwell, president of the Central Labor union, introduced the principal speaker, John T. O'Connor.

Mr. O'Connor lived up to his reputation as a speaker, and soon had the entire crowd under the spell of his oratory. He told how the labor movement was born. He said the labor movement was not something that was simply thought up by man, but was something that was born of necessity, "for we know that labor never even thought of organizing until capital had organized," he said. "I know of no other organization that has done more for the citizens of their community than has organized labor. It was labor that took the child out of the sweatshop and put him in the playground and school. We can remember the time when children were put in the mills and sweatshops even before they reached their teens; it has not been so many years since this was a common practice."

Mayor Trent spoke of the many things labor had accomplished for the human family, and also was loud in his praise of the standard organized labor had raised over this great country. "I am not one of those retired union men," he said, "but I am carrying a paid-up card in the Printing Pressmen's union at this time and I feel highly honored in that fact." He told of meeting Mr. Edgerton, of the Tennessee Manufacturers' association, over in Nashville when he was called there in conference with the governor

A bill that is in- to limit the power of equity and make the "yellow dog" was prepared by the sub- ttee. It was rejected by the mmittee by a vote of 10 to 7. minority is Senators Norris, Blane, Walsh (Mont.), Borah, Caraway, Ashurst and Dill. The bill they favor is the one President Green asks State Federations of Labor to submit to congressional candidates.

"The expanding use of the injunction in labor controversies should receive the earnest attention of every wage worker," said Mr. Green.

"This is such a serious matter the A. F. of L. decided to question every candidate for the United States senate and house of representatives as to his or her attitude toward anti-injunction legislation.

"There is no other question facing labor of such grave concern. The anti-injunction bill which we are supporting makes 'yellow dog' contracts illegal.

"Our activities should be centralized in a supreme effort to secure the enactment of anti-injunction legislation."

friends. Secretary Frank Morrison was the orator of the day at Baltimore, speaking under auspices of the Baltimore Federation of Labor. John P. Frey, secretary-treasurer of the Metal Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor, addressed a large audience at Boston.

Paul J. Smith, chairman of the southern organizing campaign committee, reviewed the progress of the educational drive in the south, and declared that results shown so far have been far in excess of the expectations of the committee.

The demand for speakers to present the message of trade unionism was in excess of the ability of the committee to supply, Mr. Smith said. Assignment of speakers was made to scores of towns and cities, including Birmingham, Anniston, Montgomery, Gadsden, Ala.; Memphis, Nashville, Jackson, Tenn.; Hot Springs, Ark.; Mobile, New Orleans, Baton Rouge, Shreveport, La.; Meridian and Jackson, Miss.; Atlanta, Columbus, Augusta and Savannah, Ga.

MIDDLE AGED WORKERS DISMISSED; RATIO IS 40 PER CENT IN FAR WEST

San Francisco, Sept. 4.—"The age limit in industry is serious and the problem of relegating middle-aged workers to the scrap heap must be solved," said Will J. French, director state department of industrial relations.

This state unit made a study of maximum age limts in California and reached the conclusion that if managers of industry maintain their present policy there will be a demand for the lowering of age limits to which California old-age pensions apply.

The department's survey shows that out of 2,808 reporting establishments, there were 306, or 11 per cent, that had age limits.

This does not appear startling until it is found the 11 per cent employ 39 per cent of the total employes reported in the 2,808 establishments.

This means that nearly four-tenths, or 40 out of every 100 workers are employed with the certainty that they will lose their jobs when they are 40 or 45 years of age.

Public utilities are among the worst offenders in displacing middle-aged workers.

"Group life insurance alone has not been found to influence maximum hiring age limits," said Mr. French. "The tendency towards such age limits is more evident in establishments which have pension plans or both group insurance and pension plans. This tendency is also evident in establishments having physical examinations of applicants for employment.

"Maximum hiring limits have a demoralizing effect not only upon those who are refused employment because of their ages, but also upon workers employed in these establishments."

THANKS, BROTHER GARDNER.

Editor Labor World:

I want to congratulate you on the fine Labor day edition of our paper. It is indeed a creditable publication and will be carefully read and enjoyed by all our members. While you no doubt put in a lot of hard work, you have the satisfaction of having done a good job. The feature story and data on the Typographical union was especially fine, and timely.

What Next!

Automatic reading aloud, of especial interest to the blind, promises to be the next gift of German science to the world. Taking the same principle by which the wavy little line at the side of a talkie film is reproduced in sound, Robert Naumberg has produced a machine, known as the "visagraph," which records in sound what it sees on the printed page.

Cheap-Wage South Opposes Unionism

Washington.—Wages are lower in the south than in the rest of the country, according to recent statistics published in a book issued by the University of North Carolina, and reviewed by the United States bureau of labor statistics.

The widest difference is shown in agriculture, where wages for farm laborers in July, last year, were $1.55, or only 48 per cent of those in other parts of the country.

Wages in southern railroad repair shops in 1927 averaged 99.5 per cent of those in other parts of the country; in foundries and machine shops, 80.4 per cent; cotton textile industry, 66.3 per cent; knit goods, 59.6 per cent; lumber, 62.5 per cent.

The difference is less among organized than among unorganized workers.

JOBLESS COMMISSION NAMED BY PRESIDENT

Washington.—Two trade unionists are included in the president's unemployment statistical commission that will make recommendations to the census bureau on methods to secure a correct list of unemployed throughout the country.

The commission will act in an advisory capacity. The unionists are: John P. Frey, secretary-treasurer metal trades department A. F. of L.; Arthur O. Wharton, president International Association of Machinists.

OLD MAN MONEY IS KING.

Mr. James W. Gerard is nobody's jassack, and when he says something it is worth while to listen.

He said recently that fifty-nine men rule the United States.

Immediately there was clamor and criticism and a lot of idiotic ink-spilling.

Politicians said Gerard didn't know what he was talking about. They pointed out the fact that out of all political officeholders only Andrew Mellon was on the Gerard list.

Gerard knows perfectly well what a lot of others do not know—the real operation of the United States is industrial and kings of industry and finance do the ruling.

Gerard has been politician enough to know how mighty little real ice is cut by politicians when it comes to bossing the machinery of the nation. That is not belittling political power—simply putting it in its place.

For example, Gerard Swope has more power over more people than is possessed by Robert F. Wagner—and Wagner is a pretty good, upstanding sort of a man at that.

Charles Schwab has more power over more people in Pennsylvania than is wielded by Senator David J. Reed.

Sam Insull has more power over more people than is possessed by Senator Deneen. That is no reflection on senators. It is truth about industrial overlords.

Andrew Mellon has more power by virtue of his money than he has by virtue of his political office and if anyone can deny that he is welcome to the effort.

Revising his list, after criticism, Mr. Gerard included William Green and Matthew Woll in his list of rulers.

William Green and Matthew Woll represent power, but they do not rule. Mr. Gerard might have added another dozen names of trade union officials, but for his own reasons he selected two. He included, let us say, organized labor.

But to repeat—organized labor does not rule; nor does it want to rule. Labor participates in democratic proceedings of self-government in industry and in that field it is much more powerful than Mr. Gerard's two selections indicate. A dozen names would have made a better proportion in that respect.

But he was talking about rulers—and take it from Old Man Experience, those men in his list of Big Bugs do rule.

The caterwaulers can caterwaul all they want to and the welkin ringers can take all the shine off the well-known welkin ringing it overtime and it won't shake the solid truth of what Gerard had to say.

The man may have skipped a name or two and he may have added one or two that don't count, but his main story was straight and he got his dope right at headquarters.

Professors have been among those selected as belonging in the list. They may kid themselves, but they don't kid anybody else. Professors don't rule. Neither do many journalists and there weren't many in the original list.

Old Man Money is pretty much the ruler, making conditions and terms that get the whole 120-odd million of us right where we live.

Go on, deny it—but the facts remain!

STALE NEWS ABOUT UNEMPLOYMENT.

Approximately four months ago the United States government counted the number of men and women unemployed in the United States, and everyone thought we should soon have the facts about unemployment.

In some four months we have learned that in April about two and a half million persons had absolutely no work and could get none. As to several other classes of unemployed persons we have no figures. Thus we know very little, as a result of the census, about what unemployment existed last April and we know nothing about what exists today.

Perhaps the census figures will be of some importance when they are all available, but surely their value has been reduced by delay and it is quite probable that a number of Americans wonder whether the effort was worth while.

We shall probably find, in the end, that the United States department of labor could, if left free of political influence, maintain a fairly accurate running count which would have constant value. But, more important than that, it is likewise probable that more and more we shall come to the conclusion that the more unemployment is made a problem of industry and less a problem of politics the better off we shall be.

FORCE CAN'T SILENCE PROTEST.

The Louisiana Manufacturers' association calls on all members to "discharge agitators and avoid trouble."

This ancient system of creating trouble by ignoring causes will fail. Force can but temporarily silence protest against injustices. There is a reason why workers join trade unions and unions will exist as long as that cause exists. Humanitarians, social engineers and welfare experts may join employers in ignoring the cause. Public officials, the judiciary and employers may discharge every one who refuses to bow to their will.

But the reason for trade unionism remains. It cannot be permanently concealed by employers who have the serf outlook or by their political and intellectual lackeys. In every age there have been Dame Partingtons who would sweep the ocean back with a broom.

THE CHEAP-WAGER'S ALLY

Advice to Millionaires

The gentleman was introduced on the sound news-reel as one who would speak a few golden words on the subject of prosperity. His name is unimportant. He is prominent, popular and many times a millionaire. This, in substance, is what he had to say:

We are having what we call "hard times." We should not be discouraged but should recall, rather, that periods of depression have occurred before this and after they passed they never seemed as serious as we thought them.

He talked more than that, of course, but that was what he really said.

Here was a man who has a good home and an ample supply of good food and good clothing for himself and family blandly chattering about "periods of depression" and their transitory nature. To him a period of depression is nothing more than a name descriptive of a time during which his income might be reduced from an amount that he could not possibly spend to an amount that forces him to make the yacht do for another year. Some one should take him aside and whisper in his ear that there are millions of people in the country for whom a period of depression has an entirely different meaning. It is a time when a man sees his family suffer from cold and hunger. It is a time during which a man lies awake wondering where he will get the money to pay the rent.

Of course, it was kind and generous and thoughtful of our millionaire friend to set aside his caviar long enough to drop a few words of encouragement to the poor. But somehow optimism passes more gracefully from one poor man to another.—Columbus Magazine.

Jobless Payments By Electric Trust

New York.—The General Electric company's unemployment insurance plan, that has just been launched, was explained by President Gerard Swope to a group of business men in this city.

The plan, Mr. Swope said, is an experiment and is optional with employes. The plan is effective in any plant when 60 per cent of the employes desire it. Any employe is eligible if he has been employed one year. He pays 1 per cent of his weekly earnings, the company paying an equal amount. The company creates a trust for the fund and guarantees 5 per cent interest on average balances. Each plant administers its own fund with a board composed of employes and appointees of the company, which elects its own chairman.

The amount paid to any employe temporarily laid off cannot exceed $20 a week and for not longer than ten weeks in any one year. The higher payment will apply to foremen and other supervisors.

Persons leaving the company may withdraw the amount they have paid, less benefits they have drawn and their share of payments made to others.

The plan does not apply to workers who may be discharged because of consolidations or elimination of departments, nor to workers employed in rush periods. These workers do not come under the one-year provision.

Only those workers who are "temporarily" laid off will come under the plan. It will not affect the victims of automatic machinery or scientific processes. When they are discharged, they can withdraw the amount of money paid in by them, but they receive no benefits.

Brokers Set Prices In Textile Industry

Salisbury, N. C.—New York commission brokers set textile prices and often force mill owners to sell below cost and at the expense of labor, said Vice-President Kelley, of the United Textile Workers, at the annual convention North Carolina Federation of Labor.

Paul J. Smith detailed progress by the A. F. of L. organizing committee. He replied to Commissioner of Labor Grist, of this state, who recently attacked the A. F. of L. Grist is holding a job that was created through the efforts of organized labor. President Aymon, of the Tennessee Federation of Labor, told the delegates that the short work week is the only solution for present unemployment.

Edward F. McGrady, A. F. of L. legislative representative, said children should be taken out of the mills and that profits of the textile industry were wrung from these children and women.

WANT ORGANIZER.

Charlotte, N. C.—Trade unionists in this city asked the A. F. of L. southern organizing committee to assign a full-time organizer in this city.

"We'll Control Labor's Thinking," Say Southern Textile Employers

Greensboro, N. C.—Employes of the Cone Cotton mills here were notified that if they read trade union literature or the Raleigh News and Observer they will be discharged.

The News and Observer is a daily paper, of progressive tendencies, published by Josephus Daniels, secretary of the navy under President Wilson.

Workers were also warned to shun trade union meetings, and told that the company paper, the Textorian, printed weekly, should satisfy them.

Publicity against the company's action stung Bernard M. Cone, who made the stereotyped plea that he does not oppose trade unions. "Dirty pack of lies that the union organizers have been issuing since this campaign—if it may be called that—began here," shrieked the excited Mr. Cone.

Charles M. Gaskill, A. F. of L. organizer, replied: "We would like to have Mr. Cone explain, not to us but to the public, why seventy workers and their families were discharged for attending union meetings, and why eight families were ejected and thrown into the streets."

The trade unionists asked why foremen and overseers are stationed at the union's headquarters, and why these petty bosses are so regular in attendance at union mass meetings.

One of the discharged workers, O. L. Ozment, was earning $8.96 a week on a curtailed schedule. His wage on a 54-hour schedule was $16.46. "This is the first time in my twenty-eight years of married life that my wife has had to work and help me make a living," said Ozment. He said he, his wife and sons attended every union meeting held in the "tater-patch," and that "I don't ask no mister man what paper I can read. I don't take no cussed old Textorian, not if they give it to me."

HOMES CONFERENCE CREATED BY HOOVER

Washington.—President Hoover has appointed a "conference" to study home building and home ownership. The major object of the conference will be the "removal of influences which seriously limit the spread of home ownership, both town and country." The president finds that second mortgages, from which the home buyer only gets $75 out of every $100 which he borrows, seriously lessen home ownership, and suggests that this 25 per cent toll taken by home mortgage concerns is too high a price for the services they render.

President Hoover designated the American Federation of Labor as a member of the conference.

Go to your Union Meetings

Don't say you are too tired; the weather is bad; or there too much quibbling and "hot air" to interest me.

Every time you miss a meeting and leave it to the other llow to look out for your interest, you are doing an injus- e both to yourself and your organization.

Your views on especially vital subjects should be repre- nted in discussion and by vote, and the only way for this be done is for you to be at your union meeting.

You are responsible for the good and welfare of your or- nization, and non-attendance of union meetings on your rt is not excuse enough for you to voice your opinion ter a measure has been passed. It is then time for you to ncur in what has been done and work in harmony with e officers and other members of your union.

CLEVELAND POLICE ARREST 99 PICKETS IN BIG HOTEL STRIKE

Locked-out union hotel workers picketing the Hotel Winton, Cleveland, Ohio.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Cleveland, Ohio, Sept. 4.—Whole sale police raids on locked-out waiters and waitresses picketing the big Cleveland hotels have only strengthened the fighting spirit of the workers, who are more determined than ever not to accept the "yellow dog" contract and "open shop" conditions which the hotel managers are trying to force on them.

When Police Judge Moylan discharged twenty pickets arrested while on duty in front of the downtown hotels, the police were angered and Acting Police Chief Matowitz sent out four patrol wagons and a squad of police to wage war on the pickets. The police arrested 99 waiters and waitresses and crowded them into cells in the central police station. They were released under $100 bond pending arraignment in court.

"A good way for police to bring about disturbance is to keep on interfering with the lawful rights of the pickets," Attorney William J. Corrigan, representing the union, declared.

"Trouble that occurs on the picket line from now on will be directly accountable to the action of the police in herding people into jail by the wagon load."

Corrigan also labeled the action of the police as "terrorist methods."

Six hundred workers, members of the Hotel and Restaurant Employes' and Beverage Dispensers' International Alliance, are taking part in the fight. Pickets are on duty daily outside the Winton, Statler, Cleveland, Hollenden and other hotels. International officers are giving effective aid to the locked-out workers and Cleveland labor is strongly backing them.

Meeting in Columbus, the Ohio State Federation of Labor unanimously endorsed the stand of the culinary workers.

NEW YORK LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR ASSAILS PAY CUTS AS DISASTROUS

High Wages Best Answer to Communism, Lehman Tells New York State Federation of Labor—Gov. Roosevelt Advocates Study of Unemployment Insurance by Legislature.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 4.—Vigorously denouncing wage cutting as disastrous for the nation, Lieut. Gov. Lehman told the sixty-seventh annual convention of the New York State Federation of Labor here that "high wages leading to prosperity and happiness and self-respect and pride in home and country are the best answers to communism." Lehman spoke at the opening session of the convention.

Explaining that he was speaking not as a public official but "as a business man who for many years has followed closely industrial and commercial developments and changes," Lehman said, in part:

"Of late I have been greatly disturbed to hear rumors and reports of actual or threatened wage cuts in some of the industries of our country.

"I am disquieted over such a possibility, because it is my firm and very definite belief that nothing would prevent or delay our return to prosperity so much as a general or even fairly widespread reduction in our wage scale or a lessening in our labor standard.

"Any such course would be a short-sighted and disastrous one for the country to pursue. It would react no less unfavorably on the interests of the manufacturers and merchants than on the workers themselves.

"High wages leading to prosperity and happiness and self-respect and pride in home and country are the best answers to communism. Russia is laboriously trying to effect what we attained in this country a long time ago. It is because of a realization of that fact, I believe, that organized labor has, in the last ten years, been the greatest protection that we have had against the encroachment of communism and hateful communistic propaganda and philosophy."

Discussing the maintenance of prosperity, Lieut. Gov. Lehman set forth these seven factors upon which he said prosperity is dependent:

Good crops marketed at reasonably remunerative prices.

Sufficient credits at reasonable cost to the user thereof.

Large scale production of manufactured goods at reasonable costs.

The maintenance of a satisfactory wage scale and enlightened working conditions.

The maintenance and development of an export trade sufficient to maintain a sound trade balance.

The continuation of a substantial construction program by governmental units, by public utilities, by common carriers and by commercial and home builders.

The maintenance of sympathetic and understanding relations between employer and worker.

Speaking before the convention, Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt urged a thorough study of unemployment insurance and remedial measures by the legislature.

Expressing his belief that business depression and unemployment are more serious than at any times since 1893, the governor said:

"I hope the next administration and legislature will take up a definite and practical study of unemployment insurance, avoiding, of course, any form of dole or mere hand-out; for we have seen the danger when we treat a business problem purely as a matter of charity. This study must be made on a sound insurance basis, under which the state, the employers and the employes all will be joint premium payers."

JUDGES WHO PROBE MOONEY CASE DON'T SEEM INTERESTED IN BOMB

San Francisco, Aug. 21.—State supreme court justices held hearings on the Billings pardon plea in Folsom penitentiary, where Billings is confined, but the jurists did not seem to be interested in what happened at the scene of the bombing.

Supreme Court Justice Preston did most of the questioning. He is a former prosecuting attorney and he has made every effort to prove Billings a "red," and an associate of anarchists. Under cross-examination Billings said if he had the power to change this government he would place a democratic president and a democratic congress in power. The "red" claim collapsed.

Billings refused to consider a parole. He insisted on a pardon. "Parole," he said, "is for those who are guilty and have repented."

The failure of the justices to ask about the bombing would indicate that the prosecution has dropped the theory of murder guilt and that Mooney and Billings, while not murderers, are undesirable citizens, and should not be unconditionally released.

This theory is strengthened by Attorney Brennan's statement to the justices. He was an assistant prosecutor in the two trials and said that the defendants were tried on their general reputations "and outside circumstances."

The supreme court, in its recent refusal to favor a Billings pardon, took the astonishing position that even if they did not commit the murders, they knew who did, and that they have not offered to aid the police in apprehending the bomb throwers. In the trials the state made no attempt to create this impression. Witnesses who are now known to be perjurers, swore that Mooney and Billings carried a suit case that was supposed to carry the bomb.

TEXTILE WORKERS OUT; ARE NOT ORGANIZED

Bessemer City.—The cry that "union agitators cause strikes in the south," cannot be used by the management of the American Cotton mills at this place.

Wages were cut from 5 to 20 per cent and the unorganised employes walked out. The management offered to restore the old rates for three weeks, when the cut would be effective. The strikers demand wage increases and a reduction in the rent of company houses. They also ask that the mill superintendent be discharged, as he is to blame for the trouble.

BESSEMER STRIKE EMPHASIZES DEPLORABLE SOUTHERN MILL PAY

Chairman Smith, of Labor Organization Committee, Points Out Walkout Was Last Resort Against Starvation Wage Scale — Gastonia Paper Condemns Employers' Action.

By C. S. GARRISON

Birmingham, Ala., Sept. 4.—The strike of some 1,200 mill hands employed by the American Cotton Mills at Bessemer City, N. C., a few days ago has emphasized the deplorable wage conditions in the southern textile industry, Paul J. Smith, chairman of the southern organization committeen of the American Federation of Labor, said today.

The Bessemer City workers are not organized, and the strike was a despairing protest against starvation wages and a further cut in the pittance pay received by these workers, Chairman Smith said.

The mill payrolls show that in full-time operation the workers receive from 13 1-3 cents an hour for sweepers to $12.83, $14.40 and $17.18 a week for weavers. The American mills have been on part-time work for a long period; then the management announced another cut in wages. This was the last straw and the 1,200 employes walked out in protest, declaring they were not receiving a living wage.

Gastonia Paper Deplores Cut.

The strike caused the Gastonia (N. C.) Gazette to say:

"The strike at Bessemer City is most unfortunate. The action of the Messrs. Goldberg in cutting wages, from this angle and the information available, is absolutely indefensible. Cotton mill wages at best are none too good. When a man making only $13 or $15 per week is cut to $10.80 it is time to protest. These figures are contained in news reports from the scene of the trouble; there has been no denial from the Messrs. Goldberg and the supposition is that they are correct. Of all the times to make wage reductions in Gaston county cotton mills, the present is the worst."

Following the walkout a number of communist organizers representing the so-called "National Textile Workers" hurried into Bessemer City to take charge, but were met with such determined opposition from the strikers, and incidentallv with such rough treatment, that they were glad enough to leave town, after being escorted to the city limits.

The mill management had cut wages from 20 to 30 per cent. When the strikers went out they demanded a restoration of a former wage scale; a reduction in house rent on houses owned by the company and the resignation of a mill superintendent.

Two Strikes Take Place.

At a conference with the workers Robert Goldberg, president of the concern, made a proposition that the workers return at the old scale which would be in effect for two and a half weeks, after which the reduction would go into effect. This the strikers refused. Later Goldberg agreed to restore the old wage scale without reservation and not to use discrimination in putting the strikers back to work. Through a misunderstanding many of the workers returned to the mills, it being understood that the management had agreed to all demands of the strikers, whereas two or three points in the demands were not met. This resulted in a second suspension of work.

The wage demands as formulated by the committee of workers handling the strike are:

Card-room workers: Card grinders, $19 per week; picker hands, $15; card hands, $16; sweeper in card rooms, $15; drawing hands, $15; slubber hands, $15; frame hands, $15.

Spinning-room workers: Doffers, $15; spinners, $15; sweepers, $15; oilers, $15; spoolers, 20 cents per box; yarn man, $15; winders, $12; twister hands, $14.40; weavers, 17x17 picks, 90c per hundred; yarn balers in winding room, $14.40.

Minister Represents Strikers.

The schedule, it was said, is lower than the wage scale which prevailed at the mills before the first 10 per cent cut a few months ago, but slightly higher than that which was in effect before the reduction made a few days ago. The Rev. C. J. Black, pastor of the Bessemer City Baptist church, is representing the strikers in their conferences with the mill management.

Postoffice Squibs

By R. B. LANE

Let's see! Where is the post office located this week?

* * *

Frank Brooks is back from his vacation. While away he got a telegram from Chattanooga. He said he knew Massey had sent it because it came collect.

* * *

J. L. Turner, of Station A, wife and daughter, are back from their vacation, having visited his old home in South Carolina. He brought back a beautiful coat of tan (and incidentally a blistered back).

Bob Hodges, of North Chattanooga, is on his vacation.

* * *

J. R. Marshall, of the parcel post truck, is on his vacation also.

* * *

Mr. Brooks told one of his lady patrons he would have a good looking bachelor to work for him while he was away. When he got back, she asked him where the good looking bachelor was. (Gribben worked for him.)

* * *

Luther Sliger was seen sharpening his knife on the grindstone in the basement the other day. Lookout, boys!

* * *

I understand that A. B. Pippin, of Station A, will retire from the service in October.

* * *

J. T. McPherson motored up to Tellico Plains Sunday and back by way of the Kimsey highway.

* * *

W. A. Myers and R. B. Lane went up to Lenoir on a squirrel hunt Monday, visiting Uncle Charlie Davis, who owns and operates the ferry and operates a large farm also.

* * *

I see by the paper that some fellow has preferred charges against the postmaster for political activity.

* * *

Mr. Walker went down into his garden to see about that yellow jackets' nest and found a dog's nest with five puppies in it. Some of the neighbors went down to see them and found the yellow jackets' nest.

* * *

George Forbes says a lady living in the Ferger called him up a few days ago and asked him if it would be safe for her to go on her vacation without storing her furniture. Asked her why, and she said she saw where the government was talking of tearing the building down and building a post office. George asked her how long she expected to be away. She replied, "Well, at least ten days."

Peruchi Players Continue Success

Hundreds of Chattanoogans laughed till the tears rolled down their cheeks at the antics of "Mary," highly imaginative young married woman described by her patient spouse as being afflicted with "plots," and played by Miss Ann Nielson, leading lady of the Peruchi Players, at the Bijou this week. Packed houses at every one of the performances of "Mary's Other Husband," opening with a special Labor day matinee, continued to attest the high standing of Chattanooga's own stock company, and the performers responded to the spirit displayed by presenting one of the best performances of their engagement so far. Miss Nielson was particularly good in the leading feminine role, sharing honors with Mrs. C. D. Peruchi, who early won a place in the hearts of local theatergoers with her impersonations of comedy characters.

"Your Uncle Dudley," recommended by Manager Ed Booth as equal to this week's bill as a laugh-provoker, will be the Peruchi offering for next week, with the usual bargain matinees. Following this production, the company will offer the ever-popular dramatic thriller, "Rain," one of the most successful stage plays of recent years.

Injunction Protest By Philly Unionists

Philadelphia.—Organized labor in this city will stage an anti-labor injunction mass meeting at the National League baseball park on Sunday, Sept. 7.

The demonstration is part of an educational campaign that is being conducted by the unionists against government by equity courts, which is rampant in this city and vicinity.

Wm. Green, president A. F. of L., will be the principal speaker. Other speakers will be Hon. Royal S. Copeland, United States senator from New York; Thomas Kennedy, secretary-treasurer United Mine Workers of America, and John A. Philips, president Pennsylvania Federation of Labor.

MORE ABOUT KNOXVILLE

a few days ago over the unemployment situation. Mr. Trent quoted Edgerton as saying, "the working man should save while times are good." Mr. Trent said he told the manufacturers over there that the only solution to the problem was the shorter work day, and that they agreed with him.

City Manager George Dempster, a member of the Teamsters and Chauffeurs' union, also spoke. Mr. Dempster said first that he was proud of the fact that he was a union man, that he had carried a card for thirty years. "Because of the fact that I carried a union card," he said, "my income was around 60 per cent greater than it would have been otherwise, and what it did for me it will do for every other man."

Sam H. Scandlyn, editor of Progressive Labor, was the next speaker, and told of several things the labor movement had done, but especially stressed what it would take to make the new temple a real home. He said that four walls did not make a home, either for a family or for an organization, but the thing that made the home was perfect harmony among the constituency that goes to make up the home, and with such harmony as that, nothing could stop the labor movement. "We must always remember that there is always three sides to every question—your side, my side and the right side. We must be willing to see your side, then see my side, and then accept the right side." He said that real close co-operation would surely bring success to the movement.

George W. Ford, editor of the Independent, was a speaker. Mr. Ford wrote the letter asking for a charter for the Knoxville Central Labor union forty-one years ago. He was at that time secretary for the Knights of Labor, and was responsible for getting the labor movement of Knoxville to enter the American Federation of Labor. He spoke very freely and feelingly of those times. President Broadwell and the building committee, composed of James Leahy, Vance Stamps and Sam C. Godfrey, were among others who addressed the big crowd. Every speaker was loud in his praise of the new home and all predicted that this is one of the greatest forward steps that has been taken by labor in Knoxville. It is hoped that every craft will be in its new home by the 15th of this month. Several visitors from out of the city were present as well as many friends in the city.

The trade unionist who fails to demand the union label, shop card and working button can not claim any credit for advancing the cause of the workers.

Smith Sent On Tour for Friends Of the Workers

Chairman Southern Organizing Committee Will Tour Five States in Interest of Progressive Candidates.

(Special Correspondence.)

Birmingham, Ala., Sept. 11.—Paul J. Smith, chairman of the southern organizing committee of the American Federation of Labor, with headquarters in Birmingham, has been assigned by President William Green to make a tour of five states of the northwest in the interest of the election of progressive senatorial candidates from those states.

Mr. Smith will open his speaking tour Sept. 15 in Wisconsin, and will speak in the principal cities in that state, Minnesota, Montana, Nebraska and Oklahoma. He will be absent from headquarters about six weeks. During his absence the work of the southern campaign will be directed by Edward F. McGrady, legislative representative of the American Federation of Labor, and Paul J. Aymon, organizer of the American Federation of Labor.

Several senators who are making campaigns for re-election this fall requested that Mr. Smith be sent into their states in the interest of their election, Mr. Green said in making his request.

In leaving headquarters temporarily Chairman Smith said the southern organizing committee has had the hearty co-operation of all those who have any desire to see the southern workers organized. While the battle has been an uphill affair, he said, the success of the campaign has been marked and unusual.

Chairman Smith is held in high esteem by the southern workers, and the leaders interested in organizing the south, for the efficient manner in which he has conducted the campaign thus far. This is emphasized by the fact, leaders say, that Mr. Smith, on Labor day, was the recipient of the medal of merit, bestowed by the Loyal Labor Legion for "most conspicuous service" rendered the cause of labor during the last year.

The organizing campaign is again in full swing, following the Labor day celebrations in towns and cities throughout the south. Scores of cities reported the largest Labor day demonstrations in their history. A mass meeting attended by 25,000 persons was held in New Orleans, while other cities reported large gatherings for the first time in the history of southern Labor day.

Chairman Smith is expected to assume his regular duties with the committee after the November election.

RUSSIA CAN CONTROL HER INTERNAL AFFAIRS

Washington.—"The A. F. of L. does not seek discrimination against Russian products because we are not in sympathy with their political theory," said William Green, president A. F. of L., writing as editor of American Federationist.

The A. F. of F. asked the state department to enforce the law against convict goods in the case of a shipment of pulp wood destined for this country that was produced by Russian convict labor.

"We believe that Russia must make her own internal decisions," said Mr. Green. "The A. F. of L. believes it fundamental that free institutions must be preserved and that we must protect them against menace from all sources. We are urging the application of a general principle—to protect free workers against competition with unfree labor."

CIRCLE TO PLAN FALL PROGRAM

A. I. Hays to Address Members Monday Night—Season of Activity Forecast.

A. I. Hays, industrial secretary of the Chattanooga Chamber of Commerce, will address members of Circle club Monday night at the Deuberry dining room, 11 West Ninth street. Mr. Hays, it is understood, has an interesting message for Chattanooga workers in connection with his experiences during a recent trip through the eastern and northern states seeking new industries for this city.

The program Monday night will mark the official opening of the fall and winter season, members of organized labor's civic organization having been more or less inactive along this line, as usual during the summer months.

Quite a number of projects considered by the club last winter will again be taken up, most of which are of such nature as to require considerable time to put into effect.

Aside from these, the usual program of Circle club in the matter of assisting various local organizations in charitable and civic movements will doubtless be taken up, and members are forecasting the most active and interesting fall and winter season.

The meeting will be held at the usual hour of 7 o'clock, with President W. L. Gardner presiding.

Chicago Musicians Sign New Pay Pact

Agreement, Affecting About 900, Gives Union Members Same Wage Scale as Last Year.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Chicago, Sept. 11.—A new wage pact, providing for the same scale stipulated under the old contract, has been agreed upon by the Chicago Federation of Musicians and the theater owners, to go into effect for one year beginning Labor day, according to announcement of James C. Petrillo, president of the federation.

The agreement affects all union musicians employed in legitimate or motion-picture theaters in Chicago, numbering about 900.

The old wage scale for union players, which will be maintained under the new contract, ranges from $93 to $130 a week.

PHILLY ALSO SIGNS.

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 11.—Danger of an immediate strike was averted when a temporary agreement between the local union of the American Federation of Musicians and the Fox and Stanley-Warner movie theaters was reached. Negotiations for a permanent agreement are continuing.

The same terms as those in last year's contract are being sought by the musicians, while the movie managers are seeking to reduce the number of musicians employed by 65 per cent.

Trade Union Artists Face "Canned" Music

Washington.—Leading picture theaters in this city would substitute "canned" music for musicians, and refuse to negotiate a wage agreement on the basis of guaranteeing employment to even a single musician. Stage employes are also involved.

The local movement is part of a nation-wide plan to dispense with these trade union artists, who may have to join the great army of unemployed.

This dispensing of labor is bringing rich rewards to the theater owners, whose profits are increasing.

The Fox Film corporation and its subsidiaries reported an increase in earnings of $2,038,340, or 40 per cent, in the past six months.

The Loew corporation reports earnings for the past year equal to $10 a share.

High Wage Fiction Exposed by Survey

New York.—The high wage fiction that has been overworked in this country is exposed by the business survey department of Worrance, Sullivan & Co.

The District of Columbia, the seat of government, stands first among the twelve leading states with an average annual wage of $1,645. Wyoming and Nevada, both non-industrial states, are second and third, with $1,627 and $1,618. Michigan, an industrial state, is fourth with $1,555 and New York is fifth with $1,495.

These figures are ignored by persons who point to a few hundred thousand workers who receive wages of $10 a day and over, and who constitute a small percentage of the millions of wage workers, hundreds of thousands who receive $10 a week and less.

BARBERS' CHIEF

JOHN S. BOYD

Mr. Boyd was recently elected president of Local 415, Barbers, replacing George Perry, who resigned. The new chief has been a continuous member of Local 415 since Dec. 4, 1916, and his many official assignments include that of recorder and of vice-president. He is proud of his record, declaring he "has never been suspended or fined." Mr. Boyd is active in the religious life of his community, having been choir leader of his church, the Missionary Baptist, for about fifteen years.

Frey, Wharton on Hoover Board for Labor Statistics

Employers and Economists Also Named to Commission to Carry Out Purposes of Wagner Unemployment Law.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Washington, Sept. 11.—John P. Frey, representing the American Federation of Labor, and Arthur O. Wharton, representing the railroad organizations, head the list of members appointed by President Hoover to the unemployment statistics commission, which, among other things, will work out the machinery to be set up under the terms of the Wagner law for enlarging of the labor department unemployment statistical machinery.

Mr. Frey is secretary-treasurer of the American Federation of Labor Metal Trades department, while Mr. Wharton is vice-president of the American Federation of Labor and president of the International Association of Machinists. The complete list of membership on the new commission is:

John P. Frey, Arthur O. Wharton, Dr. Leon Wolman, national bureau of economic research; Harold F. Brown, national industrial conference board; P. W. Mitchfield, United States Chamber of Commerce; William M. Steuart, director of the census; Ethelbert Stewart, commissioner of the bureau of labor; Dr. Joseph H. Willis, advisory committee of the census of unemployment, and Noel Sargent, National Association of Manufacturers.

Milwaukee Hosiery Union Turns Down Proposed Pay Cut

One Reduction Leads to Another, Workers Declare, Announcing Intention to Strenuously Resist Employers' Move.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 11.—The Milwaukee branch of the American Federation of Full-Fashioned Hosiery Workers has unanimously rejected a proposal of the Phoenix and Holeproof companies for a 22 per cent reduction in knitters' wages.

Resolutions were adopted that no reduction in wages shall be acceptable unless the managements were willing to sign the new national full-fashioned agreement.

"We believe," said Carl Holderman, first vice-president of the national federation, "that a spirit of co-operation between employers and the union in the full-fashioned industry will solve all problems and that a willingness to face facts will be mutually advantageous.

"It is to be regretted that some union employers feel that they should have reductions below the existing uniform rate schedules. Such desires lead to further reductions in wages and the union intends to resist strenuously all such efforts on the part of individual employers."

Wage reductions in the non-union Allen-A Co., hosiery manufacturer of Kenosha, have been reported to Milwaukee union headquarters. It was also reported that a 20 per cent reduction had been decided on by the non-union Real Silk concern at Indianapolis, Ind.

Recently Milwaukee employers stated that they had not lost their confidence in the theory of high wages and that they were reluctantly submitting to a situation which demanded wage reductions as a measure of self-preservation.

NEW HOME FOR CENTRAL BODY

Delegates Vote to Lease Painters' Hall, Market St. Change Effective 15th.

Delegates to Chattanooga Trades and Labor council Monday night voted to lease the Painters' hall, on Market street, as a meeting place for Central Body and local unions. This action was taken after a hall committee had endeavored for several weeks to locate a place which would be convenient for and acceptable to all the "family." A labor temple committee, appointed some time ago to investigate the possibility of securing a building to be bought for a permanent home, has been busy also for several weeks, and was granted further time.

The Painters' hall, located at 829½ Market street, is large and roomy, and has been put in first-class condition by members of that craft, who have been meeting there for the past year. A smaller hall also goes with the main auditorium, and still another medium-sized room on the second floor has been rented to accommodate as many local unions as possible.

The change, it is announced, will become effective Sept. 15.

Electricians Hold Enjoyable Outing

"Fish-fry" and picnic-outing, staged by Local 175, Electrical Workers, at the country estate of Emmett Terrell east of the ridge, last Saturday afternoon, was reported as a great success, and several members expressed the hope that the outing will become an annual affair.

Leaving the courthouse at about 2 o'clock, the local unionists and their families, together with electrical contractors and their families, journeyed to the beautiful Terrell home, and it was declared that from the time the party arrived on the scene until long past nightfall everybody enjoyed himself and herself hugely.

E. E. Crosby, Labor World correspondent, said horseshoe pitching contests proved enjoyable until Fred Simons broke up the game, being entirely too good for the wire twisters and their bosses to attempt to compete with. Swimming and other games and diversions were enjoyed until about 6 o'clock, when the committee served the following menu: Fried fish, potato salad, cold slaw, coffee and lemonade. It was past 8 o'clock, he said, when the tired picnickers decided to return to their homes.

The committee in charge of affairs consisted of W. P. Howard, C. E. Cofer, W. L. Williams, E. E. Crosby, E. E. McDaniels and I. Patton.

"Glaring Defects" Seen In Count of Jobless

Royal Meeker, Former Labor Statistics Head, Points Out Weaknesses in Census Unemployment Report.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Williamstown, Mass., Sept. 4.—Several "glaring defects" in the census report on unemployment prevent its acceptance with "complete confidence," Dr. Royal Meeker, United States commissioner of labor statistics from 1913 to 1920, believes.

Commenting on the figures, Dr. Meeker said that the 2,508,141 persons reported "out of a job, able to work and looking for a job" comprise only those found in this condition "on the day in April when the census enumerator made his calls."

"The most glaring defect in the figures published is the total lack of any information as to the duration and seriousness of unemployment," he continued. "We do not know how many of the 'gainfully employed' had been out of work for a day, a month, three months, six months or a year.

"There is no means of estimating whether the average duration of unemployment was at the time of the census. Consequently we do not know and can only vaguely guess at the economic suffering and social damage due to the unemployment recorded.

"The second glaring defect is the exclusion of all those who have not been 'usually employed,' but who are seeking work and are therefore just as thoroughly unemployed as those set down as such by the census agents. Every year not less than 2,000,000 New Yorkers knock at the gates of industry seeking jobs. How many would be added to the recorded number of unemployed were these job-seekers included, we are left to guess.

"A third defect of this census is the failure to include part-time unemployment which in times of depression is sometimes quite as serious in its economic and social effects as full-time unemployment."

President Howard Declares Despite Depression, Organized Workers Have Much to Be Thankful For.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Chicago, Sept. 11.—Asked for an appraisement of the status of American labor at this time, Charles P. Howard, the young and aggressive president of the International Typographical union, said that the organized workers of this country have much to be thankful for despite the unfavorable economic situation, and that labor is upon the defensive to a greater degree than at any time during the last decade.

"In some lines of industry organized workers have been confronted with demands for wage reductions," he said. "In others attempts have been made to increase the working hours. A larger number have suffered from unemployment than at any time during recent years. And in the face of this organized labor has much for which to be thankful.

"Unorganized workers have suffered to a great extent from the application of the moth-eaten industrial philosophy that wage reductions and increased hours will return prosperity to those who measure success by bank balances. With the unorganized there are no protests heard outside the homes of those affected; there is no collective action or strike to prevent placing upon the workers the full burden of the 'business depression;' there is no protection except the conscience of the employer—and business has no conscience. The unorganized worker is inarticulate. He accepts the condition dictated by the business necessity of the day or he walks. When there is prosperity he has less difficulty in finding a market for his labor—at a price made solely by the buyer without voice as to the conditions under which he labors.

"While the organized worker also suffers from unemployment, his organization is a check upon injustice. His union exercises a regulating influence upon the work-day and the work-week to provide opportunity for sustaining employment for the greatest number. A comparison of the condition of the organized to that suffered by the unorganized must impress all with the value of organization.

"In those organizations which have accomplished most for their members the full value of co-operation has been learned. The evils of unemployment have been lessened by the establishment of a system of out-of-work benefits. Available employment is divided in a manner to permit those who have been displaced to sustain themselves. Benefits are provided to relieve the less fortunate during times of stress, and sacrifices are reduced to a minimum.

"As an example of what has been accomplished by workers' organizations through co-operation it is only necessary to refer to the organization for which I have the honor to speak. During the present year the International Typographical union, with 80,000 members, will pay old-age pensions in excess of $1,400,000. It will expend approximately $400,000 to maintain its home for aged members and those incapacitated by disease. In practically every city where there is an aggravated condition of unemployment out-of-work benefits are paid ranging from $12 to $25 per week. During the same period death claims aggregating half a million dollars will be paid to the beneficiaries of deceased members. To guarantee the solvency of these activities the organization has a reserve approximating ten millions of dollars. All of these benefits to lighten the burdens of workers are supported by contributions from the pay envelope enlarged and protected by the organization. Truly a great lesson in the value of co-operation.

"The year has also brought forth evidence that labor is making progress in its fight for equality before the law and fuller recognition of the principle that human rights are superior to property rights. We have witnessed the rejection by the United States senate of an honorable jurist nominated by a popular president because of his record upon the question of injunctions in labor disputes.

"Labor has cause to be thankful for its friends who exert a powerful influence upon national and international policies of government. Labor unorganized is a chattel, except that it benefits from the conditions established and maintained by organized workers.

"Labor organized is exerting a powerful influence to materialize those things which make for happy homes, a more contented people and a better civilization.

"The hosts of labor can be truly thankful for their part in guiding the nation into the path that leads to brotherhood. With organization and co-operation as our watchword labor goes forth confident of fullest victory."

ALFRED HOFFMAN

Trades Unionist, Convicted in North Carolina Courts of "Rioting."

Note—Alfred Hoffman is well and favorably known in Chattanooga, having visited this city several times during the past few years. He is regarded here as a gentleman of unusual ability. A member of the Full Fashioned Hosiery Workers' union, he has for the past several months been engaged in organizing work in textile mills of the south, having been "loaned" by his organization to the Textile Workers for that purpose. Mr. Hoffman is energetic in his espousal of the cause of organized labor, and his conviction of "rioting" will be deplored locally.)

(By International Labor News Service.)

Marion, N. C., Sept. 11.—Alfred Hoffman, organizer for the American Federation of Full Fashioned Hosiery Workers and the United Textile Workers, convicted after a trial that shocked conscientious people here, appeared Sept. 8 to begin his year's prison sentence.

Hoffman's appearance here follows refusal of the supreme court to grant a new trial. Indignation has grown since the action of the supreme court and the case seems in a fair way to become a cause celebre.

With Hoffman go three local union men, each sentenced to three months in the chaingang.

Those who dare speak here are saying among themselves that Hoffman was convicted because the bosses had reached the conclusion that his organizing activity had to be stopped.

Hoffman and the three local men were convicted on charges of riot. The trouble involved efforts of a crowd to prevent the sheriff from moving furniture back into a strikebreaker's house from which the crowd had removed it.

GROSS EARNINGS DROP BUT PROFITS INCREASE

Boston.—Financial reports of large corporations for 1930 show that gross earnings are less than 1929, but net profits are larger, said State Representative Joseph Finnegan in discussing his bill that would create a commission to investigate causes of unemployment and recommend remedies therefor.

The increased profits this year, while gross earnings are less, indicate that by a constant cutting down of employes, a smaller number are obliged to do work formerly done by a larger number, said the state lawmaker.

He declared that unemployment in this state, instead of diminishing, seems constantly to grow worse.

THE CHERRY TREE

Where with our Little Hatchet we tell the truth about many things, sometimes profoundly, sometimes flippantly, sometimes recklessly.

When the baby swallowed the fountain pen Milt Gross remarked in his funny way and in his funny dialect that meanwhile the family would have to write with a pencil.

Light-headed Marie Antoniette long years ago gave voice to an inane remark about eating cake when the bread supply gave out.

Modern hard-boiled employers talk about cutting wages and discharging workers until things get back to normal.

This employer idea is as foolish in its ill-timed humor as the scrivenings of Milt Gross and as brutally stupid as the twaddle of the frivolous Marie.

Yet nobody laughs and nobody cuts off their heads.

Which proves, among other things, that the world and the ways of men change as the decades roll by.

Today's reactionary employers will seem a lot funnier and a lot more stupid fifty years from now.

Labor day has gone. The parades have wended their way and the orators have thumped whatever there was to thump.

Some of the best Labor day speeches ever made were made this Labor day.

Great lessons were preached; profound truths asserted.

Well, what does it all come to?

Does everyone say, "ho hum," yawn and go back to whatever they were doing?

Or does the light of knowledge sink in? Does the torch of inspiration get grabbed up by eager hands?

We shall see what we shall see. But this is sure: The arraignment calls for action. Inaction has lost its last justification—or excuse.

Kids hanging onto the rear ends of street cars and automobiles are a lot like non-union men riding along at the expense of union men.

In many an industry the union scale fixes the rate for all. The non-union man is nothing but a hitch hiker, riding on union gasoline at the expense of those who keep unions going, paying dues and attending meetings—and going on strike when necessary.

If there is any person on earth whose position is unenviable it is the non-union worker who won't get into the union of his calling.

There he goes, hitch hiking his way along to higher wages, better conditions and shorter hours, free to desert and run away when any effort is required to maintain the benefits he gets.

Conscience is something about which we are inclined to have a false notion. We are inclined to think all consciences are like our own.

That's a good deal like the myth about the sanctity of human life.

Consciences are all things to all men. Consider the conscience of the injunction judge, the scab, the stool-pigeon, the union-hating employer, the subsidized professor.

Each has his view and each somehow justifies what he does.

Men will go a long way to justify the practices out of which they get money.

After all, it is a wonderful and an enviable thing to be able to say you are doing what you are doing because you believe it is the right thing to do. And to be honest with yourself when you say it. It is a boon denied to many.

A new chemical process for separating the complete fibrous contents of flax from the straw has recently been invented in Germany by Reinhold Geiss, of Munich. The flax produced is soft and lustrous and while retaining all its strength (twice that of cotton) can be produced at 30 per cent less than the cost of cotton fibre. The material, fully decorticated and degummed, can be employed directly on the ordinary weaving machines in any cotton mill and will produce a linen that is said to be cheaper than cotton cloth, but of greatly superior texture and beauty.

MR. LEGGE'S BLUNDER.

Mr. Alexander Legge, who went from a great harvester company to the chairmanship of the federal farm board, has attacked labor's wages.

Labor's average yearly wage in the farm implement industry was $1,391. What's wrong with that wage? Is it too much?

Let's go further with Mr. Legge. He talks about pay envelopes that make prices high for farmers. What envelopes were these? Mr. Legge laid it all to labor, but United States government figures tell another story. While, from 1914 to 1927—the latest year for which there are figures—wages rose roughly 50 per cent, salaries rose roughly 100 per cent. If there is too much being paid, there it is!

Mr. Legge is in the salary class. Maybe his salary went up 100 per cent in those years.

There's another point to raise. From the same governmental sources it is shown that in cereal preparations, raised by farmers, out of a total value added by manufacture amounting to $67,938,240, in 1930, just $8,178,357 is wages, while the average wage per worker was $1,369. The average value added per worker in manufacture was $11,374! Those figures are up to date—1930—from the census of last April. Let the farmers look at those figures and ponder.

When Mr. Legge next goes out to do battle it will be well for him to look to his guns, lest he pick another collection of flintlocks.

And as to what he has just said in Syracuse, charging labor, which is criminally underpaid, with being the robber in the equation, it is clearly up to him to retract. He may have been talking to farmers, but workers have ears. And they know the facts.

A HAM AND A GOOSE

A week or two ago The Labor World printed a news story about the custom of certain southern textile mill owners who give their employes a ham at Christmas—and low wages all year 'round.

Now comes the alert and able president of the Building Trades Council of Freeport, Ill., revealing that at Christmas time W. T. Rawleigh, millionaire anti-union manufacture, gives his employes a goose at Christmas.

In the south they "pay plenty" for the ham; in the big Rawleigh plant they pay plenty for the goose, as President Donker points out.

In one big southern mill the workers declared they wanted ham all year through—meaning decent wages. Mr. Rawleigh will find, sooner or later, that the goose idea will play out.

Without difficulty the grim humor of the goose and the hind leg of a hog could be drawn out. But the mere facts in the case seem to serve best to lay bare the hypocrisy of certain types of employers.

A ham and a goose at Christmas! What a recompense for the mill worker who faces starvation week after week! What a recompense for the girl who walks out of the big Rawleigh plant with a $6 pay envelope! How grandly munificent and how filled with the traditions of free America!

PRACTICE, NOT PRETENSE, COUNTS.

Sly wage reductions by employers who profess faith in high wages is the same policy these employers apply in opposing trade unionism. These employers rarely openly attack organized labor. The exception is in areas that are dominated by mill barons and coal-owning feudalists.

Would-be oligarchs are more cautious in other sections of the country. They do not frankly challenge organized labor because of a public sentiment that trade unionists have developed. These anti-unionists either attempt to drug the worker or let an injunction judge smash trade unionism under the plea of "protecting property."

The anti-unionists profess to favor organization of workers—provided, of course, the union "is run right." This stamps the oligarch as a "progressive" among non-thinkers and secret foes of organized labor.

But more important, it paves the way for the company "union" and welfare schemes that are intended to weaken the militancy and deaden the spirit of trade unionists. This crafty scheme, together with government by injunction, is now the general rule among anti-union employers who have abandoned such crude methods as the militia to bayonet strikers.

Preaching high wages and at the same time reducing wages is the "red herring" system of these employers. They loudly proclaim their faith in high wages. They thunder from the house tops the value of a high purchasing power. They are interviewed and photographed by the public press while they apply their creeping wage reductions and gradual layoffs that intensify unemployment.

Trade unionists and sympathizers should not be tricked by wordy abstractions.

Practice, not pretense, counts.

DOWN TO THE LAST EGG.

Here is a story of victory for somebody, or something—perhaps for bureaucracy: Six hundred inspectors, looking for Mediterranean fruit fly larvae in Florida, report that they can find none—not even one! Thus does the federal government's vast expenditure of money justify itself, unless somebody lied somewhere some time. To have so slain the pest that, where millions swarmed a year ago, not one fly is left to lay an egg, seems almost too much to believe. And yet the United States department of agriculture solemnly states it as a fact! If only the government could be as thorough in eliminating unemployment, or in farm relief, or in wiping out pellegra!

GOD'S WORD

A Weekly Comment on a Text From the Bible

Written for The Labor World
By WILLIAM L. MOSS

Faith in God.

Text—"Faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things unseen."—Heb. 11:1.

Scholars do not agree as to the authorship of the Epistle to the Hebrews and the question as to who really did write this wonderful book of the New Testament will undoubtedly always remain more or less a matter of uncertainty. Some say the Apostle Paul wrote Hebrews; others have suggested a woman is the author; still others lay its authorship to some unknown writer of the first century, one with a liberal education of the type of, say, Plato. Though who wrote this Epistle is not known, yet its sublime thoughts, its spiritual teaching and its words of heavenly grace are not susceptible to the slightest doubt—the book, whoever may have been its author, Paul, a woman or somebody else, is in the Bible for us to read with our own eyes and test with our own souls! Our text this week is the first verse of the eleventh chapter of this Epistle to the Hebrews, designated in the King James version of the Bible as "The Epistle of Paul to the Hebrews." I am sure all will grant the text is the best definition of faith ever conceived in the brain of a mortal. Now that we have found what is conceded to be the best definition in words of what faith is, let us look to life itself and find there among mortals equally good examples of faith. Considering the space at our disposal I think two examples will suffice.

WM. L. MOSS

Faith Exemplified.

It was in that world-historic fifteenth year of the reign of Tiberius Caesar that John the Baptist went forth announcing the Kingdom of God to be imminent and summoning all to prepare themselves for the impending event. John's heart was afire with God's love; his soul was truly a home for God's trust. The Father to John was not an idea, a theological theory, but God was his Creator, who had touched him in no ephemeral way. John was a prophet; God had set him apart among men as His chosen vessel. John knew he was a prophet because he had faith in God—he knew God was big enough to make him a prophet and send him forth as such.

The other example of living faith is that of a man of whom the world has heard practically nothing. He was one of the hundreds who have gone to China as missionaries—a man by the name of Philip Morrison. On the eve of his departure for China a number of his close friends accompanied him to the dock. As he shook hands round with them one friend said to him: "Philip, do you think you can do anything for that immense country?" Mr. Morrison studied for a moment, then his face lighted up, and he quietly replied: "No, but I think God can!" Mr. Morrison knew he was not big enough to do much alone for the millions of souls in China, but he had faith enough to know that God working through him he could accomplish a lot of good that God wanted done.

The Lesson for Us.

The great drawback to our use of faith daily is that we are continually wanting to put our own wills above that of God's will. We feel that our personalities are greater than the will of God. Being worldly creatures and with worldly work to do in a very worldly way, we soon come to believe that only through our worldly wills can we accomplish our tasks. We forget this is God's world, of His own creation; we are only His stewards. The work we do is His work, to be done for Him; we are only His servants. "Oh, ye of little faith," the Master cried in all the depth of reproach and sorrow His lips could give utterance to. He saw that men lacked the faith that will sustain them, that make things possible, that creates a beautiful fellowship in the world, that glorifies God. Above all, He saw that men even lacked faith in themselves! Jesus saw the human mind clothed in childish darkness, refusing to shed its fetter or lack of faith, thereby keeping the faithless from giving expression to fullness of life, the very thing which God the Father desires every human being to possess. The world, as the poet Browning has truly said, is "too much with us." We have plenty of time for the material world but not enough time for God. We readily stake all on some friend's word but lack faith in God's Word. We find time to count our dollars but not God's gifts and blessings. Pleasure and profit open our eyes wide but not a single glance do we cast toward the things of eternity. We seek the glory of this world with eagerness but become shy when the opportunity presents itself to win a soul in God's name. We plunge with joy into gatherings in the secular world but draw back from public worship. We face with conquering determination the realities of this world but abruptly turn our backs upon the reality of God's Kingdom among men.

Our faith should be so deep that it is always to us the substance (assurance) of things hoped for—making us contented. It should be so strong that it is itself the evidence of the unseen—making us happy in our contentment. Phillips Brooks said: "Pray not that God will make our tasks lighter nor the way easier, but pray that He will make us real men and women." The real man or woman—the man or woman complete in the eyes of God as well as of men—has FAITH! Every man or woman of faith is a Gibraltar for humanity.

LABOR QUERIES

Q.—What is the United States women's bureau?

A.—It is a division of the United States department of labor and is an organization whose purpose is to ascertain under what conditions women are working and through scientific investigation set industrial standards which will benefit both employer and employe.

Q.—What was the earliest union of hatters?

A.—The Hatters' Union of Danbury, Conn., organized in 1810.

BILLION FOR BUILDING URGED TO AID JOBLESS

Buffalo, N. Y.—A resolution requesting President Hoover to call a special session of congress for the purpose of appropriating $1,000,000,000 for public construction to relieve unemployment was unanimously passed by the State Federation of Labor convention.

Jewish Clergymen Laud Trade Unions

Baltimore.—American rabbis, in their yearly plea for social justice, declare that organized labor is "perhaps the most potent of all forces for securing hours and wages requisite for neutralizing unemployment and for the civic and spiritual development of the worker."

The message was issued by the commission on social justice of the Central Conference of American Rabbis and will be read from Jewish pulpits.

The conference approves the five-day week and high wages.

"If our constantly improving machinery with its displacement of human workers is not to produce unemployment before it produces aught else, not only must the number of working days a week be reduced; there must also be a diminution of the number of working hours a day with corresponding increases of wage rates, enabling all workers to earn sufficiently," the commission states.

"The issue of organized labor brings to mind the disheartening developments at Elizabethton, Marion and Gastonia as well as the spirit of social endeavor with which Jewish, Protestant and Catholic religious leaders have, during the past year, joined in applying to the turmoil their common principles of brotherly love. It is our profound hope that these principles may soon be accepted and applied in the southern textile situation and in all industry."

The rabbis declare there is weighty obligation on all citizens to consider the various expedients that are deemed helpful. These include placing children in school rather than in industry, mothers' old-age pensions, employment exchanges to eliminate waste; unemployment insurance; long-time planning of public construction and "ampler educational and institutional care for those temporarily or permanently incapable of work."

BROOKHART URGES LABOR TO USE ALL POWERS TO END INJUNCTION

Iowa Senator Advocates Strongest Kind of Pressure on Congress, in Speech at Big Chicago Labor Day Celebration—Rev. Maguire Sees Shorter Hours as Unemployment Remedy.

By JOSEPH A. WISE

Chicago, Sept. 11.—One of the underlying causes of the present economic crisis in this country is that the banking interests are permitting the credit resources of the nation to be used for gambling purposes, declared Smith W. Brookhart, United States Senator from Iowa, in an address at the Labor day celebration of the Chicago Federation of Labor, held in the stadium of Soldier field, where 100,000 persons assembled to hear the speakers and witness the field events and colorful parade.

Senator Brookhart denounced the misuse of the injunction writ in labor disputes and urged organized labor to use every resource at its command to bring pressure to bear upon congress to pass the anti-injunction bill now pending in the house of representatives.

"It is an old principle of equity that an injunction shall not lie where there is a remedy at law," the senator declared, "and there never has been an injunction issued in a labor dispute in this country where a remedy at law could not have been found, if a remedy were needed."

The senator cited instances where overt acts had been committed by employers seeking injunction writs.

Shorter Work Day Urged.

A shorter work day and a shorter work week were urged as a remedy for the present unemployment situation by Rev. John W. R. Maguire, president of St. Viator's college, Bourbonnais, Ill. The noted Catholic priest ridiculed the claim made by some that the present economic crisis was caused by overproduction. He presented an imposing array of facts and figures showing an appalling lack of luxuries and the bare essentials of life among the great masses of the people to demonstrate that more production is needed rather than less of it.

Father Maguire also dealt at some length with the problem created by the rapid introduction of labor-saving machinery. The remedy, he said, is the shortening of working hours and the increasing of the purchasing power of the workers in order that they may consume more and more of their product and that employment be given to all.

Other speakers were John Fitzpatrick and E. N. Nockels, president and secretary, respectively, of the Chicago Federation of Labor.

Mooney Invited to Speak.

It had been planned weeks in advance to have Thomas J. Mooney as orator of the day, provided Mooney were pardoned by the governor of California in time to be present. Not only was Mooney not present, but organized labor of Chicago has abandoned the thought that the present authorities of the state of California will grant the famous trade union prisoner a pardon.

E. N. Nockels, secretary of the Chicago Federation of Labor, who spent several weeks in California recently, accompanied by Frank P. Walsh, attorney, in the interest of Mooney, said to International Labor News Service that he did not believe Mooney has a chance of a pardon at this time.

"But we have not abandoned the fight," said Nockels. "We are going to make the opposition sick of the whole business before we get through with them."

Preston Assailed as Unfair.

Secretary Nockels characterized Justice Preston, who assisted in the investigation of Mooney case conducted by the California supreme court, as a second Judge Jeffreys, of "bloody assizes" infamy. Judge Preston, said Nockels, acted as a bloodthirsty prosecutor throughout the proceedings rather than as a fair and impartial jurist desirous only of ascertaining the truth.

"It made them all sick when we dug up McDonald, the waiter," said Nockels. "They had thought that McDonald was dead."

Glib Talk Can't End Capitalist System

Nottingham, England.—"If glib talk could end it, the capitalist system would be finished in a year or two," said President John Beard, of the British Trade Union Congress, in opening the annual conference here.

The unionist answered attacks on the British labor government by the independent labor party, left wing of the British labor party. The "lefts" oppose Premier MacDonald because he does not install socialism.

President Beard declared there is no present substitute for capitalism. He repudiated the "lefts" slogan "socialism in our time."

"I am not certain," said Beard, "that there is any kind of organization capable of working the change without tremendous dislocation of the social and economic life of the nation."

The task of the labor movement, he said, is to build a new road for progress without obstructing traffic on the old road. He said the "lefts" are obstructors.

"Let us keep the ideals we have always held, but let us be realistic with regard to the actual world situation," he said.

The American Federation of Labor is represented at the trade union conference by Fraternal Delegates John J. Manning and Thomas E. Maloy.

ARE COURTS "REACHED?"

Chicago.—Chief Justice Hughes, of the United States supreme court, said in an address to the American Bar association here:

"Our government is one of laws through men and most of our problems in the administration of criminal law could be solved by the selection of competent men free from the corrupting influence of fear and favor."

TRADE UNIONISTS ARE "FRAMED" WHEN THEY RESIST DYING WAGE

(By International Labor News Service.)

Washington, Sept. 4.—"The North Carolina supreme court's sustainment of the conviction of Alfred Hoffman, United Textile Workers' organizer, and the methods used in his trial, should be connected with the increase of pellagra in that state," said Edward F. McGrady, legislative representative A. F. of L.

McGrady was kidnaped with Hoffman by an Elizabethton mob of so-called respectable citizens, who have not been punished for their crime.

"The growth of pellagra in North Carolina is proof that low wages exist," said McGrady. "The United States public health service has shown that 20,000 cases of this disease, caused by undernourishment, exist in that state, and that 1,500 of the victims will prematurely die.

"Pellagra is the result of a dying wage," continued the trade unionist. "Hoffman was not in Marion when the deputies said they were assaulted. Hoffman and three associates were not arrested until after deputies killed six strikers by shooting them in the back. It was then that Hoffman was arrested and his trial and the prosecution's method switched the popular mind from the murder of strikers.

"Trade unionism is a challenge to the dying wage that anti-union employers would continue in North Carolina. If workers have a wage that will permit them to buy proper food they will not be stricken with pellagra and 1,500 of them will not fill premature graves. To continue this system, murderous deputies are permitted to kill and trade unionists are sentenced to the road chain gang, when they urge workers to prolong their lives.

BANKER IN INDUSTRY; NOT PRACTICAL MAN

Youngstown, Ohio.—Court proceedings on the proposed merger of Bethlehem Steel and Youngstown Sheet and Tube companies is revealing how bankers who have no knowledge of steel are a factor in this business.

One New York banker testified that his concern bought Youngstown stock to the value of $11,000,000. When asked if he had ever been a practical steel man he answered in the negative. He said he was, for five years, a director of another large steel corporation.

If you have done an injury to a fellfailing to demand union goods or service, there is no better time than the present to atone for the damage done.

Communists Menace American Industry

Detroit. — Representative William Fish, Jr., chairman of the house committee investigating communist propaganda in the United States, declared here that the government of the United States is not menaced by communists, but that the communists do constitute a menace towards industry.

Some of the witnesses before the Fish committee estimated the number of communists in Detroit all the way from 1,500 to 5,000. It was claimed that a communist paper devoted exclusively to the employes of the Ford Motor company has 20,000 circulation.

Rev. Charles E. Coughlin stated that Henry Ford was a great instrument for the growth of communism because of the way the officials of the Ford Motor company handle the employment situation.

LESS MINE FATALITIES, BUT FEWER MEN EMPLOYED

Washington. — Fatalities in coal mine accidents dropped to 1,132 for the first seven months of the year, according to the United States bureau of mines.

This is less than the corresponding period of 1929, but the death rate per 1,000,000 tons of coal mined is higher. There was less production and less men employed in the seven months, but the number of fatal accidents were higher than last year when based on the amount of coal mined.

Despotic Industrial Power Looms; Trade Unionism Single Challenge

(By International Labor News Service.)

Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 28.—"Industry is the last stronghold of despotic power and the only effective challenge to this power anywhere has come from organized labor," said Donald R. Richberg, attorney for organized railroad workers, at the Institute of Public Affairs.

"American industry is being concentrated in the hands of industrial autocrats," said Mr. Richberg. "By encouraging such concentration, the government is defeating its own purpose and is opening the way for the destruction of democratic institutions.

"As a result of these industrial concentrations, the doors of opportunity are being closed to the self-respecting worker. There is no place for him in this industrial system. The applicant for a job is not permitted to negotiate a contract. He has no individual bargaining power. He is not a serf because his employer has no property interest in him—only the property interest in keeping him 'free' to be exploited."

The balance of economic power, said Mr. Richberg, is being destroyed by operators of modern industry in America.

"There are millions of unemployed workers ready to break down the wage standards," he continued. "With the constant displacement of workers by machines this unhappy reserve supply of labor is constantly increasing. If it were not for some 4,000,000 trade unionists there would be no weight of any consequence on the employe side of the scales.

"It is true that we see on every hand laudable efforts to render public service by great money makers. Unfortunately, these noble experiments support reams of sophistical argument in favor of still further concentration of industrial power, so that more billions may be pressed out of the natural and human resources of this wealthy nation."

Mr. Richberg predicted that if present policies continue this economic power will be matched by the development and strengthening of labor unions or "all effective, aboveboard labor organizations will be crushed and an underground revolutionary labor movement will begin to rise to power."

Those who desire better living and working conditions must do their share to secure them. Demand union-made goods and service.

Why every telephone worker is a service salesman

The fact that more than 23,000 Southern Bell telephone men and women are enthusiastically promoting the sale of the service, is more than a matter of salesmanship.

It is a manifestation of their interest in the success of their Company and an expression of the spirit of cooperation which has made possible the epochal achievements in the telephone industry. They are inspired by pride in fifty years of progressive, unfailing service and loyalty to the ideals and traditions on which the business is founded.

They unhesitatingly recommend the quality, convenience and economy of the service, in the knowledge that no other comparable service or commodity gives to the consumer so much at such small cost.

Whatever your telephone service needs may be, do not hesitate to consult any telephone man or woman of your acquaintance. They are all anxious to give you the best possible service at the lowest possible cost.

Note and Comment on Things Doing in the March of Events

In the long lower reaches of the Volga river, which runs down through an immense territory through the Russian soviet land, grow the great sturgeon. Some of them reach a size and weight of 3,000 pounds, and in the case of a lady sturgeon of that weight one-third of it will probably be roe—which means fish-eggs. And another name for the same is caviar, which the same sells for fancy prices, after it has been put in salt water, and packed in barrels and casks, and then shipped across the lands and the oceans to places where it is put into small bottles with queer labels.

By that time it becomes more or less of a luxury, and somewhat highly flavored for those who are not accustomed to it. And, like other luxuries, fancy prices are collected for its delivery. It seems that this year's caviar crop, or so much of it as was shipped to the United States, brought a wholesale price of six hundred thousand dollars.

But that is only one-tenth of the value of the annual fish crop of soviet Russia, for the total in 1928 amounted to about six million dollars. And it is a part of the soviet policy that as much of this immense value as possible shall be turned into cash, and the cash turned into machines, and the machines taken to Russia. Imagine: fish-eggs hatching into tractors and bombing-planes!

The necessity for directing efforts toward the prevention of mental disorders, toward the conservation of mental health, and toward the amelioration of adverse mental states is apparent by the ever-increasing number of persons with mental disorders seeking aid in public institutions. During the 50-year period from 1880 to 1930, the rate of persons under care in state hospitals for the insane alone had increased from 81 to more than 220 per each 100,000 of the general population. The rate had almost trebled, but the actual number of cases under care had increased to almost six times the number under care in 1880.

The rapid expansion in public facilities for the care of the group comprising one form of mental illness, insanity — the group for whom the public demands segregation—has entailed an enormous outlay of public funds for buildings and equipment, and required yearly increases in expenditures for the care of inmates. This economic loss is of vital interest to legislators and practical administrators who are equally desirous of reaching an adequate solution of the problem. An intangible, but none the less important, aspect of such a situation is the economic loss to the community through invaliding so many people in the prime of life, and the suffering of individuals whose families are not infrequently impoverished by such diseases.

Unemployment persists and everything indicates there will be no quick recovery from the present depression. Basic industries are hard hit and the slump is real, not imaginary. As the Guaranty Trust company of New York remarked in a survey of business conditions: "It has become quite manifest by this time that the conditions underlying the present depression are more than psychological."

It is well for organized labor to recognize the true situation and be on guard against the dangers which spring from it — dangers that are more menacing than if the depression was only a passing flurry in the business and industrial world. The chief danger is that shortsighted employers will seek to lower wage and living standards. Labor senses this danger and its leaders, from President Green down, have warned against it.

While on guard against all attempts to lower standards, labor can make the best defense by waging an aggressive campaign to strengthen its forces. This means an aggressive, determined drive for new members. The southern campaign shows what can be done in this regard. The word comes that it has already benefited nearly all organized trades. That is all to the good, but the work needs to be extended to all sections of the country. North, south, east and west there is plenty of opportunity for organization work—work which is more urgently needed now than when the times are more favorable to labor.

The Seven Mistakes.

There are seven mistakes of life that many of us make, said a famous writer, and then he gave the following list:

1. The delusion that individual advancement is made by crushing others down.

2. The tendency to worry about things that cannot be changed or corrected.

3. Insisting that a thing is impossible because we ourselves cannot accomplish it.

4. Refusing to set aside trivial preferences, in order that important things may be accomplished.

5. Neglecting development and refinement of the mind and not acquiring the habit of reading and study.

6. Attempting to compel other persons to believe and live as we do.

7. The failure to establish the habit of saving money.

Wage Cuts Increase; Buying Power Less

Washington.—Wage cuts have followed unemployment, says the A. F. of L. Monthly Survey of Business, September issue.

The "gradual rise in the number of firms cutting wages since December, last year" is reported.

"There has been a widespread appreciation of the necessity of high wages to create purchasing power," the bulletin states. "The number of employes affected by wage cuts have been very much smaller this year than in 1924. Even though the depression of 1930 has been worse than in 1924, manufacturers have been less influenced by the fallacy that wage reductions would solve their problems. They did not immediately cut wages.

"But the rapid increase of wage cuts in July shows a dangerous tendency. Workers' incomes have been reduced by unemployment and part-time work more than in 1924. Just at this time when all eyes are turned to the retail market, and wholesale buyers are hesitating to see whether their customers will purchase enough to justify new orders from manufacturers, workers' ability to buy will probably turn the tide. It will largely determine whether business starts upward or stays in the present depressed condition for the winter months.

"The least we can do in the present situation is to avoid wage cuts and maintain workers' buying power at the highest possible level."

LUMBER WORKERS FACING WAGE CUT

Klamath Falls, Ore.—Organized labor protests against the proposed 10 and 15 per cent wage cut by lumber mills and logging corporations.

These concerns smashed trade unions during the world war and installed a company "union" called the Loyal Legion of Loggers and Lumbermen. The Four L's was supposed to be the last word in solving industrial questions, but has long since been discredited.

Thin, Pale, Weak

"I was been through a bad spell of sickness which left me very weak," says Mrs. Virginia Spruce, of Stapleton, Va. "I was pale and felt lifeless, and my strength did not return.

"I spent most of my time on the bed. I was very nervous, and the least thing upset me. I did not have strength enough to lift a broom. At times I would have bad headaches, which would hurt me until I could hardly see.

"Someone asked me why I did not try Cardui. I had read of it, so I thought I would see what it would do for me. It was really remarkable how I came out. My strength returned, and my health was better than it had been in years. I gained in weight about ten pounds. My color was good, and I ceased to suffer from headaches. I have told my friends about Cardui because I was benefited after taking it."

LABOR FACES STERN REALITIES; NATION MUST SOLVE IDLE ISSUE

(By International Labor News Service.)

Syracuse, N. Y., Sept. 11.—Present-day economic problems are in line with social developments and constant change, declared William Green, president A. F. of L., in a Labor day speech in this city. "It is labor, however, that faces the stern realities of life," he said.

"There is no period when society is free to think and act only in terms of absolute relaxation, recreation and tranquillity," said Mr. Green.

"When conditions are approximately normal all groups of people seem automatically compelled to grapple with some phase of a difficult human, social or economic problem. These involve questions of income, suitable employment, human relations, poverty (due to various causes), social justice and collateral questions which develop out of our modern industrial and social life.

"But it is labor, individually as well as collectively, that is face to face with the more stern realities which characterize all phases of our nation's economic and social problems.

"Only those who are forced to balance a family budget with a limited, and, perhaps, inadequate income, can appreciate the mental and physical distress which such an experience involves.

"Those who know and understand the heart and mind of labor, and who have undergone experiences associated with it can understand its difficulties and the underlying motives which inspire it to struggle for the enjoyment of a better day and a better life."

President Green declared that there is no reason for present-day unsound economic conditions. Unemployment, he said, can be stabilized in private industry through scientific production, sales methods and planning over long periods. An annual income, instead of the present system, was also favored.

"In seasonal industries," said Mr. Green, "funds can be jointly created out of which workers can be paid weekly income during unemployment. All of this can be supplemented by systematic expenditure of public funds for building and government construction.

"With all our vast resources to draw upon and with a determination to regularize private industry so that a steady, fixed annual income can be guaranteed to workers, the problem of unemployment can be overcome. The continuation of this uneconomic state of affairs stands as a challenge to our ability and resourcefulness to successfully deal with problems which unremittingly call for a just and rational solution.

"If there is any nation possessing the facilities and is peculiarly fitted to solve the problem of unemployment, it is our own favored country. There can be no hope for a solution of the problem in other countries, if we fail or if we admit failure."

Machine Is Changing Social Life; Nation Faces New Industrial Era

Baltimore, Sept. 11.—"We are at the beginning of a new era because of mergers, combines, labor-displacing machinery and centralized banking that controls credit," said Frank Morrison, secretary A. F. of L., at the Labor day celebration held under the auspices of the Baltimore Federation of Labor.

"Machinery in industry lightens labor, but often eliminates labor," said Mr. Morrison. "More than this, it destroys skill that has been acquired through generations of workers and eliminates pride in craftsmanship and creative faculties that distinguish skilled workers. This is more than an individual loss. It is a social loss because the worker, if he does not pass to the unemployed ranks, secures employment at some repetitive process where skill and initiative are unnecessary.

"From the standpoint of dividends and large output, there is no question that mechanization is a success, but the spiritual values a skilled worker loses, and the passing of a social sentiment based on craft pride and independence can well be considered.

"We are living in a new world. Old policies, old outlooks, old customs, old standards and old shibboleths are useless in the new day. New social and economic paths are being blazed.

"Men are beginning to question the correctness of a social order that displaces workers through machinery, making it impossible for them to buy goods produced by the machine. Business depressions are logical as the machine becomes more perfect and as new scientific processes are installed to place more workers on the streets and enlarge the number of non-buyers."

Mr. Morrison said the economic forces that compelled workers to unite is now operating in other fields, and that these forces must be understood that men may accept remedies, such as higher wages and the five-day week to meet changed conditions.

"Change is the law of life," he said. "This applies to the individual and to every activity of groups of nations. Fixity is no part of nature, that expresses itself in silent transition or physical unheavals that terrify. In either case men are alarmed when they are unacquainted with natural laws and forces that cause these changes."

"Just Married" Next Peruchi Offering

"Just Married," one of the most hilarious comedies ever written, and one of the most successful stage productions of the past decade, will be the Peruchi Players' offering all next week at the Bijou. Special scenery and electrical effects are required in the presentation of this merry mixup of honeymooners, and the lines and action will unquestionably be well presented by Chattanooga's own company of players. A special musical program by the Bijou concert orchestra has been arranged, and a continuation of capacity houses is assured throughout the week.

The Peruchi Players have added new laurels to their local record during the past week in the side-splitting comedy, "Your Uncle Dudley," many patrons having expressed the view that the farce is the best thing the players have done so far. Performances Saturday afternoon and night will conclude this week's offering.

INTERNAL REVENUE
$101,091,357 MORE

Washington. — Unemployment is general throughout the land, but this does not affect higher incomes, according to a preliminary report by the commission of internal revenue.

The report shows an increase for the fiscal year 1930 in total collections of $101,091,357 more than the previous year. The larger amount of the increase came from incomes.

Bad Work Conditions Breeder for "Reds"

Albany, N. Y.—Former Secretary of State Elihu Root's suggestion that a special federal police force be created to fight Communists is not favored by the Paper Makers' Journal.

Communists breed under bad work conditions, and Mr. Root, "the cleverest of corporation lawyers" has not been conspicious in leading the forces of reform to abolish iniquities, says this labor journal.

"Communism in this country has never been able to rise above the rank of a second degree nuisance; and it reaches that height only when the police in our great cities lose their heads—plus the greed of employers like southern textile barons and the Mellonized coal interests of Pennsylvania.

"If Communism were a nuisance, Mr. Root recommends the worst possible way of meeting it. Czarist Russia leaned more heavily on police repression than any other modern state except, perhaps, kaiserist Prussia.

"If a special Panama police force had been employed to swat mosquitoes, how long would it take to build the Panama canal?

"Mr. Root may know mathematics to figure it out; we do not. But when General Gorgas cleaned up the breeding places of mosquitoes, building the big ditch became an ordinary engineering job.

"Communism breeds in the swamp of unemployment, the mire of low wages, the stagnant marsh of industrial tyranny. Wipe out these and the country will automatically become immune to Soviet propaganda."

Pinchot Is Pledged To Oust Coal Police

Altoona, Pa.—Former Gov. Pinchot pledged, at a Labor day speech here, that if he is elected governor he will abolish the coal and iron police system in this state before July 1 next year.

He also pledged to urge the next legislature to enact an old-age pension law and he promised to appoint a commission on unemployment that will make recommendations next January to the state legislature. He will appoint the commission before he is inaugurated. He said he will not wait for the legislature to act on the coal and iron police but will wipe out the system by the simple expedient of refusing to sign any commissions for the appointment of any of these officials.

Under the law the commissions of all these special policemen expire with the passing from office of a governor and new commissions must be issued by the incoming governor.

"I here repeat to you my pledge," said Mr. Pinchot, "that if I am elected governor of this state there will not be, on July 1, next year, a single coal and iron policeman left in Pennsylvania."

ELIZABETHTON WORKERS ARE VINDICATED

Appeals Court Reverses Carter Chancellor.

HOLDS INJUNCTION WAS NOT OPERATIVE

Opines, However, If Court Order Had Existed, Would Have Been Violated.

As a condition of the settlement of the first big rayon strike at Elizabethton, an existing injunction was withdrawn, but upon the occasion of the second walkout workers were arrested for alleged violation of the original injunction, and a chancery court in Carter county declared these workers in contempt.

Contention, on appeal, that parties to the original injunction had rendered it ineffective by agreement in ending the first strike has been upheld by the court of appeals at Knoxville, the court also taking the rather peculiar stand, however, that if in fact there had been an injunction these workers would have been in contempt. The court's opinion makes it plain that the chancellor is reversed solely upon the ground that the injunction had been mutually made inoperative.

A special dispatch from the neighboring city explains the situation as follows:

Knoxville, Sept. 16.—Union employes of the American Glanzstoff corporation won a victory in the court of appeals here Friday when Special Judge J. R. Hickerson reversed a Carter county chancery decree which held that the employes were in contempt of court for violating an injunction during the second strike at the plant on April 15, 1929.

Judge Hickerson held that the parties to the suit had previously rendered the injunction in the case of the American Glanzstoff corporation against George Miller and others, ineffective, by an agreement reached on March 21, 1929, at Johnson City. Judge W. W. Faw and Judge John H. Dewitt concurred in the opinion.

The original and amended bills sought to enjoin the defendants from entering into or upon the premises of the Glanzstoff corporation or from interfering with the property or the employes of the complainant, following the first strike at the Glanzstoff plant. The second strike occurred on April 15, 1929, but in the meantime the agreement had been reached in the conference at Johnson City and friendly relations temporarily restored.

The high court ruled that although the strikers were guilty of misconduct, their acts were not violative of the injunction that had been issued during the previous strike, the court holding that that injunction had automatically been dissolved with the ending of the first strike.

The appeals court opinion, by Special Judge J. Roy Hickerson, follows:

In this case, the court of appeals concurred in the opinion and finding of the chancellor that the defendants cited for contempt were guilty of misconduct charged in the petitions, and the court was further of the opinion that such misconduct would have constituted a violation of the injunction previously granted by the chancellor, and a contempt of court, if the injunction had been operative at the time of such misconduct.

But the court of appeals held that the parties to a suit may, by parol agreement, render an injunction ineffective and inoperative, and that such an agreement was made by the parties in this case prior to the aforesaid misconduct of the alleged contemnors. The decree of the chancellor was reversed on this ground alone.

Labor Chautauqua Succeeds in Georgia

Columbus, Ga.—The first Georgia labor chautauqua closed here with an average nightly attendance of 2,000. The Central Labor union sponsored the movement. Addresses were made by trade union officials of Georgia and other states. The address by Dr. Edmundo de Ovies, dean of the cathedral of Atlanta, and a leading southern clergyman, featured this educational movement.

The chautauqua was so successful that unionists in other sections will hold similar meetings.

STEEL TRUST LEADS AS CEMENT PRODUCER

New York.—The steel trust is not only the largest factor in the steel and iron business, but it has taken the lead in cement production by utilizing by-products.

The trust produces 40 per cent of the nation's pig iron and steel. It is also an important factor in the chemical field.

The "Hitch Hiker"

SAYS UNIONS NOT OPPOSED

Hays Finds Little Antagonism Toward Legitimate Organizations.

"In my tour of the north and east seeking new industries for Chattanooga, I found little if any antagonism displayed toward the organized labor movement as represented by you gentlemen here tonight," said A. I. Hays, industrial secretary of the Chattanooga Chamber of Commerce, a guest of honor of Circle club at the regular semi-monthly meeting of that organization last Monday night.

Manufacturers, however, will not locate in a communist stronghold, he said. "Your ideals and those of the communists are diametrically opposed. Big business concerns are not seeking, primarily, cheap labor, but high-class, contented labor. Cheap labor means sloppy labor. It is up to us to show that Chattanooga labor is the kind they are looking for."

Discussing the policy of certain interests in advertising that southern labor is "cheap," Mr. Hays said, "I have never in all my experience sought a new industry with the claim that southern labor is 'cheap.' Such a statement would have been an insult to our workers, and would have done harm instead of good. Wages are somewhat lower in the south than in some northern and eastern communities, because living costs are lower, and the same thing applies to other items which enter into the business of manufacturing.

"In very few instances while on my recent tour was I asked the cost of labor in Chattanooga, but invariably the prospect asked about the skill and contentment of our workers."

Mr. Hays went into considerable detail regarding his trip, and was optimistic with respect to prospects for new industries for Chattanooga.

At the conclusion of the address the fall program of the club was discussed, and several items were outlined and preliminary steps taken toward participation in major civic matters during the coming season.

Veteran Union Man With Coffee Firm

K. M. Bubis, representative of the American Tea and Coffee company, Nashville, has been in the city recently in the interest of his concern, and particularly boosting the capital city company's chief product, "American Ace" coffee.

Mr. Bubis is an old-timer in the organized labor movement, having been for many years an active member of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers at Spokane, Wash. He now has a retiring card from that local union, but declares his interest in the movement has never waned since he entered the business field.

OIL PROFITS IN NEW HIGH.

New York.—Cash dividends by companies in the Standard Oil group broke all profit records for the second three months of this year.

The dividends amounted to $68,859,106. This is an increase of $3,432,125 over the 1929 period and sets a new mark by these corporations.

FIRST SESSION IN NEW HALLS

Central Body Will Have "Housewarming" at Regular Meeting Monday.

Chattanooga Trades and Labor council will hold its first meeting Monday night in the new home, 829½ Market street. Besides a large hall and a small one on the third floor, a medium-sized room on the second floor has been repainted, papered and decorated and several local unions have already held meetings in each one.

Schedule of meetings for the various locals has been about worked out, Secretary Matt Gerlach reports, and all of the halls will be utilized practically every night in the week.

Moving of chairs, local unions' desks, etc., was accomplished Tuesday, and with a few necessary additions, such as new lights, etc., the new halls will be ready for the winter, Mr. Gerlach said.

The meeting Monday night will be held in the main hall, and a large attendance of delegates is expected for the "house warming."

Colored Workers Name Officers

Stationary Firemen, Oilers and Shop Laborers, a union composed of colored employes in this line of the Southern railroad, has named new officers for the coming year as follows:

President—Steve Locke.
Vice-President—S. E. Bolten.
Financial Secretary—C. Larkins.
Recording Secretary—Jerry Mays.
Treasurer—E. P. Newton.
Guide—Will Powell.

The union meets on the first and third Tuesday nights of each month, at the colored Masons' hall, 411 E. Ninth street.

Peruchi Players To Offer New Comedy

"Take My Advice," a new comedy which ran for a solid year in New York, will be the Peruchi Players' offering all next week at the Bijou. "One of the most recent American comedies, written around an entirely new and original ideal, this play will be found to contain rare and unusual entertainment," says Manager Booth. "Honest, wholesome and clean, and at all times richly humorous, 'Take My Advice' will prove as unique an offering as has been presented."

"Just Married," one of the most enjoyable farces ever written, has played to capacity audiences all week at the popular playhouse, and it appears that the excellent company presented by the Peruchis is just hitting its stride. The "honeymoon farce" will be presented twice Saturday, at 2:30 and 8:15, at the usual low prices of admission at Chattanooga's only dramatic playhouse. Lester Cohn and his nine-piece orchestra will continue as a feature at each performance.

NO JOBS FOR MIDDLE AGED.

NIGHT SCHOOL SESIONS OPEN SEPTEMBER 29

Building Open for Enrollment Next Week.

LARGE VARIETY COURSES OFFERED

Opportunity Given Workers for Improvement in Many Lines of Endeavor.

The free night school, "The People's University," will begin the 1930-31 sessions at the vocational school, corner Fourth and Chestnut streets, September 29. According to O. C. Kirkman, school director, indications are that a large enrollment will feature this year's session of the popular and ever-growing system organized under joint auspices of federal, state and city governments.

Night school sessions will be held on Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday evenings, with classes in the following subjects offered: Elementary and advanced fundamentals, high school, commercial, professional, technical, home making and others. Day classes will be conducted covering any subject needed by working people, at any hour between 8 a.m. and 6 p.m., if as many as fifteen enroll in any one subject.

In addition to age limits, pupils must give evidence that they are qualified to succeed in the work which they undertake. These technical classes in night and day schools are for the purpose of supplementing daily employment or some allied trade.

Classes will be operated in outlying districts where a demand for such is evident. An enrollment fee of $2 is all the cost attached to the courses, with the exception of textbooks.

Among those who may be helped by the adult education system are listed the following: Women who desire to prepare for the duties of the home; women who wish to solve the problems of the family; all whose early education was neglected; those who would supplement their early education with more culture; the foreign-born who would learn the language of America; aliens who wish to become citizens; men and women who wish to prepare for professions; those who wish to advance in their trade or profession; office workers and others who would enter or advance in the world of business; the ambitious who desire self-improvement in any line.

A brief description of technical course offered follows:

Automotive Mechanics—Engine repair, chassis repair, motor block testing, carburetor work, ignition, starting, lighting, trouble shooting, and storage battery work.

Blue print reading, trade drawing, trade mathematics—as required of all skilled mechanics in the various trades.

Boiler Code—A student of the A. S. M. E. standard boiler code as applied to constructive operation and inspection of both low and high pressure boilers.

Cabinetmaking—Woodworking for cabinetmakers, bench workers, and machine operators, including designing, billing and wood finishing.

Drawing and Design—Commercial designing, figure drawing, sign painting, window display.

Home Making Courses — These courses are planned to meet home problems, related to the clothing, food and health of the family and are as follows: Food preparation and serving, food demonstration, nutrition, clothing selection, clothing construction, alteration of ready-made garments, home nursing, child development, millinery.

Mechanical Drawing—The underlying principles of all drawing will be taught. Open to anyone, whether trade worker or not. This course will be followed by special drawing courses such as mechanical and architectural drawing.

Practical Electricity — Electricity and magnetism, batteries, electrical machinery, electrical circuits, direct current generators and motors, inside wiring for light and power, meters and meter-testing, power plant operation, alternating current generators and motors, transformers, armature winding, house wiring.

Plumbing—Theory of plumbing, drawing for plumbers, mathematics for plumbers, plumbing practice.

Printing—Hand typesetting; pressfeeding; presswork; make-ready; imposition and color study.

Sheet Metal Drafing—Principles of sheet metal drafting and laying out of work open to all sheet metal workers.

Structural Design and Structural Drafting—Beginning and advanced classes. Principles of structural design, covering strength of materials, graphic statics, slide rule instruction, use of handbook, etc.

PUBLIC WANTS REAL MUSIC

Weber Declares Movie Theaters Are Re-Employing Live Musicians.

By HARRY S. KENNEDY
President Local 80, American Federation of Musicians.

The meeting at Cadek Conservatory of Music last Sunday, honoring our international officers, was the most interesting ever held by Local No. 80, American Federation of Musicians. It is not often that locals the size of No. 80 are visited by the heads of the organization.

The visit of the international officers was for the purpose of making contracts having to do with the 1931 convention of the A. F. of M., which will convene at the Memorial auditorium the second week in June, 1931. President Joseph N. Weber said, "I will have to take my hat off to you boys for proposing to entertain a convention of the federation, with only a membership of 100." He expressed himself as being well pleased with Chattanooga, and was of the opinion we would have one of the most successful conventions in the history of the federation.

Mr. Weber addressed the members on the history of the organization and its accomplishments. He also took occasion to tell us of the progress of the federation in its fight to perpetuate the art of music in America and Canada. He brought out the fact that the theaters of America and Canada are controlled by five syndicates with headquarters in New York City. He expressed the belief that their efforts to replace living music by the "canned" variety could only result in failure after the novelty wears off. Statistics show that the orchestras are gradually returning to the pits as the public tires of a counterfeit of the original. It was pointed out that music is an emotional art, and it is impossible to photograph a musician's temperament.

President Weber stated that with the invasion of the machine age it would eventually be necessary to shorten working hours, as the man who works is certainly entitled to a living. It was pointed out that the present unemployment situation was brought about by overproduction, and business can only return to normal conditions when the people consume the surplus. This cannot be accomplished by substituting machine power for manpower, thereby curtailing the income of the purchasing public.

Treasurer Brenton brought out the fact that only 6,000 theater musicians were out of employment at the present time, compared with approximately 7,500 a year ago, which is bad enough, but not so serious when our membership of over 140,000 is taken into consideration.

After the meeting the officers were taken for a short sightseeing trip, and were enthusiastic in their praise of the scenic beauties of Chattanooga. President Weber said the only bad part of the visit was the fact they had to leave, but would look forward to their return for a longer stay next June.

Ikey Stutz says after hearing Joe Weber speak he is in favor of calling a meeting of the uniform committee, of which he is permanent chairman.

* * *

The president congratulated the local for the fine "turn-out" to the meeting Sunday, saying we have a membership of 100 and there were 112 present. He likened the instance to Stradivarius violins, saying 600 were manufactured and 3,000 have appeared in America.

* * *

Secretary William Kerngood has rented an apartment in the Ayrshire, and he, with Mrs. Kerngood, will make their home there next June, during the convention.

* * *

Several of the boys from Atlanta, Birmingham and Memphis were in town Sunday to greet President Weber. Among them were Secretary Charles Bearden, of Atlanta; President Friedman and Secretary C. P. Thiemonge, of Birmingham, and President Joseph Henkel and Secretary James Saxby, of Memphis.

* * *

All agree that Weber made a great talk, but wait until you hear him conduct the convention. "You ain't heard nothin' yet!"

* * *

For the benefit of those who have not been notified, the dance minimum has been changed to seven men, the scale remaining at $6 for three hours, any place within ten miles of the city limits.

ANOTHER GOOD CITIZEN PASSES

C. H. Rogers, Pioneer Resident, Father of "Jimmie" Rogers, Crosses Bar.

Charles H. Rogers, 76, father of James C. ("Jimmie") Rogers, secretary of Lodge 1450, Machinists, passed quietly away at 8:50 o'clock Wednesday night at his home, 2104 Long street.

Mr. Rogers was a pioneer citizen, having come to Chattanooga in 1886 and been active in local affairs since. He was at one time a member of the board of aldermen, and was active in the work of his church, St. Paul's Episcopal. He had been a member of the choir of that church since his residence here.

Mr. Rogers was born in Cornwall, England, in 1854. He was a member of the Men's Service league and a charter member of the local camp, Woodmen of the World. Survivors are two sons, James C., of Chattanooga, and Albert E. Rogers, of Shreveport, La.; one daughter, Mrs. Oscar Bowman, of Bend, Ore.; twelve grandchildren and three great-grandchildren. Funeral services were held from St. Paul's church at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon. Pallbearers were Z. A. McCrary, A. J. Dodds, Joe G. Turner, Jerome Bazemore, C. J. Mertins and C. A. Carpenter.

The Labor World speaks for the entire local union movement in extending sincerest sympathy to Brother "Jimmie" and the other relatives in their bereavement.

INJUNCTION TO BE PARAMOUNT AT CONVENTION

Executive Council Lays Foundation for Meet.

SOUTHERN DRIVE ALSO BIG ISSUE

Preliminary Confab Presages Interesting Session American Federation.

By CHESTER M. WRIGHT
(By International Labor News Service.)

Atlantic City, N. J., Sept. 18.—With the election of G. M. Bugniazet, secretary of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, to fill the vacancy created by the death of the late James P. Noonan, the A. F. of L. executive council began a quarterly session here that laid the foundation for the coming Boston convention.

Bugniazet was elected after a prolonged consideration of the matter, with two other candidates in the running. These were Arthur M. Huddell, president of the International Union of Operating Engineers, and Daniel J. Tobin, president of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters and Chauffeurs and former A. F. of L. treasurer.

Bugniazet immediately took his seat as a member of the council.

While, in the report to the Boston convention, the injunction will be rated as the paramount issue, it probably will not be the liveliest, nor will it be by any means the only important issue.

Southern Campaign Big Issue.

The southern organizing campaign will be a big issue and the convention will have before it a report showing just what has been won by the year of work. It will show that 112 new local unions have been formed and that there are five new central bodies. There is no estimate of the new membership, but some really big unions will be reported as chartered, headed in numbers by a Longshoremen's union in New Orleans having 5,000 members. This is trailed closely by the textile workers' union of 4,000 members at Danville and by another textile workers' union at Greensboro, S. C., of major numbers. Both of these are having a testing fire and Danville may be in a state of strike before the Boston gavel is brought down for the first time. President Green said the union members at Greensboro are being "persecuted" and it is known that at Danville wholesale discharges have taken place. President Green said that at Danville the company's so-called industrial democracy schemes had disappeared and that all "welfare" work had been called off. The workers, he said, wanted a union, not schemes.

What may be a real, old-time fight was foreshadowed when President Green, in an interview, declared his opposition to compulsory state unemployment insurance, holding that employment is the best cure for unemployment and that if there is insurance it should be worked out by voluntary agreement between employers and employes. It is predicted that this will come into the Boston convention and will be an issue. Advocates of state insurance have been by no means idle and they may seek to record the convention. The position enunciated by President Green is agreed to be entirely in accord with the traditional philosophy of the movement.

Issue to Go to Floor.

The state-aid proponents may raise the point that since the federation a year ago went on record for state old-age pensions it should take another step and stand for unemployment insurance. On the other hand, there are others who hold that since state unemployment is contrary to the established philosophy, the federation should withdraw its support of old-age pensions and take a position that offers no relation to state-aid projects. If the issue comes to the floor, as it seems destined to do, there is every indication that it will produce what may be called an "old-fashioned debate" that will be a treat to those who revel in philosophical discussions as well as to those who are interested in the practical application of the philosophy.

The council came to grips with unemployment when an official delegation of the United Brewery, Cereal and Soft Drink Workers appeared to ask for modification of the Volstead act as a means of relieving unemployment as well as knocking the props out from under an impossible enforcement situation. This delegation came laden with figures that commanded admiration. The council found itself in entire accord with the demands of the Brewery Workers.

The council considered the situation regarding catholic unions in Canada and will exert fresh efforts to bring about an understanding leading to agreement upon bona fide union lines, President Green said.

Sugar Workers Exploited.

President Green laid before the council a report on labor conditions in the Rocky mountain region sugar beet fields. The report was prepared by C. N. Idar, veteran general or-

FRIDAY, SEPTMBER 19, 1930.

THE CHERRY TREE

Where with our Little Hatchet we tell the truth about many things, sometimes profoundly, sometimes flippantly, sometimes recklessly.

Old line economists, as they are called, are in the picture again. They are proclaiming, with all the wisdom of the croaking frog on the half-sunk log, that wages must fall as commodity prices fall.

How wonderful it must be to have brains like that. How far above the mob these old bozos must feel, serene in the purity of their intellectual power, untouched by any hurly-burly contact with the living, moving world.

Wages must come down as prices come down. "Now, ain't that sumpin'?"

There ought to be some way by which men could be prevented from calling themselves economists when they are merely so many ancient shells in which a modicum of ossified brain cell rattles from side to side—but there ain't and so we have to draw our own distinctions.

If what these cloistered souls say were true it would mean that the modern mechanized world would shortly undo itself—that the more we make machinery to do the less we get out of it.

The only trouble with the dear old souls is that they have got the cart before the horse, or, putting it in more modern terms, they are in reverse.

The modern system of production would eat itself up if their verdict were true.

But it is not true. It is sheer rubbish.

Machine production, if it accomplishes anything, cheapens the cost of production per unit. If that means anything at all it means that unit selling costs must come down and wages must go up. In addition to that hours of work must be decreased.

We are in our present trouble because the gap between national producing power and national buying power was too wide. Wages were too low and prices were too high.

Too much remained unconsumed.

Falling commodity prices help to close that gap. So do move away the unconsumed pile, help to bring buying power within striking distance of consuming power.

That narrows down somewhat the stream of certain profits, but it makes all profits, as a whole, more stable. And it makes commodities move more readily, regularly, continuously.

And now comes the old line economists, jumping on this truth, trying to put the hand cradle back where the combination harvester is operating under motive power.

But the march of time will not turn back. Machinery will not give way.

All economists, before they can use the title, ought to have to spend months in shops, on railroads, on farms, in banks and in newspaper offices—and all perhaps, in newspaper offices.

They would learn to relate facts to theories instead of theories to facts. Then what is and not should be discredited.

One more thing is that the twaddle of the old fogy economists ought to be worth something to union labor, to sympathetic employers and to the public that the ball is made good use of.

Such economic wool-gathering advice ought to stop.

Patience of cotton mill workers, victims of low wages, long hours and "speed-up" systems is about exhausted and signs multiply that a fight with exploiting employers is coming, perhaps very soon. The fight, when it comes, must be won for labor. Victory will be highly important to all American organized workers, and trade unionists in every section of the nation will help themselves by backing the southern workers to the limit. If southern workers fail and are driven back to work at old wages and conditions of employment, high labor standards in all parts of the country will suffer a hard blow.

The International Ladies' Garment Workers' union is showing what can be won for organized workers even in times of unemployment and serious business depression. Undeterred by obstacles presented by industrial conditions, the union goes steadily forward, winning better wages and working conditions for its members.

In the last twelve months, strikes of many thousands of union garment workers have been successful. Only a few months ago cloakmakers in several cities materially bettered their condition after a spirited struggle. Latest to chalk up victories are raincoat makers and children's dressmakers in New York City. Just previous to these walkouts, Baltimore cloakmakers won a decisive victory.

Keep your eye on the Ladies' Garment Workers' union. It's an organization that is doing things.

WAGE CUTTERS MAKE FLANK MOVE

The Iron Age, a spokesman for the iron and steel industry, says "we are in for wage reductions" and that "the doctrine of the consuming power of high wages is losing ground."

This statement should be read in connection with the policy of employers who slyly reduce wages while proclaiming their belief in high wages. The Iron Age statement is a hint to these employers and to "me-too" writers and so-called economists to drop the high-wage theory and harp on "the law of supply and demand."

This wretched philosophy for wage standards sets no limit to workers' pauperization, as is illustrated in the bituminous coal industry. The editor does not attempt to prove that the theory of high wages is "losing ground." He seems, however, to be well aware that the high-wage theory must be abandoned before his low-wage objective can be reached.

The public does not approve wage cuts. It understands that reduced buying power prolongs business depression. If wage cutters are successful among their unorganized workers it is necessary that the people be quietly led from the high-wage theory.

This sinister feature of the Iron Age position will not pass unnoticed by trade unionists who should intensify their educational campaign on the value of high wages. It must be remembered that Iron Age speaks for the nation's largest unorganized, low-wage, long-hour industry.

The strategy of these wage cutters is to separate the general public from labor's high wage theory and thus have a free hand in lowering standards of helpless employes. To talk of the "law of supply and demand" in an age of monopolies, mergers, combines and labor-displacing machinery would be amusing but for its malignant purpose.

These hardened exploiters would extend the boundaries of their economic control and industrial anarchy at the price of continued depression and general hardships.

HUMAN NATURE IS SAME.

The tobacco trust's low-wage policy has been extended to tobacco growers who are paid 7½ and 9 cents a pound. This is less than the cost of production. Growers in one North Carolina county, together with business men, agreed to boycott all tobacco products until a fair price is paid. They advised growers to join the co-operative association and declared they will work less hours next year by reducing their acreage 25 per cent. Wage workers, under similar conditions, do likewise, but they run the risk of being enjoined for "interfering with interstate commerce."

LABOR QUERIES

Q.—What are the employment standards urged by the United States women's bureau for women wage earners?

A.—They include the eight-hour day, Saturday half holiday, rest periods, clean, well aired, well lighted workrooms, guarded machinery and other safety precautions, adequate and sanitary service facilities, wages based on the job and not on sex.

Q.—Where are the headquarters of the United Textile Workers of America and what is the organization's organ?

A.—Headquarters, Bible House, New York, N. Y. Official organ, The Textile Worker.

Q.—Where did airship pilots recently strike?

A.—At Amsterdam, Holland. The strike tied up all air service of the Royal Dutch Air Line. The pilots demanded higher wages and better conditions.

What Next!

By running the great generators that furnish electric power to the world in an atmosphere of hydrogen gas, engineers of the future will be able to get 25 per cent higher capacities than in the largest machines now cooled by air. Small inclosed generators have already been run in the light inflammable gas, according to M. A. Savage, a member of the American group at the recent world power conference at Berlin. The experience obtained in these experiments has taught engineers how to apply the gas even to the largest power units.

Duallists Enjoined; Can't Use U. M. W.

Benton, Ill.—Judge Julius C. Kern, of the Franklin county circuit court, enjoined all parties who organized or who are assisting the dual miners' union in this state from using the name "United Mine Workers of America."

The duallists are restrained from claiming dues or assessments payable to United Mine Workers of America or soliciting members of the regular union "on the claim or pretense that such association is the original United Mine Workers of America."

The duallists are restrained from disposing of properties belonging to the Illinois district union of the U. M. W. of A., or interfering with the officers of that organization or the carrying out of the wage agreement.

The duallists formed their association in Springfield, this state, last March, and claimed that the constitution of the U. M. W. had expired. The court enjoins the duallists from making this claim in their opposition to the regular union.

Kingdom of God.

Text—"The Son of Man is come to seek and to save that which is lost."—Luke 19:10.

Read Luke 19:1-10.

A few miles from the River Jordan, on the western edge of the valley that spread out before the traveler into a plain, lay a Palistinian city set like a gleaming jewel amidst a luxuriant outpouring of nature's beauty. Its stately palm trees and magnificent gardens were watered by sparkling springs, and a caravan of weary travelers approaching the city saw it in the distance like an emerald set against the limestone hills. This city, the Jericho of the New Testament, was originally set apart for the priests of the Jews, but its population was at the time we have in mind of a rather metropolitan character—in it were Roman officials, soldiery and citizens; Jews of every station of life; swarthy Bedouins of the burning deserts; cultured Greeks, and strangers from every quarter of the Orient. It was the home also of a great many "publicans," those despised tax collectors of Jewish blood in the employ of the Roman government. The publicans were generally wealthy, and accorded by those who called them their minions, because of the publican being in the public service, no small dignity of rank. Their fellow-Jews utterly abhorred them, for they were men who had "sold out" for fat fees to the Roman government and were engaged in the contemptible business of exacting taxes and bribes from their own race. They were a hardened lot, these publicans. Yet, beneath the appearance of worldliness and pride of one of these despised tax gatherers there beat a heart susceptible to divine influence. Do you recall the story of Zaccheaus? I believe old Zaccheaus was the best-hated man in Jericho, for, as Dr. Luke tells us, he was "the chief among the publicans."

WM. L. MOSS

Zaccheaus Meets Jesus.

Passing through Jericho one day on His way to Jerusalem a few hours before His triumphal entry Jesus found Himself surrounded by a dense mob. Those on the outer rim of that great crowd were unable to catch even a glimpse of Him. Everybody was pushing and struggling, there were cries and angry retorts, and the nearer this jostling, milling crowd drew to Jericho greater became its numbers! On the outside of this concourse of excited people stood Zaccheaus, tip-toeing to lift himself above the heads of the others, straining neck and eyes to see our Lord. Tiring of this, Zaccheaus glanced around and espied a sycamore tree some distance down the road. Quickly he raced to it and clambered up among its branches. Breathlessly he saw Jesus approaching. When the Master stood beneath the sycamore into which Zaccheaus had climbed He glanced up and said: "Zaccheaus, make haste and come down." These words of Jesus were naturally the beginning of the existence of the Kingdom of God for Zaccheaus. He finally confessed his sins to Jesus and promised restitution to any man whom he had wronged.

Zaccheaus had found the Kingdom of God! Jesus knew also that Zaccheaus had found the Kingdom of God, and in the joy of the moment He reaffirmed His mission: "The Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost!"

The Lesson for Us.

All Zaccheaus needed was someone to make him strong—not as one of the Jewish nation, for he was that both politically and materially. He needed someone to lead him—as one leads the blind—out of his false and selfish world where self-preservation ruled with an iron hand. He found that Someone in Jesus! What prompted Zaccheaus to go to so much trouble to see our Lord that day? We don't really know. Whatever it was, in Jesus he found that Friend he needed! A Friend who would stand by him in spite of the world's scorn. And with such a Friend old Zaccheaus stepped into another world—the Kingdom of God! He came to look upon men and things in a new light. He discovered that this new response to the world that welled up in him was not after all to the world itself but to the best spirit that was in it. Salvation came to Zaccheaus that day because at last he realized that all things, even the drawbacks of life, were working for his good. This attitude is the only one with eternal qualities in it—this attitude toward God and all men. The Kingdom of God, then, is an attitude in life, an attitude maintained unvarying day after day amidst life's storms and calms. There's a mistaken idea abroad, and quite a bit of emphasis is laid upon it by those who are in a position to know better—it is this, that when the Kingdom of God becomes universal it will be a state of life here on earth in which everything will be pleasant and profitable for everybody! Of course, the fact is apparent that in a world where all men have the right attitude toward God and their fellowmen it will be pleasant for us. None can deny that—but, the essential thing for us to consider as individuals is not what nor how much we're going to profit by the Kingdom, but are we helping to bring it about. The Kingdom will always remain as something that is hopeless to think about as becoming a universal fact—we will always see it as a vague outline of something good that is going to take place some distant day—until one thing happens: We must become now—each of us—an individual part of that Kingdom, help to spread it and do our part to uphold it. We just must stop thinking of the Kingdom as a great canvas or picture depicting the Brotherhood of Man that God is painting by Himself while we look on if we expect that Brotherhood to become more than an optimist's dream. As long as we do not feel called upon to do anything more than enjoy the fruit of God's efforts to bring about the Kingdom it will ever remain for us only a vague picture of "what might be!"

To enter the Kingdom of God is not to leave this physical world; it is to be a new person, as Zaccheaus became, viewing all men and all things in a sweeter, a purer, a truer, a wholesomer and a newer light. Nothing less than a renewed, a changed spirit toward the world is adequate to the purpose God has for each of us when He creates that new light within us.

LABOR CHAUTAUQUA AT COLUMBUS ATTRACTS BIG AUDIENCES NIGHTLY

Affair Is Outstanding Success and Similar Meetings Are Planned in Other Southern Cities — Paul J. Smith Points Out That Labor Organization Is Essential Part of Modern Industrial System.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Birmingham, Ala., Sept. 18.—Outstanding amongst recent labor events in the south was the labor chautauqua held at Columbus, Ga., which opened Labor day and closed Sept. 6. The attendance at this event averaged 2,000 persons nightly. In addition to labor addresses a program of entertainment was offered, largely by local talent. Paul J. Smith, representing the American Federation of Labor, delivered the opening address. He declared the American Federation of Labor was purely an American institution and was founded on a set of principles that no other organization in America possesses. He pointed out how the organization had shown its loyalty to the government in times of stress, and that it was committed to the policy of fighting for and securing justice, liberty and the rights of common humanity to the workers of the country.

"We have come into the south, as we go into all sections of America, to make the workers better able to do the work they have chosen to do," Mr. Smith said. "We want to help them take their rightful place in industry, the economic and political life of the United States. We have no desire to take over or manage industry, but we do wish to co-operate with the employers to the end that the workers may have their share of the wealth they help to create."

Mr. Smith pointed out that the modern system in all phases of industrial and political life was organization, yet this very factor so dear to the heart of capital is in many instances arbitrarily denied the worker. He denounced the so-called "American plan," which he said became so offensive even to the proponents of it that they changed the name to the "open shop" plan.

During the week's chautauqua, directed by Paul W. Fuller, educational director of the American Federation of Labor, addresses were made by "Parson Jack" Johnson, who lent his tabernacle to the cause of labor without charge; Paul W. Fuller, Dr. Raimundo de Ovies, dean of the Cathedral of Atlanta, one of the best known Episcopal clergymen of the south; George L. Googe, of the Georgia Federation of Labor; Edward F. McGrady, legislative representative of the American Federation of Labor, and others.

The success of the Columbus labor chautauqua has been impressive and labor organizations in other southern states and cites are planning similar meetings, Chairman Smith said.

That the clergy of the south is becoming more interested in labor and the problems of the worker is indicated by the number of celebrations held in which ministers delivered special Labor day addresses. The Rev. R. H. Crossfield, pastor of the First Christian Church of Birmingham, told his audience that the "status of labor has changed, and the fact should be more widely recognized that the man who labors with his hands deserves as much consideration as the man who labors with his brains; that as between the man and the machine, the men must be given the preference and his rights and privileges guarded more carefully than the capital that produced the machine which he operates."

GREEN BLAMES BLIND EMPLOYERS FOR STATE IDLE-FUND AGITATION

Atlantic City, N. J., Sept. 18.—"Work, not charity, is the remedy for unemployment," declared William Green, president A. F. of L., at the quarterly meeting of the A. F. of L. executive council. Employers' refusal to face unemployment conditions is responsible for "dole" agitation, he said.

The trade union executive rejects the theory that forced unemployment insurance be substituted for systems that will keep workers employed. The shorter work day and work week, a balanced production with demand, and regularization of employment to meet cyclical unemployment were suggested by Mr. Green.

In seasonal industries, where unemployment cannot be avoided, Mr. Green recommends a joint fund set up by employers and employed to operate during the dull periods. In so-called cyclical depressions, said Mr. Green, work should be divided, rather than discharge men.

"The dole system," he said, "embodies a vicious principle in that it attempts to provide relief by supplying only the minimum of subsistence. The workers deserve more than mere subsistence. The dole system also develops a paternalism that is demoralizing. Men and women should have opportunities to earn their living and not be objects of charity.

"There is a danger that the employing group will fail to properly appraise the situation and be confronted with demands for compulsory employment insurance and the dole, for if people are not supplied with work that they may feed, clothe and house themselves and their dependents they will have to be cared for in some other way.

"The obligation rests upon industry to promote employment. If the dole is established the employers will be to blame because they have failed to deal with unemployment in a way that will stabilize employment.

"The danger is that there is but one step from compulsory unemployment insurance to the dole. The American worker resents being compelled to make a fixed contribution to a fund. In this respect he is different from the European worker. He is, however, willing to develop a system of voluntary payments when worked out by a joint agreement with employers. He objects to being told what he must do."

POSTAL WORKER DROPS HINT FOR TEAM WORK IN CABINET

(By International Labor News Service.)

Washington, Sept. 18.—The president should apply his efficiency ability to his cabinet members who are traveling in opposite directions, suggests Thomas F. Flaherty, secretary-treasurer National Federation of Post-office Clerks.

Secretary of Labor Davis constantly drives home to private employers the need for reducing working hours as an aid to increasing employment and restoring business conditions.

"In sharp contrast," said Mr. Flaherty, "we find Postmaster-General Brown instituting policies that are calculated to further upset troubled economic conditions. The Brown policy of refusing to fill vacancies has deprived thousands of postal wage earners of steady employment. The methods of his survey inspectors are all directed toward reducing the number of employes. To say that no regular postal employe has been thrown out of work as a result of these surveys is a misleading half truth. The fact is that thousands of substitutes will be deprived of work because of a curtailment in carrier service and the consequent displacement that follows.

"Instead of following the Davis advice the postmaster-general is doing the opposite. He tried unsuccessfully to increase the working hours of rural carriers and he succeeded, temporarily, in defeating the Kendall bill that would reduce hours on Saturdays for various groups of employes.

"President Hoover should insist on his cabinet members getting together on this vital question. If Mr. Davis is correct in his proposed remedies, it is reasonable to ask that they be applied in the government's largest business establishment. On the other hand, if longer hours and fewer jobs —ruthless economies always at the expense of lowly subordinates—are the solution of our troubles, the secretary of labor should be so informed and told to forever hold his peace."

Garment Walk-Out Ended in New York

New York.—Several thousand workers employed in the children's dress-making industry secured a settlement after a ten days' strike. These workers are members International Ladies' Garment Workers' union.

They established minimum wage scales and their increased wage demand will be arbitrated. The employers withdrew their demand for the absolute right of discharge.

The employers are organized and the settlement will have an effect on independent employers who are resisting the union.

Benjamin Schlesinger, president of the international, was forced to retire from the negotiations because of a recurrence of a long illness.

Gladys—How did you get into the habit of wearing a mustache?

Harold—Oh, it just grew on me.

TO HONOR OLD-TIMER

FRANK MORRISON

(By International Labor News Service.)

Boston, Sept. 18.—Frank Morrison, for thirty years secretary of the American Federation of Labor, will be signally honored by the Boston Typographical union, when he attends the convention of the American Federation of Labor, in Boston, during October.

This decision has been reached by members of the Boston local, as a testimonial to the long and faithful service of Mr. Morrison. He is one of the special delegates to the convention from the I. T. U. The others are: President Charles P. Howard and Secretary Woodruff, of the International Typographical union; W. J. Robinson, of New York City; William R. Trotter, of Vancouver, B. C.; Frank X. Martel, of Detroit; William N. Riley, of Texas. All of these will be in Boston a week in advance of the opening date of the big gathering. Just what form the demonstration for Mr. Morrison will take has not been definitely decided on, but this question will be fully disposed of within several weeks.

If you have done an injury to a fellfailing to demand union goods or service, there is no better time than the present to atone for the damage done.

Sweet Young Thing—I'll positively never marry a man who snores.

Pale and Weak

"I THINK Cardui is a wonderful medicine, for I improved greatly after taking it," says Mrs. A. W. English, of R. F. D. 4, Roanoke, Va. "When I was just a girl of 13, my mother gave this medicine to me, and it did me a great deal of good. I was weak and run-down. After I had taken Cardui awhile, I felt much better.

"In 1924, my health was poor. I felt miserable, and hadn't enough strength to do my housework. It took all my willpower to keep up. I was pale and weak.

"I got Cardui again and took it. My improvement was wonderful. I can recommend Cardui to others, for my health was so much better after I had taken a course of the Cardui Home Treatment."

WORKERS SEE A RISING SUN

Southern Drive Gives Labor New Perspective—More Gains Registered.

(Special Correspondence)

Birmingham, Ala., Sept. 18.—Labor in the south is getting a new perspective. It is seeing itself in the mirror of trade unionism, and the reflection revealed is at least cheerful. It sees itself on the high road to industrial independence. This condition was disclosed after taking stock of the reaction to the many Labor day celebrations in the industrial south, and in going over reports from many sections of Dixie.

A subtle change favoring union sentiment, even in the attitude of many hard-boiled employers, is noted as labor representatives continue their organizing with renewed zest. This change is not voiced, but it is accepted in many quarters as being the right thing at the right time.

The policy of the American Federation of Labor to be helpful and useful, not only to the workers and the employers, but to the public, is being regarded with slightly more attention than formerly.

Further, the theory that there is no "southern labor" policy, save a living wage, improved working conditions and shorter hours, is meeting with approval among thinking people of the south. The demonstration on Labor day has proved that labor, as directed by the American Federation of Labor, is not chasing rainbows or running after false gods.

Good wages, a contented, happy working class spells prosperity for any community, whether north, south, east or west. Even the downtrodden tobacco workers are beginning to show signs of life. The first six months of the campaign in the tobacco section of the south has been trying, but under the direction of E. Lewis Evans, of the Tobacco Workers' union, and others the organization of the workers has been proceeding despite the great odds against it. The same is true of many other crafts, trades and callings.

No trade in the south has had more opposition than the textile workers, but despite the threats of discharge, evictions from homes and other forms of intimidation, enormous gains have been made by the lowest paid workers in the south.

The [illegible] of the Riverside and Dan [illegible] management in Danville, [illegible] many of their workers, the first week [illegible] have been complacently [illegible] the textile workers. The [illegible] unity with the policy of the American Federation of [illegible] means of eliminating [illegible] expenses incident in [illegible] various welfare activities, [illegible] of stiff salaries to officials to carry out the various schemes, is said by officers of the textile union to be a detriment to the industry, reducing dividends to the stockholders and keeping down the wages of the workers.

Mill workers, in other words, have awakened to the fact that they do not want paternalistic guff thrown in with their jobs. They want a decent place in which to labor, a decent wage and the right to live their own lives, choose their own amusements, buy their own insurance and conduct themselves as independent workers and citizens. "Give us a living wage and we'll attend to our own personal matters," the workers say.

In Danville, Francis J. Gorman, vice-president of the United Textile Workers' International union, said a survey showed that 65 per cent of the working force of the Danville mills are unemployed. Mill officials said the mills were operating 50 per cent of capacity. The attempt by the management to bring in textile laborers from other states is bitterly resented by the native labor of Danville.

In other sections of the textile fields of the south conditions show little improvement, reports show. The talk a few weeks ago by many concerns of shutting down their print cloth and sheeting mills during September has not materialized at this time. The chief obstacle to the shutdown, a dispatch from Charlotte, N. C., says, would be the hardship it would bring to the mill workers. The workers, the dispatch says, have had a poor time of it for many months past and it would unquestionably be a very difficult situation for them if the mill should stand idle for a month.

In the Huntsville textile district, where 5,000 to 6,000 workers are employed, organization work has gone forward and there is much enthusiasm being displayed. The same is true of Columbus, Ga., where a week's labor chautauqua was recently held, attended by thousands of mill workers.

MORE ABOUT INJUNCTION

ganizer. Idar reported that Filipinos are being imported to prevent organization of Mexican and Spanish workers in those fields. Child labor conditions of the most deplorable type were depicted and "the most primitive" housing was described. Contract systems under which the father contracts for the labor of his children were among the conditions covered in the lengthy report.

The council sent greetings to seven international unions in convention simultaneously, these being: Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers and Commercial Telegraphers at Montreal; International Typographical union at Houston, Tex.; Teamsters at Indianapolis; Lithographers at St. Louis; Boilermakers at Kansas City; United Textile Workers in New York City.

Textile Workers In Philadelphia Prevent Pay Cut

Primrose Mill Strike Settlement Assures Continuance of 17-Year Agreement and Balks "Open Shop" Movement.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 18—Peace in the textile trade and a continuation of the 17-year agreement between Upholstery Weavers and Workers Local Union No. 25 and the 27 manufacturers representing about 95 per cent of the trade in Philadelphia, was assured with the settlement of the Primrose Mill strike at 23rd and Allegheny avenue here.

Under the terms of the agreement the union men return to work with full recognition of the union and the abandonment of the proposed wage reduction of 25 per cent, according to William Casey, secretary of the union.

The strike occurred on July 9 last when the Primrose firm forgot about its 17-year agreement, peaceful negotiations and a 30-day notice of wage revision by either side and posted a notice that on and after July 10 the mill would operate as an open shop with a 25 per cent wage reduction. Under the terms of the settlement the Primrose Mill agrees to take back all union members at the old wage rate and to resume peaceful negotiations along with the rest of the manufacturers.

The officials of No. 25, Mr. Casey said, were jubilant over the terms of the settlement and were grateful for the solidarity shown by the Jacquard Loom Fixers, the Beamers and Twisters and the United Textile Workers and agree that the support of these unions was responsible for the strike settlement in their favor.

G. M. BUGNIAZET

G. M. Bugniazet, international secretary of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, who has just been elected a member of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor, has held every job in the gift of his own organization except the presidency. He entered the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers in New York City on Oct. 9, 1902, at the age of 24. He was business agent of Local Union 419 of that city for five years, and went through the most devastating strike ever known in the building trades of the metropolis. He was out thirty-three months.

He played a leading part in the councils of his organization even as a young man and has been a delegate to every international convention since 1909. In 1911 he became international vice-president, which job he held until 1925. Just prior to the removal of the international offices from Springfield to Washington, Mr. Bugniazet became national legislative representative for the union.

During the war he was a member of the adjustment board of the United States railroad administration. When vice-president he acted, at one time, both as assistant to President James P. Noonan, and later as assistant to International Secretary Charles P. Ford. He became secretary of the organization in 1925.

Mr. Bugniazet's home is in Washington, D. C. He has two sons of school age.

The trade unionist who fails to demand the union label, shop card and working button can not claim any credit for advancing the cause of the workers.

You have perhaps observed that many a young girl would be willing to trust her whole life to a young man who the butcher wouldn't trust for a dime's worth of liver.

TELETYPESETTER NEWEST WONDER

Union Printer Invents Machine to Set Type Automatically.

(By JOHN H. CRUMP.)

The September issue of the Typographical Journal contains an interesting illustrated article about a new labor-saving device, called the teletypesetter. The following is quoted from the article in the Journal:

"If by chance one should stray into a Westchester county (N. Y.) newspaper office and observe the keys on a typesetting machine bobbing up and down, the disc wheel turning, the distributor and other mechanism performing their intricate duties apparently unaided by human hands, there is no occasion for alarm. Neither ghosts nor hobgoblins are in control. It is the teletypesetter.

"Omitting technical phrases, it may be stated the system conceived employs a combination including the existing typesetting machine, the telegraph printing machine known as the teletype and the stock 'ticker,' the tape of which discloses a 'code' or combination of oddly arranged perforations instead of printed letters and words.

"The operation of these units of the teletypesetter may be explaind thus:

"The keys of the typesetting machine are depressed by electrical impulses transmitted over the wires from a central station sending machine, simultaneously operating typesetting machines at several different points widely separated, but on a single circuit.

"To transmit these impulses over the wire the operator strikes letter keys on a keyboard like a typewriter and code combinations of holes are punched in a paper tape. That tape passing between electrical contacts sends the impulses out and they are received in the newspaper office on another machine which repunches the code holes in a similar paper tape.

"The repunched tape is then passed through an electrified typesetting machine where the impulses are automatically transferred to the corresponding keys of the typesetting machine keyboard. This produces the ordinary operation of the typesetting machine as when controlled by human hands.

"The speed of production is limited only to the capacity of the machine, it is stated.

"Early in August the first actual transmission of 'live' news from a central distributing point direct to typesetting machines at remote localities by use of the teletypesetter was successfully accomplished. From the White Plains (N. Y.) Daily Press office seven newspapers of the Westchester County Publishers, Inc., were served with daily reports.

"While the teletypesetter performs the work of typesetting machine operators, no men have been displaced in any of the Westchester plants, and there is no intention of displacing any, it has been stated by those in authority."

Walter A. Morey, a long-time member of the International Typographical union, conceived the basic idea of the mechanism. In the Journal article he gives a detailed description of the operation of each unit of the machine.

J. W. Growden, a member of Chattanooga Typographical union No. 89, and for several years a lintotype operator in the composing room of the Chattanooga Times, recently received an appointment in the government printing office in Washington, D. C. Jesse writes that he likes it fine up there, and that there are no women employed on the floor on which he works. The G. P. O. occupies a nine-story building and employs around 6,000 printers, both men and women, white and colored.

Andrew G. Linn, who for the past seventeen years has been secretary of Chattanooga Typographical union No. 89, has been in bad health for the past few months, and for that reason is not up for re-election at the regular election meeting next month, a fact which is regretted by many members of No. 89. So far there are three announced candidates for the post held by Mr. Linn, and it is expected there will be a hot race. Those who have announced are Finney Carter, present president; M. M. Morris, present vice-president; and H. D. Hix, a member of the present auditing committee. H. Clay Timmons and F. G. ("Pop") Kemper will renew their annual race for recording secretary. It is expected there will be keen competition among other offices in the coming election, also.

REAPER CALLS F. M. JOHNSTON

Well-Known Member Typographical Union, Passes After Long Illness.

F. M. Johnston, aged 74, died at his residence, East Brainerd road, at an early hour Wednesday morning after a lingering illness. He was born in Columbus, Ga., Oct. 12, 1856, and moved to Chattanooga in December, 1887, and has resided here since. Mr. Johnston was a member of Graysville, Ga., Methodist church, south, and a veteran member of the Typographical union, having joined at a very early age. He was for many years connected with the Chattanooga Times, his health having forced his retirement thirteen years ago, since which time he has lived in the community, where he was esteemed by a wide circle of friends. He is survived by his widow, two sons, James and R. S. Johnston, of this city; three daughters, Mrs. S. L. Wilson, of Chicago; Mrs. C. S. Leake, of this city, and Mrs. F. L. Seymour, of West Palm Beach, Fla.

Funeral services were held Thursday afternoon at 3, from Chapman's funeral home, the Rev. Battle McLester in charge.

Active pallbearers were: I. J. Gardner, W. S. Weitzell, O. G. Elder, T. H. Young, R. H. Dodds and R. M. Cooke.

Mr. Johnston was at one time in the railway mail service, but returned to his chosen craft, printing, after a period in the government employ and as a member of the Times chapel was known and esteemed by all of the older members of Chattanooga Typographical union.

The Labor World joins these and other friends in extending sincere condolences to the surviving relatives of Mr. Johnston.

James J. Naive III. Bids for Citizenship

Many friends in this city of Mr. and Mrs. James J. Naive will be interested in the following announcement received by The Labor World this week from Gary, Ind.:

"Announcing the arrival of James J. Naive III., on September 12, 1930. (Signed) Mr. and Mrs. James J. Naive II."

Mr. Naive was formerly a well-known member of Chattanooga Typographical union, No. 89. Mrs. Naive was, before her marriage, private secretary to George L. Berry, president of the Printing Pressmen and Assistants' union.

Congratulations, Jimmie!

SOUTH'S LABOR CLAMORING FOR ORGANIZATION

Committee Plans Expansion of Efforts.

McGRADY DECLARES PROSPECTS BRIGHT

Reports From Organizers Are Optimistic—Building Trades "Looking Up."

HEADS SOUTHERN DRIVE IN ABSENCE OF SMITH

EDWARD F. McGRADY
(By International Labor News Service.)

Washington, D. C., Sept. 24.—Edward F. McGrady, legislative committeeman of the American Federation of Labor, is now in Birmingham, directing labor's southern campaign. Mr. McGrady is taking the place of Paul J. Smith, chairman of the committee in charge of the campaign, while Mr. Smith is making a speaking tour of the northwest in the interest of progressive senatorial candidates. Mr. McGrady is one of labor's most able representatives. He is familiar with the southern field, having conducted organizing activities at Elizabethton, Tenn., and other points in the south.

By C. S. GARRISON.

Birmingham, Ala., Sept. 25.—Following on the heels of the showing made by the southern organization committee of the American Federation of Labor, as indicated in the reports of Labor day meetings over the southland, the committee is extending its efforts to organize the leading industries in the seven states of the south, according to the members of the committee.

During the absence of Paul J. Smith in the northwest, Edward F. McGrady, legislative representative of the A. F. of L., is acting chairman of the southern committee. Mr. McGrady announced that a ten-day chautauqua would be held in New Orleans, at a date shortly to be announced, as a part of the organizing campaign in Louisiana. Plans for the chautauqua are now in the formative stage. Holt E. J. Ross, president of the Mississippi federation of labor, and a general organizer for the A. F. of L., is in charge of the event, working through the New Orleans Central Trades and Labor council. The Actors' Equity association and the musicians' unions as well as all other union organizations of the city are cooperating. In addition to the regular entertainment nightly an official of the American Federation of Labor will deliver a speech from the federation to the people of the south. The committee plans to invite especially merchants, business men, bankers and other representative citizens of New Orleans to attend.

Chairman McGrady, of the committee, said reports from organizers in various industrial centers of the south were decidedly optimistic; that workers everywhere were clamoring for organization.

The textile situation in the various states of the south has shown but little real improvement and thousands of workers are either idle or working

Labor Exhibit at Illinois State Fair

Exhibit of the Illinois State Federation of Labor at the Illinois State fair, Springfield, Ill., Aug. 16 to 23. The federation officials shown in the photograph, from left to right, are Vice-President Thomas Kelly, Secretary-Treasurer Victor A. Olander, Vice-President R. G. Soderstrom, and, on the extreme right, President R. G. Fitchie. The exhibit, which occupied a prominent corner in the exposition building, consisted of display cards, union labels, shop cards and emblems, a series of pictures automatically reflected on a screen by a machine loaned by the American Federation of Labor, and approximately 100,000 booklets, pamphlets and cards for distribution. The American Federation of Labor, the workers' education bureau of America and eighteen national and international unions responded to the request of the Illinois State Federation of Labor for literature and other material for the exhibit.

INTEREST IN TYPO ELECTION

Woods Full of Candidates for Office in No. 89. 3 Seek Secretaryship.

(By CLAY TIMMONS)

The October meeting of No. 89 gives every promise of being one of the largest attended sessions in many years. An election of officers will be held at that time, and the chief plum in the pudding sought by Little Jack Horners is the office of secretary-treasurer. Workhorse Andrew G. Linn, on account of ill health, is not running for the office this year, which he has held for lo, these many years. His election previous to this time was a mere formality, but since he is not running, three aspirants so far have announced for the job and are actively at work on their campaigns.

They all three present long records of service, and they are Finney T. Carter, Harris Hix and M. M. Morris, to name them alphabetically.

All members of No. 89 are familiar with the records of the three candidates and to recite all of their combined service of seventy-five years would take the whole edition.

The offices of president and vice-president are completely in the dark, as no one seems to know who will consent to take over these unsalaried positions.

For recorder, there are William Keels, F. G. (Pop) Kemper, and myself. The rumor has spread that the first-named will run, so it is given here for its face value.

Another job that carries a small plum is the chairmanship of the application and apprentice committee. Remy Cuthbert, present chairman, will be opposed by W. W. (Bow-Wow) Carey, and John H. Crump.

Still another office, that of business agent, also held by Mr. Linn, and which will also be vacated, it is presumed, is the goal of John Haley and some others.

T. J. Davie is sergeant-at-arms for life.

When do parallel lines intersect?

That's a question that bothered me when I got a piece of copy saying a sign was placed at the intersection of Market and Broad streets, and which got by Tinymite Schneider, city desk man. After a lengthy conference it was decided that no algebraic equation could produce such a phenomenon, and that the sign should therefore be placed at the intersection of Broad and Main streets, where it really was all the time.

Our new meeting place in the Market-street hall will receive a real baptism of fire at the next meeting, when the aforementioned election comes off. It is said the hall is an ideal place for labor meetings, and clean and spic and span. Everybody try and be there on time, and let's get it started as soon as possible.

ECHOES FROM RECENT FAIR

Musicians Encounter New Problem as Annual Show Ends.

(By HARRY S. KENNEDY.)

A colored orchestra, playing an opening for the distributors of General Electric refrigerators, were approached by officers of Local 80, and asked if they were members of colored Local 749. They stated they were, but were unable to produce membership cards, as required by law. Upon investigation it was found they were playing a four-day engagement with seven men for $50. This is approximately $134 under the union scale. Upon investigation if it is found these men are members of Local 749, as they claim to be, charges will be preferred against the entire outfit, which may mean their expulsion from the federation.

It was commendable in the colored musicians of Chattanooga in applying for and receiving a charter from the American Federation of Musicians. The loyal members of Local 749 should make it their business to see that the laws of the union are enforced, and if this orchestra in question are really affiliated with their organization, they should cooperate with Local 80 in seeing them get the limit for this violation of the scale of prices.

It is rumored that several colored orchestras are masquerading as union men, when, as a matter of fact, they do not know the first principles of unionism.

Officials of the Chattanooga Radio company state they asked the leader of the accused orchestra if they were union men before the job started, and they were assured they possessed union cards. These gentlemen, of course, took their word.

It has been suggested that a resolution be passed requiring all orchestras engaged in dance work, public openings, and engagements of similar nature, to display a card stating: "This Orchestra Is Affiliated With the American Federation of Musicians." The card could be displayed on the piano or other conspicuous place, and would immediately identify the orchestra as a union organization.

But space does not permit us to give the entire roster.

Wallace Cash, of the convention finance committee, and Hubert Pless, of the entertainment committee, announce other activities to raise convention funds will be inaugurated shortly. Be at the next meeting and hear about it.

ABANDON PLANS FOR CONVENTION IN CLEVELAND

Great Strike Bars City to A. F. of L.

RAIL UNIONS ALSO TO MEET ELSEWHERE

Walkout of Hotel Employes Costing Merchants Many Thousands of Dollars.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Cleveland, Ohio, Sept. 25.—Cleveland, a popular convention city, will lose some large labor conventions if the lockout of union waiters, waitresses and cooks employed by the large hotels is not speedily settled. Decision by labor organizations not to meet here will mean the loss of large sums of money by Cleveland business interests.

As a result of the lockout, which resulted in a sympathetic strike of musicians and operating engineers, the Cleveland Federation of Labor has abandoned its plan to seek the next year's convention of the American Federation of Labor. Similar action is contemplated by the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, whose president, A. F. Whitney, has written to all officers and representatives of local lodges of the organization advising them of the situation in Cleveland. After telling of the circumstances leading up to the strike and lockout, which involves 23 of the larger hotels, President Whitney writes from the Brotherhood's headquarters in Cleveland:

"Cleveland, it can be said, has heretofore been recognized as a popular convention city. The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers has held its international conventions here for many years past, and in 1925 and 1928 the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen held its conventions here, for which we paid out $1,300,052.84. The Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen intended to hold its 1931 convention in Cleveland, but if this lockout is not satisfactorily settled within the near future. I understand from President Robertson that, without question, they will go elsewhere.

"The lodges of the B. of R. T. have recently been expressing a strong sentiment toward holding our future conventions in Cleveland, but they are as yet not aware of this labor trouble here, and unless the situation is cleared up satisfactorily it will without a doubt have a very decided influence upon our delegates as regards Cleveland as a convention city in the future. The delegates will not consent to be served by nonunion cooks and waiters, and we cannot as a standard recognized railroad labor organization ask our men to come here and help knock down decent wages and working conditions for Cleveland labor.

"It is, of course, sincerely hoped that this unfortunate controversy will be satisfactorily cleared up in the near future, and if such proves to be the case you will all be advised in the connection.

"I convey this information to you brothers so that you may be aware of the conditions which prevail at Cleveland and be governed accordingly."

The Cleveland Press, which has been quite fair in its attitude toward the workers, warns that the strike is hurting the city by keeping business away. The city council is discussing the situation and urging that some understanding be brought about. Declaring that the strike is costing merchants and others thousands of dollars daily, Councilman Alexander I. De Baioribus told the council many conventions had canceled arrangements for coming to Cleveland.

The strikers are standing firm and the local labor movement is giving them strong support.

Chas. Clinton Enters Business for Himself

JURISTS WOULD OUTLAW CERTAIN WAR CONTRACTS

New York.—The International Bar association, at its conference here, voted to recommend to the governments of the world as a rule of international law that contracts between residents of nations at war with each other should be dissolved at the outbreak of hostilities.

Certain contracts, however, would be exempt from the operation of this proposed international law.

The exceptions affect big business and international bankers who have agreements relating to the exploitation of mines, forests and land and the letting of immovables, or concessions, such as public utility contracts between individuals or companies on the one hand and states or other public authorities on the other.

THE CHERRY TREE

Where with our Little Hatchet we tell the truth about many things, sometimes profoundly, sometimes flippantly, sometimes recklessly.

Labor is this year passing its half century mark in the United States and Canada.

In just a short time the Jubilee convention of the American Federation of Labor will be called to order by President William Green.

The convention will meet in Boston, where the Central Labor union is celebrating its fiftieth anniversary.

There are many labor organizations on this continent that have seen more than fifty years of continuous existence.

The total history of the organized labor movement in America covers a great deal more than fifty years.

Most union men now living cannot remember the beginnings of their unions.

The birth of trade unions belongs to an earlier generation.

But there is something impressive about a fiftieth anniversary. As the world wags, a half century is a mere flicker. For most human beings it is the better part of a lifetime. For a great many it is more than a lifetime.

Our movement has lived and struggled and grown through half a hundred years, bringing glory to its standard, health, freedom and higher standards of living to all workers.

In that period of American trade union history all life has changed, save in the most remote places.

Perhaps most important of all the changes has been the bringing of mobility to wage earners. Fifty years ago a journey of 50 miles was a real event. Today it is an incident and men move from town to far-away town in search of work, or in search of change.

The essence of serfdom was that great numbers of men could not leave the land of the master. In most cases, even with freedom to go they could not have gone far.

When it became possible to say, "you can take your damn job and keep it," a certain kind of freedom was born. When it became possible to cross half a continent to look for another that freedom was immensely broadened. No survey of modern freedom is complete without the picture of modern mobility—the ability to go places.

But along comes modern industry at this half century mark and demands orderly, steady operation with men that stick.

Very well, that being so, fairness must enter the equation.

Fighting through the half century of development, the American trade union movement has generated and brought out of reluctant employers that fairness that makes it possible to "stick on the job."

* * *

But always in the background that mobility lurks as something that unfairness has to reckon with. "I can go somewhere else."

It would be interesting to call the roll of unions that have lived through that half century at the conclusion of which we now stand.

It would be more interesting to be able to see fifty years down the path of the future. We can do the one, but not the other.

Except we do know that if modern industry is to reach its full development it must lean ever more heavily upon trade unionism, that agency through which masses of men and women speak and contribute of their wisdom to the proper working of our miracle machinery.

The world can no longer move without democracy and democracy can grow in industry only through organized channels. The future of trade unionism will be greater than its past.

What Next!

Prof. H. H. Sheldon, New York university, recently gave a demonstration before the New York Electrical society of a new "colorscope" which automatically matches two colors much more exactly than the eye could possibly do it. The principles of the device, which was developed by Prof. Sheldon and his assistant, Dr. W. A. Schneider, is based on the photo-electric cell, already famous as the "electric eye," for its applications in the control of sensitive apparatus.

INDEPENDENT WORKERS.

Southern tobacco growers are the latest to limit output as a means of securing higher prices. The governor of North Carolina and business men and bankers approve the plan. Wheat and cotton growers throughout the nation are taking similar action with the approval of the federal farm board. Oil producers in the west and southwest are receiving state aid to limit output. This policy is enforced by state commissions and has been upheld by the Oklahoma state supreme court.

Opponents charge that the Oklahoma corporations commission ordered railroads and pipe line companies to refuse to transport oil of any operator who ignores the "slow down" order. Business men everywhere endeavor to "stabilize" output and the old system of "running my own business" is replaced by new economic drifts.

Surface thinkers do not understand how these business men can ask the government to aid them while calling on the government, through its judicial machinery, to check workers from aiding themselves. The answer to this contradiction is that workers are supposed to be inferiors. When unorganized, workers are voiceless, both from an industrial as well as civic and social standpoints. When organized they function as citizens. They challenge wrong in every form. Their collective existence is a menace to privilege, for their power expands with intelligence and numbers.

This is what anti-unionists fear. They can keep unorganized workers "in their place." They can compel them to be satisfied. Wage workers, when united, are beyond the control of industrial autocrats who well know there is no limit to trade union activity that concerns itself with every injustice.

The potential power of organized labor is feared by employers and financial interests who shape the policy of anti-union movements and who understand trade union philosophy. They know, far better than many workers, the possibilities of united labor to check encroachment on human rights and to eventually secure social justice. They also know that the time to resist this menace to established privilege is when wage workers lack organization, not when they are entrenched.

As proof that this summary is correct, let an organized worker point to one trade union that has become an industrial and social factor without overcoming hostile employers.

WHY NOT APPLY LAW?

A Dayton (Ohio) judge refused to enjoin picketing by striking picture operators "as long as the picketing is conducted in a peaceful manner." Someone might suggest to this judge that if strikers do not use peaceful methods they violate statutory law, for which the state provides trial and punishment. An equity judge has no jurisdiction where criminal law is broken. He has no right to be a combined lawmaker, judge, jury and executioner from which there is no appeal.

Injunction judges assume this position by the claim that they do not enforce the law, but protect "property." This so-called "property" is patronage—an intangible thing formerly considered a personal right inherent in each individual. By classifying this personal right as "property" workers are thrown into equity courts where free speech and free press, guaranteed every other class of citizens, are denied.

That Dayton court should rule that picketing is legal and if unlawful methods are used by strikers they violate criminal law and theater managers should call on police authorities and not an equity judge. This system must prevail if government by law is to continue.

The injunction judge is government by conscience, another name for dictatorship that is spreading throughout Europe.

WHY NOT FOR THE WORKER?

"Business as usual" seems to be the key-word in the dividend sector. The Wall Street Journal has made a compilation of the dividend records during the last two summer months, with what must be regarded as a very strong showing.

Initial dividends were declared in twelve companies; two resumed dividends; seven increased their dividends; twenty-six decreased them, and thirty omitted them.

But the great body of business, represented by eight hundred and eighteen companies, made no changes in their dividends during that period. This naturally leads to the question: "If this can be done for dividends, why can it not be done for wages?"

STUDENTS ROUGHED IN GARMENT STRIKE

New York.—A score of college students, principally from Columbia university, forwarded a tart letter to city authorities because they were "roughed" by police when picketing struck garment shops. The strike sympathizers said:

"For college students who have heard phrases about the majesty and impartiality of the law it was a revelation to pickets the last three mornings in the children's dressmakers' strike. The amount of filthy abuse and manhandling that the picket line was subjected to by the police makes a mockery of any theoretical right to picket."

GOD'S WORD

A Weekly Comment on a Text From the Bible

Written for The Labor World
By WILLIAM L. MOSS

The Heavenly Father.

Text—"God is a Spirit and they that worship Him must worship Him in spirit and in truth."—John 4:24.

Read John 4:1-30.

"The object of life," wrote Augustine, "is to possess the vision of God." Another writer, of our own day, has tersely said, "Man is incurably religious." Why do men feel this urge in a greater or lesser degree to seek affinity with a Higher Being and why does religion—that is, man's relationship to that Being—hold so large a place in the life of the individual? Because religion has its starting point in the first realization of a certain need in life. That need is something to worship—and is a need every normal man and woman feels. "Every man has a god—most men have God." Somewhere in his heart, in his make-up as a human being, every man has to an extent the capacity to worship. In the heart of every being there is a shrine in which is a deity whom he worships—it will always be either himself, or God, or something. Human experience and the mystery of existence has pent up within man's soul the compelling and innate desire to cling to something with faith. When men dethrone God, when they lose the vision of Him who said, "I am Jehovah Elohim, the Lord of thy God," it simply means they enshrine something else within their hearts and worship that!

Man Changes—God Never.

Men have not always held the same idea of God. Nor has the method of their fulfillment of His will always agreed. We can easily scan the centuries of men's thoughts about God in our secular and religious histories. This change in men's idea of God is especially plain in the Bible. The God we meet with in Genesis is not the God we find in Isaiah and Malachi. And the God revealed to us in the New Testament is like a burst of radiant beauty in the midst of a black and murky atmosphere! It isn't that God changed in the ages that went by from the period recorded in Genesis to the time when Isaiah and Malachi were written but that men gradually educated themselves into a truer and higher conception of God! The divergence of men's views concerning God is aptly illustrated for us in the incident related in John 4:1-30 of our Lord's meeting with the Samaritan woman at Jacob's Well. Look at a map of the Holy Land in the time of Christ and you will see to the left of the River Jordan an almost square section designated "Samaria" shut in like an island between a northern province, Galilee, and a southern province, Judea. Samaria had always been a thorn in the side of the true Israelite as it formed a natural enclosure in which was entrenched the ancient worship of Mt. Gerizim, a worship closely resembling and rivaling that of Jerusalem. Judaism had always treated the Samaritans harshly as well as placed them in the ranks of pagans. When wishing to slur Jesus the Pharisees called Him "a Samaritan" (John 8:48).

The Lesson for Us.

One of these hated Samaritans, a woman of Shechem, came to Jacob's Well to draw water. It was near midday, and Jesus, hot, tired and thirsty, asked her to let Him drink. The woman was greatly taken aback, the Jews generally having no contact with her race. Won by the conversation of the Master, the woman gave voice to her recognition of Him as a prophet. Expecting Him to rebuke her about her worship, she anticipated Him by saying, "Sire, our fathers worshiped in this mountain, and ye say that in Jerusalem is the place to worship." Then it was that Jesus showed he was truly the Son of God! He gave utterance to the truth to which is anchored Eternal Religion: "God is a Spirit, and they that worship Him must worship Him in spirit and in truth." With these words did Jesus fount the pure worship of all ages, of all lands, of all men. Instantly he brushed away all cobwebs of doubt and indecision in men's minds and revealed to them for the first time the truth of God's presence in their daily lives . . .

Speak to Him, thou, for He hears, and Spirit with Spirit can meet—
Closer is He than breathing, and nearer than hands and feet.

Jesus knew God as a Father who loved Him! Some religious people when they talk of religion have a bedside manner and tiptoe about in felt slippers. If they speak about God they always tidy themselves first and talk in a whisper. As if a son or daughter's natural respect and reverence for their earthly father should make them awkward and ill at ease! An affected familiarity with God is horrible, but it is not wrong to take seriously the claim of Jesus that we are all to be children of the Father and have a place in His mansion. The Spirit of God seeks the spirit of love in men, not their distant deference! God is King, indeed, but only to reign in our hearts! A picture that Holman Hunt nor any other artist has ever been able to paint would be, if it could be painted, the truest and most expressive picture ever painted of the Master—a picture depicting His living faith in the Fatherhood of God! Jesus was never content to be other than very close to God. To Him, God is He who sends the sunshine and the rain upon the just and the unjust, knows His children as does the shepherd his sheep, and calls home again the spirits of His children when their tired frail bodies fall into the sleep that knows no awakening. God expects love and a close, unaffected companionship with Him on the part of His children. Some people are just a little bit afraid of God, as if He were disposed at times to suffer from sour stomach. They are never really children in their Father's house; they are merely visitors on their best behavior and in their Sunday clothes—too nervous to laugh heartily. They do not see that the greatest glory of God is not their opinion of Him as a majestic and celestial Being, nor His power, nor His Kingship, but that His greatest glory is His love manifested through them in their home life, business relationships and social contacts. If we seek to know the kind of worship God expects of us we must look at Jesus. To know Jesus is to know the Father—to walk in the footsteps of Jesus is to live our faith in the Fatherhood of God and make Him really and truly our Heavenly Father.

Our Friend, the Barber

The following was "swiped" by Tom Hall from the house organ of the Cleveland Steel Tool company, and re-dedicated to A. C. Hester:

Our acquaintance with this necessary personage (the barber) goes back to our childhood days when we finally outgrew the ministrations of ma or pa along tonsorial lines.

At about the long pants period, what had formerly been merely a necessity now became a function, so to speak.

We were beginning to sit up and take notice.

Up to this period of our existence a hair cut was just something which took that much of our time from play, and, like music lessons, measles or mumps, was an inconvenience and a bore.

But, with the advent and assumption of long pants a certain contiguous dignity had to be acquired and maintained. So the barber became a personage of considerable importance in our young life. Perhaps you never experienced the trials and perversities involved in training up a pompadour in the way it should go, that is to say—up.

The barber could do his part in laying out and executing the general plan and design, but like the high-class surgeon of today, his interest ended with the operation successfully performed.

To keep that pompadour standing meant hours of work with the brush, and that it might not fall down while we slept, it was essential to tie it back at night with a towel bound tightly around the head. So eventually we acquired a well trained pompadour which friend barber kept nicely mowed and trimmed and which must have been fearful to behold. And then who can forget the time when our pride in our appearance seemed to justify our first shave. Some of us were bold enough and foolish enough to borrow dad's razor, and those who survived the ordeal know what an undertaking that was. The barber, always alive to trade opportunities, was ever willing and anxious to start us on our shaving career, and once started we became his abject slaves, as no doubt he well knew we would, so his solicitations were not entirely of an unselfish nature.

In ancient times the occupation of barbering embraced also the science of blood letting, and a certain inherent proficiency in this latter accomplishment has been carried down through the ages, and is still evident in greater or less degree among present exponents of tonsorial art.

Since the gentler sex have become steady patrons of barber shops, which heretofore have been maintained inviolate for man's use, a decided change in atmosphere and environment is apparent.

The Police Gazette has given way to the Pictorial Review, and no longer does stale tobacco smoke mingle with the fragrance of bay rum and eau de quinine and what not.

The substantial increase in business and prices due to the advent of the women, has lessened to some extent the importunities of the barber, to us mere men, along the lines of extras, such as shampoos, singes, tonics, etc.

In line with the general evolution of women, sometimes ignorantly termed "emancipation," the average man and the average barber are drifting further and further apart. But perhaps some day we will again have our innings.

Styles change, even with women, and when bobbed hair goes out, we will go in, and assume once more our rightful place as high lords of the barber shop, and enjoy again our Police Gazette, and all the other perquisites which from time immemorial have been vouchsafed to us men who, after all, are the real mainstays of that essentially male institution, the barber shop.

LABOR QUERIES

Q.—How old is the International Typographical union?

A.—It was 78 years old on May 3, 1930. The recent convention of the union in Houston, Tex., was the seventy-fifth annual meeting, no conventions having been held in 1861, 1895 and 1919.

Q.—What were the combination laws of 1799 and 1800 in England?

A.—They were laws making it criminal to combine for the purpose of securing an increase in wages, or changes in the hours or conditions of work. They were repealed in 1824.

Q.—What famous Illinois governor said: "Government by injunction is incompatible with republican institutions?"

A.—John P. Altgeld. The quotation is from a speech at Cooper Union, New York City, Oct. 17, 1896. The full quotation follows: "Government by injunction is incompatible with republican institutions, and if it is to be sustained then there is an end to trial by jury in our country, and instead of being governed by law we will be subject to government by judges, and if government by injunction is to be sustained as to federal judges, then we will soon have it on the part of state judges and the very foundations of free institutions will have disappeared."

If you have done an injury to a fellfailing to demand union goods or service, there is no better time than the present to atone for the damage done.

"Can't you get them?"

Asked Mr. Jones from behind his evening paper.

"No answer! They must be out. And I've simply got to reach Jane tonight."

"Are you sure you gave her time enough to answer?" offered Mr. Jones. "I learned my lesson that time I nearly lost Jack's contract because I hung up before he could get to the telephone. Jane may have been upstairs putting Junior to bed when you rang. If I were you I'd try again."

Mrs. Jones did try again and was successful. Jane was busy the first time she called, and had reached the telephone downstairs a moment too late.

How many times have you answered your telephone bell only to find that the person who called you had hung up?

Extension telephones in your home will relieve such situations by enabling you to answer calls promptly. A call to the business office will bring a representative who will show you just what telephone arrangements will provide the most satisfactory service at the smallest cost.

Labor Representation Is Urged In All Educational Activities

Federal Vocational Board Member Says That Wage Earners Should Take Active Part in Work of Board—Opportunity for Skilled Workers Not Gone, He Says, Citing Demand for Trained Men in Newer Fields of Industry.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Bedford, Ind., Sept. 25.—Over 563,000 boys and girls and men and women are enrolled in trade and industrial schools receiving federal aid, Perry W. Reeves, labor member of the Federal Board for Vocational Education, told the annual convention of the Indiana Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners held here.

Nearly 11 per cent of this number, Mr. Reeves explained, are boys and girls of high school age who are receiving training before going to work as wage earners, while approximately 90 per cent are undergoing training while actually earning wages.

"As the originator of the agitation which resulted in the creation of the Federal Board for Vocational Education, labor should take an active interest in the board," Mr. Reeves said, "and should see that worker groups are adequately represented on state boards of education, school boards, and committees directing vocational education."

Skilled Workers Still Needed.

Referring to the replacement of labor by machines, many examples of which he cited, Mr. Reeves said: "I have heard it said by wage earners that there is no opportunity for those who toil, since the machine has taken the place of human skill, and that the need for training workers is rapidly decreasing. Yet no machine has been invented that can think and take the place of trained minds. The problem of trained men for new jobs is a problem of vocational education, and it is to the solution of this problem that the Federal Board of Vocational Education is directing a large part of its efforts."

Directing attention to the need for skilled workers in the newer industries, such as aviation, television, radio, motion and talking pictures, and others, Reeves showed that the demand for men in those fields makes the problem of vocational training even more complicated than it has been in the past.

The part-time vocational school, the organization and operation of which is directed by a committee composed of representatives of the school, employers, and workers, is advocated by Reeves as the type which most effectively meets the need for trade apprentices. When this plan is used, he said, employers should provide employment for apprentices at a stipulated rate of pay and for a definite period of time.

How Workers Should Help.

Workers should assist in selecting the apprentices, and should be responsible for their attendance, diligence, and good behavior. The school, on the other hand, should furnish the needed training that can not properly be given on the job.

Mr. Reeves said that over 1,000,000 boys and girls and adults are now enrolling in vocational schools in the United States and Hawaii.

A native of Indiana, where he taught school for several years, Mr. Reeves has seen service as a railroad shop laborer, foreman, brakeman, and conductor. Formerly a member of the Indiana state industrial board, he has been associated with the Federal Board for Vocational Education since his appointment in 1928.

Printers' Union to Vote on Moving Of National Office

Referendum on Proposal Authorized at Houston Convention — Morrison Backed for Secretary of Labor.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Houston, Tex., Sept. 25.—Sessions of the seventy-fifth annual convention of the International Typographical union, held here, were full of interest and there was spirited discussion of the live topics that came before the delegates. Solid, substantial progress in the face of unfavorable economic conditions, were reported by President Charles P. Howard and the other officers. Boston was chosen as the next convention city.

Chief among subjects discussed was the proposal for the removal of the national headquarters from Indianapolis to another location. This was supported by President Howard and Secretary Woodruff Randolph, on the grounds of the unfriendly attitude of the courts in the Indianapolis jurisdiction, and the claim that the present expenditure for attorneys' fees would cover the cost of maintenance elsewhere. President Howard favored Washington, D. C., as a better location. The move was opposed by First Vice-President Theodore Perry. It was finally decided that a referendum be taken on the question, ninety days after Jan. 1, 1931.

After considerable discussion it was voted to leave the matter of the five-day week to be determined by the local unions, with a strong encouragement to the principle involved.

A proposal that local unions should have the right to call strikes without the sanction of the executive council was defeated.

Morrison Urged for High Post.

A resolution urging that President Hoover appoint Frank Morrison to the cabinet portfolio of the secretary of labor was overwhelmingly adopted.

Among the forward looking propositions was the one instructing the bureau of education to prepare and provide courses of study for the members along various lines.

Some of the high lights in the president's report of progress included the fact that the average annual earnings of members during the preceding year had increased, despite the financial depression, from the figure of $2,327.75 for the previous year to $2,372.36 for the year just ending, an increase of $44.61 per member. The aggregate earnings of the members for the previous year were $176,944,051 for 76,015 members, and in the 1930 year for 77,507 members the total was $180,874,801, an increase of $6,930,750. The president pointed out that the increase in average earnings over the year 1920 was an even better index of the improvement in the condition of the membership, and that the amount of that increase was $757.11.

Mortuary Fund Gains.

The increase in the mortuary fund balance in ten years was shown to be $2,331,701.67; the present balance being $3,000,310.97, as against $668,609.30 in 1920.

Another striking increase was shown in the investments of the international, which were $959,404.76 in 1920, and in 1930 were $5,725,163.70. This is an increase of almost sevenfold over ten years ago.

Statistics were presented showing that from 1918 to 1921 there was a decline in the number of daily papers of 526; and in the period of 1922 to 1929 a further decline of 84. Nevertheless, it was stated by the president, incomplete returns indicate that more printers are employed in the production of daily newspapers than ever before in the history of the industry.

Many Increased Scales.

During the last year increased scales of wages on newspaper jobs were reported by 147 unions; and increased job scales by 130 unions. One decrease was reported—a job scale in Florida. The remainder have renewed their previous scales.

The report of the secretary-treasurer showed a total membership in good standing of 75,958, with a total cash balance in the treasuries of local unions in the sum of $3,188,585.62.

Sentiment for Walkout Almost Unanimous—National Executive Board Approves Move. Conciliator Coming.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Washington, Sept. 25.—At the United States Department of Labor conciliation service it was announced that a conciliator would leave at once for Danville.

Danville, Va., Sept. 25.—Forced to act by the hostile attitude of the Riverside and Dan River mill management, Danville textile workers, organized in Local Union 1865 of the United Textile Workers of America, have voted in favor of a strike. Ninety-five per cent of the members voted for a walkout.

Word was received here that the national emergency board of the United Textile Workers, meeting in New York city, had approved the action of the local union.

Announcement was made that a representative of the United States Department of Labor was coming to Danville to make an effort to settle the trouble. The Danville workers welcome this action, as they are anxious to avoid a strike and the strike vote was taken only after all other means of adjustment had been exhausted.

It is common talk about the city that the term of the present management expires October 1, and that the stockholders are planning a complete reorganization at that time.

Union Smashing Plan Fails in Coal Trade

Wheeling, W. Va.—"The anti-union policy of West Virginia, Kentucky and eastern Ohio operators has not solved the coal problem, or will it," declares the Wheeling News, in a leading editorial. The newspaper says wage cutting continues in these deunionized areas.

"It seemed last fall and last winter that the misery of the coal miner and his family had reached the limit, but the misery has sunk below even the level of last year's operation," says the News.

"The latest important coal activity to make a cut is the Consolidation Company, with a 12 per cent reduction. Its reason is the various cuts made by competitive mines in the same territory.

"These operators claimed their difficulties were overcome when they eliminated the union. As a matter of fact, they found that the union was, to a very large degree, the principal protection of the fair coal operator against the hog. In every industry there are some men who want to do all the business; they want to destroy competitors. They are almost invariably price cutters. Having cut the price to get a large contract, they fall back upon their helpless workmen to make up the losses. A few months later another price cutter comes along, the price is again cut, and again the workmen have to pay."

UPHOLSTERERS ACTIVE.

New York.—William Kohn, president Upholsterers' International union, continues to spur these trade unionists to greater activity. The official lists movements throughout the jurisdiction to better conditions and raise wages where possible, and to hold the lines where trade is depressed.

MUSICIANS WALK OUT.

Philadelphia.—Organized musicians in this city suspended work over the "canned" music issue. The theater managers, who are given orders from New York, said they will employ union musicians and pay the union scale, when such workers "are needed." The musicians know what that means.

Painful Condition

"When I was just a girl at home," writes Mrs. B. F. Riggan, of Baird, Texas, "I took Cardui for cramping and pains in my side and back, and it helped me at that time.

"After I was married, I found myself in a weak, run-down condition. I suffered a great deal with my back, which was so weak it hurt me to get up or when I would stand on my feet. I fell off in weight.

"A friend of mine, seeing how bad I felt, advised me to take Cardui, which I did. By the time I had taken two bottles, I felt stronger and better than I had in a long time."

Conference of American Rabbis Urges 5-Day Week for Industry

(By International Labor News Service.)

Baltimore, Md., Sept. 25.—The commission on social justice of the Central Conference of American Rabbis has made public a statement favoring a five-day week for industry and "an intelligent attitude toward birth control." The statement is to be read in synagogues during the ten-day Rosh Hashona holiday.

The announcement was made by Edward L. Israel, chairman of the commission and rabbi of the Har Sinai congregation here.

"If our constantly improving machinery with its displacement of human workers is not to produce unemployment before it produces aught else, not only must the number of working days a week be reduced, there must also be a diminution of working hours a day, and also increases of wage rates, enabling all workers to earn sufficiently," the statement said.

"Where intelligent regulation of birth can avert suffering and degradation the voice of mercy speaks. That voice should not go unheeded," the statement said in part.

The statement suggested that investments be "withheld from enterprises where reasonable standards of hours, wages and working conditions are ignored and should be directed to those whose standards are high."

part time. In New Orleans three committees have been named to assist labor in relieving the unemployment conditions in that city. The battle for better conditions throughout the cities of the south will be kept up by organized labor in the hope that better times will come to the workers, Mr. McGrady said.

Reports from North Carolina, where a concentrated effort is made to organize various crafts, show that the painters and decorators, upholsterers, carpenters and other workers are joining the union. Reports show that the building trades are looking up, despite the propaganda that building has slowed down because of labor costs. Data from one of the largest eastern industrial construction firms in the country show that except for the period of 1922, building costs have not been so low since 1916. The attempt to blame the union for high construction costs has met with little consideration from industrial construction concerns that study such situations, it was said.

The convention, just closed, of the United Textile Workers of America, which discussed the general scope and purpose of the southern organizing campaign, formally outlined a general campaign for organizing both northern and southern textile fields, including a shorter workweek, equalizing of wages, and the application of scientific study to the textile situation, thereby helping both employes and employers. Many textile mill operatives admit they are interested in the co-operative plan of management advocated by the American Federation of Labor.

Idle Wage Workers Is World-Wide Issue

Washington. — Governments, employers and employes in every country are discussing the unemployment prolem, said Ethelbert Stewart, United States commissioner of labor statistics.

"Industrial leaders evidently are being impressed with the fact that when they turn out a number of workers their own business will eventually suffer," said Mr. Stewart.

"These industrialists are awakening to the knowledge that men who cannot work cannot buy and that an industry cannot produce when it cannot market its goods.

"While consideration is being given various relief measures in the United States, legislation for unemployment insurance and other means of stabilization has not been adopted by the states.

"The gravity of the unemployment situation in many foreign countries has attracted the attention not only of governments and statesmen, but also of the press, organizations and persons."

NON-UNION COAL COMPANY PLANS $1,200,000 HOLD UP

(By International Labor News Service.)

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 11.—The Pittsburgh Coal company demands that home owners of Mt. Lebanon, a suburb of this city, pay $1,200,000 for permitting coal props to remain in the coal lands owned by the company.

The company mined the coal under these houses, leaving a comparatively few columns of coal to support the mine roof. If these pillars are removed, the land will sag and destroy the homes. The company offers to sell the coal for $1,200,000. More than 3,000 home owners are affected.

Western Pennsylvania is aroused over this attempted hold-up and every Pittsburgh newspaper condemns the proposal of a concern that has total assets of $171,573,321.

The Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph says:

"This is the same Pittsburgh Coal company that broke its contract with the United Mine Workers, the same company that subsidized the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce and endeavored to give the appearance of disinterested service to its own selfish machinations. It is the same coal company that employed the coal and iron police to beat John Borkowski to death."

The coal company was a leader in the movement to smash the Jacksonville agreement with the United Mine Workers that it and other leading coal concerns signed.

Repudiation of the agreement was marked by a long and bitter strike in which methods were used against the workers that parallel the company's attempted gouge of Mt. Lebanon citizens.

All Records Broken As Labor And N. Y. State Fair Co-operate

(By International Labor News Service.)

Syracuse, N. Y., Sept. 11.—For ninety years the New York State fair went its even tenor without relations with labor.

This year, the ninety-first, the Syracuse Central Labor council cooperated and President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, came to speak on Labor day under the joint auspices of the fair and the central body.

All records were broken.

In one direction there was a 5-mile traffic jam. Parking space was eaten up like hot cakes. The race track infield, never before used, was quickly turned over to autos and filled. The turn-out was phenomenal.

The chamber of commerce wouldn't co-operate. It was filled with forebodings as to this tie-up between the fair and unions. It got its answer on Labor day.

WORKERS OUT AT D. B. LOVEMAN BEAUTY SHOP

Management Declines to Deal With Unions.

NEW ORGANIZATION HITS FIRST "SNAG"

Barbers Also Affected. Break Regarded as Unfortunate, and Local Unionists Hope Matter Will Be Speedily Adjusted—Several Shops "Lined Up."

First break in the progress of Chattanooga's new Beauticians' union came last Saturday morning, when members of that organization and its affiliated craft, the Barbers, were virtually forced out of the D. B. Loveman beauty parlor and replaced by strikebreakers.

The severance of relations followed months of effort on the part of representatives of the Barbers, Beauty Workers and Central Body to convince Mr. B. E. Loveman, president of the D. B. Loveman company, that the purpose of the organization was to co-operate with his business as well as to make conditions better for the beauticians and barbers employed in the shop. In the early stage of the negotiations Mr. Loveman informed the workers' representatives that the Loveman beauty shop would never be operated non-union, stating that if demands made by the organization were considered unreasonable, the shop would be closed. In spite of this, however, management of the Loveman shop later flatly refused to deal with the workers in an organized capacity, and a virtual lockout was the result.

Acting upon authority of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council in regular session Monday, Sept. 22, and upon request from the two local unions, executive board of Central Body has formally declared the Loveman company "unfair to organized labor."

The break is regarded as unfortunate from several angles, and it is hoped that the matter may be speedily adjusted.

The new Beauticians' union, chartered by the Journeymen Barbers' International union, has progressed to the point where a splendid foundation has been laid. A number of the better shops have already signed, and negotiations are still being carried on with two or three others, with prospects that within a short time all of the higher-class institutions will be lined up."

NEW YORK GANGSTERS RULE FISH INDUSTRY

New York.—The fish industry of this city is controlled by profiteers who are backed by gangsters, according to evidence uncovered by the state's food investigation.

Assistant Attorney-General Grout said the city is divided between seven or eight fish jobbers. Strong-armed gangsters, or "guerillas," enforce decisions of the ring's executive committee.

The racketeers are also operating on milk, eggs and flour and the laundry industry.

RAILROADS OPPOSE 8 HOURS FOR LABOR

New York.—Railroads in this state attack the Dunsmore act which provides an eight-hour day for workers employed on the elimination of grade crossings. The railroads also oppose the clause that provides for the prevailing rate of wages."

This construction work involves the expenditure of several million dollars. The railroads insist that the law prevenes the constitutional clause granting interstate commerce powers to congress alone, and that it abrogates the right of contract.

Drink Workers "Dedicate" Hall

Second-floor hall at the new Market-street headquarters of Central Body was filled to capacity Thursday night when the regular meeting of Local 79, Soft Drink Workers, was given over to a sort of dedication of the new home. A committee, consisting of W. F. Strickland, M. J. Costello and Roy Lee, had prepared a splendid near-Dutch lunch, consisting of several brands of that beverage which has been substituted for what these unionists used to make, handle and drink; sandwiches and cigars.

It was announced that the turnout was so encouraging and the get-together so enjoyable that the committee was continued "in office" and instructed to prepare a similar party every once in a while.

Mill Night Work To Go in South, Employers Agree

New Plan, Expected to Help Relieve Depression in Industry, Effective in October, It Is Reported.

By C. S. GARRISON

Birmingham, Ala., Oct. 2.—Elimination of night work in the cotton mills of the south appears to be a certainty, according to leaders in the industry and reports from American Federation of Labor organizers in various sections of the south.

While no date has been officially announced for the termination of night work, it is authoritatively reported that the new work plan will go into effect some time in October in the principal mills.

The action of the South Carolina Cotton Manufacturers' association in Greenville, S. C., a few weeks ago, in which it was agreed that it was best for the industry to abandon night work for an indefinite period of time, has set other state associations acting in helping to stabilize the industry.

Move to Help Trade.

Manufacturers of print cloth and narrow sheeting have decided among themselves to take the step as rapidly as the various mills can adjust themselves to the situation, it is said. T. M. Marchant, president of the South Carolina association, is quoted as saying that night workers thrown out of employment "would be taken care of," although he did not specify in what manner.

There is a strong sentiment in the industrial south for the abolition of night work in the textile mills for a period of time in order to relieve the depression in the industry. Some of the mill owners go so far as to say that night work will be permanently eliminated. This is especially true in respect to the employment of women and children at night in the mills, a situation which President William Green condemned as unnecessary and socially unsound.

Complain of Hardship.

In answer to this some manufacturers say that such action would work a hardship on a large number of employes and on the manufacturers themselves. It is pointed out, however, that three shifts of workers at eight hours each would remedy this "situation" and enormously better the condition of the workers, who now work 10 to 12 hours a day.

Reports from organizers of the American Federation of Labor at Greensboro, N. C., say that the mills in that city are preparing to abandon night work. Mills in most of the textile sections of the south have been running three days and three nights a week. Under a plan being considered by some of the mills a six-day week would be inaugurated with the day and night shifts alternating week about, thus giving each the same working time the workers have been having under curtailed working time now in effect.

Machine Is Blamed For Idle Problem

Charlotte, N. C.—"Automatic machinery and mass production are major causes for our business depression," said R. R. Lawrence, president North Carolina Federation of Labor, in a radio address over station WBT.

The trade unionist said we have an untouched home market that would amount to billions of dollars annually if workers had a purchasing power.

"Wages formerly paid workers displaced by the machine have been withdrawn from circulation and have gone into frozen profits," said Mr. Lawrence.

"Industrial magnates and large operators of capital are unable to spend money accumulated so rapidly and at death resort to the appointment of commissions to distribute their vast estates, usually to art, higher education and charitable institutions. Infrequently does the wealth thus distributed return to the workers who shared in its creation.

"When wages of millions of workers are withdrawn from circulation business stagnation follows. We are suffering from just that today.

"With five million unemployed in our land, and countless other workers forced to accept wage reductions, there should be no claim of overproduction. Under consumption is our ailment."

PLASTERERS TO JOIN MOVE TO PREVENT FIRES

Will Co-operate With City and County Officials.

BEGIN PROGRAM FOR EDUCATION

First of a Series of Articles on Plastering Makes Interesting Reading.

PLASTERERS CHANGE HOUR FOR MEETING

Announcement was made in these columns last week that regular meeting night for Local 157, Plasterers, has been changed from the second and fourth Thursday nights in each month to the first and third Wednesday nights. The time of meeting has also been moved from 7 o'clock to 7:30.

By L. T. ADWELL

There are a great number of people who do not fully understand the importance of plastering. Therefore, the Operative Plasterers' and Cement Finishers' association, through The Labor World, hope to interest its readers, thereby giving them a better understanding of the importance of better plastering.

There will be a series of articles, one each week. It is requested that those interested will save each article, as they will be of much importance when planning to build or remodel.

An interesting article on "Better Plastering," in a recent issue of the official organ of a national association, points out that in the early days of our forefathers, in this country, there was very little plastering—in fact, it was confined to the "chinks" between the timbers in the log cabins. But as the struggle for a bare existence and life, itself, gave place to greater security and culture, American architecture became a living, beatiful thing. America has a rich heritage in building. Coming to the Atlantic coast, the craftsmen of colonial days brought with them from England the traditions and the taste of the finest old-world builders. And the excellence with which these craftsmen did their work is attested both by the fact that many of their buildings still stand and also by the fact that the architect of today often goes to the work of the colonial builder for inspiration and guidance.

The cost of construction in those days was not as great a problem as it is today, this article continues. Great, sturdy timbers of all kinds were to be had for the cutting. As a consequence, the frames were strong beyond those of the modern home, the entire building was heavier and more stable. The plaster finish in many of these homes is as perfect as the day it was put on. And why? Because of the permanence, the rigidity of the base on which the plaster was applied.

In many instances, partitions were built of solid timbers laid longitudinally and spiked together. To these partitions were nailed rived oak lath. Such a partition and plaster base can neither shrink, swell, buckle, warp or settle to any extent. It formed a perfect base for the interior finish—plaster, of course.

Thus, if we analyze the building of the last 4,000 years we inevitably come to these two conclusions:

1. Plaster has always been, and as far as is known today, will always be the only interior finish of consequence where beauty, economy and safety are objects.

2. The life—the durability—of plaster is determined by the base upon which it is applied, the materials used, and the method of applying, which will be explained later.

—And Fire-Safety!

The very fact that you are considering building a home is ample evidence that you expect it to protect all that you hold near and dear. That home is to be the constant abode of wife and children. Knowingly, no man would build a fire trap for his family, particularly when it is so comparatively easy and inexpensive to build a fire-safe residence. How many men who would not think of having their offices in any but a "fireproof" building, build a fire trap for their families. It may startle you to know that some 15,000 lives, mostly those of women and children, are lost each year through fires. Every two minutes, each day, each year, a home catches fire. In addition to the lives lost, the loss of residence property annually amounts to over eighty-eight million dollars.

If a fire-safe home costs thousands of dollars extra, such losses of life and property might be understandable. But such is not the case. The cost is very small.

Let us analyze the sources of these fires. To begin with, it is surprising to note that 96% of all fires originate inside the building. Fires which originate inside the home are much more dangerous to lives than those which originate on the roof or the siding. An outside fire usually gives some warning, permitting occupants to leave the building. The inside fire may immediately shut off all means of escape by striking up the stair well or using the space between the 2-inch by 4-inch studs in the wall as a chimney, feeding on the combustible lath and finally bursting out in several rooms at once. If, then, some inexpensive means of building fire-safety into the interior of residences were available, 96% of the danger from residence fires would be wiped out at one fell swoop.

That means is at hand. It is a fact. The Underwriters' Laboratories, an impartial body which tests materials for insurance companies, after repeated tests has awarded a one-hour fire rating to ordinary lumber construction with ¾-inch hard plaster and metal lath on ceilings and on both sides of partitions. Interpreted in ordinary, every-day terms, this means that should a fire start in the kitchen, for example, it would take that fire more than one hour to break through the partitions or floor into any other room of the house. You know perfectly well that this interval would give plenty of time, even in the dead of night, for the fire to be discovered; for the fire department to be summoned; for all to make a safe egress from the house; for the fire department to arrive and put out the fire. No lives endangered! All property damage confined to the room in which the fire originated!

James M. Southall, state fire marshal's report of 1929 for Hamilton county, gives the following figures:

Number of fires, 363; value of buildings, $2,869,801; value of contents, $2,623,835; damage to contents, $116,225; damage to buildings, $188,-991.

Report for the state of Tennessee, listed in class of property, shows there were a total of 3,276 fires, of which 2,130 were dwellings.

Kind of structure is listed as follows: Airplane, 2; automobiles, 203; awnings, 10; brick, 357; brick veneer, 200; ironclad, 30; hollow concrete block, 10; reinforced concrete, 5; stone, 24; stucco, 100; wood, 2,285. Total, 3,276.

We regret very much we cannot inform the readers of The Labor World and the entire population of Chattanooga and Hamilton county how to prevent the majority of fires in one publication. The Operative Plasterers' and Cement Finishers' association have gone on record as pledging their support to the county and city officials in wiping out the fire hazard of our county and city. Hope you will do the same. Read every article and save every article; they will be a benefit to you in the future.

HOFFMAN RELEASED

By International Labor News Service.

Asheville, N. C., Oct. 2.—Alfred Hoffman, organizer for the American Federation of Full Fashioned Hosiery Workers, who was sentenced to a term in jail at Marion, following a farcical trial, has been released and is now here. Three Marion textile strikers, who were sentenced with Hoffman, are still imprisoned.

1,500,000 Lose Jobs In Year, Is Estimate

Unemployment Greatly Accentuated by Part-Time in Many Industries, Federal Reserve Board Believes.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Washington, Oct. 2.—It is estimated by the federal reserve board that during the year ending July 1, 1930, 1,500,000 persons were dropped from payrolls in mines, factories and in the transportation industry.

In addition to this it is the opinion of that body that unemployment has been greatly accentuated by part-time schedules in many industries. The board says, "with the greater prevalence of part-time operations this year, the decrease in payroll disbursements was greater than the decrease in employment."

Referring to the efforts reported in the early part of the year to speed up employment on public works contracts, the same body stated, that "in the construction industry the value of contracts awarded in the first seven months of this year was 18 per cent smaller than in 1929, notwithstanding large awards this year for the construction of public works and public utilities."

Inquiries at the highways division of the department of agriculture and of the department of commerce, as to the proportion of appropriations made by congress which have been made available for payrolls this summer, brought the invariable reply that "We have no information on that point."

It is stated that in some states funds were available, with which the federal appropriations for highway construction could be matched, and thus make the increase in work possible. In some states the federal appropriation will wait until another year for use, since these states have no funds available for the purpose, and their governors are not calling special sessions to meet the emergency.

Meanwhile, there are no reports of anything being done in anticipation of the approaching winter season and the hardships accompanying unemployment in both city and country. It will be hard enough in the south, but where the frost and sleet coincide with hunger and poor shelter, there may be worse than breadlines.

LABOR FACES MAJOR ISSUES AT CONVENTION

Boston Meeting Promises Many Problems.

REPORTS WILL SHOW CONTINUED GAINS

Unemployment Situation Outstanding for Consideration of Delegates.

By MATTHEW WOLL
Vice-President, American Federation of Labor.

American organized labor is about to gather in annual convention, where through accredited delegates it will survey the past and attempt to chart a course for the future.

It is no small credit to our movement and to its force and virility that we enter this convention with a membership larger than it was a year ago.

The southern organizing campaign has added 112 new local unions to our roster and the fact that these unions are spread among many trades shows how general has been the interest and the response to the appeal of trade unionism.

Generally the year has been one of depression and of continued unemployment. We shall have that issue before us in the Boston convention and perhaps there will be no issue more important—not even the injunction issue.

To maintain life is man's first concern and in an industrial society work and wages. After that other issues come upon us.

There has been much loose talking about unemployment. Little has been done about it. All manner of reasons have been given for unemployment. A great many like to ascribe it to the political party that happens to be in power. That, of course, is a ridiculous assumption. If politics were in control of industry it could be possible for politics to paralyze industry. Much more often we find industry in control of politics. Industrial depression is not caused by the political party in power. And by the same token we need not look for too much relief through political measures.

The trade union movement has repeatedly asserted the causes of unemployment, which is all part of the industrial depression. We have too much production and not enough buying power. Too much is diverted from the masses who constitute the consuming power of America, in so far as we have a consuming power.

We can effect cure only by a general increase in consuming power and by a drastic general reduction in hours of work. There are other palliative possibilities, but they are not cures. The cure is the absolute opposite of that which has caused the trouble. Coupled with increased buying power and fewer hours of work we must have a more active participation by labor in the regulation of industry.

It is folly to think that this cure, requiring these drastic measures, can be brought about with any permanency with our present degree of organization. Before unemployment is finally and permanently cured we shall have to have a degree of organization in all industry that will permit the exercise of an effective voice by labor in all industry. That we have not got and that we shall have to have. That is what Boston has to consider and it is what each future convention will have to consider until the task is accomplished. Furthermore, if we are ever to accomplish that task our movement will find it necessary to adhere to its basic philosophy and to forsake all thought of chasing chimerical and superficially attractive visions.

The Boston convention faces many other issues, but this is the great issue. We shall have the injunction issue and we shall have the old question of communism and the vicious intrigue of communism. These questions will no doubt be dealt with then as we have dealt with them before—along the sound, logical lines of American trade union thought. Considering them all, giving them all their due importance—and they are of tremendous importance—we come back to the job and the possession of the job as the first issue. There can be no dealing with the job, no regulating of its conditions, no thought about its safety or the liberties that it may bring or deny, until there is a job.

Unemployment is our basic issue. It is our Old Man of the Sea, our whole future, our starting point. It is likewise the first problem of all industry and of all America. It demands and must have our best thought, free from prejudices and free from the cluttering fetters of personally patented panaceas.

Our people will go to Boston with great hope. Boston will justify their hope, because every convention of the American Federation of Labor has justified hope. Year by year we move forward and this year will prove no exception.

A half century lies behind this convention—the whole future lies ahead.

MINE WORK DROPS.

Philadelphia. — Employment in Pennsylvania anthracite collieries dropped 13 per cent from July to August, and wage payments declined 6 per cent. according to the federal reserve bank.

Free Night Schools Make Master Stroke

Free night school, which opened last Monday night at the Chestnut street building, bids fair to be the most successful since the system was instituted under joint federal, state and local auspices.

O. C. Kirkman, superintendent, reports a splendid enrollment and a decidedly increased interest in various courses offered, as well as many inquiries regarding subjects which have not formerly been sought.

A master stroke was made by the management of the schools this week when the services of Prof. George Forbes, at the local postoffice, were secured to instruct a class in civil service.

Prof. Forbes will hold forth each Tuesday and Friday evenings, and those who desire information on this phase of government activities would do well to enroll at once.

Consuming Power Must Be Increased, Bricklayers Assert

Wall Street Gets Money Which Should Go to Workers, Convention Says—War Declared on Racketeering.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Montreal, Sept. 18.—"Too much money has been going out of industry into Wall street and not enough into the pockets of wage earners to be put back into buying power to take up the stream of products turned out by the American industrial machine."

That was the verdict of the Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers' International Union convention here, adopting the report of President George T. Thornton.

The question of unemployment and its causes was one of the major subjects before the convention. The only forecast was for slow recovery. The remedy set forth was:

"The nation's ability to consume must keep pace with its ability to produce." The declaration goes on to say:

"That must be interpreted to mean that the whole mass of our population must have ability to consume generously. We have had a condition in which a relative few could consume, because of work at good wages, while great numbers were continually thrown out of work by the very machinery that came to create plenty. Only through an adequate and advancing wage and a properly regulated and shortened work-week for the masses of our people can the specter of calamity be removed with anything like permanency."

Wide Organization Urged

Organization of workers in every field was urged as a requisite to any permanent remedy for unemployment.

A stirring call for action to secure relief from injunction was uttered to restore and protect rights which the convention declared have been all but destroyed by equity courts. "Practically every necessary function of trade unionism has been made illegal by the courts," it was declared. The convention pointed out that both major political parties had agreed upon the proposition of injunction relief and it pointed out also that the senate judiciary committee which rejected labor's bill in the last session was not divided upon party lines, the division having been without regard to party.

A challenge to "complacency" of politicians at the polls was urged as a rebuke to a congress which it was declared had given labor practically nothing.

Racketeering Condemned.

The president's report, which was approved, took an emphatic stand against permitting questionable practices to creep into union affairs for private or gang benefit. "We cannot and will not deny that racketeering has made its appearance in some unions," the approved report said. "Too many men are exercising a power over others to which they have no fair title. A breed of graft that has wormed its filthy way into business, into politics, into civic societies, into charity and into practically every avenue of organized life cannot have left our movement untouched, nor has it.

"Unions are not prosecuting agencies, but they do and must run their own affairs. As far as racketeers in the unions are concerned—few though they may be—they, too, will go, either by pressure from within or without. In our affairs, unions clean their houses or else the parent body wields the broom. Our laws make racketeering difficult. It is our purpose to make it more difficult by a vigilance that is redoubled."

No officers were elected, elections being held once in four years.

DANVILLE, VA., WALKOUT FIRST IN THIRTY YEARS

Four Thousand Textile Operatives Leave Jobs.

REFUSAL TO DEAL WITH UNION CAUSE

Attempt to Force "Company Union" Causes Walkout of Workers.

By C. S. GARRISON

Danville, Va.—For the first time in thirty years a textile strike has upset this town in the foothills of the Blue Ridge mountains. The cessation of work in the Dan River and Riverside cotton mills came after months of threatening, and was the result of the arbitrary refusal of H. R. Fitzgerald, president of the mills, to permit his employes to organize a trade union. Big events have hinged on incidents as simple as that.

The temper of the some 4,000 millworkers, 2,000 of whom are directly affected by the strike, has been at the flare stage for weeks over Fitzgerald's stiff-necked attitude. When the mill president told federal concoliators that he would have nothing to do with the union or any of its committees; that the "Industrial Democracy" plan, which has been introduced into the mills here, was answering all purposes of a trade union, the workers resented his attitude. Two factors of vital interest to any worker were left out of the "Industrial Democracy" plan: they had nothing to say about wages or conditions under which they toiled. The members of the "senate" and the "house" of the "Democracy" were permitted to talk and suggest and to act on inconsequential things, but had to "lay off" wages and hours if they expected to remain in the good graces of the bosses. The "Industrial Democracy" plan is merely a company union with new shoes, one worker describes it.

Now that the strike is on the feeling of tenseness in the faces of workers has disappeared. There are no drawn faces among them, but the smile of confidence is there. "Strike and smile" is the slogan. There is, however, a feeling of apprehension among the citizens and business men of Danville, for suddenly cutting off a payroll of some 4,000 wage earners and tying the purse-strings to hold the little savings of these people is no small thing for any community. It takes the wages of the workers to make prosperity anywhere, business men say, and when this factor is missing the community suffers along with the jobless. This, it is pointed out, is the reason why public opinion is largely with the workers in the present dispute. Union leaders disclaim any responsibility for the disruption of the business flow, because, they say, the workers in organizing were only exercising a constitutional right in joining an organization of their fellow-workers, a step which the mill management refused to recognize or sanction. When employes exercised this right they subsequently lost their jobs, with the only explanation that "your services will no longer be required."

This, in a nut-shell, is the cause of the strike at the Riverside and Dan River mills.

The workers are settling down to a contest. Daily mass meetings of the employes of the mills, augmented by those working in other plants not involved in the strike, show the deadly earnestness of their intentions. The strike order, which the workers voted themselves, was ratified at an open mass meeting attended by 10,000 persons. Since that time the daily meetings have been equally well attended by those directly affected by the strike.

There are no disorders and no law violations of any kind. And neither is there any softness in the attitude of the men and women toward the accomplishment of their objective. Pickets guard the various gates of the mills and peacefully persuade those who might be interested in going to work—and they are extremely few—that the union is attempting to establish a new day in the Danville mills and that every worker must be in accord with this effort. In other words, no scabs are wanted. Imported workers get little consideration, and are turned back when they hit the town.

Francis J. Gorman, international vice-president of the United Textile Workers of America, is in charge of the activities of the local workers, and is being assisted by Paul J. Aymon, representative of the American Federation of Labor. Mr. Gorman said the committee was ready at any time to discuss a strike settlement with the mill management on a basis of the right of the workers to organize and to adjust wages and working conditions through properly constituted mill committees of the workers. Thus far nothing has been heard from the employers. In the meantime the mills are silent.

A continuous demand for the union label, shop card and working button will bring joy and sunshine into the lives of thousands of trade unionists.

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 3, 1930.

THE CHERRY TREE

Where with our Little Hatchet we tell the truth about many things, sometimes profoundly, sometimes flippantly, sometimes recklessly.

Hard-boiled employers, who learned most of their lessons in the stone age of American industry, and who are still talking of getting skilled labor down to the level of "basic wages" and dreaming of getting common labor back to pre-war living standards, will find scant comfort in the fact that the drop in prices has stopped, at least for the time being.

The bureau of labor statistics wholesale price schedule shows that the August level is at the same point as that of July. Foods went up from 86.3 for July to 87.1 for August, and farm products generally from 83.1 to 84.9.

Other commodity lists, such as hides, textiles, metal products and building materials, show just a slight drop, but others are holding the previous level—or with only slight fractional drops. Finished products in July were at 86.7, in August 86.4, as against 97.3 in August of last year.

In retail prices there have been slight increases in eggs, butter and canned salmon, but in the main the effect of the previous wholesale decline in prices is now being reflected in a continued slight decline in retail prices, which will again be halted by the change in tendency of wholesale prices above noted.

The very slight shifting of conditions of employment are indicated by the exceedingly vague language of some of the official reports on the labor situation. The monthly bulletin issued by the United States employment service covers the whole of the United States, by states and cities. But it is all a "blur" of statements showing a comparatively steady stream of industry, somewhat less than normal, with twisted currents and eddies that throw groups of labor in and out of the main stream.

Here is evident a tendency to keep a larger number of employes on part-time, probably more than at any previous period of crisis. "Restricted schedules;" four and five-day week operations; seasonal business employing all available help, occasionally for overtime; all indicate an effort on the part of employers to maintain at least a livable condition in the communities affected.

The outcome, nationally, is a lack of the frantic "job-hunt" and "panic" condition which has often hitherto characterized the times of financial depression. There is probably more quiet, reasonable thinking going on in the minds of workers and business men, as to the fundamental reasons for this curious condition of twentieth century civilization, where we have worked together so effectively to pile up the production of commodities, that we are now somehow prohibited from using.

Government reports seem to aim at a statement of the facts that will make the situation seem better than it really is. It is the same policy that leads a merchant to mark his goods at 69 cents rather than 50 cents—it "seems a better price." "Two and one-half per cent of the total population unemployed" sounds much better than "ten per cent of those usually employed are out of a job." Perhaps this form of "kidding" has helped to prevent the "panic" state of mind, and is to that extent justifiable. But those who are looking at the heart of the problem are not misled.

"Mass" is the key word in the realm of food production and distribution, if we are to judge by the record of General Foods corporation. This concern is the outcome of a merger of a group of over eighty nationally known food products, formerly distributed by fifteen separate organizations. Production, distribution and advertising now go forward on a "mass basis" in the daily business of this concern. And this is one of the lines of business which has shown an increase of rate of profits, and in which the drop in wholesale prices has not been accompanied by a corresponding drop in retail prices.

LABOR QUERIES

Q.—What are the organizations in the woodworking and kindred trades affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, besides the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners?

A.—There are four, International Wood Carvers' Association of North America, Coopers' International Union of North America, International Union of Piano, Organ and Musical Instrument Workers, Upholsterers, Carpet and Linoleum Mechanics' International Union of North America.

Q.—Are bill posters organized?

A.—Yes, in the International Alliance of Bill Posters and Billers of America.

Q.—How can trade unionists promote the organization of retail store clerks?

A.—By asking for the services of a union clerk when making a purchase. This is an effective way to assist the Retail Clerks' International Protective association to increase its membership.

DEPRESSION NOT MYTHICAL.

The present industrial depression cannot be explained or excused by false reasoning. This makes it unique in the nation's history. Its cause is lack of purchasing power. Theorists may quibble over the distinction between overproduction and underconsumption, but no practical person denies that wage workers have not the money to buy.

Men are discarding all reasons for the depression save one—that if commodities can't be bought, the industrial machine cannot be operated and unemployment results. It seems unnecessary to state this self-evident fact. It is no longer possible to detract public thought. This, however, has been done, but the time has passed when workers are interested in red herrings that lead into blind alleys.

Organized labor's high wage and shorter hour principles were never so generally accepted. If the nation would end depression these must be applied. The application of these principles will turn unemployed into producers and non-spenders into buyers and consumers. Well wishes and hope will not establish these principles. There must be a will-to-do behind kindly sentiment.

The low-wage, long-hour employer, nor the corporation manager who seeks immediate dividends, will not act out of the goodness of their hearts. They must be forced to change by the power of organized labor and the resistless public opinion it develops.

Citizens in other groups appreciate the social danger of mechanization policies and stabilization systems that enlarge the unemployed army and lower wages for those who are retained. This system will eventually harm the very men who temporarily profit. They lose a potential customer every time a worker is displaced.

Commissions may study, probe, investigate and report, but they must come back to the trade union position. Organized labor believes there is no other way out. We will "muddle through" this depression, but the forces that created it will be operating to create another.

If this system would be changed, old wage and hour standards must be rejected. We must renew the struggle with an idealism and courage that has made other victories possible.

"CANNED" MUSIC HARMFUL.

Organized musicians' challenge to "canned" music is more than a fight for jobs. It affects the cultural life of the nation and should be supported by every one who appreciates spiritual values.

A few corporations that dictate the people's amusements would destroy living music in the theaters. Refinement and elegance that distinguish melodies imbued with the spirit of life would be substituted for the groanings of a sound box called "music."

Dividend-seekers who control amusement corporations are not interested in spiritual values, but citizens who are alert to these life essentials should not ignore their obligation.

It may be said that theater owners have the right to say whom they shall employ. This is true. But it is also true that the public have the right to say they will not be parties to the mechanization of one of the world's most ancient arts, nor will they permit the passing of a skill that is vital to the cultural life of our nation.

If the public takes this position the dividend-seekers will quickly realize that their patrons, as well as they, have legal—and moral—rights.

REVOLUTIONISTS DON'T WORRY.

A New York financial paper, discussing unemployment in Germany and recent election gains by fascists and communists in that country, solemnly declares that this is "no time for small politics."

The editor has the innocence of childhood when considering the psychology of revolutionists. Does he expect fascists and communists to defer their revolution until times are good, until everyone is employed and when they cannot be interested in political and economic unheavals?

If that editor understood revolutionary tactics he would know that industrial unrest is when the harvest is reaped. It is baby prattle to make "let's-get-together" pleas to unscrupulous men who know what they want and when to get it.

What Next!

It will require 45,000 cars to move Washington's apple crop this fall. Paper required for wrapping the fruit would fill 435 cars and nails for making boxes 92 cars. The lumber needed to prepare the crop for market would build a city to care for 25,000 persons. With spraying and irrigation out of the way for the season attention is being paid to box making and marketing facilities.

RAINCOAT MAKERS WIN.

New York.—Striking raincoat makers defeated a 20 per cent wage reduction and forced employers to raise wages 5 per cent before they would return to work.

The employes are members International Ladies' Garment Workers' union.

GOD'S WORD

A Weekly Comment on a Text From the Bible

Written for The Labor World
By WILLIAM L. MOSS

A Thought for Today.

Text—"O God, forsake me not until I have showed thy strength unto this generation and thy power to every one that is to come."—Ps. 71:18.

Read Psalm 71.

WM. L. MOSS

Social institutions that for centuries have been assumed to be deep-rooted in human life—even ordained of God—are frankly discussed these days as things abolished, in need of reform or regarded as having something substituted for them. Family life, love, books, marriage, sex, churches and whatnot are all up for discussion. Movements and counter-movements and the ultra-modern cry of "It's the fashion now"—keep poor old gentle grandmother guessing what is to be regarded as right or wrong! No one wants to be out of step with the world—not to mention his own household—and it is indeed painfully hard at times to keep from swerving too far to the left or right in our allegiance to present-day standards. Past generations have been kept on the jump adjusting and readjusting themselves to the pitiless changes forced on them by a material world. But it is a fact that our standards are changing. Men marked for their sanity and clear thinking find themselves asking what is to be the outcome of the changes transpiring in every phase of life today.

Out of all this muddle of changing standards there has come to me a thought inspired by God's Word, the Bible, as to what ought to be the principle that guides me as I move and have my being amid all these changes. My inspiration for this thought has come from the cry of the old psalmist who wrote Psalm 71 and found in the 18th verse: "O God, forsake me not until I have showed thy strength unto this generation and thy power to every one that is to come." This psalmist was an aged, gray-haired man and out of the depth of his experience he has written calm and inspiring words that have done much to settle my mind these days. May he do as much for you!

The Lesson for Us.

Is there any nobler thought than this: To live the higher ideals and pray God that He will let us live long enough to reveal to others what has been wrought out in a life dedicated to those higher ideals? Could there possibly be finer actions or a better prayer? The world needs men and women today just as much as it ever did to live what they know is right. In this day of acknowledged low standards what greater proof of our love for the humanity in man than to live a life that will be emulated! The Arabian word for family means "Those who are cared for." Life has its larger responsibilities in which we must all share—and the care of God's great human family is one of them. Need I look to anyone else than myself to help care for it? Need I pray for anything finer than men will be inspired to greater things because of my life? God may be able to take care of the world without my help, but what can I expect will become of my self-respect if I see a need and deliberately sidestep it? Shall I turn my back upon humanity when I, too, am one of that same humanity—of the same flesh and bone! "Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their words," said Jesus in prayer to the Father. This is the Master's soul-thrilling visualization of a man projecting himself into another man's life for the highest possible good. Individuals living in their lives the things that lift little by little the world's moral tone has made the world livable and worthwhile for you and me! Unless we are passing on, not only to this generation but the coming generation as well, a life wrought out through living the higher ideals we do not—we cannot—please God!

* * *

Somebody must always care! Somebody has to care before cruelty ceases in our penal institutions. Somebody has to care enough to hate dishonesty before truth is regnant. Somebody has to care enough to take a little lost child by the hand and lead him to his mother before his tears of fear are turned to those of laughter. People who care have brought to the world the happiness that exists in it. Because people who do care have lived, battled and won the world is as decent as it is. In the triumphs of the ones who care God has won all His victories!

GAIN IN EMPLOYMENT REPORTED BY TRADE UNIONS FOR SEPTEMBER

President Green, of American Federation of Labor, Sees Definite Trend for Better in Figures From Twenty-Four Cities—Improvement in Business Situation Indicated, He Says.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Washington, Oct. 2.—A "definite trend for the better" in the unemployment situation is shown in reports from trade unions from twenty-four cities for September, President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, announced in his monthly employment report. The report shows an unemployment percentage of 21 as "compared with 22 per cent out of work in July and August," which Mr. Green said indicated an "improvement in the business situation, at least seasonally."

"This is the first time in the three years since we have collected figures from trade unions that employment has shown so definite and general an improvement in September," he said.

"This is partly due, of course, to the unprecedented number out of work in July and August. But in the present situation it is encouraging, since better employment means more purchasing power for wage-earners.

"However, the upturn in employment has been only slight in comparison to the large numbers still needing jobs.

"In the building trades, employment was a little better, but 38 per cent are still out of work, a small improvement from the 39 per cent unemployed in August.

"In printing, the situation is generally a little better, except in New York, where unemployment is considerably higher. Metal trades are the only group to show a large increase in the number out of work in September.

"In other trades gains are marked. In textiles and clothing 18 per cent of those unemployed in August are back at work. For musicians and those in theatrical work the approach of fall openings and the cooler weather have brought more work. In service industries and in manufacturing there are distinct improvements, and on railroads, street transport and sea transport, except for a few cities, there have been slight gains."

Aberle Workers Vote 3 to 1 for Unionism

Question of Desire for Agreement Submitted to Secret Ballot — Long Struggle for Recognition Seems Won.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Philadelphia, Oct. 2.—After months of hedging and dodging the issue, the H. C. Aberle company, makers of full fashioned hosiery, has about reached the point of signing a union agreement after an astonishing demonstration of pro-union sentiment in the mill.

At the conclusion of the strike which raged through January, February and March, union recognition was waived as one of the peace terms. A mediator was installed to act impartially. The original mediator was succeeded by Dr. George W. Taylor, who announced that a secret vote of employes in the mill had gone three to one in favor of a clear-cut union agreement.

The vote was taken without the presence of union or company representatives in order to get the employe sentiment without prejudice. Two questions were on the ballot—"Do you" or "don't you" want a union agreement? It is said most of the small minority against such an agreement are new employes.

The employers now say that, the sentiment of employes being clear, a meeting with the company's bankers, its sales agents and some of its principal customers will be held next week, after which the issue will be settled.

At the time of the strike the company employed 1,400 workers.

NATION'S BUS SYSTEM UNDER RAIL CONTROL

New York.—Railroad managers have ceased to oppose passenger busses, and this new transportation system is passing to the control of former foes.

Railroads first resisted the busses which have taken millions of dollars from railroad treasuries, but the carriers are now taking over bus operating corporations.

The Pennsylvania and Southern Pacific railroads own the Greyhound corporation and the Burlington & Great Northern control Greyhound subsidiaries. Eastern railroads are also acquiring bus competitors.

TWO-SHIFT, FIVE-HOUR DAY PROPOSED BY METAL TRADES IN ANNUAL CONVENTION

(By International Labor News Service.)

Boston, Mass., Oct. 2.—Going the five-day plan one better, the metal trades department convention, just opened here, was urged by its officers to support a plan for a five-hour day for men and a ten-hour day for machines.

President James O'Connell and Secretary-Treasurer John P. Frey, in their annual report, recommended the five-day week as basic, but added the five-hour day as a necessity forced upon employer and employe alike by the development of automatic machinery.

No Overhead Increase.

The suggestion was advanced as necessitated by the unemployment situation, leaving the conclusion that unemployment cannot be remedied except by reduction of work-time for workers, though not necessarily for machines.

"It is estimated," says the report, "that if our manufacturing establishments, with their present use of power and machinery equipment, were to operate at full capacity four hours per day, that the total volume of production would be greater than at present.

"Overhead costs operate 24 hours a day every day in the year. The enormous investment in plants and machinery make it necessary that they should operate as many hours per day as possible, so that overhead expenses and the amount of capital involved may be reduced.

"It would be more profitable to investors, more beneficial to wage earners, and of greater advantage to the public, if many of our manufacturing plants operated two five-hour shifts per day, for as modern industry is managed, little, if any, confusion and lost effort would take place by having one shift of workmen employed five hours in the forenoon and another shift five hours in the afternoon. The two or three short shift plan of operation during daytime is coming as certainly as the three eight-hour shifts displaced the two 12-hour shifts in continuous production.

Necessitated by Machinery.

"It is inevitable that the rapidly increasing use of power and the introduction of more massive and automatic machinery must be accompanied by a rapid decrease in the length of the work day and the work week in many of our industries.

"A radical reduction in the hours of labor has become an economic necessity to the producer as well as the investor and consumer.

"The attitude of employer toward the age limit of employment has undergone little change. The degree of unemployment existing during the year has enabled a number of employers to replace a larger number of older men by younger ones.

"As a result of trade union effort to deal with the employment problem for middle aged workmen, and the public education which has resulted, there is developing a public sentiment upon the subject which is proving helpful.

Age Limit Attacked.

"The public was aroused years ago when the trade union movement told the story of the 12-hour day, seven-day week condition of employment for many of the employes in the iron and steel industry. This public opinion was of assistance in forcing the partial abolition of this inhumane condition of employment.

"In the same manner, though not as yet to the same degree, public opinion is becoming aroused over the age limit which throws hundreds of thousands of wage earners into the industrial scrap heap while still in their prime.

"Smarting under the public criticism of a policy which led large corporations and other employers to refuse employment to workmen over 40 or 45 years of age, an effort was made by a statistical bureau, maintained by employers, to indicate that no such condition of age limit as we complained against was to be found in industry. A summary of the average age of employes of a number of large corporations, and the number of workmen over 50 or 55 years of age, was published. It was evident that an effort was being made to mislead the public.

Influence of Insurance.

"The issue is not the discharge of employes when they reach the age of 45, but the policy of declining to give employment to men over that age. The employe over 45 who for any reason is discharged, finds it practically impossible to secure work.

"With many of the large corporations it is not wholly a question of employing young men because they may be more active. In their efforts to prevent the growth of trade unions, and in the building up of so-called company unions, corporations have established sick, death and other beneficial systems. To give employment to older men would materially increase the contributions to the funds from which these benefits are paid.

"The industrial depression has worked with special disadvantage to the middle aged. Men over 45 or 50 who have been laid off, have found it practically impossible to secure employment, for in those plants where additional employes have been placed at work, invariably younger men have been chosen."

PICKING POOR FOR ALLEN A SINCE LOCKOUT OF EMPLOYES

Company, Badly Crippled by Loss of Workers and Desertion of Executives, Resorts to Frequent Cut Rate Sales in Endeavor to Recover Lost Ground.

(By International Labor News Service.)

Chicago, Oct. 2.—Robert W. Allen, New York capitalist, has learned that he did not do such a wonderful thing when he ordered the lockout of 291 knitters of the Allen A company of Kenosha, Wis., February 15, 1928. His production and financial organizations badly crippled and facing the vigorous competition of his former chief executives, who have deserted him and joined forces with a rival corporation, he now resorts to frequent cut rates of hosiery and underwear in an endeavor to recover lost ground.

Prior to the lockout it was the practice of the Allen A company to stage an "Allen A week" once a year to enlarge the market for the hosiery and underwear products of the corporation. During these periods a 20 per cent discount was made to dealers, who in turn passed it on to the customers with a view of introducing the products to a larger number of persons.

Sales More Frequent Now.

For quite some time past the Allen A company has found it necessary to stage these discount sales five and six times a year, the goods being furnished from the Allen A plants at Kenosha, Wis., and at Bennington, Vt. The next sale will be from Oct. 16 to 20, it is said. Goods not sold by the retailers are subject to return to the manufacturer.

John Brine, former superintendent of manufacturing and in charge of sales of the Allen A company at Kenosha, and who had been with the company there for more than thirty years, is now with the Rollins Hosiery company, of Des Moines, Ia. He and other Kenosha capitalists are said to have invested a half million dollars in the Des Moines company, which now is one of the chief competitors of the Allen A company.

Other Executives Desert.

Chester Allen, a brother of Robert W. Allen, sold his holdings in Kenosha to join Brine at Des Moines, as did William Mewse, former treasurer of the Allen A company. The latest deserter from the sinking Allen A ship at Kenosha is Fred Warren, the paymaster, who has also gone to Des Moines.

Of the 291 knitters who were locked out because they had formed a branch of the American Federation of Full Fashioned Hosiery Workers, and of the thirty-nine girls who walked out in sympathy with them, not one has gone back to work. Sixty per cent of them have left Kenosha, while 40 per cent of them, who cannot leave because of family ties or for other reasons, are earning a livelihood at other lines of work.

Large Number of Arrests.

There were 783 arrests of the locked-out Allen A employes during the heat of the controversy, the large number of arrests being accounted for by reason of the fact that some of the men and women were arrested three and four times each.

The only conviction was obtained against Elmer Hackbarth, who was sentenced to from one to five years in Green Bay reformatory on a charge of having kidnaped a strike-breaker. Action on a petition for Hackbarth's pardon is now pending. Three thousand signatures are attached to the petition, including that of Morris Barnett, the prosecuting attorney who obtained the conviction. Practically all of the city and county officials at Kenosha are among the signers of the petition.

Nation's Home Market Rests on High Wages

New York.—"If powers and machinery are to be beneficial to national prosperity, the public's power to consume must be proportionately increased," said John P. Frey, secretary-treasurer Metal Trades Department A. F. of L., in a leading article published in the Magazine of Wall Street.

Mr. Frey ignored the social and humanitarian values of high wages and spoke in the dollars-and-cents language of the M. W. S.'s clientele. The home market, he said, was the best investment for the capitalist, and the foreign market represented "not over 5 per cent of our manufactured product, and our exports are continually meeting with more active resistance. There are convincing reasons for believing that at its best our future export of manufactured goods will represent but a small fraction of our total production.

"A doubled wage rate over that paid a few years ago has been followed in many instances by trebled and quadrupled production per capita. In some instances the output per workman has increased 1,000 per cent and more. It is largely because of these new conditions in production that we cannot consider the question of wages from the viewpoint of a few years ago.

We have not arrived at the point where automatic machinery and scientific processes will no longer be developed, said Mr. Frey, who declared that "we cannot stimulate industry's capacity to produce by reducing wages; and, through this action, limiting the wage earner's influence as a consumer."

ANOTHER CONFERENCE.

Albany, N. Y.—A conference on unemployment has been called by Dr. Charles H. Johnson, state commissioner of social welfare. The meeting will be held Oct. 2 and municipal officials will attend.

Dr. Johnson said the coming winter "may be one of considerable distress by reason of unemployment."

Injunction Process Scored at Meeting

Philadelphia. — Several thousand citizens listened to attacks on the labor injunction at a mass meeting held at the National League ball park under the auspices of the Central Labor union.

The speakers included William Green, president A. F. of L.; Senator Copeland, of New York; Thomas J. Kennedy, secretary-treasurer United Mine Workers of America, and John A. Phillips, president state federation of labor.

The injunction issued against smelter miners by Federal District Judge Scott, of Iowa, was referred to by President Green as a sample of these writs that deny every constitutional right. The Scott order forbade strikers and sympathizers from even stating that a strike existed or that the company compelled its strikebreakers to sign a "yellog dog."

"We put one injunction judge in the cooler," said Senator Copeland, referring to the senate's refusal to confirm Judge Parker. The speaker predicted the five-day week and the six-hour day unless industry reorganized itself. "If there are not enough jobs we must multiply them by shortening hours," said Senator Copeland.

Too Much Production Causes Business Sag

New York.—"Over-production is the basic cause of the present depression," said Richard Whitney, president New York Stock exchange, in an address to the Merchants association in this city.

The speaker ignored such popular excuses as the tariff, want of confidence, the gold reserve and the stock market. The reason, he said, was that output is greater than consumption.

"Theoretical economists," he said, "sometimes tell us that there is no such thing as a general over-production of goods, since the wants of humanity are infinite. However true this assertion may be as a general proposition and over long periods of time, it is certainly not applicable in specific instances."

The stock exchange official said there is too great a tendency "to think of finance as a thing in itself," rather than consider the nation's financial machinery as a facility for the production, distribution and consumption of goods.

"It is a fallacy to think that by juggling with finance, the whole course of trade can be readily diverted or changed," he said.

Mr. Whitney closed his address by again emphasizing that the stock market slump did not cause the present depression. "On the contrary," he said, "it was the general realization of the downward trend in trade conditions which initiated the decline in security prices."

Head and Back Quit Hurting

"A few years ago, I found that I was very weak and nothing I ate seemed to give me any strength," writes Mrs. R. B. Douglas, 704 South Congress St., Jackson, Miss.

"I suffered intense pain in my head and back. At times I would have to hold to something to steady myself, so as to do my little work. I was worried about my condition.

"My mother told me that I should take Cardui. After taking two bottles, I felt stronger, but I kept on taking it until my head and back quit hurting. I took about six bottles in all, and have never quit praising Cardui."

WITH THE ELECTRICAL WORKERS

By E. E. CROSBY

October 7, at 7:30, we will meet at 11½ East Seventh street, upstairs. Some very important business to be attended to, so that means every member be present. Also want to make arrangements to change meeting nights so everybody can attend the vocational training school at Chestnut and Fourth streets.

* * *

We have been wondering about the new postoffice, too. Some of the boys want to make their Christmas money there.

ALONG MELODY LANE

By Sax O. Phone

The big theatrical syndicates have again banished orchestras from theaters in Atlanta; this time because the union men would not agree to their sweat shop demands.

We sat at the Bijou theater a few nights ago and enjoyed the program. There was living music in the orchestra pit. The musicians were given an opportunity to express their individual emotions. Real flesh and blood artists on the stage—and when we say artists we mean it. There is not a "ham" actor or actress employed at the Bijou.

Chattanooga people seem to realize this, judging from the large and appreciative audiences at the splendid house.

There is a certain glamor about the theater orchestra and a human, personal touch about flesh and blood performers that is lacking in the "sound" theater, and will win out eventually.

* * *

The war department is trying out a mechanical army band which is hauled on a three-quarter-ton truck, with powerful amplifiers. All of which is quite all right with the musicians of the country, judging from the response to enlistment invitations since the war. Now, if some bright boy in the class would only come forward with some sort of mechanical "cannon fodder."

Peruchis to Present Another Comedy

Following what came near to a record for local stage presentations, in that every seat in the Bijou theater has been sold this week for each performance of "Rain," the Peruchi Players will revert to the lighter type of production beginning Monday night, and will offer what is described as a novel story of New York life entitled, "If I Was Rich." Press comments in cities where the Peruchis have formerly presented the play are loud in their praises of the production, and it is believed the local theatergoing public will maintain that "Bijou habit" which has spread so rapidly as the Chattanooga people learn of the splendid offerings of this company of artists.

CHAIN STORE TAX LEGAL, SAYS STATE HIGH COURT

Raleigh, N. C.—The North Carolina supreme court upheld the state chain store tax law which imposes a license tax of $50 annually on each unit of chain and branch store organizations.

The chains claim that the tax violates the uniformity clause of the state and federal constitutions. The law applies to all concerns with more than one store. A similar law, but with the tax starting with the sixth store, passed three years ago, was held unconstitutional by the state courts. It is believed that the chains will carry the present case to the United States supreme court.

It is claimed that the law can be defeated by incorporating each unit of a chain as a separate organization.

Harry Kennedy, chairman of the News chapel and president of the Musicians' local, says he'll take the job. Claude Springfield, Times ad skipper, has put in his bid. Boilermakers Exonerate Franklin And Reinstate Him as President

(By International Labor News Service.)

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 2.—After nearly a week's consideration of the charges against J. A. Franklin, who was removed last fall as president of the International Brotherhood of Boilermakers, Iron Shipbuilders and Helpers of America, the fifteenth annual consolidated convention of the brotherhood, meeting here, reinstated Franklin and exonerated him by an overwhelming vote. President Franklin was removed by the general executive board on charges in connection with the administration of the Brotherhood's insurance department.

Immediately on being removed, Franklin announced that he would appeal to the next convention and his appeal was first business to come before the delegates. After hearing both parties to the controversy, the delegates cleared Franklin and voted, 394 to 169, to reinstate him as international president. After the reinstatement, charges were again preferred against him and the convention resolved itself into a committee-of-the-whole and after listening to a full presentation of testimony, returned a verdict of not guilty and declared that the charges were not well founded.

Following the acquittal, the convention formally elected Franklin president with a great display of enthusiasm.

J. A. CHAMBLISS OFFERS REMEDY FOR INJUNCTION

Senator-Elect Addresses Circle Club.

SUGGESTS PROGRAM FOR LEGISLATION

Eight Proposals Offered for Consideration of Members. Mayor Bass Speaks.

Members of Circle Club were treated, Monday night, to an eloquent and, at the same time, most unusual address from John A. Chambliss, senator-elect from Hamilton county; the unusual feature consisting of the outlining, by the senator, of a program for social legislation which he suggested the club consider, and which he said he was inclined to view with favor.

Of eight proposed laws discussed by Mr. Chambliss six are already a part, in one form or another, of the legislative program of the Tennessee Federation of Labor, and it was the general feeling following the meeting that the other two might well be included in proposals to be presented at the coming session.

Senator Chambliss discussed at some length the subject of labor injunctions, and brought out a new thought in the suggestion that such bench ukases be restricted to twenty-four hours' duration, to be dissolved at the end of that time and reconsidered upon the filing of an answer to the bill upon which the injunction is issued.

"It might also be," the speaker continued, "that at the end of this twenty-four hours from the filing of an answer two judges should be required to pass upon the further continuance of the injunction. . . . It would reduce bitterness and yet be effective."

Among other things suggested for the consideration of the club members was changing the small loans act, which legalizes an interest rate of 42 per cent; increasing the amount of wages exempt from garnishment; statewide free textbook law; improvements in the present workmen's compensation law.

Senator Chambliss' discourse indicated a grasp of all matters covered which could only be the result of much conscientious study. He warned the club members, however, that he has many problems to face in his coming term in the legislature, and the points brought out by him were offered merely as suggestions, and must be worked out by someone else.

The senator's remarks were greeted by frequent applause, and at the conclusion of his address he was warmly congratulated by practically every member present.

Mayor E. D. Bass, an honorary member of the club, was present, and, called upon by President Gardner, made a short speech, which was also well received.

Little business of importance was transacted, a few routine matters being disposed of in short order.

Peruchis to Offer Another New Play

The Peruchi Players, Chattanooga's own flesh-and-blood theatrical company, continued their successful run at the Bijou all this week with a pleasing comedy-drama, "If I Was Rich." Packed houses have become the rule since local theatergoers learned that these artists compare favorably with any company of performers ever showing in this city, and last week has been no exception. Next week the players will offer another new comedy entitled "Saintly Hypocrites and Honest Sinners," described as a play which in the most hilariously funny manner bares all the secrets of a smug community and brings it down to good, solid, honest men.

"We will not call it a classic," the players say, "nor is it buffoonery, but straight human and real honest-to-goodness entertainment."

Under Cohn's Bijou concert orchestra continues to feature the stage productions, and the usual low admission rule will prevail.

Women's Night Work Ends In Carolina

Charlotte, N. C.—Sixty textile mill owners, operators of 1,215,000 spindles in this state, unanimously accepted the proposal of the Cotton-textile Institute to eliminate night work for women and for children under 18 years of age. The institute's decision was made in New York, September 12.

The mill owners' action is traceable to the long agitation by organized labor, which has increased since the A. F. of L. started its southern organizing campaign.

GREEN BOOSTS BROCK AND HULL

Labor Chief Commends Records of Two Tennesseans in National Body.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, in a letter to The Labor World this week, heartily commends the records of Senator W. E. Brock and Representative Cordell Hull, and calls upon Tennessee workers to go to the polls on Nov. 4 and cast their votes for these two candidates for the United States senate.

President Green declares that, in his short stay in the senate, Senator Brock "showed repeatedly that he believed in supporting the cause of the people," and that his Parker vote "should endear him to every forward-looking voter in Tennessee."

Of Mr. Hull, the letter recalls that in his long term he has frequently taken the floor for labor measures, and has evinced a deep interest in the problems of the masses.

The letter follows:

Washington, D. C.,
Oct. 1, 1930.

Wage earners and their friends in Tennessee will have an opportunity Nov. 4 to elect to the United States senate two candidates who have shown themselves to be supporters of remedial legislation.

Senator William E. Brock is a candidate for the short term and Representative Cordell Hull for the long term to the United States senate. Senator Brock has been in the senate only a short time. He showed repeatedly, however, that he believed in supporting the cause of the people. His vote against the confirmation of the appointment of Judge John J. Parker should endear him to every forward looking voter in Tennessee.

Representative Hull is a candidate for the United States senate for the long term, which begins March 4, 1931. He is serving his twelfth term in the house of representatives, where he has proved himself to be a forward-looking legislator. He has repeatedly taken the floor in support of labor measures and has always listened with intense interest to any proposals submitted by labor.

We call upon the organized wage-earners of Tennessee and their friends to take an active interest in the campaign and be sure to vote in the election for candidates who have been ready and willing to support remedial legislation. A campaign should be launched to get out the vote. If all our members and their friends go to the polls on election day there will be no doubt of the result.

WM. GREEN,
President A. F. of L.

BIRTHRIGHT IS PROMOTED

Nashville Unionist Named Secretary-Treasurer of Journeymen Barbers.

Many local friends of W. C. Birthright will be interested in an announcement which came this week from headquarters of the Journeymen Barbers' International union that the Nashvillian has been named general secretary-treasurer of the parent body, succeeding H. C. Wenzel, resigned.

Mr. Birthright's ability has been recognized in various ways by the labor movement. He has for a number of years been secretary-treasurer of the Tennessee Federation of Labor, and when, last year, President Green named a committee of three to direct the southern organizing campaign, he chose "Bill" for a member of that committee.

Several months ago the health of General President James C. Shanessy became impaired, and it was found necessary for him to take a long vacation. The general executive board called on Mr. Birthright and the Tennessean has since occupied the president's chair.

Recently Mr. Shanessy returned, and now comes announcement that the post has been tendered Mr. Birthright.

Secretaries of the local Barbers this week received the following letter from Mr. Wenzel:

"October 4, 1930.

"Dear Sir and Brother:

"I am hereby advising you that I have tendered my resignation as general secretary-treasurer, which has been accepted by the general executive board.

"Sometime ago I was offered a position in my home city which I have accepted and will assume my new duties during the latter part of the year.

"Therefore, you should address all communications to W. C. Birthright, who has been appointed acting general secretary-treasurer by the general executive board.

"I am very grateful to you, as local secretary-treasurer, and other local officers who have co-operated so splendidly with me while I have been in this office.

"I assure you that I appreciate it and trust you will co-operate with my successor in order that he may give you the best service possible.

"Wishing you every success, I am,

"Fraternally yours,
"H. C. WENZEL,
"General Secretary Treasurer."

Father of Local Unionists Passes

News was received in this city this week of the passing, at his home in Toledo, Ohio, of W. A. Garrigus, aged 69.

Mr. Garrigus was the father of two local trades unionists, H. L. Garrigus, proprietor of the Eighth and Chestnut garage and former member of Chattanooga Typographical union, No. 89, and R. I. Garrigus, member of the local Pressmen's union.

The two sons attended the funeral services in the Ohio city this week.

The Labor World joins many friends in extending sympathy to the bereaved unionists and other relatives.

PLAN PUBLICITY IN LOCKOUT AT LOVEMAN STORE

Barbers to Broadcast Facts About Ousting of Unionists.

Regular meeting of Local 415, Journeymen Barbers, Monday night was devoted largely to discussion of plans for publicity in the matter of the lockout of members of that local and its sister organization, Local 415-A, Beauty Workers, at the D. B. Loveman beauty shop.

The situation was reported on by the executive board, and considered from all angles. The final result of the discussions was appointment of a committee of three to direct the campaign, with power to act for the organization.

This committee has held frequent meetings during the week, and plans have been made to acquaint all trades unionists and their friends with the facts in the situation.

It was stated that every possible effort will be made to induce Bernard E. Loveman, president of the D. B. Loveman company, to revert to his first position in the matter and recognize union labor in all departments of his store.

A. C. Clapp, representing the Journeymen Barbers' International union, is in the city representing the parent body.

W. L. GARDNER NEW CHIEF OF LOCAL TYPOS

F. T. Carter Succeeds Linn as Secretary.

WARM RACES MARK ANNUAL ELECTION

Keen Interest Brings Out Largest Crowd in Years to Sunday's Meeting.

W. L. Gardner, who has been fighting the battle of trades unionism in Chattanooga for more years, doubtless, than the old-timer cares to talk about, was last Sunday elected president of Chattanooga Typographical union No. 89, thus adding another official title to a long list which already included president of Circle Club, vice-president of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council, and others. Nor was this the first time Mr. Gardner has been honored with the chief official position in the Typos, having served in that capacity many years ago.

Mr. Gardner succeeds F. T. Carter, who possibly outranks the new president in number of offices held, if not in years of service. Mr. Carter was elected secretary-treasurer of No. 89, succeeding A. G. Linn, who relinquished the position after seventeen years' continuous service, because of ill health.

Sunday's meeting was attended by the largest number of members in years, the large Central Body hall being filled to capacity even after the addition of many chairs. Interest in the annual election was keen, and from the president's office "on down" there was a veritable scramble for every place on the list.

Annual clash between Henry Clay Timmons, incumbent, and Frank G. "Pop" Kemper for recorder ran true to form, the latter succeeding Clay after Clay had replaced him last year and Pop had ousted Clay the year before, and so on—if you know what we mean.

Thomas Jefferson "Tommie" Davie, octogenarian who claims to have been responsible for the organization of No. 89, as well as the Central Body, was again formally declared sergeant-at-arms, having been elected for life a few years after the union was organized.

The complete list follows:

President—W. L. Gardner.
Vice-President—R. M. Cooke.
Secretary-Treasurer—F. T. Carter.
Recording Secretary—F. G. Kemper.
Sergeant-at-Arms—T. J. Davie.
Chairman Apprentice Committee—T. R. Cuthbert.
Executive Committee—R. M. Cooke, Phil Mandre, Archie Underwood, T. R. Cuthbert, J. R. McGhee.
Delegates to Central Labor Body—R. M. Cooke, T. R. Cuthbert, Harris Hix. W. L. Gardner, Frank Clark, W. M. Keels, F. T. Carter.
Allied Printing Trades Council—Phil Mandre, T. J. Davie, John Crump.
Auditing Committee—Harris Hix, Dan Jones, T. C. Kennedy, Business Agent—John Haley.
Delegate to Kentucky-Tennessee Typographical Conference — R. M. Cooke.

PRESENT LINN WITH DIAMOND.

John H. Crump, member of the apprentice committee of No. 89, reported Sunday that he had personally solicited subscriptions to a fund for the purchase of a fitting token of appreciation for the services of the retiring secretary, Andrew G. Linn, who, as stated above, has seventeen consecutive years' service in that position. Mr. Crump, after consultation with other members, caused to be prepared a beautiful watch fob, with a diamond on one side and the emblem of the I. T. U. and suitable engraving on the opposite side. A committee named by President Gardner went Monday night to the home of Mr. Linn, where the presentation took place, and the retiring official was assured of the love and esteem in which he is held by his fellow trades unionists. The committee consisted of John H. Crump, I. J. Gardner and Phil Mandre.

DEPLORE PASSING F. M. JOHNSTON.

Passing of Frank M. Johnston, who surrendered to the Grim Reaper, September 24, after a life of service to his family and his fellowman, was noted in the following resolutions:

"Whereas, the Angel of Death has entered the home of one of our brother members and taken therefrom the husband and father, Frank M. Johnston; and,

"Whereas, Mr. Johnston was, during the time of his activities, a loyal and faithful member of Chattanooga Typographiial union No. 89; therefore, be it

"Resolved, That we deplore the taking of this staunch trades unionist, good citizen and loving husband and father, and extend to his surviving relatives our heartfelt sympathy in their bereavement; be it further

"Resolved, That copies of this resolution be spread upon our minutes, furnished the family of our deceased brother, and The Labor World for publication."

MOVIE OPS TO HOLD BANQUET

Committee Arranging for Eighteenth Anniversary Celebration

Friday, Oct. 17, will be another red-letter day in the history of Local 259, Projection Engineers, that date marking the eighteenth anniversary of the organization, which is always celebrated by the members around the banquet board.

The festival this year will, as usual, be held at Hotel Patten, and will begin at 11:30 p. m. The banquet committee has promised a program which will compare favorably with any in the past, and those in position to know declare that such is a large promise. Among the out-of-town guests who have signified their intention of attending are W. P. Raoul, district representative of the International Alliance, Atlanta; R. E. Morris, secretary-treasurer of District No. 7, Mobile; R. H. Johnson, West Palm Beach, Fla.; several from Jacksonville, Fla., and the entire executive board of Atlanta local.

The local committee is composed of J. Burson Lowry, W. C. Belcher, C. E. Curle, Felix Hamil and John Blanton.

"Jimmie" O'Connor Has More Trouble

Friends of James O'Connor, veteran recorder of Lodge 53, Iron Molders, will regret to learn that the old-timer is still plagued with illness in his family, reports this week from the O'Connor home being that Mrs. O'Connor and a young son are but slightly improved after several continuous weeks of "ailing."

"Uncle Jimmie" and his family have the best wishes of a host of local unionists for a speedy departure of Old Man Trouble from their doorstep.

TELLS HOW TO PREVENT FIRES

Adwell Offers Suggestions for Protection Against Ravages of Flames.

By L. T. ADWELL
(No. 2.)

As this is fire prevention week we will devote this article to fire hazards that should be remedied at once

It is suggested that everyone who is renting the house they occupy inspect it carefully for defects and conditions listed below and report results to owner or rental agent. It is also requested that owners and rental agents request tenants to comply with this suggestion.

1. Inspect basement ceilings over heating plants, wood and coal bins. These should be of metal lath, plastered with portland cement or gypsum plaster. If much dampness use portland cement instead of gypsum plaster.

2. Around chimney flues, walls back of kitchen range and heating stove, defects of this nature are cause of a great many fires that should be prevented. Metal lath and gypsum plaster should be used for this construction.

3. It is very important that ceilings under stairs be inspected. This should be of metal lath and gypsum plaster. Should fire start on first floor while all were asleep above and damage stairs it would endanger the lives of all who attempt to escape by that means. It would hinder the firemen to a great extent in saving occupants and putting out fire on floors above damaged stairs.

4. Inspect between studs especially all bearing partitions for fire stops. The space between the studs at their juncture with the floor and ceiling joint should be properly fire stopped. Fire stops to be of metal lath, basket-shaped to fit between studs and filled with plaster or cement to 3 inches above floor level. Without this fire stop, there is an upward draft. For example, should a fire start in basement heat and sparks would go upward through the studs, setting fire to combustible lath and to the attic, causing fire to break out at several places. Fire stops prevent rats and mice from carrying bits of paper and rags between studding to build nests, as they will invariably carry them to the places where heat is most prominent. To be more brief, kindling a fire which is sure to start from the least spark or over heating from furnace, stove, etc.

The committee on better plastering for fire prevention will be glad to answer any inquiries and assist owners and rental agents in inspection of buildings, making fair and impartial recommendations. We show no preference to any certain material, but give each credit for use in its proper place. The same applies to contractors and workmen.

Additional information along the lines of the above will be cheerfully supplied if the reader will address a letter to "Better Plastering Committee," care The Labor World.

Cochran Benefited By Vacation Trip

H. E. Cochran, proprietor of Cochran's barber shop, 912-A Market St., with Mrs. Cochran, has returned from a stay of two weeks at Hot Springs, whither they trekked when Mr. Cochran developed a twinge of "rheumatics" and decided that a vacation, with the health-giving treatments at Hot Springs, was necessary.

Mr. Cochran looks, and feels, greatly improved after the trip, and has resumed the "sunny smile" which has made his business institution popular for years.

PRES. HOOVER IN ACCORD WITH LABOR'S STAND

Chief Executive Addresses Big Convention.

FAVORS HIGH WAGES, JOB PROTECTION

President Green Declares for Immediate Inauguration Five-Day Week.

By CHESTER M. WRIGHT

Boston, Mass., Oct. 9.—President Hoover came to the convention of the American Federation of Labor, declaring himself in favor of high wages, for stability in possession of a job, in opposition to the dole and in favor of consultation by labor in keeping industry running in smooth order.

The president said no other depressions had been accompanied by so few industrial disputes. He said construction had gained and that employers, by and large, had kept the November White House conference agreement not to cut wages and to maintain employment as steadily as possible.

When the speech was concluded there were a variety of opinions, some leaders, in carefully considered remarks, holding that President Hoover, as to wages and stabilization, had virtually stated the federation's position as his own.

Few Heard Speech.

Most of the federation vice-presidents, seated to the rear of the president on the platform, did not hear his speech. Most of the delegates did not know what he had said. Only those immediately behind the press table could hear. Amplifiers were not operating and the president used an almost conversational tone.

There was a goodly round of applause when the president entered, and another when he concluded. There was nothing that could be called an enthusiastic outbreak, perhaps because most of those in the hall did not know what had been said.

In the morning session of the opening day President Green had brought cheers declaring for the five-day week immediately, putting his full emphasis back of that demand. Speaking to the largest convention ever held, except the convention held in this same city in 1903, President Green said it was his desire "that the five-day week should be inaugurated immediately in all industries outside the service industries," and he said it ought to be labor's "inflexible purpose to press upon industry an uncompromising demand for the five-day week."

Welcomed by Officials.

The convention was welcomed by officials of the city and state labor bodies and by Mayor Curley and Gov. Allen. Outside the convention hall the city is and has been an American Legion town. Bedlam reigns, bands march and countermarch. Cheering, singing throngs crowd the hotel lobbies and corridors, from which all furniture and hangings have been removed.

John F. White Meets Death By Drowning

John F. White, 48, was accidentally drowned in the Tennessee river last Saturday afternoon while out with a party of friends. The body was recovered Sunday afternoon and funeral services were held Tuesday.

Mr. White was an active member of Local 53, Iron Molders, having served that organization in many capacities during his many years' membership, and his brother workers were deeply shocked at the tragedy. He is survived by his widow and four children.

Funeral services, at 9 a. m., Tuesday, were conducted from SS. Peter and Paul's church, Monsignor Sullivan officiating. Pallbearers were James O'Connor, Jerome West, John Varnell, Ellis Abercrombie, Paul Buchanon, C. A. Carpenter, Frank Delaney and Fletcher Morgan.

The Labor World joins other friends in expressing to the bereaved relatives of Brother White heartfelt condolences.

Hesters Enjoying Visit to Kinsfolk

Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Hester and daughter are enjoying a visit this week with Mr. Hester's brother in Canton, Ohio. They left last Saturday, motoring through in their new Rolls-Royce, and will be gone about ten days. The boys at the Broadway barber shop this week reported everything "quiet." Wonder what they mean by that.

What Next!

Announcement of a successful attempt to introduce a new variety of sugar cane has been made in India by government officials. The cane is a cross between ordinary sugar cane and jowar, a tall growing indigenous grain plant. At the end of five months, says the announcement, this new hybrid has matured, which is much less than time is required by the ordinary sugar cane, and analysis has shown that its sugar content is the same as in ordinary sugar cane.

Union Membership Gains During 1930

Boston, Oct. 8.—A. F. of L. membership gained since the last convention, despite the industrial depression.

"The average paid-up and reported membership for the year ending August 31, 1930, is 2,961,096, an increase of 27,551 members over the membership reported upon last year," said Secretary Frank Morrison, in his annual report.

"National and international organizations are required to pay only upon the per capita tax upon their full paid-up membership, and, therefore, the membership reported does not include all the members involved in strikes or lockouts, or those who were unemployed during the fiscal year for whom the tax was not received," said Mr. Morrison.

"A survey of the membership of the national and international organizations and the unions directly affiliated with the A. F. of L. indicates that because of strikes and unemployment there were at least 500,000 members for whom per capita tax was not paid to the A. F. of L. Adding this number to the 2,961,096 paid-up membership will give a grand total of 3,461,096 members."

Secretary Morrison states that 61 charters were issued by the A. F. of L. during the fiscal year ending August 31, 1930. The charters were divided as follows: Central labor unions, 11; local trade unions, 42; federal trade unions, 8.

Oust Cotton Pickers; Machine Will Do Work

Washington.—The cotton picking machine may revolutionize the cotton industry, said Dr. William J. Spillman of the department of agriculture at the inter-American conference on agriculture.

A few of these machines, that are now being used in the west, can do work of 40 hand pickers. If they are successful and farmers generally use them, Dr. Spillman said, farmers will be independent of negro labor.

Dr. George M. Rommel, agricultural counselor of the department, said many of the best cotton varieties and finest cotton fields are [illegible] of automobiles and [illegible].

LOOKING BACKWARD—BOSTON, 1889

The fiftieth convention of the A. F. of L., at Boston, is held under social and economic conditions that differ from when the eighth convention was held in the same city in 1889.

The A. F. of L., in 1889, had a membership of 200,000. Its purpose was misunderstood and the workers' right to organize was hotly challenged in every quarter. "Unions interfere with the right of a man to run his own business," was the popular cry.

The unions were then discussing an eight-hour day. The 10 and 11-hour day was the rule and longer hours were not uncommon.

Company script and orders on company stores were used for wages in mining and other industries.

Safety and sanitation in industry were unknown. Workmen's compensation was a dream and employes accepted the common law—assumed risk, contributory negligence and the fellow servant theory. These defenses by the employer made it almost impossible to secure damages for injury or loss of life.

The various states were beginning to give favorable consideration to the system of secret balloting in popular elections. Adoption of the Australian ballot ended the herding of employes in long lines on election day that they could be more easily watched in casting ballots marked by the employer.

Free text books and compulsory education laws were unknown and trade unionists were urging the establishment of federal and state labor departments to collect statistics and to further mediation and arbitration in industrial disputes.

Safety appliances were not discussed. There was no sentiment against convict labor and nation-wide wage reductions was the rule in business depressions, which were considered beyond man's control.

Economists insisted that wages were set by the law of supply and demand and that high wages increased production costs.

The unions were pleading for rigid exclusion of Chinese who were flooding the west coast. Aliens were imported to break strikes. The state militia were used to intimidate strikers and armies of private detectives were assembled with the aid of public officials during large industrial disputes.

The unions were tolerated, but not accepted. They had no chain of benefits, no newspapers, no salaried officials, no homes for the aged. They met in dingy back rooms and they owned no office buildings.

Their theory of non-partisan political action amused a nation gripped by frenzied partisanship, that ignored the purpose of government and brazenly declared: "To the victors belong the spoils."

No "practical" man advocated municipal ownership. Public corporations, like railroads, considered they were under no obligations to the people.

It was an era of rampant individualism, with workers considered no part of the social organism. Employers were referred to as "good men because they give work to the poor."

Organized labor has led in the struggle to establish other social concepts.

Its success is shown by the difference between Boston in 1889 and Boston in 1930.

"Industrial Democracy" Fails Again

The strike of textile workers employed at the Riverside and Dan River cotton mills, Danville, Va., marks the final repudiation of the first "industrial democracy" that employers launched in this country after the world war.

The scheme was modeled along the lines of our federal government—workers' representatives composing the "house" and mill managers and foremen composing the "senate," with veto power in the hands of the mills' executive. This scheme, so glaringly one-sided, actually attracted so-called "students" of industrial and economic problems. Publicity without stint was given the proposal, just as Rockefeller's first company "union" was praised fourteen years before. Both plans were feverishly declared to be the final word in industrial democracy.

Textile workers, in their unorganized state, accepted the Danville scheme, just as Colorado miners were forced to accept the Rockefeller "union," following their defeat in 1913-1914. Both groups were assured that the scheme were "a step in the right direction."

Colorado miners, long ago, repudiated that "union." The usual policy was pursued in Danville. The employers, confident of their power, installed wage cuts and speed-up systems. The workers then joined the United Textile Workers, affiliated to the A. F. of L. More than 4,000 recently voted 95 per cent to strike as a last resort.

The significance of this movement is not that a strike exists or that workers are exploited and victimized, but that a company "union" has collapsed. These workers now realize that democracy is impossible if men are not considered equals when they meet in conference to adjust industrial disputes.

When one side has the final word, the substance of democracy is absent. No form or no system can cloak an autocracy that enforces its edict by hunger or threats.

High-powered publicity may stir men's emotions and blind them to realities, but the pendulum will eventually swing to the center, and has happened in Danville.

The United States supreme court has declared (Brotherhood of Railway Clerks vs. T. & N. O. Railroad) that the company "union" is a mockery.

The Danville conspiracy against workers' freedom had more window dressing than the regulation company "union," but it had the same objective.
